OUR DETROIT LETTER

Business Prospects Appear to be Getting Brighter.

The Summer has about come to an end, and if we have an exceptional year, as far as the weather is concerned, we may look for a little of what, back home, we called Fall. Usually Summer and Winter met with no large interval of medium weather between. The seasons have been so late this year, and all fruit and berry crops, as well as some vegetables are so far behind, that we are hoping for the delay of frost, which usually comes the latter part of this month.

The annual industrial holiday caused by changing models, is coming to a close, and one by one the large auto factories are opening up, which also enables the parts shops, to renew activity. Now, as I said in my last letter, if the "Brain Trust" at Washington, keeps its hands off, Detroit can look forward to one of the best and busiest years it has had since 1928. We all hope so at least, and there is an air of prosperity around the city that causes one to believe that our hopes will come true. You know Detroit is an auto city—in fact we might say THE auto city. When this industry is flat, everything else is the same way, even the food stores have to drop prices in order to induce, or enable people to buy anything—even the necessities of life. So you can readily see why we out here are so anxious to see the smoke pouring out of the smoke stacks of the auto factories, and hear the cheery whistles calling the men to work.

At this writing the city wide, and I might say, the nation-wide topic is the "World Series," and of course, as the Tigers are "in" we are all waiting the result in the National League. The owners of Navin field—the den of our Tigers, are busy tearing down the rear wall of the Park and erecting

EMMITSBURG PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH CELEBRATES.

(For The Record.) The fact that the Emmitsburg Presbyterian Church is observing its 175th anniversary this Fall reminds one of the Presbyterian Church, Taneytown, became 107 years old last June, and that the Piney Creek Presbyterian Church became 172 years old in April. Rev. T. T. Brown is pastor of both these churches and also of the one at Emmitsburg.

Rev. Robert McCardil, who founded the Emmitsburg church in 1760, was also the founder of the Piney Creek Church holding his first services there on the fourth Sabbath of April, 1763.

There were a number of short ministries. One was by Rev. Hezekiah James Balch, one of the three authors of the famous Mecklenburg, N. C. Declaration of Independence of 1776. Rev. Mr. Balch was a native of Deer Creek, Harford County Md., and a graduate of Princeton College. He was an elder brother of Rev. Stephen Bloomer Balch, who in 1780 founded the Presbyterian Churches at Frederick, Md., and at Georgetown in what is now District of Columbia.

In 1771 Rev. Samuel Rhea became pastor of Piney Creek. During his ministry a log church was erected. The deed of the old church is dated Feb. 15, 1771, and is given for a consideration of five shillings by Abraham Heyter, of Frederick county, province of Maryland, to Patrick Watson, James Galt and John McCorkle, of the same county and province, and James Barr and James Hunter, of York County, Province of Pennsylvania. Mr. Rhea was pastor of the church until April, 1776.

Rev. James Martin, a popular preacher, was pastor of the church from 1780 until 1789. In April, 1814, Rev. Robert Smith Grier became pastor of the Piney Creek Church and held the pastorate until his death, Dec. 28, 1865.

Early in his ministry, in 1818, the old log church was removed and the present brick church was erected. Improvements were made on this church in 1869 during the ministry of Rev. Isaac M. Patterson.

The Presbyterian church of Taneytown was founded as a regular congregation on June 22, 1828. Its first pastor was Rev. Austin O. Hubbard. Presbyterian services had been held in Taneytown for several years before 1828, however.

Early in its history this congregation furnished one of its sons to the Presbyterian ministry. Said son, Rev. Sterling M. Galt, son of Sterling Galt, a wealthy and influential citizen, was born in Taneytown district, Feb. 23, 1837. He graduated from Princeton College and from Princeton Theological Seminary and was ordained to the ministry by Presbytery of Newcastle in 1862 and installed as pastor of the Presbyterian churches of Newark and Red Clay Creek, Del. He remained minister for these churches until his death, Oct. 24, 1865.

Piney Creek congregation also sent a son into the Presbyterian ministry, Rev. James Grier Breckinridge, who was born in the region of Piney Creek in 1808. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Breckinridge, a grandson of Rev. James Grier, a convert of Whitfield, Young Breckinridge graduated from Dickinson College and from Princeton Theological Seminary. In May 1833, he founded the Presbyterian Church, at Schellsburg, Pa., and became its first pastor. His ministry was brief, however, for he died, Nov. 1, 1833, aged only 25 years.

Rev. T. T. Brown, present pastor of both the Taneytown and Piney Creek congregations, took his Bachelor of Arts degree at Lafayette College and his Master of Arts degree at Princeton University. He graduated from Princeton Theological Seminary.

PRESIDENT OF W. M. C. FATALLY STRICKEN.

Prominent Church and College Man Dies in Pulpit.

Dr. Albert Norman Ward, President of Western Maryland College, of Westminster, was fatally stricken with a heart attack, as he was speaking from the pulpit of the Bethel Presbyterian Church, at Madonna, Hartford Co., Md. He died instantly. He was aged 63 years.

Dr. Ward, who had been president of Western Maryland College for fifteen years, had gone to the church to address a young people's meeting after spending a busy day. After attending church at Westminster he, with Mr. J. Pearre Wantz, came to Taneytown to attend the banquet of the Carroll County Society, of Baltimore, held at Sauble's Inn. After the banquet he journeyed to the Madonna Church, to give an address. He had just reached a dramatic part in his address when he crumpled and fell from the platform to the floor in front of the pulpit. Members of his family, relatives and friends were in the audience.

Dr. Ward was the son of the late John T. and Elizabeth Ward, of Harford County. Surviving besides his wife and son, are three sisters and one brother.

Dr. Ward had been apparently in good health lately, although he had suffered from a heart ailment for some time. After his return from Taneytown earlier in the day, he said he had "never felt better in his life."

Dr. Ward devoted his entire life to the work of the Methodist Protestant Church, and recently was named a member of a committee of fifteen to work out plans for the consolidation of the Methodist Protestant and the Southern Methodist branches of the churches.

Dr. Ward graduated from the Western Maryland College in 1895 and in the years following served in pulpits in Seattle, Wash.; Baltimore and Denton, Md. In 1914 he became vice-president of the school from which he graduated, but several years later he left there to become chancellor of the Kansas City University, Kansas City, Kansas.

In 1930, he was elected president of the College of which he served until the time of his death. He built the college up from an enrollment of about 250 student until this year the enrollment will be over 500. Under his planning and resourcefulness Western Maryland College was almost completely changed from a small town college to a nationally known and famous institution. New buildings were erected, the latest being a dormitory finished this summer and was opened Thursday, the fall opening of Western Maryland.

Dr. Ward passed away on the eve of the opening of Western Maryland College and will long be remembered by the student body, the faculty and the Alumni, as a fine man, the kind of man any one would be proud to say, I knew Dr. Ward.

His body laid in state in the Alumni Hall, Wednesday morning from 8 o'clock until the hour of the funeral at 10:30. A guard of honor was furnished by the Reserve Officers Training Corps of Western Maryland College.

Funeral services were conducted Wednesday at 10:30 A. M. by the Rev. Dr. E. A. Sexsmith, in Alumni Hall. Dr. Sexsmith was assisted by a large number of clergymen of the Methodist Protestant Church. A large body of men, who were associated with him in his work, acted as honorary pallbearers. Burial took place in the Westminster cemetery.

THE CARROLL COUNTY SOCIETY AT SAUBLE'S.

One hundred and twenty-three members and friends of the Carroll County Society, of Baltimore, dined at Sauble's Inn, last Sunday afternoon. The event was well managed by Dr. Jesse S. Myers and his associates; and although Sunday is always a busy day at the Inn, its management was quite equal to the occasion.

After the banquet, Mr. Wilson, of Westminster, secured a group picture of the Society, as well as a moving picture, the latter to be exhibited at the next annual meeting of the Society in Baltimore.

Adjournment was then taken by a large portion of the members to the adjoining athletic field, where various amusement stunts were engaged in, and appropriate prizes awarded.

Quite a number accepted the opportunity of voting in The Record's poll of public sentiment, for candidate for President, and on the "new deals."

AN OLD HOME NOW BEING IMPROVED.

John M. Cain, Baltimore, who bought "Thorndale," the former Birnie home along the Westminster-Taneytown State road, has a force of mechanics reconditioning it, throughout, but saving the floors and main stairway, and the original architecture in general.

The work also includes a new stone surface driveway, new, or repaired outbuildings, an oil heat plant, and further improvements contemplated will make the property one of the finest country homes in this section. Mr. Cain and family expect to occupy it as a home, as soon as the work is completed.

It is sometimes convenient to forget what you know—or at least, not to apply it.

THE FAD FOR ANTIQUES

And for the Perfecting of "Family Trees."

There is quite a general trend toward hunting up and preserving the old history of towns, individuals and families, much along the line of collecting "antique" furniture. The Record office has been solicited for such information at numerous times during the past year, mostly from persons who are descendants of "old settlers" but now living far away.

The information, in most cases, could not be supplied. Perhaps in most of these cases the younger generation is engaged in the growing of "family trees," trying to trace their family back to antiquity.

It is, of course, more a present day "fad" than for any real important purpose. However, there is perhaps greatly too much of an inclination on part of the younger set, to "clean up" attics and destroy old books and records, as so much accumulated "trash."

Very old books, and even old newspapers—dating back, say 100 years, should be preserved. Even pamphlets of a historical character—not yet "antique"—should be saved, for their growing value, and sure to be wanted after the course of years. Local histories of all kinds, are in this class.

Large public libraries—such as the Peabody and Pratt, and the Maryland Historical Society, of Baltimore—are eager for all sorts of local histories. The Record office could now dispose of its bound files, covering 41 years, at a good price. Many old bibles and books, are in demand, also.

We could find purchasers for such volumes as "Latrobe's Justices' Practice," and for copies of "Godey's Ladies Book."

Old pictures, in colors, such as were common in old-time "parlors," as well as old illustrative magazines, published in Civil War days, are commanding a good price. Almost everything, very old, that is in good condition, or can be made so, is apt to be wanted by some "collector," even though they are of no present practical use. So, before "burning a lot of old trash" it may be well to sort it over, carefully, for hidden values. Of course, many of the old U. S. coins may be valuable, but these must be in good condition, and clearly showing the date.

CASE AGAINST WALTER R. RUDY DISMISSED.

Automobile Commissioner, Walter R. Rudy has recently received considerable Baltimore newspaper headline prominence, due to contention over some of his acts, mainly backed by individuals, who lost their jobs, as we understand the contentions; and also due to a charge of favoritism unduly exercised, in appointing his son, W. Dana Rudy, to an examiner position, and with a large salary attached.

A case was heard before Judge Parke, in Westminster, last Saturday, brought by George J. Junior, to compel Mr. Rudy to remove a record stamp from his driving license card, and put an end to a period of probation.

The case failed to reach the point of hearing witnesses, as Judge Parke accepted the plea for dismissal urged by State's Attorney Fringer, that the stamping act did not represent final judgment on the case, but was merely a warning to drive more carefully. The Judge dismissed the case by adding that he thought such admonition good for any driver.

M. W. Schlutter, suspended legal examiner for the Motor Vehicle Department, was in the court room. Mr. Rudy gave as his reasons for the dismissal that Schlutter was "unnecessarily arbitrary and dictatorial," this may develop into a case, as a petition has been filed with Governor Nice to dismiss Rudy from office, alleging that his appointment of his son, W. Dana Rudy, was in violation of the "Merit System," and that he had also shown favoritism in another case of law violation.

Willis R. Jones, counsel for the Maryland Classified Employees Association, has asked Gov. Nice for a hearing of charges performed by him, before the Schlutter charges are taken up. He avers that there is "no politics" in his charges against Mr. Rudy, but merely a desire to secure observance of the "Merit System" to protect the public, as well as classified employees from dismissal, which in effect, may mean keeping Democratic employees in office under a Republican administration.

WM. SEABROOK MARRIED.

The marriage of William Seabrook, son of the late Rev. and Mrs. Wm. L. Seabrook, of Westminster, and Mrs. Marjorie Muir-Worthington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Muir, of New Rockelle, N. Y., is announced as having taken place last February, in Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Both are divorcees, and both are writers of note, as well as having been extensive travellers abroad. Mr. Seabrook is the author of "Adventures in Africa," the "Magic Island," "Jungle Ways," his last being "Asylum" recently published in the Atlantic monthly. He has also been an extensive contributor to newspapers and magazines.

Mrs. Seabrook is the author "Spider Web," "Mrs. Taylor," "Scarlet Josephine," "Come, my Couch" and has written many short stories. Mr. Seabrook served during the World War in the French Army and was wounded at Verdun. His travels have covered the Sahara desert, Tripoli, Haiti, the Arabian mountains, etc. In early life he had reportorial connections with newspapers, South and North, in this country. They now reside at Rhinebeck, N. Y.

GOV. NICE MAY FILE AS A CANDIDATE.

A Contest For Party Leadership May Be Involved.

Partly due to the report that Jos. I. France, former U. S. Senator, may file as a candidate for the Republican nomination for president, it is said that Gov. Harry Nice will file also, in order to keep undisputed control as Republican leader in the State.

Mr. France has gone so far as to write a "Republican platform," and as he is pugnaciously inclined, may welcome a contest with the Governor. The friends of the latter say they have no fears as to the result of such a fight, but prefer that it should not occur.

In this connection it is said that Gov. Nice will go to Chicago, in October, to visit the Hamilton Club, a Republican group conceded to be powerful in National party affairs, and will make an address before the Club.

PHEASANTS DISTRIBUTED BY SPORTSMEN'S CLUB.

Mr. Diffendal, District Deputy Game Warden, delivered 20 pheasants the past week to the Taneytown Sportsmen's Club for stocking. These ten pairs of pheasants were entrusted to the following sportsmen: Mr. E. M. Simpson, Mr. John Chenoweth, Mr. Stanley Reaver, Mr. Robert Reaver, Mr. David Hahn, Mr. Augustus Shank, Mr. Joseph Wolf, Mr. George Harner, and Mr. Harry Nusbaum. One pair was liberated on the High School grounds.

The Sportsmen's Club resents the article in last week's Record by Wm. James Heaps. We think that Mr. Heaps is exceedingly careless with the way he handles the facts of the matter, and that he assumes too much. He stated that the 30 partridges at 20 young per pair would total 500. His mathematics is bad. He assumes that our members are fish and game hogs who will kill all these partridges and pheasants the first day. Our Club believes that the sportsmen to whom these birds have been assigned will make a special effort to preserve them for stocking purposes. He assumes that our county and state officials are entirely motivated by selfish purposes.

Any person who makes such an assumption is apt to be formulating his judgments by the way he would act if in position to do so. What Mr. Heaps needs is a new philosophy. Not that man was made in the image and likeness of the Devil, but, that man was made in the image and in the likeness of God. We sportsmen believe that our members will respond, like sportsmen should. We have appealed to them and received their promise to take care of these birds for stocking purposes and we are confident that they will not be shot the first day of the season as Mr. Heaps so confidently assumes.

Perhaps it would be better to liberate the game in the spring. Why they are sent out now, we do not at present know. Perhaps there is a good reason for it. Our Sportsmen's Club will ask Mr. E. Lee LeCompte, State Game Warden, to send us a letter for publication on game distribution. The public then will have the facts—not assumptions.

Whether the game be sent out now or in the Spring is not the important point. If our sportsmen will not take care of the game now, neither would they do so if sent out after the season is closed. Certainly it is up to us to take care of the game whenever it is received.

EX. COM. OF SPORTSMEN'S CLUB AS TO OUR POLL OF VOTES.

A surprising number of persons seem not to know who would make good candidates for President. Very few candidates have announced themselves, but this is not necessary for the purpose of the poll. Who do you want, is the question? Vote for "any Republican" or "any Democrat" if you do not have a choice in mind.

Some are voting for Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Republican, son of "Teddy." So, a vote for "Roosevelt" is in order, either under the Republican or Democratic heading. Gov. Harry Nice, is also a prospective Republican candidate.

If you want to vote specially "against" or "for" the potato law, write "potato" in the approve or disapprove space.

Votes are coming in more rapidly, by mail, and at our office, and this trend is apt to increase; so for this reason we now announce that the poll will continue throughout October; but a count will be made of September ballots, separately, and be announced in our first issue in October. September voting will close next Monday.

POTATOES.

The cost of potatoes, they tell us will rise to high enough heights to afford us surprise. The prospect is not one to fill us with glee, according to you and according to me, Potatoes, though roasted or fried or fried are pretty good food to be sitting beside. And where is the dinner that's full and complete without the potatoes to top off the treat? The cost of potatoes today may be low—I'm not a producer and so do not know. But I'm a consumer, and so must beseech that prices at least remain somewhere in reach!—N. A. Lufburrow, in Frederick Post.

NUTTLE URGES ACTION ON SECONDARY ROADS.

Actually millions of dollars are now available for improving Maryland's unimproved roads over which thousands of farm people must travel in their daily marketing, buying, and general activities," said H. H. Nuttle, President of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation, in Baltimore today.

"The Farm Bureau has actively and persistently called the attention of the rural people of the state to the possibility of having many miles of mud or other unimproved roads greatly improved in the road program made possible by government relief funds. The necessity of bringing these matters to the attention of county officials, in order that they may get projects formulated, has also been urged," said Mr. Nuttle.

"If such road building projects are not made available in the counties of Maryland, it will only be because of lack of active interest on the part of those charged with the responsibility of securing these funds. Since the Government is providing such large sums of money for public works projects, certainly no county or group of farmers living upon unimproved roads can conceive of any expenditure of public funds where the labor provided could be put to a more useful purpose.

"In the interest of the counties it will serve two distinctive purposes. It will get a large number of farmers on an improved or year-around road, and second, it will conserve, in the interests of the counties of Maryland, their regular maintenance funds in the interest of tax-payers later on."

1936 WHEAT ADJUST PROGRAM.

Details of the 1936 Wheat Adjustment program will be announced within a few days, according to County Agent L. C. Burns. In many respects the program to be offered to all wheat producers in the county will be similar to the 1933 program. The reduction this year will be not less than five per cent of their average production during the base years. Meetings discussing in detail the adjustment program will be held over the county during the first week in October, the 2nd to 4th. All producers will be given an opportunity during this time to make application for a wheat adjustment contract. The time will be limited this year due to the fact that certain detailed information concerning the program has been delayed.

The schedule of meetings for the first week in October are as follows: New Windsor, Blue Ridge College Gymnasium, Wednesday afternoon, October 2, at 1:30 P. M. Sykesville, High School, Wednesday evening, Oct. 2nd., at 7:45 P. M. Manchester High School, Thursday afternoon, Oct. 3, at 1:30 P. M. Westminster, County Agent's Office, Thursday evening, Oct. 3, at 7:45 P. M.; Taneytown, High School, Friday afternoon, Oct. 4, at 1:30 P. M. Mt. Airy, Hall, Friday evening, Oct. 4, at 7:45 P. M.

MARYLAND TO GET $2,459,608.

The PWA has approved 18 jobs for Maryland carrying a cost of $2,459,608. The largest estimate is $1,000,000 to the State Roads Commission for Roads estimated to cost $2,232,222.

Carroll County gets the following, according to the Baltimore News; Hampstead—$50,000 loan and grant to Hampstead for building waterworks; loan of $27,500 from PWA and grant of $22,500 from new works fund.

Westminster—$208,805 grant to Carroll County Commissioners for building new high school; estimated cost, $175,000.

AN INQUIRY.

The Record has been publishing the Sunday School lesson, for years, at considerable cost. We should like to know how many make use of it? If only a very few, we think we can use the space more profitably. A postal card, or information at our office from those who use it, would be appreciated.

Random Thoughts

DON'T BE A "PUT-OFFER!" There is too much unnecessary worry and hurry in the world, due to that old thief of time, called procrastination. Why do we put off so many things until "the last minute?" The answer is easy—we are lazy and careless.

Don't be a "put-offer!" There may be rare cases in which we are "too fast," but mostly the truth is in the opposite direction. We lack energy, or something worse, in the care of many of our doings. We expect trains and buses to be "on time," but are not that way ourselves.

Sometimes we wait, for fear that we will miss something by being precluded. We think that "bargains" will come, if we are not too eager, and we wait for them. But, we do best when we "get things" a bit before they are needed, and the few cents we may save by waiting, is a dear wait, in the end.

There is no time like the present, to do something that should be done promptly. One can put off painting a house another year, that needs paint, but it costs more in the end to do the job, and this is true, in nearly every case of "putting off." P. B. E.

THE BUSINESS OF OVERCOMING THE OLD ORDER.

Isn't it queer, that we read the financial statements of the big department stores and find that they are making "big money" yet at the same time they sell their wares at such low prices—"underselling," as they say, and the public must think?

Just suppose this is due to under-buying—to quick sales and small profits—to cash buying and cash selling—and to all legitimate methods? Is it not also a system that may result in ultimate monopoly of the selling field, though making it impossible for small stores to do business? Then what?

What usually happens when competition is silenced—when there is only one place at which wanted things can be had? What happens to prices, when one has to buy a needed part to a machine, and must go to the manufacturer for it? Did anyone ever hear of a place at which a controlled "part" could be had at fair price?

Suppose small stores and shops should eventually be put out of business, what would become of those now engaged in these occupations? A few might secure jobs with the big ones—but not many—and without living-making jobs, how would the many live?

Unemployment, and the unemployed would increase still more than at present, would it not? And is that a pleasant prospect, and one to easily solve?

Of course, there does not seem to be the prospect of there being just one, or a very few, big business concerns? Or, is there such a prospect, of one big combination made up of many big ones, with similar interests—or one big combination in each of several distinct lines of business?

Would it be a free country—a happy country—if almost everybody was compelled to work for a few overlords? Slavery is something like that, isn't it? And didn't our country once abolish that, after a bloody war?

And, if business should get so powerful as to control all business, could it not also control the business of government? Business control is brought about by individuals working to that end—and being left to do it—by the government. How long a step intervenes—with business and government working together—before a complete union arrives, and the government—runs the whole of business, and all of the people too?

Who says this can't be done, and why not? Something like this has made a big start in that direction. And when sufficient momentum is given by bodies, little obstacles in the way are overcome, are they not? A cyclone is something like that. Even very strong fortifications give way to heavy guns. Think it over.

Gradually the list of things that "can't be done" are disappearing—more rapidly than we realize. Inventive minds are directed toward "over coming" something—almost everything. Our institutions of learning, technology and science, are in the "overcoming" business. So, what is it all about, and what is the logical end. Who knows?

THE JOB OF AN EDITOR.

"The principal job of an editor—if he is a real editor and not just the producer of so many printed pages at regular intervals—is to know what people like to read, or, at least, to guess fairly accurately as to their reading tastes. This applies equally to editors of magazines, trade journals, metropolitan dailies and country weeklies.

Ask the average man why he buys a newspaper and he will probably answer, "Why, to read the news, of the average woman and the answer will be about the same. But neither is telling the editor something he doesn't know already.

If he wants to find out what the reading tastes of his subscribers are, he should phrase his questions differently. He should make them more specific—"Are you reading the serial story?" "Do you follow the activities of the comic strip characters?" "Are you interested in the fashion department?" Or it may be the health talks, the household hints or any one of a dozen different departments. If his questions deal with other continuity-interest features he will find that a surprisingly large number of readers are following one, two, three or all of these features. By asking such questions, he can learn which one feature comes nearest interesting the greatest number of his readers."

So says an editorial in a trade paper interested in promoting "newspaper features" as supplied by its own service. Its conclusions are sound; but "asking" for suggestions from readers, and "getting" them, are very different propositions.

The Record has tried, at different times, to get a line on "readers" interest, but usually without success. In a short time, we expect to try a good serial story. We are now running special features, regularly, but have no returns as to which features may be most interesting.

We desire this information, of course. We want any criticism, well founded, whether it is in line with our regular course, or otherwise, as we desire to co-operate to the fullest extent, with our reading public.

The trouble is, our patronage is too undemonstrative. So few go to the trouble of extending their help. Too few read anything but "the locals," perhaps, and pass by other more important features. Not many will read this article. So, what is an editor to do?

WASHINGTON SNAP-SHOTS.

The great game of politics as it is played in America during presidential campaigns is definitely underway. The ball is up in the air. From now until November 5, 1936, there will be a few moves made nationally by either political party without an eye cocked toward the voters, and the wise voter will look for these hidden motives. The only thing actually certain about the coming election is that there are so many straws in the wind, so many unknown and unprecedented factors that it is a valiant soul who will attempt forecasts.

Looking first at the Democratic side of the picture, President Roosevelt has already started a campaign in an effort to reclaim some of the ground which even Democratic leaders admit has been lost in recent months. Without question the major obstacle for Democratic campaigners will be explaining away the fact that unemployment has been barely curtailed, despite the plethora of laws that have been enacted during the last three years presumably aimed at recovery.

On the Republican side one outstanding candidate is still lacking. Senator Borah, Colonel Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, and Governor Landon, of Kansas, and Senator Vandenberg probably are further advanced than any others, but where the lightning will strike is anybody's guess.

More interesting than candidates, however, is the alignments which are being formed that threaten to wipe out party lines in the next year. William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, has offered to support his old political enemy, Alfred E. Smith, for president to defeat Mr. Roosevelt. Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State in the Wilson Administration is definitely committed to an effort to organize a Constitutional Democratic party in opposition to the incumbent.

In the South a group has been formed to prevent Mr. Roosevelt's nomination. Father Coughlin, who has supported the President consistently, and who coined the "Roosevelt or Ruin" phrase, came out publicly with a denunciation of the President and asserted that 18 states already are definitely lost to the Democrats in the next election.

In the South Senators Byrd, Glass and others who have opposed much of the New Deal legislation have given no indication what course they will follow. Former Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, returned from Europe and spoke over a national radio hookup from Boston on Constitution Day, September 17th.

What form all of these activities will take or the extent to which the various combinations are significant will probably depend to a large degree upon the tack which President Roosevelt takes in his series of speeches.—Industrial Press Service.

THINGS ONE REMEMBERS.

It's easier to make a flowery statement than to answer simple questions. The people of the world are getting pretty sick and tired of statements. They want answers.

This summer I have met many business men in different parts of the country. I have asked questions and tried to get answers. I have talked with waiters in hotel dining rooms, with clerks in grocery stores, with mechanics in garage, with attendants at oil filling stations, with proprietors of small stores and, recently at that cosmopolitan meeting place, the Mark

Hopkins hotel in San Francisco, I heard opinions expressed by prominent business men who drift in from all parts of the world.

After the smoke of partisan politics has been blown away, sentiment expressed by thoughtful persons is remarkably uniform on the following three points:

1. There is no sympathy for European war preparations and very definite opposition to this nation participating in another European conflict in any manner.

2. There is general resentment against political attempts to undermine constitutional safeguards of persons and property in the United States.

3. From all sides come protests against the alarming increase in public debt and tax bills—genuine fear is expressed as to what a "soak the rich" tax program will do to American business and family savings.

It's a healthy sign when political and economic questions are brought so close to the average American that he can see his place in the picture—from the clerk in a grocery store to the head-waiter in a leading hotel and the president of a great corporation. Their pocketbooks and constitutional rights have all been injured or threatened, from the lowest to the highest.—R. M. Hofer, Industrial News.

THE RURAL PRESS.

The following, from that excellent authority on matters in general, "The Industrial News Review" contains the following fine tribute to "country correspondents"—mainly women—calls attention to a fact that we have long known, that many of such "correspondents" write up matters of real merit and value.

Naturally, these letters are largely connected with the social happenings of communities, but they could easily be enlarged to include a wider field, such as is suggested by the article that follows:

"There are some 15,500 newspapers and periodicals published in this country. The greatest proportion of them are small-town weeklies, dailies and semi-weeklies, and magazines whose principal appeal is to the rural dweller.

The importance, the influence, and the worth of these publications can hardly be exaggerated. They are, as the San Francisco Argonaut has written, "the chief influence in the thought habits of our rural population of fifty-four million." And the character of their comment, both in news and editorial departments, well repays those who peruse them.

As a result, the recent contest held by the magazine "Country Home" to pick the best country newspaper correspondent in the United States, was of much more importance and interest than contests usually are. The winner, a woman, lives in a Missouri town which has a population of twenty-seven, and is fifteen miles from the nearest railroad. For forty-four years she has been local correspondent for a rural paper in her county.

Urban editors, on reading excerpts from her correspondence, have been amazed by its quality. It does not deal with crimes and misdemeanors. Instead it tells of the crops, of the trials, tribulations and achievements of farm people who rarely make the metropolitan headlines, but who, happily, are more numerous and more vital to the nation than our gangsters, our political and business renegades, and our ex-show-girl divorcees.

Most interesting of all, this woman's correspondence, fine as it is, is not greatly different from that of other rural correspondents. Winners of lesser prizes in the contest show the same qualities—the same command of clear vivid English. The country newspaper, little known as it is to the city dweller, is one of the finest, most permanent, and most deservedly successful influences in our American life. Last, but not least, it is the outstanding guardian of the nation in upholding our Constitution and American ideals."

SCHOOL BELLS RING AGAIN.

If Shakespeare could have known a typical American community on the first day of a new school term, he might have revised his picture of "the whining school-boy, with his satchel and shining morning face, creeping like snail unwillingly to school." For an observer gains the impression that, in the main, Johnnie and his friends are rather glad to get back.

Vacation days have been long enough; old companions are calling; there is curiosity about the new room, or the new teacher. Certainly nothing specially rebellious or even reluctant is to be noted in our young student's demeanor as, spic and span, he joins the throngs that respond to the bell.

The story of the public school is a veritable American epic. What would the founders of the Nation think of this colossal and splendid development? George Washington's first teacher was an old slave named Hobby. The Father of his Country probably learned to read from one of the old-fashioned hornbooks, which consisted of a scrap of parchment nailed to a block of wood and covered with a sheet of transparent horn. Imagine the youthful George looking in on a modern schoolroom so marvelous in furnishings and equipment!

Almost a hundred years ago, and both in the same year, 1837, Horace Mann and Henry Barnard began the work that lifted the little pioneer schools of the United States from poverty and insignificance to their present position of honor. Surely men of this stamp should be memorialized in painting and statuary, at least equally with generals on prancing horses, or soldiers carrying guns.

Years ago, a United States Ambassador, Joseph Choate, declared before the professors of a British university, "Education has been the chief industry of the United States." The exaggeration is a pardonable one, in view of the facts. In that essential "industry" the public school is and has been a major, vital, indispensable factor.

As for Johnnie in his new suit, on his way to see his new teacher—why, as he skips along the street, we doff our hats, click our heels, and salute him as the hope of democracy.—Christian Science Monitor.

What ELECTRIC RANGE owners say about COOKING ELECTRICALLY

THERE can't be much doubt as to the merits, desirability and efficiency of MODERN ELECTRIC COOKERY when people express opinions like these:

Just read what housewives who do their cooking electrically have to say about this MODERN method. Remember, these are housewives right here in this territory. Some of them may be friends and neighbors of yours.

From one MODERN housewife comes this: "Since I have had my Electric Range my kitchen has been cool and pleasant. The meals have been delicious due to the even temperature of the cooking."

And here is enthusiastic praise indeed. "My Electric Range gives me the fastest, cleanest and most healthful way of cooking that I have ever experienced. It is not only economical and safe, but provides me with maid service; that of cooking an entire meal to perfection while I am away from home enjoying some outside activity."

The automatic cooking feature certainly has tremendous appeal. More users mention this than any one other thing. Here is another comment: "I have been using my Electric Range about three years and I have found it to be very clean and economical. The automatic feature of the oven appeals to me because I can put foods in it and leave the house and know they will be ready to serve when I return."

And so the comments go. We have quantities of them. Wouldn't you like to be one of these enthusiastic range owners? You can, easily enough, for an Electric Range is not expensive.

Why not stop in today and have a free demonstration of MODERN Electric Cookery and hear its fascinating story?

GAINS IN HIGHWAY SAFETY ARE NOTED

Many States Have Adopted Constructive Measures.

Washington.—Sweeping efforts by the state legislatures to curb motor fatalities through enactment of approved legislation was reported in a survey made public by the American Automobile association.

"Scores of constructive safety measures enacted should prove of material help in what must be a continuing drive to improve the safety record of the country as a whole," Thomas P. Henry, of Detroit, Mich., president of the national motoring body, declared.

Among the safety gains, Mr. Henry cited the rapid progress of the AAA safety responsibility law; extension and strengthening of highway patrol; safety glass requirements; compulsory inspection of motor vehicle equipment, and drivers' license laws.

Amendments and Law.

"There is reason for particular gratification over the forward march of the safety responsibility bill sponsored by this association," he said. "Five new states enacted the Model bill in 1935, namely, Arizona, Colorado, Ohio, Oregon and West Virginia. It was enacted by congress for the District of Columbia. Strengthening amendments were adopted in several states. The law is now in effect in 23 states and the District of Columbia, which means that around 60 per cent of all the motor vehicles in the country are operating under its provisions.

"State highway patrols received much attention at the hands of the legislatures. Four states, namely Colorado, Montana, North Dakota and Oklahoma, established patrols for the first time. Seven states increased the strength of the patrol force, namely, Connecticut, Missouri, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Washington and West Virginia. The patrol system is now in operation throughout the Union, except in Georgia. There is no doubt, however, that the strength of the patrol force in most instances is below requirements, more particularly so in view of the rising ratio of motor fatalities on rural highways.

States Added to Safety Parade.

"Fifteen states enacted legislation providing that motor vehicles be equipped with safety glass. This brings the total of "safety glass" states up to 23.

"Five states passed laws providing for compulsory inspection of motor vehicle equipment. These are: Connecticut, Colorado, Oregon, Utah, and Vermont. This brings the total of compulsory inspection states up to 14. This movement had its inception along the Atlantic seaboard, but it is now apparently spreading to mountain and Pacific coast states, indicating a more general trend toward national acceptance.

"A drivers' license law was adopted this year by Idaho, Montana, North Carolina, North Dakota, and Utah, bringing the list up to 34. There is little doubt that drivers' license law, coupled with a safety-responsibility law, are proving the most effective measure from the standpoint of control of the reckless and irresponsible driver, and states which lack this legislation are at a decided disadvantage."

"Squaring the Circle"

Squaring the circle is a famous mathematical problem which scientists of today believe to be impossible. The problem is to find a square equal in area to a given circle; the area of the circle equal to that of the rectilinear triangle whose base has the same length and whose altitude equals the radius. The squaring of the circle thus becomes the problem of finding the ratio of the circumference to the diameter. In 1882 Lindemann proved that this ratio, known as pi, is a transcendental number and hence, since it is not the root of any algebraic equation, cannot be constructed to an assumed unit by the extraction of the square root, that is by using straight edge and compasses.—Washington Star.

HIEROGLYPHICS ON A 'KERCHIEF HELP
CLEAR UP MYSTERY

Detectives Trace Man, Shot and Drowned by "A. Wright, 7, Recp. 6."

Mineola, L. I.—Inspector Harold King, of the Nassau county police, announced that a body washed ashore at Sands Point with a bullet wound in the head had been identified as that of Frank Conley, of Watertown, N. Y. Inspector King did not mind saying that he was pleased with the work done by his men in the case.

To trace the identity of the dead man they had the following articles which were found in his pockets: a handkerchief on whose border was stamped "A. Wright, 7, Recp. 6;" another handkerchief inscribed with the initials "F. C." and a booklet in which one-cent stamps had been sold, on which was scribbled in pencil, "Wing 4183J."

The memorandum on the stamp book looked like the most profitable clew at first, as it seemed highly probable that it was a telephone number.

There is No "Wing" Exchange.

The detective bureau started work on it at once. A letter was sent to the telephone company asking what exchange it could be whose abbreviation was "Wing." The reply virtually eliminated the memorandum as a clew to the dead man's identity. The telephone company reported that nowhere in the United States was there an exchange called "Wing" or one of which "Wing" was an abbreviation.

The other articles in the man's clothing had not been neglected, however.

The handkerchief with the official-looking printing on it they considered particularly valuable because the marking looked like an institutional laundry mark, probably that of a hospital, classifying the possessor as to the time of his reception and the ward to which he had been assigned.

It turned out that they were right, but the process of tracing that handkerchief proved to be somewhat tedious. Inquiries were made of all institutions in New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Connecticut, and a letter was received from the superintendent of St. Lawrence State hospital, Ogdensburg, N. Y., who said that the laundry mark was that of his institution.

Issued to Alma M. Wright.

His records showed, he said, that the handkerchief was one issued to Alma M. Wright, who had been a patient at the hospital from November 17, 1932, to August, 1934, when she was discharged in the care of her brother, Charles E. Wright, of Watertown, N. Y. Detectives Joseph Hyzanski and Patrick Shanley started for Watertown at once.

They learned that Miss Wright no longer lived there. They traced her to Rochester and described to her the man in whose pocket her handkerchief had been found. The description, she said, sounded as though it might be that of Frank Conley, in whose home at 263 Franklin street, Watertown, she once had worked as a maid.

Hyzanski and Walsh returned to Watertown. Mr. Conley, they learned, had been missing from his home for weeks. His wife, they were told, was visiting in Syracuse.

Walsh and Hyzanski set out for Syracuse and discovered Mrs. Conley there. She was almost certain that the man found dead with a bullet hole in his head was her husband. The belief was strengthened when the detectives mentioned the stamp book on which had been written "Wing 4183J." Mrs. Conley told them that it was indeed a telephone number, that of her husband's brother, Wing Conley, of Syracuse.

They learned from her the name of her husband's dentist and returned to Watertown, where they showed the dentist the chart which had been made of the teeth of the man found at Sands Point. The dentist confirmed Mrs. Conley's identification; the body was that of her husband.

Fail Brothers, Wili and Never, Both Successful

Oklahoma City.—Never Fail, superintendent of an Oklahoma City laundry, tells how he happened to get his name.

His parents, the N. M. Falls, who now live at Altus, Okla., apparently decided to have a contest between their two sons to see who would be the greater success.

They named one Never Fail, the other Wili Fail.

But the boys fooled their parents. Wili Fail rose in the world along with Never Fail.

Never Fail said he didn't believe the name had helped him much and that Wili's name didn't seem to hamper the brother any.

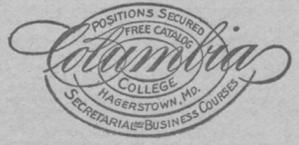

A son has just been born to Never Fail. The family named the baby Never Fail, Jr.

"Blue Letter" Penalty for Malefactors in 1717

Chester, Pa.—New England's "scarlet letter" had a counterpart in law enforcement here in early Colonial days, a Chester citizen has discovered. This city's "blue letter" is recorded in an ancient tome.

One Chester malefactor wore it in 1717. The cause—his conviction as a thief.

After 20 lashes and a fine for stealing 28, he was directed to pin a blue Roman "T" to his clothing and carry the symbol for six months.

Unquestionably, a reasonable number of low priced double dwelling houses, would be a good investment in Taneytown. There is demand for such houses, by workers, who want to live in Taneytown, but can not do so because dwellings are not to be had. No doubt some better houses could be rented, too, and be a good investment, especially considering present low rates of interest on money investments. ## Profanity Irks Ape, King of Fire House

Camden, N. J.—Jocko is only a monkey at a firehouse, but he can tell the difference between profanity and the king's English.

When he hears a profane word, Jocko lets out screams until the person uttering the words is out of his sight.

The monkey is a ladies' man, even going so far as trying to kiss girls who give him a smile.

Like all monkeys, Jocko is mischievous. On several occasions he has thrown water on children, and one time he hurled an ice cream cone in a vender's face.

NATION WILL SAVE ITS HISTORIC SITES

Preservation of Landmarks Adopted as a Policy.

Washington.—Preservation of historic sites, buildings and other milestones along the paths traveled by the men and women who created a nation on this continent has been declared for the first time to be a national policy, and provision made by congress to rescue and restore for the inspiration and benefit of the American people such significant reminders of their heroic past.

Under the broad terms of two bills, one of which already has become law and the other of which appears assured of enactment before congress adjourns, it is hoped to rescue and restore such survivals as the Spanish missions in the southwest, Derby Wharf and other sites and buildings in Old Salem, Mass., built in Colonial times, and beautiful antebellum plantation homes in South Carolina, Georgia and Mississippi, which are in daily increasing danger of destruction.

The Hermitage plantation on the Savannah river, described as "one of the priceless historical heirlooms of this country" was disturbed recently to make way for an industrial plant. The buildings were purchased by Henry Ford and removed to another site owned by him at Richmond, Va.

Old Homes May Be Torn Down.
At Portsmouth, N. H., are fine old examples of early American homes not as yet endangered but are in the old part of town where, unless measures are taken to preserve them, they are certain soon to be torn down.

And in the West and Middle West, along the Oregon Trail, and the route of the Pony Express and the Overland Stage are the sites and survivals of pioneer posts and events.

It is desired to preserve and restore, in Wyoming, Fort Laramie and Fort Bridger, and to protect Register Cliff in the southern part of the state on the sand stone sides of which are inscribed the names, with dates, of many of the 50,000 pioneers who passed that way in the Thirties and Forties and of whom in some cases, these are the only surviving records.

The signatures, now in danger of erasure and erosion, can be stabilized for the benefit of future historians and genealogists, and all others interested in the recreation of sights and scenes of those early days.

All these and many other antiquities of national significance are to be surveyed, evaluated and acquired.

Wide Survey Proposed.
Under the terms of a bill which has passed both the senate and house and is assured of enactment before congress adjourns, the secretary of the interior is instructed to make an intensive expert nation-wide survey to determine the existence and exceptional value of places and properties of interest as commemorating or illustrating the history of the United States, preliminary to their acquisition, when authorized by gift, purchase or otherwise.

In this work the secretary is to be assisted by a general advisory board of not to exceed 11 qualified experts appointed by him to serve without salary in co-operation with the staff of the historical division of the National Park service.

Another bill, already enacted, provides for a National Park trust fund board to accept and administer gifts or bequests of properties to the National Park service which is charged with the duty of preserving and restoring national monuments.

FEMALE SWINDLER DUPED THOUSANDS

Death of "Woman Ponzi" Recalls Her Daring Exploits.

Paris.—Mme. Marthe Hanau, "financial wizard" and the "Woman Ponzi" of Paris died in her cell in a Paris jail just as she was completing six months of a three-year sentence for swindling. Her death was caused by an overdose of narcotics, source of which the authorities were unable to locate.

Her get-rich-quick schemes had withdrawn the savings from thousands of small savers throughout France. One of the most colorful figures in the nation's oft troubled financial world, she hobbled with government leaders, financiers, and other notables at the height of her career. At one time she operated a bank with 400 branches in France.

She published two journals which she used to advance her ideas. They were the Gazette du France and Forces, the latter being the cause of her latest contact with the police. In 1931 she was convicted with her former husband, Lazare Bloch, on charges of swindling and was given two years in prison. As she had already been in jail for two years awaiting trial she was released.

Recently a secret report of the prefect of police concerning Mme. Hanau's activities was published in a newspaper. Pierre-Etienne Flandin, then minister of finance, claimed that it had been stolen.

Back in the hands of police, she started a hunger strike that lasted 13 days, focused the attention of France on her, and finally got her taken to a hospital. She escaped, however, and returned to the prison. There she got her old cell back and immediately renewed the hunger strike.

Chilled Mixed Fruit Juices:

Have the ingredients for this breakfast drink icy cold. It consists of combining the contents of one 12-ounce can pineapple juice, one 10-ounce can grapefruit juice, one-fourth cup orange juice, two tablespoons fresh lime juice and one tablespoon sugar. Serves six.

At Other Meals

Orange and Pineapple Bouillon: Mix three tablespoons sugar and one tablespoon arrowroot, and add one cup water, stirring until smooth. Cook until clear and transparent, then cool. Add two cups orange juice, one-fourth cup lemon juice and the contents of a No. 2 can pineapple juice. Chill thoroughly and serve in glass cups or in tall, slender glasses. Serves eight.

Unsweetened Hawaiian Pineapple Juice

is as refreshing a drink as you can get all by itself after tennis, golf, swimming, hiking or any other outdoor sport, but if you want to vary the taste a bit and still not lose that tropical tang, try this

Cranberry Cordial: Make a syrup of one cup sugar and two cups water. Add two cups tea, one cup lemon juice, the contents of a No. 2 can cranberry jelly and of a No. 2 can unsweetened pineapple juice, and six cups cider. This recipe makes four quarts and will make a hit at any meal.

And don't forget that you can drink a dessert that will make you dream of nectar at any meal, if you will try this

Hawaiian Chocolate Drink: Boil together the contents of a 13-ounce can chocolate syrup, two and a half cups water and four tablespoons sugar for three or four minutes. Add one cup thin cream or evaporated milk, and chill. Add the contents of a 12-ounce can pineapple juice, and pour over crushed ice. Makes six cups. May be shaken in a jar or cocktail shaker.

21-Month-Old Linguist Able to Use 400 Words

Monessen, Pa.—A chubby little brown-haired Monessen girl, not yet turned two, can use correctly 400 words, her mother disclosed.

What is more, twenty-one-month-old Elise Capuano knows the Italian equivalent of most of the 400 words her mother secretly listed as Elise chatted at play during the past seven days.

Mrs. John Capuano, whose husband is widely known in Pennsylvania Italian-American quarters, began the list of words when she noticed in a newspaper the picture of a twenty-three-month-old girl who amazed Stanford university psychologists with her 500-word vocabulary.

Elise was timid about displaying her vocabulary for reporters, however. She hid her head and grinned sheepishly, but willingly showed them her Shirley Temple book and explained what the child movie star was doing in each of the picture. When she went in an adjoining room with only her parents present, however, she chatted gaily in well-formed sentences, with only slight traces of "baby talk."

Mrs. Capuano explained that Elise uses English in speaking to her parents. When addressing her grandparents, however, she uses her more limited Italian vocabulary. Both Capuano and his wife are native Americans.

Despite Elise's large vocabulary, her parents said they did not consider her a "prodigy" because she showed little interest in other fields in which prodigies usually are brilliant.

Buffalo Bull Invades Barnyard in Washington

Kennewick, Wash.—Shades of Deadwood Bill. Farmers in the Rattlesnake hills region west of here rubbed their eyes when a buffalo bull appeared in the barnyard of James Mann.

Apparently quite tame, the animal stayed long enough to have a meal of hay then wandered to the next farm. Ranchers believe the buffalo escaped from a farm at Yakima, 100 miles away, where the beasts are reared commercially.

National Anthem Copy Treasured Above Money

Philadelphia.—W. Ward Beam still refuses to part with his treasured first-edition of "The Star-Spangled Banner," only two other copies of which are in existence.

Recently he was asked to sell the copy at his own price to Oliver Strunk, chief of the music division of the Library of Congress. He refused.

Beam's grandfather left him a copy of the edition 53 years ago, but he did not realize its value until 1918. Other copies are in the Library of Congress and the Library of the Maryland Historical society, Baltimore.

A PRACTICAL HOAXSTER

By THAYER WALDO
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service.

STANDING just inside the entrance of Hotel Christie—Plaza's Palace de Glace—Garrison carefully scanned the scene.

It was, he saw, a gala occasion—this opening of Hollywood's most novel play spot.

There, enclosed by a ring of supper tables, countless couples in sports costume skimmed over a gleaming floor of ice, while lilting music came from an orchestra at one end.

Watching the skaters, Garrison at last focused on a girl in scarlet sweater and skirt.

Rather, it was her partner he studied, for the girl was familiar enough. Myra Drexel, indeed, ranked as one of Zenith's most promising young actresses, and Garrison for some time had felt a keen professional interest in helping her to reach stardom.

The man with her was tall and gracefully slender, though somewhat past youth.

There was about his bearing an almost intangible touch of distinction.

Seeing the captain of waiters, Garrison called him over and asked: "Alphonse, just who is that chap skating with Miss Drexel?"

"Oh, that," Alphonse replied, "is the Baron Siegfried von Fleumann. He arrived from Munich today, I believe."

The publicity man's eyes narrowed.

"I see; thanks. By the way, which is Miss Drexel's table?"

The man pointed it out.

Garrison glimpsed a tow-headed figure in one of the two chairs, and smiled.

So Steve Crandall was second fiddling again!

That, he knew, wouldn't suit the lad's jealous temper, nor would the plan Garrison now had. However, that was just too bad.

He strolled over, clapped the blond man's shoulder, and said amiably: "Hi, fella—how goes it?"

The other's response was a mere grunt.

Garrison grinned and sat down.

"Sure," he conceded, "I can imagine you're burned, but this'll have to be business before pleasure."

The youngster stared at him coldly.

"Meaning exactly what?"

"Well, are you aware of that bird hooding Myra around happens to be?"

"No," Steve growled, "and I don't give a ting-diddle-dee. The big gigolo!"

"Listen, you egg: snap out of it and look at this thing seriously. That man is a genuine baron from Germany, no less. Now, everyone here must know it, including the newspaper crowd. Think of the write-ups they'll do if Myra and the Baron are together all evening and he takes her home!"

Steve's scowl was a venomous thing.

"Look here, Louis," he began, keeping his teeth together; "I'm not going to fall in with any of your cockeyed schemes, so—"

"Wait a minute, son," Garrison cut in easily; "loving Myra, you want her to have a career, don't you? Well, no one in this town ever reached the top without plenty of built-up in print, and here's your chance to help the girl get some. With her talent, that's all she needs now. How about it?"

For an instant the boy didn't reply.

Then he looked at Garrison and asked: "What do you want me to do?"

"Duck out of here. Then when the Baron brings her back, he'll either have to stay at this table or ask her to his. I'll take care of the rest."

Steve showed a bleak, one-sided smile and stood up.

"All right," he said tersely; "I'll play it your way. But that doesn't mean I have to like it."

As he stalked away, the music came to an end.

Hurriedly Garrison rose and went in the opposite direction.

Twenty yards away he took a vacant chair and waited.

Couples were gliding off the rink now; in a moment he discerned Myra Drexel and the Baron approaching.

Reaching her table, they paused and the girl glanced around perplexedly.

Then, with an apologetic little shrug, she said something to the man.

He bowed smilingly and pulled out her chair. Myra accepted it, and Baron Siegfried von Fleumann seated himself across from her.

The publicity man indulged a grin of thorough satisfaction.

On the room's other side sat a group of men and women from several of the city's papers, and Garrison knew they couldn't miss seeing the couple.

That would make press notice a certainty.

But one item remained to be arranged.

Unobtrusively he stole away toward a door which gave into the hotel proper.

that lens of your a polish, I want this to be good."

Long set to work deftly.

In fifteen seconds the camera was ready on its tripod.

He handed Garrison a loaded powder trough, took a quick sight, and announced: "All ready—let 'er go."

As Garrison prepared to touch the flash off, a violent jolt from behind sent it spinning from his hand.

Recovering balance, he saw a voluminous female figure in soiled gingham gown heading straight toward Myra Drexel's table.

Then, before he could move, she had planted herself in front of the Baron and launched a shrill tirade.

"You goot-for-noddings loafer!" she cried, wagging a vehement forefinger in his face; "why you should be coming here to cut up foolthings, hein? Maybe you tell your new lady friend that you was a big shoot, ja? Vell, Myra run along home and put on dot janitor's uniform before I gift you a smack in der shooet!"

The man's face had gone slowly magenta.

His jaw worked spasmodically, but only guttural Germanic sounds resulted.

Suddenly the woman seized both his shoulders and began to shake them violently.

People were quickly gathering around.

With an anguished moan Myra Drexel sprang up and started to push her way through them. Then out of the melee loomed Steve Crandall's flaxen head.

Myra clutched him and buried her face on his shoulder.

"Oh, Stevie!" she murmured tearfully; "it's so awful! Why did you run away and leave me with that fake?"

The boy chuckled as he led her away.

"As I recall it, darling," he answered gently, "it was you who did the first leaving. But we won't worry about that now."

They went out through the lobby and waited a moment while the doorman called a cab.

As it drew to the curb, a figure emerged from a door near them and started to waddle hastily away. Steve called: "Good night, Kate—and thanks!"

Myra shrank closer to him, gasping: "Why, it's that horrible wife of the man who pretended to be a baron!"

The taxi door was open. Piloting her in, Steve followed and took his seat before replying.

"My dear," he said then, smiling into the girl's upturned, wondering face, "that particular phase of the lady's existence is at an end. I was sure that in the excitement you wouldn't recognize Candy Kate, the woman who has that little stand on the corner. But say—can you feature it?—she staked that swell act for me for only five dollars, and the same accent gets Garbo five thousand!"

Fossils From Patagonia Brought to U. S. Museum

Bones of an extinct flesh-eating animal related to the kangaroo but much bigger than a grizzly bear, fossil frogs, remains of a totally new kind of fossil browsing animal five feet high, are among the scientific trophies brought back from South America to the American Museum of Natural History here, by Dr. George Gaylord Simpson, associate curator of vertebrate paleontology, says the Kansas City Star's Science Service.

Doctor Simpson and his associates made actual a semi-legendary "place of bones" deep in the interior of Argentina's "Wild South," Patagonia, as the result of a chance sight of a fossil jawbone in a bank in Buenos Aires. They went through adventures of an almost Marco Polo type, including a brief sojourn at the ranch of a veritable ogre of a bushy-eyebrowed killer known as the Terrible Turk, and passage through a land where the natives valued money at nothing, but would sell you anything you wanted for an empty tin can.

Finally, after disappointing searches in the region to which they had been directed, they found, in a fissure-sided hill, a tremendous deposit of bones, believed to be one of the richest "fossil mines" ever discovered. The deposit appears to be the silted-up bottom of an ancient lake that formed in the crater of an extinct volcano. Apparently animals coming down to drink were overcome and killed by poisonous fumes from cracks in the earth, which were the dying gasps of the old volcano itself.

The bones were so thick, where they had been weathered out in the course of ages, that they cluttered the ground, and the explorers stumbled over them.

The big, hitherto unknown herbivorous animal they found has been named Scarrittia, in compliment to H. S. Scarritt, sponsor of the expedition.

The King's Bargain

Lying at Virginia Water is a great scarlet and white State barge which has carried many of England's kings and queens. It is nearly 250 years old, and has not been used since 1919, when it headed a procession of boats in the Thames representing the work of the navy. Eight royal watermen wearing long scarlet coats, black velvet peaked caps, red breeches and buckled shoes propel the 40-foot barge. It was built by William III for his queen—Pearson's Weekly.

Purkinje's Figures

In optics Purkinje's figures are figures produced on a wall, of uniform color when a person entering a dark room with a candle moves it up and down approximately on a level with the eyes. From the eye near the candle an image of the retinal vessels will appear projected on the wall.

JOHN (THE MINISTER AND HIS PEOPLE)

LESSON TEXT—Third Epistle of John.

GOLDEN TEXT—Beloved, imitate not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doeth good is of God; he that doeth evil hath not seen God.—III John 11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Letter From John.

JUNIOR TOPIC—With Ink and Pen. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making Our Church Friendly. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Friendly and Hospitable Church.

I. Personal History.

1. He was the son of Zebedee and brother of the apostle James (Matt. 4:21). The implication is that his father was in easy circumstances, for he had boats and hired servants (Mark 1:19, 20).

2. He was a disciple of John the Baptist (John 1:35-40). This was a most valuable training, for John was a man sent from God (John 1:6). The fiery eloquence of the Baptist no doubt profoundly impressed him.

3. He was called to follow Jesus (Matt. 4:21, 22). He was first called into the relationship of a disciple. As a disciple he came to know Jesus personally.

4. Appointed as an apostle (Matt. 10:2). Having been tested as a disciple, he now is appointed as an apostle (Mark 3:13-19; Luke 6:13-16).

II. His Character.

1. He was reserved. That is, he was decidedly reticent about himself. He speaks of himself as "the disciple whom Jesus loved" and "that other disciple."

2. He possessed a rare gift of penetrative insight. The truths set forth in his writings did not come as a result of reasoned judgment, but of penetrative insight. He was indeed a seer.

3. He was thoroughly masculine. Christian art does him a thorough injustice in portraying him as effeminate. He was intense, vehement in his temperament. He was truly a "son of thunder," as Christ declared (Mark 3:17).

III. Some Instances of Behavior.

1. Intolerance of irregular service (Luke 9:49, 50). There was a certain disciple who seems to have been intelligently witnessing and God had honored his testimony with power to cast out devils. John forbade him because he was not working with them.

2. His righteous indignation displayed (Luke 9:51-56). When Jesus had set his face toward Jerusalem some Samaritans refused to extend hospitality to him. This treatment of his Master so aroused the anger of John and James that they desired to call down fire from heaven to burn them up. This action grew out of John's great love for his Master.

3. John's care of Christ's mother (John 19:25-27). From the cross Jesus beheld his mother and committed her to the tender care of John. The intense love that he had for his Lord would move him to express the tenderest affection for his mother.

IV. His Third Epistle.

This is one of the three private Epistles of the New Testament and gives us a look into the early church life and also a picture of the aged apostle. This Epistle consists of the following parts:

1. The salutation (vv. 1-4). This letter was addressed to Gatus, with the fervent wish that his temporal prosperity and physical health would be measured by the measure of the increase of his spirituality. His supreme joy was to hear that his children were walking in the truth.

2. His praise for Gatus (vv. 5-8). This praise was for the hospitality which Gatus showed toward some traveling evangelists. In spite of the opposition of a certain prominent member of the church, Gatus received these preachers into his home. To receive God's messengers into our homes and send them forth on their journey is a deed worthy of God. One of the best ways to help the truth is to show hospitality to its messengers.

3. His condemnation of Diotrephes (vv. 9, 10). The sin of this man was his over-weening self-confidence and arrogance. He loved to have the place of pre-eminence; therefore, for that reason he refused to receive these traveling evangelists and expelled them into their homes. He even maliciously attacked John the beloved pastor. His spirit of pride moved him to acts of tyranny toward others.

4. His commendation of Demetrius (v. 12). Demetrius was perhaps the bearer of this letter. John gives the assurance that Demetrius was of good report among all men. His life of good deeds proved that he was in fellowship with God.

Joys

We should publish our joys and conceal our griefs.

The worse the passage, the more welcome the port.

Joy and sorrow are next-door neighbors.

Joy which we cannot share with others is only half enjoyed.

Enthusiasm

To have true enthusiasm, we must have faith, assurance, hope, reliance and confidence in our own loyalty and ability.

HUMAN STERILIZATION.—Continued.

In Germany, the practise of human sterilization has become so widespread and common that it has been found necessary to establish regulations prohibiting ridicule of persons sterilized by State order. In Maryland, on the other hand, little legislative consideration has been given to this matter. Now, ordinarily, a contrast between the Free and the Nazi states would be welcome, and the greater the contrast the more pleasing to us. However, in this matter of sex-sterilization of the unfit, Maryland finds itself also in contrast to thirty-odd of the United States which have passed laws to this end.

A Bill providing for "the sterilization of incurable idiots, imbeciles and morons by court order" was introduced last March in the Maryland House of Delegates, but nothing came of it.

Why does Maryland, along with about one-fourth of the other United States (including Pennsylvania) reject the communal benefits of legal sterilization? This column does not pose as an expert in such politico-legal matters, but for the benefit of readers who have not thought about this question, two "leads" may be offered.

First: Maryland is a conservative State, reflecting the temper of its citizens. We are not, usually, among "the first by which the new is tried."

Second: The Roman Catholic influence is strong in Maryland, and the Church of Rome, as is well known, frowns upon any interference with human fecundity. Its leaders are often heard in opposition to the sterilization movement. This, certainly, is their right, since their flocks help to pay the taxes which keep up our well-filled institutions for mental incompetents.

But, does Maryland want to continue to dodge this issue? Probably it will keep coming before our General Assembly at regular intervals from now on. Perhaps it is now time to profit by the experience of twenty years in other States and seriously consider an agency by which we may reduce the number of the unfit born within our borders. That experience is available, in a large scientific and legal literature, to any group of laymen or legislators organized to study the problem. Indeed, the wording of the Bill introduced last March at Annapolis shows the benefit of the experience elsewhere.

In specifying the persons, or classes, for which sterilization shall be considered (see above), its sponsors say nothing about criminals, habitual or otherwise. The fact is that sterilization of convicted criminals has been found to have a questionable legal status. It is not sufficiently clear that criminality is inherited.

Moreover, the idea of depriving an individual of parenthood because he has gotten into trouble—even serious or repeated trouble—seems repugnant to most persons. It is certainly very different than providing that the feeble-minded, those with incurable mental defects, who are usually very prolific and fairly certain to transmit their defects to some or most of their offspring, should be painlessly deprived of the opportunity to procreate more of their kind to become, in turn, wards of the State.

A conservative start into this field would be quite in line with the spirit and tradition of Maryland, but a start must some time be made.

In conclusion, let us emphasize that this and the preceding chapter constitute a very "sketchy" treatment of the subject of human sterilization. Readers pursuing the topic further will find it interesting to be informed as to what has been done and to reflect upon what is being attempted, viz. the improvement of the human race by a legal (and anatomical) ban upon the breeding of some of the most undesirable elements of the population, particularly of those whose mental and social defects have been proven to be hereditary.

Stylish Drink

HOW it grows—the consumption of grapefruit juice in this country! Fresh factories are springing up in Florida to seal this delicious beverage in cans, and fresh addicts are buying it every day. Before the days when prohibition was repealed, ill-advised persons used to hurry off to Havana in order to partake of drinks that were not permitted here. Now that prohibition is no longer in force, well-advised persons stay here and drink such beverages as this titillating Havana Special: Mix the contents of a 10-ounce can grapefruit juice and one cup syrup from canned pineapple. Boil together one-fourth cup sugar and one cup water, then cool and add. Chill, add one bottle charged water and serve ice cold in punch glasses. Makes ten glasses.

Beverage for the Beau Monde

This beverage has style as well as a taste that attracts so many partakers. You can tell it by the very names of the concoctions that are made with it. Take, for instance, this:

Coffee Punch: Mix together one cup strong coffee, one cup orange juice, the juice only from two No. 2 cans grapefruit and one cup maple syrup. Chill. Just before serving, add one quart ginger ale and two cups heavy cream. The cream may be omitted, if desired. Makes a little less than three quarts.

Not only the name, which smacks of former days of fashion, but the ingredients make this a drink which moderns would call chic.

But perhaps a rickety would be even more appropriate as a summer beverage. Here's one that consists largely of grapefruit juice:

Cherry Rickety: Boil one-fourth cup sugar and one cup water, cool and add the contents of a 10-ounce can grapefruit juice, the juice only from a No. 2 can sour pitted cherries and one-fourth cup maraschino cherry juice. Chill. Add one bottle charged water and serve ice cold. Makes twelve punch glasses.

Atmosphere of the Elite

Another grapefruit combination that makes hot weather seem like a mirage is the following:

Fruit Punch: Dissolve one cup honey in two and a half cups water brought to boiling, add two and a half more cups of water, and chill. Then add one quart orange juice, one-half cup lemon juice and the contents of a No. 2 can grapefruit juice and chill thoroughly. This fills twenty-four punch glasses and carries the atmosphere associated with gorgeous frosted punch bowls with floating ice and presided over by a hostess who knows what's what.

And the following delectable drink also carries all the atmosphere of the socially elite.

Strawberry Grapefruitade: Boil four cups sugar and three cups water for five minutes. Cool. Hull two quarts strawberries, wash, crush, add one cup sugar and let stand for an hour. Then add to the cold syrup. Add the juice of twelve oranges and six lemons and the contents of two No. 2 cans of grapefruit juice. Just before serving add three quarts ginger ale, and serve over a large piece of ice in a punch bowl. Serves fifty.

Don't Be Misled

You might think that a beverage which is as swanky as all this would be expensive. Don't be misled. There is a large supply of grapefruit juice in cans, and commercial canning has done for it what it has done for many other foods formerly available only to the very rich. It has made it available to the entire public at a price that it can afford to pay.*

Railroads Extend Telephone Usage

Telephone train dispatching is being used by a greater percentage of the mileage of class one railroads in the United States than ever before, the telegraph and telephone section of the Association of American Railroads reports. Use of the telephone for dispatching trains has steadily increased during the past fifteen years.

Telephone service is now used for transmission of orders for the operation of trains over 151,103 miles of railroad or 63.72 per cent of the total railroad mileage. In 1920 the telephone was used for the transmission of train orders over 48.5 per cent or 119,554 miles of railroad.

From 1920 to 1935 there was an increase of more than 26 per cent in the miles of road over which trains are operated by means of train orders transmitted by telephone. Use of the telephone affords great flexibility in the transmission of train orders and also expedites the transmission of such orders. In the event of emergencies in train operation, the train conductor or engineer, by using a way station or portable telephone, can give first-hand information to the dispatcher or superintendent that is always helpful under such circumstances.

East Indian Strong Man Kills Tiger With Stick

Calcutta.—M. K. Modi of Dumka, Bihar, has earned for himself the nickname of "Samson." Here are some of his feats:

Killed a tiger single-handed, armed only with a stick.

Killed a buffalo by twisting its horns till its neck broke.

Put to flight, by himself, a gang of 40 bandits. Saved the life of his servant, who fell down a well. He was just in time to catch the man's left ankle with one hand and hauled him back.

He Finds Tack in Pie, and It's Good for $5

Seattle.—A tack in a piece of pie is worth $5 to the eater, Superior Judge Chester A. Batchelor decided. He awarded Frederico Ferro that sum, following his suit against a restaurant and a bakery for $525.

Babe Likes Tobacco

McAlester, Okla.—Most babies like ice cream cones or candy—but two-year-old John M. Mullan, Jr., will have a cigar, if you don't mind. There's nothing like a good cigar, or even a chew of tobacco, for him.

Strong Thief Sought

Seattle, Wash.—King county deputies are searching for a "heavy-fingered" thief who stole 30 steel rails from the track of a logging company railroad.

ADDIS ABABA DRAWS EYES OF THE WORLD

Ethiopian Capital Only Real City in Empire.

Washington.—The eyes of the world are focused on Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, Ethiopian press box of the Italo-Ethiopian political situation, and only settlement in the empire that merits the name "city."

"Addis Ababa is the sole place in the country showing marked signs of modern development, yet in the shadow of these improvements, ancient Ethiopia still lives," says the National Geographic society.

"The city is situated high up in the Ethiopian mountains, near the geographic center of the empire. To reach it a traveler must traverse the dusty caravan routes or board a train at Djibouti, French Somaliland, for long hours of riding through torrid plains, and rolling foothills to the central plateau region.

Has Splendid Climate.

"Nestling among eucalyptus-forested hills. Addis Ababa has a splendid climate, which along with other attractions, has been an important factor in its growth to a city of 70,000 inhabitants. Several thousand of its residents are foreigners, notably British Indians, British Arabs, Greeks, and Armenians.

"Addis Ababa hills number more than those of Rome. The royal palace, audience hall and new parliament building top one small hill. On others rise many prepossessing buildings, including villas of five European legations, hotels, two government hospitals and churches. There are several schools, conducted mostly by Ethiopian clergy and foreign missionaries. Recently Ethiopian students have been sent for advanced training to the United States, England, France, and Switzerland.

In many of the city's wide, winding streets, rough cobbles lately have been replaced by macadam and asphalt surfaces. Electric lighting is becoming more prevalent, due to the founding of small private plants. Since the piping of water from Mount Intotto has been completed, natives can purchase in the market a five-gallon tin of water for a penny. They can also buy imported foods in the stores. Sound pictures are heard in the capital's theaters and there is telegraph service, and an air-mail service to Djibouti.

"At present, the country has almost no roads. Ethiopians bringing leopard skins, monkey furs and other articles of commerce to the bazaar at Addis Ababa, pile them on the backs of camels and sure-footed donkeys that pick their way over stony mountain trails. Since 1932 the government has been building two roads out of Addis Ababa. One leads 50 miles northeast toward Dessay, the other 100 miles southwest toward Jimma. When these are completed, coffee from the south and hides and skins from the north will probably pour much more rapidly into the city.

Wealthy Have Cars.

"A few of the capital's wealthier citizens own automobiles, but many of them still take pride in riding gaily-carbonated mules, followed by servants on foot. Automobiles feel their way carefully through streets sometimes choked with mules, donkeys, and jaywalking pedestrians. Streets are especially congested on Saturdays when about 20,000 purchasers throng the marketplace to buy salt, honey in goatskin bags, cotton sheeting and other commodities. Through the crowds of dark-skinned Ethiopians plod camels laden with sheets of corrugated iron used for much of the city's roofing. Tribal chiefs from remote villages, wearing lion mane collars and carrying gilded shields, mingle with soldiers in khaki uniforms.

"At night, these same streets are nearly deserted. Since most of the streets are unlighted, a bugle at nightfall sounds a curfew for all Ethiopians. Foreigners who venture abroad in the streets after dark are warned to carry lanterns. During the coronation of Ethiopia's Emperor Haile Selassie I, four and a half years ago, some of the main streets were lighted by electricity. But this was considered an unnecessary expense, and economy has since caused the removal of many of the poles and wires."

"The mechanical equipment will occupy a basement of reinforced concrete 25 inches wide and 7 feet deep. It is reached through a flush aluminum sidewalk door.

Springfield, Mo.—Police are searching for a polite burglar who writes notes, thanking his victims for leaving their doors open so access to dwellings is easier.

His latest depredation was the theft at the home of Clifford White. When the family returned they found the following note:

"I was looking for something to eat; found the back door open and walked in. Thanks!"

Jerusalem's "Wailing Wall"

The "Wailing Wall" in Jerusalem is near the Moslem Mosque of Omar. A portion of it is 50 feet high, and it is supposed to contain some of the stones of Solomon's temple. It is the gathering place of Jews on Fridays to lament and pray. It is said to have been built 3,000 years ago by King Solomon to protect his temple. The Wailing Wall has been a shrine sacred to the Jews since Titus destroyed the temple in the year 63 A. D.

Earth and Moon

The length of the earth's axis is about 7,900 miles, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, while the diameter of the moon is about 2,180 miles, the earth's surface is about 13 1/2 times as great as the moon's; its volume or bulk is nearly 50 times larger, and, owing to its greater density, the mass or actual amount of matter contained in the earth is about 81 times greater than that of the moon.

Mrs. Dingbat—Yes, I know he does, but don't worry about him—he sleeps all day.

OUR DETROIT LETTER.

bleachers enough to seat 29,000 more patrons—making the capacity now between 60,000 and 70,000. Over 40,000 applications have so far poured in, so you see just how much chance a fellow has to get reserved seat tickets and as for the bleachers, even at $6.60—well some are preparing to sleep at the Park the best part of a week, in order to be sure of admission. At least this was true of last year, and the interest is much higher this year. As for us we will sit by the Radio, and listen to "Ty Tyson," the best baseball announcer in the U. S., who makes each play so plain, that any one acquainted with the Park, can almost see the play, if he uses a little imagination. Every one here is rooting for Chicago to win the N. L. pennant, and by the time this reaches your readers, the race will be ended, and we will know whether or not the Tigers will have to face the terrible Dean, boys or those rejuvenated high power pitchers of the Chicago Cubs. Personally, I prefer the latter, having had the experience of hearing over the radio, those St. Louis boys ride over the Tigers in four games last year.

The meat strike is still on, but it seems that it is like all strikes now, very quiet and not general over the city. I don't suppose people have dropped off eating meat entirely but there is no doubt that the high prices are cause of large decrease in the receipts of the retail dealers.

Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Reid, of New Windsor and their son, Charles U., of Thurmont, Md., who have been visiting at our home in Detroit, Michigan, have now returned to their homes. On the trip West, they visited many points of interest, having taken the route through Marion, Ohio, to Bowling Green, Ohio, where they spent a few days with their cousins, and attended a second reunion of the "Crepes Clan," at which about 75 persons were present, all descendants of Wilson Creps, Mr. Reid's uncle, (a brother of his mother) who, with two brothers located in Northern Ohio, shortly after the close of the Civil War. At Bowling Green they were met by son, my wife and myself, who also attended the reunion, and escorted them to Detroit, where a week of sight-seeing was indulged in.

During this time they visited a great many points of interest, including Belle Isle Park, Greenfield Village, at Dearborn, (the centre of the Ford industries), the Detroit Zoo, etc. This being their first visit to the "Western folks," and the first of M. D., to me, it was greatly appreciated by all of their relatives, the only regret being that it was of so short duration. They left Detroit, on Saturday morning, taking the Canadian route to Niagara Falls, and continuing through New York and Pennsylvania, to their home in New Windsor and Thurmont. We are all looking forward to another visit in the future.

While on the subject of visits, we may as well mention that of Miss Evelyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marlin E. Reid, of Taneytown, who is a very welcome guest of her grandfather and grand-mother, the writer and his wife. She has been fortunate enough to regain the position she had with the large mercantile establishment of J. L. Hudson and Co., and expects to make her permanent home in this city.

FOR FIRE PREVENTION.

Always keep a light ladder convenient for use, and several good buckets at regular known places.

Keep all doors closed at night, except such as must be open. Closed doors prevent drafts and the rapid spread of fire.

Do not keep combustible matter in chimney corners—not even fire wood and kindling, unless there is a metal cut-off in the chimney, below pipe holes.

Do not use coal oil on wood in making fire, unless the oil is placed on the wood before it is put in the stove.

Do not run stove pipes through partitions or floors unless through metal collars with plenty of air space all around.

In using an oil stove, keep it scrupulously clean, put on new wicks frequently even though old ones are not too short—they become clogged up, smoke and are unsafe.

Never leave such stoves to take care of themselves, for they have a habit of "drawing up." Whenever one "smells," it is evidence of gas, and danger.

Keep brick chimneys clean, and when cracks develop, have them closed up. Chimneys are particularly dangerous where they pass through a floor, or roof.

All chimneys should have an opening at the bottom, to serve for catching ashes or soot. With such an opening a rope can be provided, with a brush—a small pine tree will do—that can be drawn up and down and scrape off inflammable soot.

Terra-cotta chimneys, or flues, are not always safe, but are apt to crack. Never use them when they are not fully exposed to view.

Do not build brick chimneys on a floor, but always from the foundation up.

Be extra careful on "wash-days" especially when the draft is strong, and perhaps toward the dwelling. The practice of using old worn out stoves in outbuildings, is a wrong one.

Always have in mind, that most fires are due to carelessness, or forgetfulness, of some kind. Don't have to admit, after a fire, that it was your fault.
