We lose a lot of money every year on account of "Specials" that are phoned in and never paid for. They are no doubt sometimes forgotten by those who send them, and it does not pay us to send bills and try to collect. As "one good turn deserves another" we insist on these little "Specials" be paid for promptly.

Merwyn C. Fuss is building a double dwelling on the lot recently pur-chased by him from J. E. Flohr, on York Street. Rapid progress is being made, and the building should be ready for occupancy before mid-summer. From the present outlook, this will be a busy year for building operations in Taneytown.

The following candidates were nominated Friday evening, Mar. 18, for town officials: For Mayor, Norville P. Shoemaker and Charles Welk; for City Council, Edgar H. Essig, William D. Ohler, Frank E. Crouse and Francis Shaum. As Mr. Crouse has declined, Shaum. As Mr. Crouse and Francis

A PROPOSED PLAYGROUND FOR TANEYTOWN.

The Parents' Club of Taneytown and vicinity met for their quarterly meeting, Tuesday evening, in the Firemen's building. The aim of the Club is to meet in a co-operative way the problems in child training, growing out of conditions and circumstances in community life. In the midst of the present plans for growth and development of our town, there is a crying need for just such work as this club is striving to do. New influences, and conditions, new environments brought about thru the present development program for Taneytown, will present greater problems in child training. The Club is gradually growing; three new members were added at the last meeting. ing. Every parent in the community is needed in the program of the Club. is needed in the program of the Club. Membership consists of parents only. All parents interested in the training of their children are eligible for membership. Dues of twenty-five cents is collected annually from each family represented.

A number of problems were presented at the last meeting. One of the plans that developed out of the discussion that followed, was the appointment of a committee to investi pointment of a committee to investi gate the possibility of playground for the children of Taneytown. If plans can be realized, we will have a play ground this summer for the boys and girls under the supervision of a qual-ified director.

To you parents: Is this a worthwhile project? Why not join those already interested parents in this and other equally worth while projects for your children? If you are interested and desire to join, or want more information concerning the Parents' Club, see the President, Mrs. F. T.

SALE OF BUILDING LOTS IN TANEYTOWN

About 150 lots to be offered in Northern Extension.

The large advertisement in this issue calls attention to Taneytown's second major expansion, the first having been in 1915, when the "East End" lots were sold, the most of them having been built on since that time.

The promoters of this sale of the S

C. Reaver farm, York Street extended —have had prepared a chart of the addition, made from a survey, that will materially aid purchasers in seeing just what they are buying.

There will be two main streets starting from York St., extended, be-yond the Reaver buildings reservation, running west by north to the end of the tract, the road leading to the pumping station. Another main street will run north, dividing the tract, and a shorter street will parallel the two streets first mentioned. An examination of the chart will easily make the divisions clear.

The tract is laid out in 20-ft units, two to be sold together as a 40-ft lot; and in some instances, three units will be sold as 60-ft lots. The entire tract seems to be very desirable for building purposes, with good drainage. About 150 lots or parcels, will be sold.

CARROLL COUNTY BOYS WIN PRIZES.

Three Carroll county boys are announced winners in the National 4-H Farm Accounting contest conducted for the 1935-36 farm fiscal year by the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club work. The contest was conducted in co-operation with extension agents. Robert Shoemaker, 18, of Wood-bine, named winner for the eastern states receives a $225 merchandise certificate. Roland Stonesifer receives the $100 state prize originally won by Shoemaker, and Henry Kohler the $10 Carroll County prize, all being provided by the International Harvester Company sponsoring the contest. one contestant may receive more than one prize according to the rules.

The boys used farm account books supplied by the Maryland Extension Service and showed a complete record of all financial and production items. Changes in farm practices based on their records were outlined by the con-

CHILD'S AID DRIVE CONTINUED Only Fifty Percent of Amount Needed has been Received.

The final report meeting for the financial drive of the Carroll County Children's Aid Society was held Monday evening, April 27 in the Mayor and Council's room of the Westminster Firemen's building, at 7:30 P. M. District chairmen, district leaders and solicitors were present to report the solicitors were present to report the results of the campaign for $3500.
Mr. Harry G. Berwager, County Campaign Chairman, presided over this portion of the evening. A roll call was made at which time each district made its report. Some of the reports were most gratifying. However, the Society can as yet report only fifty per Society can as yet report only fifty per cent proceeds which means that it will need just twice as much money in order to continue its work. For this reason the drive has been extended for two weeks and the workers will make final reports by May 11. It is hoped that the citizens of the county will willingly co operate with the solicitors in this work.

Following these reports, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Frank T. Myers, who presided over the regular quarterly meeting of the Society. The treasurer's report was read by Mrs. Sereck S. Wilson, and was followed by the report of the director, Miss Bonnie M. Custenborder. It was noted that 63 children are under the direct care of the Children's Aid Society of Carroll County, 3 in adoption homes, 3 in wage homes, 11 with relatives, 21 in free homes and 25 in boarding homes. There are, in the family department, 10 cases which have social problems and domestic difficulties and involving 48 children. "Some of our citizens seem to be of opinion that all the wards of the CAS are of low mentality or undesirable background. Several of them are below normal, but most of them have average intelligence, and two of our wards are on the honor roll, one a Senior and the other a Freshman. A speaker at a recent conference said "if we paid more attention to the high chair we would have less need for the electric chair."

Following this report, an award was made by the president, to the chair-man having given the most educational talks regarding CAS work during the past five months. Mrs. Howard L. Price, Franklin District, received the award which was an electric clock.

ANOTHER DECISION BY SUPREME COURT.

Held to be of Sweeping Importance, Indirectly.

Without direct reference to any new deal case, the Supreme Court has handed down a unanimous opinion that is apt to meet widespread comment, and to stand as one of the most sweeping opinions rendered by the Court.

The opinion gives notice to Congress that the judicial powers of the Court are not to be circumscribed by "administrative action going hound "administrative action going beyond the limits of constitutional authority. The opinion was read by Justice

The decision was attached to a case known on the records as the St. Joseph's Stock Yards case, a suit against the government, pending since 1929, the government winning the

The substance of the decision very clearly is that if the present powers of the Court are to be restricted, this can only be done by amendment to the constitution, and not by any legislative arrangement that Congress may attempt to create.

CONFESSED, THEN PARDONED.

Desiring to start life over again with a clean slate with his wife and child after serving five years in the Virginia State Penitentiary, led William Francis Lindsay, about 30 years of age, formerly of near Lovettsville, Va., to appear in Gettysburg Saturday and enter a plea of guilty to a charge of robbing the Abbottstown, Pa., bank nearly seven years ago.

He was given a sentence of from five to seven years in the Eastern Penitentiary by Judge W. C. Sheeley, before whom he appeared, but was informed by Judge Sheeley that he would suspend the sentence on condition that he would restore to the bank $1,113 he took at the time of robbery with interest at 6 percent. and pay the costs. The principal and interest amounted to $1,581.82 and the cost to $28.59.

A friend of Lindsay presented a certified check for $1,500 to Clerk of the Court, Roy D. Renner, Gettysburg, and the remainder of the fine and costs, $110.41 was paid in cash. Lindsay then left the Court House a free

On the afternoon of November 6, 1929, Lindsay, unmasked, entered the Abbottsville State bank and asked the cashier, William A. Bream for a $2.50 gold piece for a bill he proffered. A minute later Lindsay forced Bream into the vault of the bank at the point of a pistol, closed the door on him and after scooping up all the cash in sight fled in an automobile in the direction of Emmitsburg. He made good his escape.—Frederick Post.

PRIMARY ELECTION INTEREST.

The chief interest in the coming erine S. Noel, deceased, reported sale primary election, centres largely on the size of the anti-Roosevelt vote in the state that will be given to Mr. Breckinbridge; and the second interest will be the Republican candidates who will oppose Stone, (Dem.) in this Second district, and Lewis, (Dem.) in the Sixth district, the latter interest being somewhat bound up with the fact that Republican candidates sometimes win for Congress, in Presidential campaigns. This is assuming, of course, that both Stone and Lewis will win renominations, as seems probable, especially as opposition to renomination is split by the entry of other Democratic can-

The primary election will be held at the usual voting places, next Monday, May 4th.

The Western Maryland College choir, under the direction of Ruth Sherman Jones, will present Hayden's great oratorio "The Creation" in Alumni Hall, Sunday afternoon, May 3, at 4 o'clock. The soloists will be: Virginia Sellers, soprano; Gene Archer, tenor; Lansing Hatfield, baritone, and the accompaniment will be furnished by piano and nine piece or chestra.

The public is cordially invited to attend. A free-will offering will be taken at the door.

THE FEDERAL TAX BILL.

The new Federal tax bill, that is estimated to yield $800,000,000 in addition to present revenues, was discussed, rather than debated, by less than 60 out of 435 members. bill was passed by the House, on Wednesday, 267 to 93. Four Repub-licans voted for the bill, and eleven Democrats voted against

It is generally conceded that the Senate will substantially amend the bill; but even in the Senate, only about half of the members of the Fi nance Committee are giving it careful consideration in the early stages.

What may develop later, remains to be seen. In the meantime, the Republican minorities have been caucusing over the bill, much more generally, even though they know that any material Republican amendments will be snowed under, as the administration has full power to pass any sort of bill it wants.

Both parties have decided, in fact. that the main issues have already been cut out, and that the only worthwhile debate that can be entered into now, is one before the voters prior to the November election, and both are preparing for the most important presidential campaign in all history.

AN ALLIANCE THAT MAY DE-CIDE THE COMING ELECTION.

The possibility of a national Farmer-Labor party, strong enough to compete effectively in a presidential campaign, has been discussed for years. But it is a fair question whether such a party does not in fact already exist, with sufficient strength to win the next election. The coalition now led by President Roosevelt is Democratic in name chiefly; some of its opponents feel it to be socialistic in policy and program; and Raymond Clapper, writing in the May, Review of Reviews, finds that its essential strength is Farmer-Laborite in composition.

"By all indications," he writes, "the President has so captured the farm country that it is doubtful if even the nomination by the Republicans this year of a middle-westerner, like Governor Landon, of Kansas, will fatally alienate it. He has drawn the ranks of laboral ways convents the friendly alienate ways convents to the ranks of the players convents to the property of the players of of labor, always somewhat friendly, into closer formation behind him, even obtaining from the mighty United Mine Workers an unprecedented official endorsement. "This is perhaps the most significant development of the period. Mr. Roosevelt has been able to bring it about without alienating to any great extent the old foundations of the party. He has retained the southern states, which kept the party alive through so many dark years. Also he has retained in the main, the allegiance of the northern municipal machines, such as Tammany Hall and that of Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, which in one presidential election after another have constituted practically the only foothold of the party outside the South. Thus, for the time being at least, Mr. Roosevelt has added to his party a new wing which quite overshadows the original structure.

"This change which has been taking place in the Democratic party accounts for much of the heated political talk we have been hearing. Smith is protesting against it when he denounces the President for setting against against allows are proposed to the protection of the protection ting class against class. Mr. Roosevelt is trying to cement his farmer-labor recruits when in his message on the state of the Union, he pillories big business and the Tories. So is Dem-ocratic National Chairman Farley, when he attacks bankers and large business leaders as 'unprincipled brigands.'
"Looking into the future, it is possible to discern the shadowy outlines of another conflict, destined perhaps to be more decisive in its long-range effects than the election which about to take place. That conflict is to be over the future complexion of the Democratic party. It will take place whether Mr. Roosevelt is reelected, or not. Its outcome will for a long time influence American polities and the main stream of our political currents."

"IT IS PATRIOTISM."

We suggest a reading of the editorial in this issue, clipped from the Washington Post—"It is Patriotism." In our humble opinion the teachers of Carroll County should take an open stand against the vicious propaganda that they should oppose taking the oath to support the Constitution of the United States. Possibly there was no need for raising this issue; but it has been raised, and all loyal patriotic teacn-

No intimation is given as to the character of the investigation. Mr. Baughman, who has been spending some months in St. Petersburg, Florida, has expressed his willingness to appear.

POLITICS AND JUSTICE.

Critics of the Supreme Court, most of whom would usurp for themselves the powers given to the Court by the Constitution, are indulging in a breathing spell. #### REVIVING THE BLUE EAGLE.

The National Publisher in its last issue, in commenting editorially on "Reviving the Blue Eagle," speaking dividend policy, and express the fedespecially of the feature of what is known now as the "Healy bill" that would establish at least a modified form of NRA, hits the nail on the head when it says:

"Experience of publishers with the old NRA does not recommend its revival in any form."

It will be remembered that the old NRA was "put over" through an innocent looking form of agreement that publishers and printers signed without a clear idea that they were tieing themselves up to an arbitrary here, I am sorry to say, we have seen price schedule, that from the very the first step taken in the same directieing themselves up to an arbitrary outset proved to be a surrender of most of their individual liberties to transact their business successfully in

Just now, thousands of Ethiopians are being killed over in Africa, to a comparatively few Italians, and we think but little about it; of the land. and what we do think about it seriously, is done by those who have "business" interests there. The killings are not important.

And yet, the Ethops are human beings! Powerful countries like England and France, are standing by, as though it was no concern of their own. As a matter of fact, they are afraid to interfere, as each have troubles of their own to watch.

This war is typical of many peace time propositions. We are afraid to take sides, for fear of after-claps. We have a "price" set on our moral convictions. We are brave, only as far as it is safe to be so. Let the "Ethiopians" take care of themselves-and, they are neither all black, nor all in Africa.

THE ROSE MAIDEN" TO BE PRO-DUCED AT BLUE RIDGE COL.

This year the Glee Club of Blue Ridge College, an organization of 35 mixed voices under the direction of Prof. Nevin W. Fisher and with Margaret A. Tribble as accompanist, will present as their large annual production the secular cantata entitled "The Rose Maiden," by the English composer, Frederic H. Cowen. This is a famous choral work of great lyric and dramatic beauty. It has been produced innumerable times throughout England and the United States. The presentation in the Blue Ridge College auditorium will take next Friday night, May 8, at 8:15 o'clock. Admission will be free.

The quartet of soloists on this occasion will be as follows: Soprano. Jeannette Bittner, of Washington; contralto, Reba Snader, of Bel Air, Md.; tenor, Nevin Fisher, head of the Music Department of Blue Ridge Colege; baritone, William Chalmers, of

The Washington Star had the following to say concerning Miss Bitt-ner: "Unusually good vocal talent was displayed by Jeannette Bittner in the part of Josephine, the heroine. Indeed, so beautifully was her part acted that once during the midst of song the audience could not resist the temptation to interrupt her with cheers and applause that would fill any professional with pride. The big auditorium has no terrors for Miss Bittner, which she filled with her voice before she ever grew up."

Miss Snader is a native of Carroll County, whose fine contralto voice and excellent singing style have been appreciated by all who have had the good fortune to hear her. She is a graduate of Western Maryland Colege and studied singing under Miss Ruth Sherman Jones for four and a half years. Subsequently she sang the contralto roles in several oratoros given in Carroll County.

Mr. Chalmers has studied voice at the Peabody Conservatory. For the past three years he has sung both ocally and nationally over the Columbia chain in the Bolek musicale. For the past two years he has been soloist at the Grace Lutheran Church, Westminster, in their annual Good Friday Cantata.

O. F. Blackwelder, D. D., pastor of the Church of the Reformation, Washington, D. C, will speak at a public program in the Blue Ridge College auditorium, Thursday evening, May 7, 1936, at 8 o'clock. Dr. Blackwelder will speak on the subject, "Youth at the Cross Roads." This program is sponsored by the college Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A.

Camel's Hair Is Alive

With Static Electricity

Camel hair is a most excellent nonconductor of heat and cold. Each hair contains what is known as a meduallary ray, which is enclosed by a double-walled sheath in the same way that the inner container of a thermos bottle is surrounded by air space. Further, states a writer in the Boston Herald, due to its insulative properties, camel hair is alive with static electricity which makes it peculiarly active and adaptable to varying and sudden atmospheric and temperature changes.

The sturdy Bacterian camel travels long distances across snow-covered mountain passes, comfortable and warm beneath his soft, shaggy coat. He likewise plods along, without discomfort, under blazing desert suns, his temperature-resisting coat serving to protect him also against the heat.

Each individual hair is very fine and very strong, so that a large number of fibers can be pressed into small space, thus making possible the soft, luxurious nap which distinguishes camel hair fabrics. The natural color of fine camel hair is a pale tan. This pure color sometimes varies due to food, seasonal or climatic conditions; small shipments of white camel hair are occasionally received in this country. Certain Indian camel hair is almost black, and in sections of Mongolia the hair sometimes takes on a pinkish cast. By and large, however, the natural color for camel hair is pale tan.

$621,867 Being Held in Conscience Fund of U.S.

Washington.-Persons who wanted to have an easy mind paid $5,885.69 to the United States treasury last year. By so doing they took a load off their respective chests and raised the value of the national "conscience fund" to $621,867.65. These contributors never give their names.

The "conscience fund," more prosaically known as document 126,420, was started in 1811 when an unknown individual sent $5 to the treasury of President Madison because he felt he nad "defrauded the government."

Before the year was over enough money had been contributed by guilty minded persons to bolster the fund to $250 and it was launched into per-

Although there were no more contributions until 1827, every year since then, with the single exception of 1848, bad consciences have increased treasury totals.

The money is set aside as "anonymous contributions" and included in the nation's general fund.

The worst conscience the nation ever had, judging by the year's total must have been 1916 when $54,923.15 was sent in. Contributions usually are impelled by sudden pangs of conscience and are customarily sent by persons who have used postage stamps a second time, failed to pay duties on articles, evaded income taxes, or stolen government property.

Estimate of National Wealth of the national wealth is given, it is supposed to include every form of wealth and property which can be measured-real estate and buildings, live stock, farm implements, machines and tools, railroads, shipping, street railways and all other public utilities and their equipment, agricultural, manufactured and mining products, coin and bullion, home furnishings, clothing, personal adornments and possessions. The census bureau issues separate figures covering all of these and many lesser classifications. It gave the total wealth of the United States in 1922 as $320,803,862,000. For the years since then the national industrial conference board, New York city, made independent estimates. Its estimate for 1932 was $247,300,000,000.

Use of Word Iris

The word Iris is one used in two or three ways. In connection with Greek mythology Iris was worshipped as a messenger of the gods, and was a particular assistant to the goddess Juno, queen of the heavens. She is usually pictured as a graceful maiden, winged and resplendent. The rainbow was closely associated with her, and poets pictured it as the path on which she ascended to the gods with messages from Olympus. Its sudden appearance meant that Iris needed it for a pathway-when the message was delivered it disappeared. Occasionally she is represented with a rainbow above her. Sometimes the rainbow is called the sash of Iris.

NE of the lowest priced and most economical cars in the world today stands in a class by itself for sheer performance and driving pleasure. Over two and a half million American motorists have swung to it in less than four years. Over one million chose it in 1935 alone.

That car is the Ford V-8. Now we urge you to drive this great new 1936 Ford V-8 before you decide on any car at any price. We urge you to know for yourself the "feel" of Ford V-8 engine performance-the almost effortless ease of handling-the remarkable stability under all road conditions-the true fine-car riding comfort-which have "taken hold" so quickly and convincingly with the hardest-buying audience that ever tested America's cars. Before you set out to judge modern motor car values, get the "feel" of the one low-price car that's in a class all by itself!

Thousands Join Protest

Against Wire Seizures Nation-wide protest against unconstitutional practices of the Senate Lobby Committee is expressed in petitions signed by thousands of men and women and mailed to the national headquarters of the American Liberty League at Washington, D. C. Sentiment in opposition to the methods of the Committee and of the Federal Communications Commission was crystalized by two addresses delivered recently over the radio by Jouett Shouse, President of the Liberty League.

In his address on the "Right of Petition" Mr. Shouse asked listeners who wished to be aligned with the defense of constitutional liberties to join in a of constitutional liberties to join in a national petition of protest. So great was the response by mail and telegraph that printed petitions were prepared and distributed. judge, being doubtful if he understood graph that printed petitions were pre-

The text of the petition follows: "We, the undersigned citizens of the United States, protest against the high-handed actions of the Senate Lobhigh-handed actions of the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee and of the Federal Communications Commission in the wholesale seizure, without authority, of private telegrams of individuals and organizations—even messages between husband and wife because:

"1. Such action is an outrageous violation of the Constitution of the United States. (Amendments, Article IV, Bill of Rights.)

"2. Such action violates fundamentals of decency as we have known them in this country since the American Revolution.

"3. And, because, if such practices are allowed to continue individual liberty is at an end.

"We authorize the American Liberty League to transmit this Petition of Protest to the Senate of the United States with our request that immediate steps be taken to put an end to such practices."

Again the response was immediate and extensive. The Liberty League was called upon for more and more blank petitions. In spite of these and other evidences of general popular disapproval of the Lobby Committee methods, Senator Hugo L. Black, chairman, has declined to discontinue the offensive methods complained of and has publicly denied the power of the courts to restrain his committee.

For a few days, Gary and Grandmother and Deborah were thrown into consternation; and although for a moment when his letter first came, Deborah had run out and hugged a tree for sheer joy, she had seen in no time that something had to be done. Stuart had a plan. He had gone on to explain that, fortunately enough, his ship would be with the rest of the Pacific fleet, anchored in Golden Gate harbor in San Francisco bay; and that it would be quite simple after all. Deborah could come down and meet him in San Francisco, and they could be married there.

Quite simple for Stuart, perhaps, but a most upsetting idea for Deborah and Grandmother and Gary. Obviously, if Deborah went, she must go alone; since Grandmother could not possibly go, and Gary could not possibly leave her. And Deborah had been so little in the world; she had never traveled anywhere alone. The world was a huge noisy whirling place, and she had lived always in the quiet and peace of the mountains. Still, it was only a matter of a trip to San Francisco; because, once there, she could go directly to the hotel Grandmother knew about, the hotel at which they had stayed years ago; and from the hotel she could go to Mr. Holworthy's office where Stuart would meet her. Stuart was a Graham, and a gentleman, and as soon as she met him her troubles would be over, for he would tell her everything she needed to know. This was what Grandmother said, and outwardly Deborah assented; but to her he was really a man and a stranger, and in her heart was a deadly terror of marriage and whatever it might mean, of meeting this strange man and being with him, being alone with him.

There was nothing to be done. She had to go. She had to be married. They were in such trouble about money, she and Gary, that there was scarcely enough to buy her ticket to San Francisco, and when it came to her costume for the journey the problem was dreadful. Grandmother had forgotten about clothes for years. She was horrified when they came to contemplate Deborah's wardrobe. She wanted to write immediately to Boston and have a large selection of articles sent out, but Deborah convinced her that there was no time, and that they would have to manage with what was in the house. So they made a traveling costume from one of Grandmother's. It was quiet and reserved, although perhaps the lines were not such as a professional dressmaker would have put into it. It would serve.

The dress was made of brown cloth, very neat and plain. A hat was rather a problem, but they evolved one finally, a neat small black turban with a modest cluster of velvet pansies on one side. Grandmother said the hat was perhaps a little old-fashioned, but she said that Deborah was far too pretty to travel alone dressed too attractively. She cried when she said it, and warned Deborah again of the danger of speaking to strangers.

Grandmother sent only one other dress with Deborah; her own wedding dress. When they tried it on, it fitted perfectly. Deborah looked at herself in the glass, and then quickly back at Grandmother, with dark startled eyes.

"It's . . . it's . . ." she touched the neck.

"It is for your husband, my darling," Grandmother said gently, and Deborah's blood was cold again in her veins.

CHAPTER II

Tubby had finally finished dressing, and now, after a hurried trip across the city in Bryn's roadster, they stood waiting in the big parlor of one of the old and eminently respectable hotels. Age had not added to its prestige; it had gained nothing, through the passage of years, save a few extra layers of dust in the interiors of the sagging red plush chairs, a few more cracks in the elaborately frescoed plaster walls, a few more worn places in the thin carpet. Tubby, hands in pockets, stared unseeingly at the candle sconces on the wall, fitted now with weary electric bulbs which gave out barely enough light to disclose the dangling crystal ornaments on the sconces themselves.

The grandfather clock in the corner ticked slowly.

"You're crazy," Bryn murmured, and took out his watch.
"Me?" Tubby asked in amazement and sat down in a comfortable chair.

"The clock. It's slow. My watch says ten minutes to nine."

"Oh. So you were talking to the clock?"

"Merely a slip."

"Slip is right," Tubby muttered.

"Talking to clocks!" Tubby went so far as to say that if Bryn, at the age of six, had not fallen upon him violently one day as they rolled off a roof together, he would not have bitten the end off his tongue and so begun a lisp which would endure to his dying day.

"There Isn't Any Reason Why I Should Do It."

"Thlip ith right," Bryn repeated absently to himself. "Talkingh to clockth."

"Go to hell," Tubby said bitterly. He folded his hands before him. There was a long silence. "Bryn," Tubby said abruptly, and stopped.

"Tubby," Bryn answered politely.
"Bryn, what are you doing it for?"

"There isn't any reason why I shouldn't do it."
"Well," Tubby exploded, "you're not getting anything out of it. That's what I mean. You're getting into an awful mix-up with all kinds of possible consequences, and you're not getting anything out of it."

"Consequences?"
Tubby still sat in the big chair and gray ones. "Pilar, for one. You'd make a very nice couple. That is . . ."

"Pilar would make a nice couple with anybody, And we've settled about her, so don't go back over that again, Tubby. Only there's a suggestion I'd like to make. If I were you I wouldn't rush over to Pilar's tonight right after the ceremony, because if you were to get down on your knees in my pants considered, his blue eyes on Bryn's

He stopped in front of the grand-father clock and gazed earnestly into its dingy face until Tubby had stopped making his spluttering noises. There was another long silence. Seven minutes to nine.

there would certainly be a catas-

"What about this sailor, this Graham fellow?" Tubby demanded abruptly. "Do you think he's going to let any man crack him in the jaw and then marry his girl without doing anything about it? What about him?"

"Oh, he's all right," Bryn said lazily. "His enlisted time doesn't expire for two months. And he isn't much to worry over, anyway." "Oh, Lord," Tubby said prayerfully, and put his head in his hands. Brvn went over and sat down beside him. He tweaked the yellow lock. "The whole trouble with you, Tubby, is that you're one of these sermons-in-stones people. I mean, you can't help looking for trouble. Why can't you take a thing at its face value and stop worrying? All that's happening is that I'm lending my name and my charming personality . . . because I have to win over the grandmother, too, perhaps I forgot to mention it . . . a year. What's a year? The last pair of elephant tusks I brought home cost me a year, and I've been sick of the darn things for a long time. After all, an elephant tusk is not exactly a thing a man wants to look at more than two or three times a day, and it isn't a thing you ever get really fond of and like to cherish, you know."

Tubby raised his head. "Oh," he said ominously. "So you're planning to cherish this Deborah woman and get fond of her, are you? Now that I understand why you're marrying her, do you mind telling me why she is marrying you? It doesn't work both ways, you know. It couldn't be, even if it's what I'm beginning to think it might be."

might be."

"But I told you why she's marrying me," Bryn said kindly. "I really explained it very nicely. She's marrying me to get a million dollars, one year from today when the conditions of the will are fulfilled and when her grandmother is convinced that I am no fortune-hunter and that I am a steady going young gentleman with no bad habits and the ability to make Deborah happy."

"Oh, no, she isn't," Tubby contradicted.
"Isn't she?"

"Isn't she?"

Tubby straightened. He put his hand on Bryn's arm. "Look here, Bryn," he said, "what's the use of your trying to hold out on me? Why don't you come across with the whole story? I know what it is, anyway. It's another of those crazy quixotic notions of yours. What are you trying to put over now?"

"Nothing."

"You lie. The girl can't be marrying you to get her grandfather's money, because you're not Stuart Graham, and you said yourself that the will stated specifically that unless she married Graham and Graham only, on or before her birthday—today—she wouldn't get the money. Didn't you?

And you're not Graham."
"Well," Bryn said at last, "not specifically. Not very specifically. I've read quite a few legal documents . . . this was a ferociously legal document, Tub, with a lot of whereases and inas-muchases and party-of-the-second-parts, and that kind of thing. If Deborah's grandfather hadn't told me what it was that he intended, I wouldn't have been too sure."

"But is it ambiguous, after all the fuss? Why make a will like that and leave it ambiguous? Can the girl get around it? Marry anybody at all and still get the money?"

"Well," Bryn admitted slowly, "no."
"No? No? But . . ."

"But we told her she could. I told her. Holworthy told her. Of course, if she's gone off and tried marrying anyone else, he'd have been forced to explain to her that on second reading

"So," Tubby said with the manner of a talkie villain.
"Well," Bryn said for the third time,

"what of it? It gets her out of a jam, doesn't it?"

"And you pay over a million of your own dollars at the end of a year, and she gives you fifty thousand for your services. Is that the way it works, noble Sir Galahad?"

"Oh, I don't know. I think we can

"Oh, I don't know. I think we can break the will. Holworthy's going to do his damnedest. And, if he can't . . . well, the money means quite a bit to her. If—when you meet her you'll understand a little better, Tub." "Humph," Tubby said.

They both stood up. Bryn looked at his watch. Ten minutes past nine. The grandfather clock choked, muttered, cleared its throat and gasped out that it was nine o'clock,

"Just the same," Tubby said explosively, shaking down his trouser leg, "just the same, a year is too long. An ignorant, unsophisticated, dowdy backwoods country girl, who's never been anywhere or seen anything . . . after Pilar! . . ."

"Sh!" Bryn said quickly. He took three steps toward the door at the end of the long room. Tubby stood up, too. The door was opening.

A tall gentleman in black pushed the door open and held it. Behind him came Mr. Holworthy, his smile astonishingly serene and content. For years Mr. Holworthy had guarded Bryn's interests with the stern fidelity of the dragon who guarded the Golden Fleece; yet here he was, calm and undismayed, lending his arm and his moral support to this menace to Bryn's peace of mind, this girl who could wreak the most dire havoc in Bryn's affairs.

Tubby looked at the girl. He choked. Bryn stood without moving.

She was finishing a remark to Mr. Holworthy as she came through the door on his arm. Tubby did not hear the words, but he caught the melody of her voice. It was like that of a very young child, with an appealing break in it; one thought of small birds learning to sing, of hyacinths in spring gardens, of silver bells at twilight.

She was a very small girl as she stood hesitantly there. A very small girl, and she was dressed in white. Her skirt was so full that it stood around her in a circle, and only the tip of one tiny white slipper could be seen below it. She held it off the dusty carpet with the tips of careful fingers. The bodice was slim and pointed, and her waist could have been spanned by a man's two hands. There were little puffed sleeves below her white shoulders; the neck of the dress was low, and above it her throat was creamy white and soft. She had pinned rosebuds against it in front, after a hasty, flushed look into the mirror, and they lay pink and fragrant against her delicate flesh. Around her neck was a short strand of tiny pearls, and from her ears hung little round pearl drops. She looked like a miniature of one's grandmother, painted on her wedding day.

And her face? A small white oval face, without a hint of color in the cheeks, but with a pair of the softest, reddest lips in the world. They were the kind of lips which look like the bud of a red rose when they say "no" and there was something about the firm little round chin which suggested that she might often say "no." Eyes like purple pansies, soft and velvety and dark; and as if eyes and lips and tiny hands in white lace mittens were not enough, her hair was of red gold, curling and breaking into a million misty tendrils around her face.

Tubby looked at Bryn. He drew a deep breath. "Noble Sir Galahad," he said under his breath, and moved forward to be presented.

Deborah was married and at home again. It was less than a week since she had gone away from the mountain, but it seemed a thousand years. She was so much older, now. She knew so much more than she had known a week ago that her thoughts were like the thoughts of a stranger; she looked at her old life and everything that had been in it with a stranger's eyes, clear, wondering, critical.

They were at luncheon, she and Grandmother and the man, seated at the long table in the middle of the vast shadowy dining room. The ceiling was high and supported by dark heavy oaken beams; at one end was a great fireplace with a carved oak mantelpiece and a stone hearth. The western wall was pierced by a row of six square casement windows shut with ivy. On the table stood the beautiful dulled old silver candelabra which had once been altar pieces in a cathedral; now they held the cheapest and most ordinary thick white candles' whose flames wavered and burned coarsely and unevenly, and gave off a strong odor of impure wax.

Deborah sat up and moved the silver spoon beside her plate. She looked across at Grandmother. Grandmother was wearing her gray satin dress for the first time since Grandfather's death. Her white hair was pinned more loosely than usual, and fluffed out softly around her face. Her eyes were sparkling, alight, happy. There was pink in her cheeks, and a thread of it in her lips. It was as if she had come to life again, too. An hour ago, when they had come up the weedgrown drive, Grandmother had been standing at the side door, dressed from head to foot in the black she had worn for so long, with one hand pressed to her heart in the old familiar gesture, and a look of fearful questioning in her eyes. The man had stopped the battered-looking motor-car, and helped Deborah out. Grandmother had not looked at Deborah at all, except for one quick encompassing glance an if to make sure that she was still intact. Her eyes had gone to the man, and he had stood tall and straight and smiling that faint steady smile of his, waiting. The sun had glinted on his brown hair, and had made his brown skin look very clear and wholesome. Grandmother had looked into his eyes for a long time, a tense, silent, searching look; and then she had drawn a deep breath and put out her hand. She had smiled back at him, a fluttering relieved happy smile, and he had taken both her little white hands in his own. Oh, he was living up to his bargain

He seemed to understand the situation at a glance and decide what it was he must do. It was perfect acting, and Deborah knew that she should have been grateful and appreclative, but instead she was angry. Angry because . . . well, because, watching him with Grandmother, she had realized suddenly that all the way up from San Francisco he had been acting with her, too, amusing her, making her laugh, telling her interesting things, thinking of her comfort, because it was part of the bargain. On the trip she had forgotten the bargain, the fact that he was going to be paid, and paid well, as he had expressed it, for giving their marriage the appearance of a happy one, the appearance of a real marriage between two young people who had . . . had fallen in leve with each other at first sight.

Well, no matter; even if it was a little disconcerting to keep remembering what the true situation was. No harm had been done. She had been reserved through it all, and had not, she assured herself, allowed herself to be anything but impersonal with him. That was the note one must remember to strike: impersonality. Deborah straightened her shoulders and leaned back in her chair, calm, cool, in full control of herself.

Grandmother was gazing at him again as if she could scarcely take her eyes away. It was unfortunate that he meant so much to her if Grandmother approved of him too highly. It might make it difficult, at the end of the year, to explain why Deborah would be happier without him. And Grandmother in the meantime might think . . . she might expect . . . Deborah moved uneasily.

"My dear boy," Grandmother was saying, "I cannot see that there is the slightest resemblance between you and your father. You are so much taller than he was, so much more . . . perhaps I mean athletic looking. But perhaps I shouldn't have expected you to look like the Grahams. My husband told me years ago, after he had been East to see you, that you looked very much like your mother's people."

"Did he?" the man murmured. "A number of people have mentioned it. I never could see it myself."

"And I cannot see it," Grandmother said decidedly. "Your mother's people were very dark. Why, her two brothers were quite swarthy, and I never thought of her as being in the least fair, or clear-skinned. I never could understand . . ." Grandmother said, and stopped. "But of course," she went on hastily, appalled at what she had almost said, "she was a very fine woman, my dear Stuart."

"I always believed so."
"Of course you did. Although you would scarcely remember her, I think?"

"He doesn't remember her at all," Deborah said quickly. "She died when he was only three, Grandmother. He couldn't possibly remember her."
The man looked across the table.

His eyes were twinkling, amused.
Deborah looked back at him, coolly.

It wasn't going to be exactly easy to carry off this situation. But no matter how difficult it might be it was better than marrying Stuart Graham.

Anything was better than marrying Stuart Graham. Deborah shut her eyes for a moment as she remembered that other face, dark and angry and sneering. There had been very little dissembling on Stuart Graham's part, even in Mr. Holworthy's presence. Apparently it hadn't seemed necessary to him to pretend gentleness and courtesy even for the few necessary hours. It had been perfectly obvious that he hadn't dreamed for a moment that she could or would refuse to marry him, refuse to go through with the horrible bargain. When she did summon up her courage, after two hours of listening to his talk with Mr. Holworthy, when the words sprang to her lips and she heard herself saying in a queer cold little voice that she could never marry him no matter what happened, he had been terrible. He had called her prudish, ignorant, insane.

Grandmother wouldn't have believed it, couldn't have believed it, if she had been told. It would have killed her to bring Stuart Graham here and let her see him as he was. She and Grandfather had told themselves for years that in a miserably unhappy world one star would always shine as bright as the sun; no matter what happened, the Grahams were gentlemen.

Perhaps they were, by birth and tradition, but they didn't always act as gentlemen in books acted. Gary had guessed what might happen. He hadn't been so sure of the Grahams after all. Deborah remembered his words as he had helped her into the rickety wagon down at their neighbor's farm, when he was hurrying her off so that he could go back to Grandmother, alone on the mountain. He had tucked the dust-cover around her and stepped back; and then, suddenly, he had come up close, his old face worn and troubled, and he had said, "If you don't like him, Miss Deborah, don't you have anything to do with him. We'll get along some way. If you don't like his looks, don't you do it. We'll just look around for another way."

This was the other way. The tall young man at the head of the table.

willing to sell his gentlemanly appearance, his good manners, his smiles, for a year—for fifty thousand dollars.

Of course, since one must be fair and just, he had not been considering his own opportunities there in Mr. Holworthy's office, not just at first. After Deborah had stood up and told Stuart in that strange voice that she couldn't possibly marry him, after she had repeated it again and again and made him see that she meant it, he had been in a wild rage. It was then that he had said such horrible things to her. His words had come out in such a torrent that Mr. Holworthy, couldn't stop them. After a moment Deborah had run away, into an outer office, anywhere to escape from Stuart Graham, of coarse, so loud-voiced, so thick-lipped and bold. But Stuart had followed her. Stuart was a bully. He was still talking to her, pushing himself directly between her and the door, between her and freedom, when this quiet young man with the steady gray eyes had risen from a chair and faced him. He stopped his loud talking and began to mutter. But Bryn hadn't moved, except that his arm came straight up, and his fist hit Stuart under the chin with a terrific crash, and Stuart had crumpled to the floor.

"Deborah, my darling, what is the matter?" Grandmother said suddenly.
"You are quite pale!"

"Nothing, Grandmother," Deborah answered, and managed a smile.

"It's rather a long trip up from San Francisco when you're not accustomed to motoring," the man said. "And it's very hot in the Sacramento valley in June."

"I am sure it must have been trying," Grandmother said, still looking at her tenderly. There was something new and solicitous in her expression. Now that our greatest problem is solved, surely we can make a real change in our way of living."

"What do you mean?" Deborah asked quickly

"Oh, so many things, dear." Grandmother leaned forward. "We must furbish ourselves up, for one thing. We are becoming quite careless as to our ways of living. I've been feeling guilty about it for a long time, but I've been so worried about Deborah that nothing else seemed of any particular importance. But now I feel," she finished briskly, "that we must have two or three extra servants at once, have the grounds put in order, have the electric plant repaired . . ."

"But-" Deborah said faintly, and stopped.

"But what, my darling? Would you not like to see the house filled with young company, with music, with life? To have a host of pretty new clothes?"

"We don't know anyone to fill the house with," Deborah protested miserably.

"Stuart does," Grandmother said with confidence. "He told me only a

"Grandmother . . ."

"Grandmother . . ."

She smiled. "Now, Deborah, of course we should not ask anyone for some time, my dear. You and Stuart must have a month or two of your own, first. But during that time the house and grounds can be taken care of; they have been neglected so long it will be quite an undertaking. Since your grandfather wished that we should spend a year here after your mariage, I think we must try and make it a happy year, and in it prepare you as best we can to mingle in society when we emerge at last from

JESUS TEACHES FORGIVENESS, HUMILITY AND GRATITUDE

LESSON TEXT—Luke 17:1-19.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.—Ephesians 4:32.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Man Who aid Thank You.

JUNIOR TOPIC — The Man Who

Thanked Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC — Three Marks of Christian

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC. — Three Marks of Christian

I. Forgiveness, a Christian Obligation (vv. 1-4).

Owing to the fundamental fact of human individuality, the perversion by sin, and the power and wickedness of the devil, offenses, or occasions of stumbling, are bound to come. Because mankind is fallen and sin reigns in individual hearts, the results are bound to reveal themselves, but Jesus pronounces "woe" upon those whose evil deeds become a stumbling stone in the way of others, especially "one of these little ones."

The follower of Christ is to take that it be exemplary. The believer is to cultivate the forgiving spirit toward the wrongdoer, while rebuking the wrong. Great skill and grace are required to rebuke one for wrongdoing, revealing at the same time the forgiving spirit, so as to win him instead of exasperating him.

II. Humility, a Christian Quality (vv.

Humility is at the heart of this trio of Christian graces. Much faith is required to establish and maintain humility. Human nature impels one to push others aside, to struggle for supremacy, to reach the exalted positions Humility moves one to seek the lowly place, while giving places of honor to others, and being sincerely happy when others are granted the preferred positions. Surely, for this one must have faith in God.

III. Gratitude, an Uncommon Grace (vv. 11-19).

The account of the ten lepers is perhaps the most used Bible portion in enforcing the lesson of gratitude as against ingratitude. There are a number of things to be considered, if we are fully to understand the call for gratitude.

1. Their awful affliction (v. 12). They were lepers. In that day no greater tragedy could befall one than to be thus afflicted. It was regarded as contagious and incurable. The afflicted person became a social outcast, and was avoided and neglected. The Mosaic law provided for segregation (Lev. 13:46).

Leprosy has always been regarded as typical of sin, and at times as visited upon individuals because of sin. Examples: the leprosy of Naaman (11 Kings 5); Gehazi (II Kings 5); Miriam (Num. 12); Uzziah (II Kings 15:5).

then make a sudden appearance; so fects. with sin. Leprosy waxes worse and worse; so with sin. And the end of sin is death.

2. Their cry for mercy (v. 13). The Testimonies that had floated to their hearing told of a great Healer, and when He came their way they were not slow to make their prayer to him.

The faith of the lepers immediately revealed itself in acting upon the instructions of Jesus that they go and they went they were cleansed. They quirement for the recording of their cleansing, that they need no longer be outcasts. The sinner may find salvation along the path of daily duty, if he will but believe.

ly a Gentile, but so deep was his gratitude he hastened back to Jesus to give thanks. The one who might be least expected to show gratitude was the one who sincerely expressed it.

b. The nine who neglected (vv. 17-19), who failed to give thanks, have | death is removed. through the centuries been charged with ingratitude. Their healing was as complete; they had as much reason to recognize Jesus as their healer as true of so many believers of today, they took their benefits for granted down to the grade of idiocy. and were indifferent rather than ungrateful. Many nowadays take all they can get from Christ and give nothing in return. The noblest blessings of civilization are ours through Christ, yet how few thank him for them.

Religion Must Come First

John Ruskin's emphatic words cannot be too often repeated: "Anything which makes religion its second object, makes religion no object. God will put up with a great many things in the human heart, but there is one thing he will not put up with in it-a second place. He who offers God a second place, offers him no place."

With malice towards none, with charity for all, and firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right.

* Science of Health

By Dr. Thos. S. Englar ELLLLLLLLLLLLLLLLLLLLLL

INFANTILE "APOPLEXY."

The breaking of a blood-vessel within the brain—the so-called 'stroke" and its consequences—is supposed by most persons to be a natural hazard of old age, with its stiffened or "hardened" arteries.

Bleeding into the substance of the orain, or hemorrhage on its surface, is also, however, a frequent occurrence to the very young. In other words, intra-cranial hemorrhage with resulting paralysis is one of the first dangers confronting the helpless newborn, and also one of the last threats to the aged. It is less likely to happen to the individual during youth and maturity, except as a result of severe injury or serious disease.

Hemorrhage within the skull is likely to be caused by the very actthe passive act on the babe's part-of its passage through the birth canal. Premature and weakly infants are es pecially liable to it. Severe "molding" of the baby's head may cause intra-cranial bleeding of greater or lesser degree. It is, accordingly—as mothers will understand-somewhat more likely to happen to babes which heed that his life be not injurious, but are "first children." Constitutional factors enter into the equation: for example, the infant may be a congenital "bleeder."

It must be said with emphasis that intra-cranial hemorrhage may occur in any type of birth. It does not, necessarily, depend upon anything the doctor does-or omits doing-such as the use of instruments or drugs, induction of labor, and like measures.

It is not denied that brain-bleeding may follow use of forceps, but this is not evidence that such use caused the hemorrhage, unless it can be shown that the obstetrician was inefficient or bungled his work.

The competent physician does not use instruments in delivering a baby unless such aids are required, in his judgment, by the exigencies of the occasion, as is often the case in order to save the life of mother or child.

The mechanism of so-called "apoplectic" paralysis is, perhaps, well understood, but may be reviewed. By reason of weakness or injury to the wall of an artery in the brain or its enveloping membranes (meninges), blood escapes from the vessel into the brain-substance, causing abnormal high pressure on this very delicate and perishable tissue.

If the area of the brain affected by this extra-vasion (bleeding) is a very large or vital area, extensive paraly sis or death may result. All degrees of intra-cranial hemorrhage may occur, however, including such slight bleeding, of such short duration, as to cause only mild "irratative" signs for Leprosy may lay long dormant, and a few days, and no permanent ill er-

CONVERTING POOR LAND INTO PARKS

Relief Labor Employed on 110 Different Projects.

Washington.-Unproductive agricultural land is being converted into forests, parks and wild-life refuges by 29,000 men employed by the resettlement administration on development projects. The administration acquired 7,000,-000 acres of poor land from 5,500 farmers to demonstrate the betterment of land that is unsuited for farming purposes. Relief labor is employed on 110 different projects, located in 40 states, and approximately 2,400 CCC workers are engaged in the development work.

"This development work is essential to a well-rounded land use program," Dr. L. C. Gray, assistant administrator in charge of the program, said. "The positive contribution is made when poor lands are restored to public usefulness by being developed for purposes which the natural characteristics of their soil, topography and climate will permit."

Most of the work now being undertaken in the eastern states is in connection with forest and park development. Fire lanes are being cleared, service roads built and dam sites pre pared for park purposes. In certain projects, forest improvement has begun. The poorer trees are being removed from the present forest stands and utilized for lumber or firewood.

In the western plains projects, the areas purchased are to be used for grazing districts. On these areas, present fences and abandoned buildings are being removed, preparatory to building new fences along new boundaries, and erecting dipping vats, corrals and dams to conserve the wa-

Recreation areas are being created from 44 of the projects of the program. The national park service is co-operating with the resettlement administration in this phase of the plan.

PEAK MAY BE NAMED "MT. CONSTITUTION"

Designation Proposed for California Mountain.

Los Angeles.-The summit of Mount Whitney, which rises 14,496 feet, as the highest peak in the United States proper, will be developed under a plan submitted to the director of the National Park service at Washington by Chester Versteeg, chairman of the geographic committee of the Sierra club of California. With such slight modifications as circumstances may call for, the plan will be put into effect under the direction of Col. John R. White, superintendent of the Greater Sequoia National park, in the far eastern boundary of which Mount Whitney

Whitney has a broad, slightly slanting summit of several acres in extent. The plan involves the removal of the present monument or rock cairn from the extreme northeastern edge of the peak, its rebuilding into a permanent rock rubble monument and the installation on the top of the rebuilt monument of the very last word in "gunsighting" or "pipe-sighting" devices. This device may be a six-inch reflector telescope or 20-power binocu-

Help to Visitors.

Beneath this device will be placed a waterproofed, consolidated United States Geological survey topographical map of the area covered by the "gun." Over all will be placed a waterproof cover to be put back on the Instrument by the last party using it on a given day. The gun will be carefully engineered and notched to permit it to be trained on about 40 different points of great interest in the area surrounding the mountain.

Because so few visitors carry maps. or are confused by the tremendous distances and the complicated topography of the area, it is felt that this device will be of great help to those who go to the summit.

In the range of the sighting device will be an as yet unnamed peak nearly 14,000 feet high which stands a mile northwest of Whitney. Mr. Versteeg has proposed to the division of geographic names at Washington that the peak be named Mount Constitution in honor of "the most wonderful work ever struck off at one time by the brain and purpose of man," an instrument that "has been repeatedly construed, even as it was originally ordained, to safeguard individual liberty and afford opportunity for the reasonable expression thereof." The one hundred and fiftieth birthday of the American Constitution will be celebrated in 1937.

Visitor Increase Expected.

With the improvement of the trail to the summit of Whitney-a fine. broad, easy-grade trail on either the east or the west approach—the number of visitors is expected soon to be nearly a thousand annually.

At the base of the proposed Mount Whitney monument will be two circular, or platform steps. The monument will have a bronze plaque carrying items of historical interest, and data concerning the first ascent and concerning erection of the shelter house (observatory) by the Smithsonian institution in 1909.

The summit development plan also embodies putting the shelter house in better order for emergency occupation and for overnight use and the erection of a small rockhouse "museum" having on its walls photographic glass plates of historical and scenic interest, observable by the light from outside, yet properly protected against storms.

Deserted Lumber Towns to Be Revived by U. S.

Eureka, Calif.-Abandoned "ghost towns" in forest districts, once the centers of a thriving lumber trade, are to become a thing of the past, according to federal forest officials now studying California's timber supply.

Not only are the towns, often equipped with logging and sawmill facilities, to be rejuvenated, but a continuous growth of timber will be assured to make them permanently profitable and operative.

The program that is being put into operation aims at establishing sustained yield units for the continuous production of timber crops through co-operation with private land owners.

Government co-operation may take the form of extension of forest credits to owners who need additional acreage to insure steady and continuous logging operations, or it may consist of the federal purchase of lands which will be managed under sustained yield forestry principles.

Woman Tells Men Proper Technique for Shaving

Boston .- A woman expert thinks the technique that men use in shaving is all wrong,

Mrs. Beatrice Blake, speaking before a beauty counsellors' meeting, said most men do not know how to shave. They just scrape until the face is cleaned of hair.

She suggests the following opera-

1-Application of cold cream, spreading it over the roughened cheeks. 2-Shaving soap, applied in the usual way.

3-With razor carefully go over the skin. Don't tug the stubble off. A shave that is too close will probably cause skin irritation and redness.

4-Astringents should be applied only by those who have an oily skin. Powder should be used instead.

DEVICE WOULD WARN MINERS OF DANGERS

Instrument Being Developed by College Professor.

State College, Pa.-Coal miners, working thousands of feet beneath the earth's surface, would be warned far in advance of cave-ins if an instrument, resembling in many respects the seismograph, measures up to expectations of research workers at Pennsylvania State college.

Dr. Helmut Landsburg, professor of geophysics, is directing work on the highly sensitive instrument, expected to be one of the most useful of its kind developed for the mining industry in recent years.

The instrument, although not completed, has been tested successfully in a number of mine operations throughout the state. It records even the most minute earth movements and predicts slides and cave-ins as long as ten days in advance, research workers

Prof. Harry Northrup, director of the extension service at the college, outlined briefly how, when perfected, the instrument works. He said:

"Placed in the mine with immovable end on the floor and the other end against the ceiling, the instrument, unbelievably simple in operation, records the rate of subsidence.

"When the rate speeds up suddenly, a needle pencils this movement of the earth's crust on a 24-hour revolving cylinder, and examination shows a fall or cave-in will occur in a short time."

The device consists chiefly of two "telescopic" pipes mounted with a spring and an automatic recorder which detects the unnatural earth movements, warning the underground workers of an approaching disaster.

Cave-ins have been responsible for a number of major disasters throughout the Keystone state's mine areas, trapping miners without a chance to The cave-ins give little warning other than a rumble about a half minute before the slide comes. Then it usually is too late for men working in the area to rush to an opening.

Famous Amsterdam Palace

Is Sold to Government Amsterdam.-The Seventeenth century Palace of Amsterdam, built during the "golden age" when Holland was among the most powerful nations in the world, has been sold by Amsterdam to the Dutch government.

The palace, built about 1655 by the famous Jacob van Campen, is regarded as a masterpiece of Seventeenth century architecture. At the time of its construction Holland had just beaten Spain-greatest power in the world at that time-after 80 years of war.

When the royal palace was new, Holland had a population of only 1,500,000 or 2,000,000. Now it has 8,000,000 inhabitants and colonies in scattered parts of the world.

Because the merchant city of Amsterdam had a lion's share in the commercial development of the Netherlands in those days the bourgomaster and his aldermen, as well as the municipal council, wanted a palace befitting their position. The architect Van Campen was called and told to build a palace of unsurpassing beauty.

The structure, although built on sober lines, has the rich contour of the old show places of Venice, Florence, and Rome. The sculptor Quellinus made hundreds of fine statues to ornament it. Another famous artisan of the time, Hemony, built a carillon of 35 bells.

The room of greatest splendor was the burghers hall, fitted with heavy chandeliers of fine crystal, beautiful statues, paintings, and rich draperies. One of Rembrandt's greatest paintings-if not his greatest-originally was an ornament of decoration. The work, "The Nightwatch," is now the star piece of the state museum here

Observer's Car Feature of Army's New Dirigible

Belleville, Ill .- A subcloud car is a feature of the TC-14, largest nonrigid airship in the United States Army Air corps, which has just been accepted by the army's largest lighter-than-air base Scott field, here.

The subcloud car may be lowered 3,000 feet below the airship, with an observer in it who can communicate by telephone to the ship, far above the obscuring clouds.

Three 300-horse power engines drive the TC-14 at a top speed of 85 miles an hour. The ship carries a crew of eight on long flights and six on short Barnard, Mo.-Barnard school patrons celebrated prematurely, causing their children to have to attend classes in churches and store buildings for three months. Patrons gave vent to their happiness over passage of bonds for a new school by razing the old building. The election was held illegal.

CHILD'S AID DRIVE CONTINUED.

(Continued from First Page.) concert which will be held in Alumni Hall, Western Maryland College, on Thursday evening, May 14, to be given by El Gary and his WBAL male quar-tet. Further announcement of this will be made in the papers. This concert is to be a benefit for the Children's Aid and is a contribution to the Society on the part of the entertainers. Following is the director's report in full:

Home care for dependent children has become a recognized principle, with emphasis on the prevention of child dependency through construc-tive aid in preserving the childs own home whenever possible. When it is impossible to accomplish this, however, because of immorality, feeblemindedness and other social factors which cannot be corrected, the children are removed from such environment and placed by the CAS m supervised foster homes. Experience has shown that the investment involved in giving a child a sense of "belonging" and security, good health and the type of education for which he has the capacity makes him a more valua-ble citizen and thus yields more valuable returns to the community.

On Feb. 1, we opened our fiscal year with 63 children under the care and protection of the CAS. During the quarter 4 wards attained majority. They are now self-supporting and have been passed from care but we shall continue to feel a friendly interest in their welfare. A meeting of the intake committee was held to con sider several cases which have been reported to the Society. In April it was necessary to accept four children for care and to place them in boarding homes. One was a baby one week old, the mother is in a state hospital and there is no one to care for the baby. Another is a little girl, 7 years old. The father deserted the family several years ago. The children were scattered among relatives and friends when the mother was sent to the T. B. sanatorium where she died recently. Because of the continued illness of the foster mother it was found necessary to move the child to another Two little boys were returned to the CAS from a distant state and will need to be given temporary care until their father establishes his residence in his present location.

Dental work and glasses have been provided for seven children. 38 pairs of shoes, 14 pairs of galoshes and 484 articles of clothing were given out.

During the quarter 146 visits were made to or in behalf of Children's and Family Departments. 186 office interviews were held in both depart-
