ANENT THE LOCUST.

Many urbanites who enjoy the luxury of backyard gardens, as well as ruralites who depend upon farming for a living, are at least slightly per-turbed over the approaching arrival of the host of locusts which is now working up out of underground dark-ness toward the light of day.

Subterranean visitants have a sort of Plutonic suggestiveness, even if the University of Maryland entomologists belittle their power to devas-tate gardens and field crops.

But holy writ informs us of plague of locusts which filled ancient Egypt with terror, and this perhaps accounts in part for some of the prevailing dread.

There are several panaceas available for this dread. In the first place, the scientists tell us that these "locusts" are not real locusts-only cicada. In the second place, the scientists inform us that the gentlemen locusts do nothing but make a noise while the lady locusts do the harm. (So it has been ever since Eden times.) Consequently, a big discount must be made from the whole number of locusts to gauge the harm-doers. And from the same learned sources comes the assurance that the locusts do not eat—that they only split twigs in order to deposit eggs.

Finally, we are told that in six weeks they die-possibly from star-

WHISKEY TAX GROWS.

Relief tax payments for April in connection with the 5-cent per gallon whiskey floor tax, enacted at the last special session of the State Legislature, will bring in more revenue than was originally estimated, it was indicated the other day by Wm. S. Gordy, Jr., Comptroller. Even from incomplete returns, the whiskey floor tax payment, computed on a 12-month basis, would be $962,-127.84 compared to the $600,000 the legislature estimated would be raised. It is held likely that the monthly rate of payment may decline, depending G. on the amount of whiskey distilled. Beer was expected to bring in $825,-000 and at the rate of April tax pay-ments, it will bring in $631,956.12. TAX ON ADMISSIONS

Its Provisions Made Clear are of Interest to Many.

In reply to our request for information, the following has been received from the State Comptroller's

The General Assembly of Maryland at the Special Session of 1936, enacted legislation for the purpose of raising revenue for providing aid for the needy, and among the items taxable are admission charges. The law is fairly brief and, we believe, easily un-derstood, especially after the obser-vations of our office as to the administration of the law given below.

"There shall be levied and collected from April 1, 1936 to March 31, 1937, a tax at the rate of one per centum (1%) of the gross receipts of every, person, firm or corporation operating any place of amusement within this State from the sale of admission tickets, cash admissions, charges or fees to any show, athletic event, contest, game, theatre, moving picture parlor, opera, race track, skating rink or other place of amusement, including admission by season ticket or sub-

An equivalent tax shall likewise be levied and collected upon the gross receipts from any admission or cover charge for seats and tables, reserved or otherwise, at any restaurant, hotel, cafe, night club, cabaret, roof garden or similar place furnishing a floor show or similar entertainment. In cases where there is no charge for admission or cover charge to place of entertainment, furnishing a floor show or similar entertainment, but a charge for admission is wholly or in part included in the price paid for refreshments, service or merchan-dise, an equivalent tax shall be levied and collected upon twenty per-cent. of the gross receipts from refreshments, service and merchandise. A tax at a like rate shall likewise be collected on the gross receipts from the use of bowling alleys, pool and billiard tables.

On and after April 1, 1936, to and including March 31, 1937, there is hereby levied and imposed an addi-tional tax of five cents (5c) for each person admitted free or at reduced rates, to any place of amusement subject to the taxes herein imposed, at a time when and under circumstances under which an admission charge is under which an admission charge is made to other persons, not in excess of fifty cents (50c); and a tax of ten cents (10c) when the price charged to such other persons is in excess of fifty cents (50c) but not in excess of one dollar ($1.00); and a tax of fifteen cents (15c) when the price charged to such other persons is in excess of one such other persons is in excess of one dollar ($1.00).

Every person, firm or corporation operating any place of amusement or entertainment as aforesaid shall pay the taxes herein imposed to the Comptroller on or before May 10, 1936, and on or before the tenth day of each month thereafter, under such rules and regulations in regard thereto as the Comptroller may prescribe. Any person, firm, or corporation failing to pay the tax as aforesaid, or to com-ply with said regulations, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be subject to fine of five hundred dollars ($500.00) or imprisonment for not more than sixty days, or both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the

It will be necessary for the taxpayers to maintain adequate records which will be subject to the inspection of this office at any and all times. WM. S. GORDY, JR., State Comptroller.

TWO COURT DECISIONS AGAINST NEW LAWS Conducted by the Schools of Carroll

Labor Leaders are Especially Displeased over Them.

The National administration received two more high court set-backs, on Monday as follows:

The Supreme Court handed down a 6 to 3 decision that the Guffey Soft Coal Act was unconstitutional, point made being that Congress had exceeded its authority under the constitution, in attempting to regulate interstate commerce, on the same grounds as the NRA, that of regulating prices, wages and hours.

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals, through a test involving the Resettlement Administration, held that the act was unconstitutional. The Court decided that certain types of relief projects were likely constitutional, but the judges thought differently about such projects as the resettlement administration is pro-

Even business interests are labor. Even business interests are not wholly pleased, while John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers thinks it strange that so many Court decisions should "fatten capital, and starve and destroy labor."

This decision is being carefully analyzed both in Congress and out, and it seems to be general opinion that the present Congress will hardly have time to prepare new legislation, in an effort to overcome the objections of the Supreme Court.

The president asserted that efforts must continue to improve conditions in the soft coal industry, stating that the vetoed bill had aimed to do that through agreements between employer an employed. While he did not openly say that a substitute measure would be prepared, he did say that he considered that relief and tax bills were the only meausres for which adjournment should be delayed.

This visit was purely for recreation but there were several visitors of National reputation, and necessarily the political situation was mixed with fish stories, and camera men mysteriously appeared on the scene.

Mr. Hoover is reported as looking in the best of health and spirits. Among the visitors were Senator Ausfollowed the 16th. annual Maryland brotherhood, held during the after- of New York, and various Pennsylvania Republican leaders.

After his arrival at Chicago, in response to direct inquiries as to his being a candidate for the nomination for president, he issued a statement somewhat at length, saying-

"It should be evident by this time that I am not a candidate. I have stated many times that I have no interest but to get the critical issues before the country, and have forbidden the use of my name in any primary or state convention—and that should end such discussion. I am not opposing any candidate; my concern is with principles."

WHO ARE TAX-PAYERS?

Of course, there is no argument over the fact that one may own very little property, yet be a taxpayer, Whenever we buy anything at shops or stores there is a tax concealed in the price. As long as we use a service of any kind, we must pay a share toward supplying the cost of that

The store keeper must add his rental, freights, clerk hire, insurance, taxes and a long "overhead" expenses to the sale price of his wares, or go broke—and many do go that way. But, if there were only the kind of tax-payers who pay a tax through what they buy, and none directly to a tax-collector for the expenses of government, schools, roads and charities, what would happen?

The man who owns an automobile-or maybe he don't own itpays a tax through gasoline pur-chases toward the upkeep of roads; but it's a mighty thing for our country that all taxpayers are not this one class.

The property owner pays "buying" taxes too, equal with everybody else. The merchant pays a tax on the goods he has bought that went toward the manufacturer's expense of production; and the manufacturer paid his tax in the form of labor, and his own "overhead" expense; and all of these, having visible property for the assessor, had to satisfy the tax collector. The tax-paying business is pretty wide-spread, if it is studied aright.

Therefore it becomes vitally important to the Republican party to secure Senator Borah's support, tacit or outspoken, for the Cleveland nominee. Senator Borah, by means of an energetic primary fight, proves that the successful Republican candidate must be progressive and forwardlooking, no dark wheel-horse of the old guard chariot. He has, in a word, given Governor Landon-if he is the nominee-ample reason for a campaign of real progressivism. BE PROTECTED AGAINST TYPHOID.

Boy and girl scouts, camp-fire girls, and all other prospective campers and hikers, are advised by Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, to put "immunization against typhoid" at the very head of the list of things that must be attended to promptly, in preparation for this year's camping trip. If they have been protected against typhoid recently, or within the last two years, they will not need this advice.

"There is much less typhoid, "Dr. Riley said, "then there used to be. The public has been—and is—safeguarded against the disease in many years." The protection of public way. ways. The protection of public water supplies from pollution, the pasteurization of milk, the steady improvement in household sanitation and general hygiene, all serve as means of defense. But because of the nature of the disease, and of the fact that a certain number of those who have typhoid, become 'carriers' of the infec-tion, it is still the source of much pre-ventable sickness and of many unnecessary deaths. Vaccination against the disease, protects the individual against invasions of the disease from sources not covered in other protective measures.

"You 'take' typhoid by the way of the mouth. You drink or eat the germs that cause the disease, in water, milk or food, contaminated with typhoid germs that have been passed in the discharges of somebody who has had typhoid at some time. Hu-man 'carriers' of the germs and flies—winged 'carriers' of the infection, are responsible for many of the cases.

"Human 'carriers' are persons who are recovering from typhoid or who have had the disease at some timesometimes only in a very mild formbut who continue to pass the germs of the disease in their urine or in the discharge from the bowels. A carrier may be perfectly well, but may go on passing the germs either regularly or infrequently, and sometimes at intervals of many years. readily see that carriers who are careless in their personal habits can be sources of great danger to others, especially in handling or preparing food for others.

If they neglect to wash the hands thoroughly after they visit the toilet and before preparing food for the table, they are likely to leave the germs of the disease on any food they handle. Some of the most serious outhwests of typhoid that have occurred breaks of typhoid that have occurred throughout this country, have been due to the contamination of food by human carriers. Persons who are known to be carriers are not permit ted to serve as food handlers in public

"Typhoid is no respector of persons and it is not limited to any age group, but it strikes hardest at young people -children growing boys and girls, young men and young women under forty. I would like to urge all-especially young people-who are going way on vacation trips or outings, and who have not been immunized recently against the disease, to have themselves protected against it before they go.

"Three 'shots' of the vaccine, given a week apart, are necessary to complete the treatment. The State Department of Health supplies the vac-cine, free of charge. Your only expense will be your doctor's fee. takes some time for the treatment to your health officer and have it done without any further delay.

SELECT, HANDLE EGGS CAREFULLY

Hatchability Is Important to All Poultrymen.

By Dr. W. C. Thompson, Professor of Poultry Husbandry, New Jersey College of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

Much of the profit making possibilities of next season's pullet flocks will be determined by the type and character of hatching eggs used in incubators. Good chicks and good pullets will come only from good eggs. The ideal weight of hatching eggs is from 26 to 28 ounces to the dozen and not less than 24 ounces to the dozen. Although the matter of weight in egg selection should not be carried to the extreme, next year's pullets will tend to produce eggs of the same type as those from which they were hatched.

Hatching eggs from poultry breeding flocks should be gathered two or three times daily during cold weather because chilling, to say nothing of freezing, ruins chances of a good hatch. Store the eggs in a cool place, preferably at 60 degrees Fahrenheit and in as even a temperature as possible. The air in the storage room should not be too dry, or moisture in the eggs will be evaporated. Placed in clean trays or cartons, the eggs should be turned two or three times

Do not wash hatching eggs, but remove any dirt with a fine sand paper or emery cloth. It is far better, however, to have produced hatching eggs perfectly clean than to have to clean them after they are gathered. Discard the abnormally colored and oddly shaped eggs and set the selected eggs in the incubator within two weeks, and preferably within 10 days of the time, they are laid.

Gravity Principle Used

to Ventilate Hen Houses

While there is some difference of opinion about the best way to ventilate poultry houses, a simple system based on the principle of gravity has been used effectively in New Jersey multiple-unit laying houses for more than a decade, says E. R. Gross, professor of agricultural engineering at the New Jersey College of Agriculture, Rutgers university.

The only changes made in the gravity system during the last ten years are the adaptation of new materials for construction and successive increases in the size of the flue, Professor Gross reports. Under this system, the front windows of the house serve as intake openings and are regulated according to weather conditions. The air passes through the room to an outtake flue which is located at least six feet from the window and extends from two feet above the floor straight upward through the roof to at least two feet above the ridge of the roof. The flue is made of four strips of insulating wallboards nailed to four, or tube and is located in each unit accommodating 100 to 150 birds. A large cap prevents rain and snow from entering the house through the top of the flue.

For most effective operation of this system, the flue must have a cross section area of at least two and a half inches per bird and, in most cases, this area may be advantageously increased to three and a half inches per bird. A flue which is too small does not afford sufficient air change to carry away the moisture and keep the litter

Hints About Guineafowl

Guineafowl can be housed with the barnvard hens but it would be better to keep them in a pen by themselves, as the male is rather hard on the hens. states a writer in the Montreal Herald. The male guinea is treacherous. A small part of the henhouse could be' used for the wintering place for guineafowl to good advantage. The meat of the guineafowl is quite good to eat, but is gamey in taste and dark in color. Guineafowl females usually lay in May or early June. They do not lay as many eggs as hens, although some have been known to produce upwards of 100 eggs in a season; they do not lay during the winter months.

Potassium Permanganate Permanganate of potash has little, if any, value in the drinking water. This drug is a mild disinfectant but, in the amounts that can be used and exposed as it must be to conditions that offset any virtue that it might have, it cannot disinfect a hen or chicken. As a routine addition to the drinking water of fowls, it has lost its favor and is now comparatively discarded. Skim-milk is a vaulable food for poultry, however, fed, according to an authority in the Rural New-Yorker.

Raising Ducks

Why are there not more ducks raised on American farms? The greatest objection given by most farmers and poultrymen is that they do not have a pond or stream near the house. Although a pond or stream is a valuable feature, it is not essential. All that is necessary is to provide sufficient water for drinking purposes. An ordinary trough with a board about four inches wide fastened along the top will prevent the ducks from splashing the water out.-Wallace's Farmer.

Why Globe Fish Swell Up You've probably heard about the ability of the globe fish (sometimes called puffer, or swellfish) to pump itself up with air, until its body is distended like a toy balloon. The reason, was recently revealed. The fish swells up in self-defense. threatened by enemies it rushes to the surface, blows itself up, and lets the wind scud it along at a much greater speed than it could otherwise attain. Some species of globe fish are covered with sharp spikes. Normally, these spikes lie flat against the side, but when air is taken in they stick out menacingly.—Washington Post.

Lights of New York by L. L. STEVENSON

Morning mists: Sometimes, there are compensations for getting up in what seems the middle of the night and going down the bay to meet an incoming liner. For instance, the other morning, just enough fog had descended over lower Manhattan to make over the famous sky-line into an entirely new picture. Great buildings seemed to be floating in mid-air while the towers of the Woolworth, Singer and other skyscrapers seemed isolated crags in a sea of vapor. Brooklyn bridge was bits of tracery and the Statue of Liberty, a dim, hovering figure. Huge ferries seemed to come from nowhere and what looked like moving islands were merely barges pushed by tugs. The description sounds tame since, as a matter of fact, it was something to be seen rather than put into words.

For the working girl: The Society for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor has figured it out that a girl employed in an office must make an annual expenditure of at least $77.75. Some of the things on the list are four dresses at a total cost of $20; three hats, $6; four pairs of shoes, $12; a winter coat to last two years, at $6.25 a year, step-ins, $1.60; slips, $1.20, and vests, $1. The cost of a working man's clothing is estimated at $58.65 a year and that of a boy, $41 with an outlay of $34,50 for a young girl. A housewife need not spend more than $32.50 a year. But try to convince a lot of them!

Hat grabbing incident: The hat grabber is again becoming conspicuous. He or she is encountered just about everywhere. Many restaurants that in the lean days dispensed with hat grabbers, have again installed them-which is a sign possibly of returning prosperity, since hat checking concessions cost money. Well, the other night, a dapper young gentleman, after retrieving his hat, coat and stick, thrust something into an outstretched paw. The hat grabber promptly let out a yell. Instead of coin, he'd received a raw oyster. By the time he recovered enough to go into action, the dapper young man had vanished. . . .

Travel note: Tourists who return from Caribbean trips find their liquor purchases piled separately from their regular purchases. Presumably, that's for the convenience of the customs gentlemen who have to check to see if the $800 limit has been exceeded. But what I started out to say was that West Indies' tourists can be distinguished from the European kind by their baskets. Few visit the smiling isles without returning with many samples of native handicraft. Whether they learn to carry them on their heads or not is something that hasn't been ascertained.

An intoxicated young man fell down the concrete steps of the city subway station at Central Park West and One Hundred and Fourth street. Six men rushed to his rescue. He was badly hurt and the station agent telephoned for an ambulance. Just after he had done so, a well-dressed woman came on the scene. She immediately offered to return to her home and telephone. Assured that an ambulance had been called, she waited until it actually arrived and in the meanwhile made this young fellow as comfortable as possible. Hard-hearted New York! * * *

Modern miracles: A friend, who is desirous of remaining anonymous, discovered when he reached his home that he had either lost or had been robbed of his wallet. Having entered a taxi at Broadway and Forty-seventh street, he promptly returned. And lying on the sidewalk, scuffed by many feet," was the wallet which, in addition to valuable papers and identifications, contained $73.

Science Confirms Belief That Fish Is Brain Food

Chicago.-The tradition that fish food is a boon to mental faculties may not be so far from the truth, according to experiments conducted at Elgin Hospital for the Insane. Certain diets materially affect the mental balance of an individual, it was shown.

Intelligence tests at the end of 12 months showed that these on a diet, heavy in vitamin A, B-1, B-2 and D as well as iron, as found in liver extracts and cod liver oil, had gained the equivalent of 14.15 months of mental age. whereas non-dieters gained only 2.41 months of mental age.

LITTLE RED SCHOOL HOUSE FLOURISHES

March of Progress Leaves Them Practically Untouched.

Chicago.—The little red school house with its curriculum of the "three R's," but little changed by the march of progress, still flourishes in rural America.

A study of rural education made by Prof. Whit Brogan of the school of education of Northwestern university in co-operation with the W. K. Kellogg Foundation reveals that teaching methods of 40 years ago still exist in a large number of country schools today.

Modern educational techniques have not pervaded rural areas, according to Professor Brogan who found that in some country schools the children were utilizing the same readers used by their grandfathers.

Provision for hot lunches is one of the few worthwhile innovations made vey. These schools have installed small grills whereby warm food and hot drinks are provided.

The typical country school, according to the report, consists of a large square room, lighted by windows. Only in rare cases are electric lights provided. Equipment consists of rows of desks screwed to the floor, a teacher's desk, a heating unit, a small case of text books and in rare instances, a dictionary. In this setting the teacher conducts classes for the entire stu-

A study of 35 rural schools in one county showed that the average number of grades taught by one teacher is 6.4 and that the average number of pupils is 21.6. The school day is divided into 29 class divisions with recitations of 15 to 20 minutes each.

The subject matter remains much the same as years ago. Reading, writing, arithmetic and spelling constitute the major portion of the curriculum. Geography, history and civics are to be found only in the upper grades. Recommendations for bettering the educational setup in rural schools made by Professor Brogan are: First, classrooms should be made attractive places for children to live and work in; second, the concept that education is a series of brief unrelated units should be changed, and third, there must be a growing acceptance of the belief that education is futile unless it produces some change in the student's manner of living.

ARCH OF TRIUMPH IS 100 YEARS OLD

Anniversary to Be Observed at Paris in July.

Paris.-On July 29 Paris will celebrate the centenary of the Arch of Triumph. The arch will be illuminated and there will be a special ceremony at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Begun by Napoleon in 1806, it was not until France had twice changed governments that the arch was finally completed under King Louis Philippe. During its construction it provoked almost as many battles between architects and officials as are commemorated in the military inscriptions on its walls.

Napoleon at first intended it as a memorial of the Battle of Austerlitz, Wantz and family. and then decided to include the other victories of the armies of the Republic and the Empire. At the time of his marriage to Marie Louise in 1810 he desired the arch to mark also the triumph of the bridal procession.

But the architects were building for the ages, and its foundations were not yet completed. A temporary arch had to be constructed for the occasion, and the work on the arch proper went on slowly, and Napoleon's downfall put a temporary end to the project. During the next seven years the strange halffinished monument remained untouched. But it was too solidly built to destroy, and in 1823 Louis XVIII finished it as a memorial to the victory of the Duke of Angouleme at Cadiz.

A long controversy between architects developed, and many plans were fought over and rejected before it was finally decided to revert to Napoleon's original design. Louis Philippe, the liberal king, did not flinch from glorifying the achievements of the Republic and the Empire. The monument cost. all told, 9,651,115 francs.

Con-Men Reap Harvest With 2-Inch Grass Seed

St. Louis.-Con-men have gone native. Instead of selling the Woolworth building, the Brooklyn bridge or the Statue of Liberty, they now are pedbull's head bulbs said to produce varicolored lilies.

Harry W. Riehl of the St. Louis better business bureau, said thou-

Gullible suburbanites comprise a great market for the two-inch grass seed artists. Visioning lawnmowerless summer days, they pay $1 to $1.50 really is 8 cents a pound English blue grass.

The most widespread phase of the racket, Riehl said, is the sale of the recurrently blooming plants. They are known as "resurrection" plantsactually a desert weed which, by the time it is sold, is often too nearly dead to open up even once. Marketed as "French Roses," the weeds sell for about $2.00 for three.

The bull's head lily is supposed to give birth to two lilies of different colors. The sales sample is prepared Fritch and Mrs. Knouse were college by drilling two small holes in the bulb friends of Miss Fringer. and inserting the stems of two lilies. If the bulb grows at all it produces root-like, linear foliage-but nary a lily. They sell ordinarily for about 25 cents apiece.

Why the Early-Hatched

Chicks Are Preferred There are at least five reasons why early hatched chicks are raised, according to H. L. Kempster, of the Missouri College of Agriculture. The pullets will have time to mature and start laying in late summer or early fall, when egg prices are higher; the cockerels, when sold as broilers, usually return more money; early hatched chicks are not so likely. to become infected with coccidiosis and infested with worms; early hatched pullets develop into heavier birds, which lay larger eggs, and cooler weather is conducive to more rapid growth and proper development.

In the selection of chicks, buy those that are free from disease and of vigorous stock, which has been tested for pullorum disease. Try to get early hatched, well matured pullets. It is desirable that they come from females which lay large eggs and have been mated to male birds that come from high producing hens that lay large eggs (two ounces each or more).

Brooder House Temperature The temperature in a brooder house where a brick brooder is used should range from 70 to 75 degrees. The thermometer should be placed on the wall one foot above the floor and three feet from the brooder where possible and the readings should be taken at that point. It is well to remember, says a North Carolina State college authority, that a bucket of water should be kept on top of the broodbucket of water will prevent the chicks falling in.

Stratosphere Flight

Explorer II Rising from the Stratobowl.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE Explorer II, balloon of the National Geographic societyarmy air corps stratosphere flight, which rose to a record altitude of more than 73,000 feet on Armistice day, was the largest free balloon ever built. Commanded by Capt. Albert W. Stevens, who also was the scientific observer, and piloted by Capt. Orvil Anderson, both of the army air corps, the balloon soared more than two miles farther into the upper air than the previous official altitude record (61,237 feet), made by Lieut. Commander T. G. W. Settle of the navy and Maj. Chester Fordney of the marine corps, on November 20, 1933. The unofficial balloon altitude record prior to the flight of the Explorer II was 72,200 feet, made by Russian balloonists. The crew of three men was killed when the gondola crashed on descent, January 30, 1934.

If a tent were made from the bag of the Explorer II 20,000 men could find standing room beneath it, with space to spare. It will cover about two and two-thirds acres of ground, or 115,845 square feet. It has a capacity of 3,700,000 cubic feet of gas. This is 23 per cent larger than the capacity of the Explorer I, used on the 1934 National Geographic-army air corps stratosphere flight and at that time the record-breaker for size.

If fully inflated on a football field the Explorer would cover more than the total width of the gridiron and about two-thirds of its length. A building more than eleven stories high and of equal width and depth could be placed easily inside it.

The big bag is made of cotton fabric, treated repeatedly with rubber until it is gas-tight. The gondola, and its four-and-one-half-ton load of men, instruments, and ballast, was suspended from a catenary band or girdle cemented to the lower part of the balloon.

Moored With Seven Miles of Rope.

Seven miles of rope, enough to reach from the earth to the stratosphere, were used to moor the giant bag during its inflation and until the time of the take-off.

The balloon was inflated with helium gas, which could not burn or explode, instead of the hydrogen gas used in the Explorer I. Only about 260,000 cubic feet of helium, about 7 per cent of the balloon's capacity, was let into the bag at the start. As the balloon rose it expanded until at a height of about 12 miles it filled out the entire sphere.

and the helium continued to expand, there was no danger of the bag bursting because the excess gas escaped through four appendixes in the bottom. These are tubular openings like inverted chimneys, 17 feet long and 71/2 feet in diameter.

The gas in the balloon was controlled by two valves of a type invented by Captain Stevens. Operated by compressed air, somewhat as air attached to small balloons. brakes are operated, the valves were controlled from within the gondola. They could be used to let gas escape from the top of the balloon when it was desired to halt the ascent temporarily, or to hasten the descent toward earth.

The gondola of the Explorer II which housed the crew and precious scientific instruments is a big nine-foot bubble made of a magnesium alloy, thin but strong. Though nearly as strong as steel, the metal used in the sphere is less than one-fourth as heavy. It is the world's lightest structural metal. Even aluminum is half again as heavy.

New Lightweight Metal.

This lightweight champion of the metals is a comparatively new bit of modern chemical magic. It contains 95 per cent pure magnesium, one of the lightest of substances. The magnesium is obtained from deep-buried supplies of salt water, or brine, pumped from wells at Midland, Mich., by the Dow Chemical company.

Though it appears hard and shiny like any other metal when fashioned into the material for the gondola, magnesium ground or shaved into bits also can burn with a brilliant light. It was used in photographers' flashlight powder before electric flash lamps were developed, and in flares dropped by aviato illuminate the ground for bombing and photography.

Despite its light weight, the magnesium alloy needs a thickness of only earth.

three-sixteenths of an inch to give it sufficient strength for the stratosphere balloon gondola. It carried into the stratosphere on the flight a load of two men, more than a ton of scientific apparatus and thousands of pounds of ballast.

In tests it withstood strains five times as great as it was called upon to bear during the flight. During the flight it was subjected not only to the load but the strain of an air pressure inside that was far greater than that

Walls of the gondola are made of rolled plates of the magnesium alloy welded together. The hatches are castings of the same material. The entire gondola, with its metal floor, hatch covers and a metal arm from which some instruments were suspended, weighed 638 pounds.

Sunny, Calm and Cold.

In the stratosphere, it has been discovered, continuous sunshine reigns, with no storms, clouds, rains or fogs. But-it is about 80 below zero! Also in this paradoxical region of the upper air the sky is so blue that it is almost black and sounds are strangely faint

No summer resort on earth can equal the sunshine and calm of stratosphere days. The sun shines from rising to setting, every day, with a brilliance unknown on earth, for there is little air to dim its rays. Practically no water vapor exists in the stratosphere, so there can be no clouds to shut out the sun, and hence no rain or fog. The turbulent air currents nearer the earth also are missing, so storms are non-existent.

But even with this perfect weather overhead, the stratosphere is far from being an ideal vacation spot. It is as cold as the desolate polar regions of earth. A temperature of nearly 80 degrees below zero Fahrenheit was recorded in 1934, both on the first National Geographic-army flight to the stratosphere and in the Antarctic on the second Byrd expedition. And again on November 11, 1935, the Explorer II found a similar temperature. The air is so thin in the stratosphere that a man would suffocate and die there unless artificially supplied with oxygen.

The stratosphere is one of the earth's newest frontiers, a region of cold air 20 miles or more thick, surrounding our globe as the skin surrounds an orange. It hangs above the earth at a height ranging from ten miles at the equator to seven miles in the latitude of the United States, while balloon into the shape of a perfect over the poles it may hang lower still.

Its bottom is the level at which the After the balloon became spherical air above the earth stops growing colder. Every one knows that the air grows colder as one climbs higher on a mountain or in an airplane, and scientists formerly believed the coldness steadily increased with altitude. But about 37 years ago it was found that the temperature ceased to drop at a height of seven to ten miles, and remained about the same as far up as could be measured with thermometers

Man Couldn't Live There.

The stratosphere always stays at approximately the same low temperature because the heat that its air absorbs is almost exactly balanced by the heat it radiates away. It is colder in winter than in summer, but strangely enough is colder above the equator than nearer the poles. A man suddenly transported to the stratosphere could no more live than he could in the depths of the sea. Not only is there much too little oxygen to keep him alive, but the tissues of his body would tend to expand because the pressure inside his body would be far greater than that outside. The crew of the Explorer II was sealed in a gondola and supplied with artificial air by an air-conditioning unit, just as is the crew of a subma-

All astronomers wish they could go to the stratosphere to observe the stars. At a height of 15 miles they would be well above most of the earth's atmosphere, which acts like a swirling fog in front of telescopes on earth and because of this the view is partially spoiled. In a clear stratosphere sky the stars shine far more brilliantly than we ever see them. At a height of 20 miles the brighter stars probably could be seen in daylight. That is because the stratosphere sky is almost tors at night during the World war black. There are comparatively few air particles to scatter the sun's rays at that height, hence the sky does not appear as blue as it does from the

At any rate hysterics can often be avoided by means of canned foods according to an interview in the New York World-Telegram with the First Lady of the Land shortly after her husband was inaugurated President. The girl who has hysterics when her husband telephones that he is bringing an office mate home to dinner, she was quoted as saying, has a lot to learn. In a well-run household, Mrs. Roosevelt believes, there should be certain things in reserve canned foods that can be rushed into service at a moment's notice if the dinner that was planned eems rather slim for company.

That is how the White House or desserts, and placed attractomes to be well provided with canned foods. Canned Foods the Answer

Canned foods provide the major part of the answer to this perplexing problem for some of the following reasons. Their food value is equal to that of home-cooked food and generally even greater because the canned food is more easy to digest on account of being more thoroughly cooked. A higher percentage of vitamins is retained in canned foods than in foods cooked at home by the ordinary methods. Perfect sterilization renders canned foods absolutely safe. The sterilization process destroys harmful organisms as no home cooking can do.

Then there are the aspects of convenience and economy. Canned foods are always ready to serve. For cold dishes they need only be mixed with other things, in salads

An emergency shelf of easily prepared foods is probably more necessary in the White House than in any other single dwelling with the shelf as labored. It is no wonder that Mrs. Roosevelt and all her predecessors have given them a permanent place on the White House shelves.*

CHAPTER V

Bryn, on the morning after his trip to town with Grandmother, paused in his systematic and careful examination of the grounds, leaned against a tree down at the lower corner, lit a cigarette, and considered.

The men who were coming out from town to make a garden out of this wilderness would have to work carefully. All through the thick grass were scattered rare shrubs, beds of flowering plants, plots of hyacinth and crocus bulbs, crescents of iris set into the

But his main consideration was not directed toward the garden. He was remembering Deborah's face when they had returned yesterday, he and Grandmother. White and cold, she had met them in the doorway and led Grandmother into the small sitting room to rest for a moment before removing her new coat and hat. Deborah was no longer angry. While they were away she had obviously come to some agreement with herself; Bryn decided, as she smiled faintly and took the box of chocolates, as she put it down without a glance upon the small table beside her, that he preferred her angry. He had swung on his heel, leaving her there with Grandmother, and gone out to Gary. Gary stood in the drive, his parcel laid on the grass, watching the puppy rolling over and over, wild with excitement, and yelping with joy at

"Perhaps you'll tell Miss Deborah that the puppy is for her," Bryn said curtly, and went back up to his room. But the puppy wasn't having any difficulty in penetrating these frosty layers and discovering the real Deborah. From his window yesterday afternoon Bryn had witnessed their first meeting. Deborah had come out to Gary, and at her appearance the puppy had rushed upon her with a ferocious threatening growl which ended precipitately as the little dog fell over her own feet and tumbled in a heap before her release from the car.

Deborah's. Instantly, unquestioning as a child, she had bent to lift it in her arms. "Oh, Gary," she cried, "isn't it a darling? Isn't it a darling puppy?"

She hugged it close, and it snuggled for a moment comfortably under her chin. Then it put out a pink tongue and kissed Deborah entirely without

"You're a bad dog," she scolded, but her voice was soft and laughing and tender. Bryn drew a deep breath. When she spoke to him her voice wasn't like that. "Where did it come from. Gary?"

"She's for you, Miss Deborah. Mr. Bryn brought her out from town." "Oh." Deborah said. "Of course. I might have known." But she did not drop the puppy. She stood silent, thinking. "Now look, Miss Deborah," Gary began, "I don't think he means any harm, after all. He's only acting natural." "Oh. hush!" Deborah cried stormily, stamping her foot. She held the puppy close and ran off with her, back of the house, down to some hidden nook of her own which always seemed to be her chosen place of refuge.

That had been yesterday. Bryn went down and got into the car, standing on the drive. He drew from his pocket the worn piece of paper which . . . was it only yesterday morning? . . . had caused Deborah such woe. His eyes traveled down the list on the paper in his hand. Magazines, catalogues, tea, servants. Gardeners, yes. The bank managers was sending them out as soon as he could find them.

Gary came out to him. "I must say," he said to Bryn, "you got a way of getting things done. And ... I'd like to thank you for that tobacco, sir."

"I suppose the electric light situa-tion is next," Bryn said, unheeding. "Well, I think I can fix that myself. Several years of engineering ought to prove of some value. Lead on, Gary."

In the small square house where the dynamo stood greasy and unresponsive, Bryn detached a pair of overalls from a peg on the wall and climbed into them. "Now," he said, when Gary had given him the pathological history of the electric plant, "if you'll go and prepare a large and delectable dinner, and leave me alone in my glory, I'll see what's to be done, Gary.'

There was, as Bryn had suspected, nothing seriously wrong with the engine of the electric plant. He opened the cocks to drain out all the old oil, cleaned the connections, and made a note of the few parts it would be necessary to replace. Before the motor was started, he decided, it would be wise to inspect the connections at the house. He removed the greasy overalls, hung them on the peg.

He went to the kitchen and got a drink. Gary was shelling peas. All morning, as Bryn knew, he and Deborah had spent making strawberry jam: and now every window-sill was filled with small ruby jars which caught and held the sunlight.

"Where's there a ladder?" he asked. "Out on the edge of the orchard," Gary told him. "But you better be careful of it. It isn't as good as it might be."

Bryn went out behind the house and followed with his eye the line of the electric wires as they crossed the the orchard, lifted the ladder lying half-hidden in the grass, carried it back and propped it up against the wall of the house, beneath the place where the wires entered. Trying each rung cautiously, he went up the ladder.

As he reached the top he turned half-around as he took the pliers from his pocket, and was just in time to see Deborah emerge from her retreat down near the bridge. He did not look at her, but went busily to work, whistling blithely, attacking the wires at their point of connection with the house.

There was a sudden ominous cracking which Bryn scarcely heard; he was listening for Deborah's footstep on the path beside him, wondering whether to look down and smile or to continue absorbedly with his work. He was spared the necessity of making a choice; for, a moment after the unheeded warning, the rung upon which he was standing collapsed into splinters, and Bryn fell neatly through. He heard Deborah scream; the puppy barked furiously; and then he dropped into oblivion.

He awoke, a few moments later, with something cold dashing across his forehead, and the sound of Deborah's voice saying in a whisper, "More, Gary, get more, quick!" The sound of footsteps. Bryn lay motionless, collecting himself. He was not hurt. He knew he was not hurt. The grass was thick, here, and he had broken his fall; his head had probably been whacked just hard enough to put him out for a minute or two. He did not open his eyes. Deborah was beside him. She put her hand on his forehead, lifted the wet hair back from his brow.

She bent over him. "Don't die," she whispered like a breath. "Don't die, please don't die."

He moved his head faintly, and lifted his hand. He would find hers . . . with his wedding ring on it . . he would hold it firmly, and tell her . her little white hand . . . he groped

Something soft and light fell on his cheek, a delicate gentle touch. He caught his breath and held it. The touch came again, gentle, on his cheek, at the side of his mouth. He threw off his pretense of weakness, put his hand up quickly, opened his eyes, his heart thumping; and found himself clutching with both hands the puppy, nosing him in an anxiety of curiosity. Deborah was gone. He got up with the puppy under his arm and strolled grimly around the corner, to meet Gary, wild-eyed, approaching with a brimming dipper of

"You aren't hurt, sir?" Gary gasped breathlessly. "Aren't you hurt?"
"Not a scratch," Bryn replied. "Sorry to frighten you."

"Well, that is good," Gary said with heartfelt emotion. "I got a terrible fright. And Miss Deborah was coming to the house and saw you fall. She . . ." he stopped.

"She what?" Bryn asked calmly. "She's crying."

Evening came on again: dinner was served in the dining room, brighter now with a host of tall tapers. Grandmother was happy tonight, gay and light hearted. When dinner was over she wanted to go for a little stroll.

It was a glorious night. The moon had already risen, and hung, a huge silver lamp, just over the top of the lowest hill. The sky was deep blue. Grandmother leaned on Bryn's arm; Deborah was on her other side. They came back to the front porch at last, but Grandmother did not stop. She did not seem to notice their awkward silences. She walked to the corner of the house, and there, gently, she withdrew from between them and tucked Deborah's arm in Bryn's. "There, my darlings," she said, with the ghost of a laugh. "Walk together down the path beside the brook. It's a perfect night for lovers. I am going in now. Good night!" and before Deborah's hand could stop her, or Bryn's words could form themselves.

she was gone. "Very nice night," Bryn said formally.

"Yes," Deborah agreed after a mo-

She glanced up at him in the moonlight, but his face was cool and unmoved. Wordless, she followed his lead, walking quietly beside him. They went slowly down along the brook. They were almost at the end of the path. He had not spoken. She lifted her head. "I'm I'm sorry you fell and hurt yourself," she said in that delicious low voice with the tiny

"I didn't hurt myself," Bryn said calmly. "Sorry to cause a commotion." They reached the end of the path. Bryn turned. Deborah hesitated, but, after a second, turned beside him. Half-way to the house she hesitated. "It was . . . kind of you to remember tobacco for Gary," she said. "I didn't realize why he wasn't smoking."

Bryn did not reply. Almost back at the house, she spoke again. Her voice held a hint of desperation. "It . . . it is a lovely night, isn't it?" she said.

"I think it's a little chilly," Bryn replied. "Do you suppose your grandmother thinks we've been out long enough now?" She stopped and looked up at him. And as he looked down at her, she turned away with a little droop in her shoulders, and left him.

. Deborah stood against the stone railing of the balcony, surveying the changes taking place in her little world, and was thoroughly miserable. Everyone seemed to be in a conspiracy against her. Day by day, slowly but inexorably, all that reminded her of the old peaceful happy life was being removed, and nobody seemed to realize or care that she was being left alone in a vacuum. Even Grandmother didn't care. Grandmother was very happy; her cheeks grew pinker every day, her appetite had improved. Grandmother, of course, thought that Deborah was happy too. She didn't begin to realize how empty life was now, and how lost and forlorn Deborah was beginning to feel. It hadn't occurred to her that this dream of hers which had come true had never been Deborah's dream.

Yes, Bryn was making Grandmother happy; but that was frightening. Because, at the end of the year . . . And one couldn't dream of making a bargain with him to continue the play acting until . . . until Grandmother didn't need anyone any longer. That would be years and years, Deborah hoped. And he had his own life to live, his own career to earve out, his own . . . well, his own girl to marry.

Deborah fell to wondering what his own girl was like. She would be beautiful, of course, and probably tall and queenly, instead of little and childish. It was difficult to understand what her circumstances were that she would allow him to make money for her in such a strange way. If she were wealthy, surely they would have been married whether he had money or not. If she were poor, one would think that she would have been willing to marry him and share his difficult times with him. There must be something about her that Deborah didn't understand. Deborah moved suddenly from the balcony railing and went inside her own pretty bedroom; and there she flung herself on the bed and cried miserably into the silver and violet spread. After a long time she sat up and dried her eyes. There wasn't anything to cry about. What if they had laughed at her? She would never see the girl, and the girl would never see her. Asfor the man, they were as distant from each other as any two people could possibly be, who had to act at intervals an affectionate little comedy. The other night she had tried, it was true, to be friendly. She had tried to apologize for not accepting his assistance with better grace, to tell him how sorry she was that he had been hurt while trying to help her; and he hadn't allowed her to be friendly. He had been cold and unresponsive, and she hated him for it. But it was better for him to be so. Far better. There wasn't anything between them but the relation of an employer to a servant; he had said so himself. That was the way he wanted it to be.

She got down from the bed and tiptoed to the door. No one was about, she knew that. The maids had been here for two days, and the cook as well, but they were all down in the living room with Gary, putting it in

Lesson for May 24

BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE

LESSON TEXT - Luke 20:45-47; 21:1-36.
GOLDEN TEXT—In your patience possess ye your souls,—Luke 21:19.
PRIMARY TOPIC — A Gift That

Pleased Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What Makes a Gift

Great?
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR
TOPIC—Making the Most of Today.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT
TOPIC—Living for Spiritual Ends.

While this lesson is indicated as the quarterly Temperance lesson, and the various subjects suggested vary in their objective, a more logical theme would seem to be "Jesus Teaches in the Temple." No individual, city, or nation can truly build for the future that disregards what the Bible says about the future.

I. Jesus Warns Against the Scribes (vv. 45-47).

He had just dealt with the disbelief of the Sadducees. The scribes claimed faith, for they were the teachers of the law. They were punctiliously exact- ous. ing as to its literal observance. They had little understanding of the need of flexibility in applying its principles to human needs. They discovered that Jesus was teaching things contrary to their interpretations. Jesus taught that the law was made for man, and not man for the law. The scribes were publicity seekers, making parade of rural and mountain districts.

II. Jesus Makes Estimate of Gifts (Luke 21:1-4).

III. Jesus Prophesies His Return (vv. 5-33).

b. Inevitable wars and commotions (vv. 9, 10) will embroil the nations. "Commotions" signifies tumults, in the absence of war, wrangling within naterrified."

c. Violent persecutions were foretold (vv. 12-19). The believer of today should absorb the meaning and teaching of this marvelous passage of Scripture. "Settle it in your hearts" that the golden text, "In your patience possess ye your souls."

IV. Appropriate Warnings (vv. 34-36).

The grosser sins may not ensuare and upon the follower of Christ alike shall trials and perplexities come. Watch ye therefore, always; pray, always. Only so shall the child of God be ready ("worthy") to escape, and to stand before the Son of God. Benediclove his appearing."

INTESTINAL PARASITES.

The subject of man's relations with his enemies and parasites of the insect and animal world is one of infinite interest. Our animal enemies are not so obvious as once they were. Even our native bears and wolves are now seldom seen, in our "civilized" communities, outside of cages and zoological parks. They figure, as menaces, only in the fantasies of children, along with lions, tigers and more fabulous creatures.

But man still has his enemies in the animal kingdom. These range in size from tiny ones which can be seen only with the aid of a microscope, such as bacteria, molds, etc. (Whether these should be called animals, or plants, is a question which need not come up here.)

Considering those creatures, however, which are visible to the unaided eye, we survey a vast multitude of living things. Many of these are specialized, or adapted, to live as parasites upon man, and in this relationship to bring upon their host various forms of disease, mild or seri-

Among these are different species of intestinal worms, from the hookworm, too small to be seen with the naked eye, to worms a foot or more in length, such as the Ascaris, or 'round worm," a fairly common parasite of young children, especially in

At this point, there may be heard a fair question by the reader of this column: "Why should I read about 'stomach worms' and such pests? I keep my children clean, and impress upon them the A, B, C's of personal hygiene, such as the necessity for While the rich cast their gifts into the | frequent hand-washings and regular

The past: On the night of June 4, 1929, 600 distinguished and well-known guests, each of whom had received an invitation and paid $10, attended the opening of the Central Park Casino, which had been taken over by the Dieppe corporation. That corporation had on its governing board none other than Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., William Rhinelander Stewart, Jr., and Adolph Zukor, James Walker, then mayor, was present and so many nights thereafter that the Casino in no time at all became known as "Jimmy Walker's night club." Society flocked there and the corporation prospered. An investigation conducted some time after that auspicious opening showed that in four years it had collected more than $3,000,000. But as most of that great gross came from the pockets of the rich, there hadn't been much complaint. Still, there were those who thought the city should get more than $8,500 a year as its share.

The present: Among those who cherished that thought was Fiorello H. LaGuardia, who was making a campaign for mayor. He charged that the Dieppe corporation was so greedy that it even took a percentage of the waiters' tips. Besides that, the playground of the public Central park was Laboratories Are Set Up in no place for a swanky eating place. LaGuardia was not elected that time. He ran again and was. His choice for park commissioner was Robert H. Moses who held ideas similar to those of his boss. So he promptly ordered the Casino to close up. The matter got into the courts, the corporation holding that as the contract didn't expire until 1939, it intended to stay. It lost the first decision. Now it has lost an appeal and the Casino, the scene of so many brilliant affairs, is to be torn down to make a playground for youngsters.

No compromise: The principal complaint against the Casino concerned prices charged for food. As a sort of concession, Sidney Solomon, suave manager, offered price reductions. The cup of coffee that had once cost 50 $4 table d'hote dinner to $3. But Commissioner Moses couldn't see any bargain for the people at those rates and kept up his fight.

Age in a hurry: At the Pennsylvania terminal, your correspondent overheard an argument between a snappily dressed woman who looked to be well past seventy despite the work of an efficient beauty specialist, and two equally snappily dressed young women, who were apparently her granddaughters. At any rate, the older woman was all put out because her family had insisted that she go down to Florida by train instead of by plane!

. Fooling chiselers: New York city policemen who take the examinations for sergeants now must pay a fee of $5. Up until a short time ago, there was no charge. A check revealed that a lot of cops who took the examinations really had no hopes of passing but had discovered that fooling around with lead pencils and papers for a day or se was a lot easier than walking beats. Incidentally, policemen not only have to buy their own revolvers but the ammunition they shoot in practice and at crooks as well.

Factual matter: The reason the great seal of the city of New York bears two flour sacks is that once upon a time local millers had a monopoly on bolting all the flour exported from this country. The reason for the two beavers is that there was a time when New York city was the fur trading center of the New World, @ Bell Syndicate. - WNU Service.

Hopkins Talks; Not in Public

But Critics of New Deal Are Pilloried While Crowds Watch Show.

Having blocked any effective bipartisan investigation of the WPA situation throughout the country Senator Joseph T. Robinson, leader of the New Deal forces in the Senate, has been delaying Senate action on the demand for facts about large beneficiaries of Demands had been made by Senators Davis (Pennsylvania), Vandenberg (Michigan), and Holt (West Virginia) for a thorough sifting of country-wide charges of politics, waste and inefficiency in work-relief. They produced a mass of documentary evidence in support of their charges. Senator Robinson, by a clever maneuver, was successful in having recalled an original report of a Senate committee favoring a real investigation. He then had two additional New Deal Senators added to the committee. This seemed to assure success for the New Deal faction in their effort to suppress the Washington observers have pointed out the picture presented several days ago when two committees were in session on Copitol Hill. In the Capitol a subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee for five hours questioned Administrator Harry Hopkins about AAA, Mr. Hopkins in three years had administered the expenditure of almost 8,000 million dollars on work-relief projects and other relief. President Roosevelt had asked for an appropriation of 1,500 millions more.

Hopkins Testifies.

As usual with subcommittees on oppropriations, the doors were closed. Stenographic reports were taken of the proceedings but the printed report of the hearing, as usual, was not expected to reach the public for some weeks. Even when printed and made public the report probably will have been "edited."

The Washington Post said the next morning:

"Opinion, even among members of Congress who are demanding that the public be told how relief money is being spent, was growing that this and similar hearings will be as near an investigation of relief as will be conducted during the present session." While there is no criticism of an appropriations subcommittee following the usual procedure of holding executive sessions, critics of WPA declare that Administrator Hopkins should also appear before a committee authorized to investigate work-relief. They say a public hearing of the charges would be a far different matter than an executive session of a House committee which does not pretend to investigate, and which meets behind closed doors.

A strikingly different picture was presented in an ornate chamber in the Senate Office Building on the same afternoon. The Black Lobby Committee was investigating the activities of an organization that had been critical of the New Deal. Policemen handled the crowd that sought admittance. As witnesses took the staind, in front of the high dais on which the Senatorial investigators sat, photographers for newspapers and magazines came and went, punctuating the proceedings with flashlights. Reporters representing all the national news services and many individual newspapers sat near the committeemen, busily taking notes. This was a colorful political melodrama, staged in a room with richly draped windows, fluted columns, gleaming chandeliers.

The New Deal believes in the glowing light of publicity for any investigation of those who criticize New Deal policies. It will not submit Mr. Hopkins to public questioning if it can avoid it. "It makes a difference whose baby has the measles."

Spending by New Deal Exceeds Big Receipts

Treasury figures for the present fiscal year, up to April 14, show that the Administration still is spending far more than it takes in. From July 1, 1935, to the date mentioned the Administration spent $1.74 for every dollar it received. Inevitably, under such a ratio of spending and income, the Administration's deficit mounted still higher and the public debt was increased by more than 21/2 billions of dollars. Expenditures, deficits and public debts all rose in spite of the fact that receipts from taxes thus far this fiscal year have exceeded those of the same period of last year by $220,000,-000. The Government is thus going further and further into the red and borrowing billions to make up the difference.

Increasing taxes have been made necessary by the Administration spending programs and Congress has been in a quandary as to how to get additional large sums from the people without making the operation too apparent. Even a back-breaking tax plan that would pay off present deficits and reduce the public debt will be only a start. The Administration increased its expenditures by more than $325,000,000 in the first nine and one-half months of this fiscal year. So long as expenditures continue to exceed receipts the necessity for more taxes will continue, economists say, and no progress will have been made toward putting the nation's finances in order.

FEAR DEATH LOSS IN MANY FLOCKS

Stringent Methods Must Be Used, Specialist Says.

By H. H. Alp, Poultry Extension Specialist College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Although the outlook for poultry and eggs is mostly favorable for the first half of the year, heavy mortality losses still loom as a threat to the poultry

Some flock owners last year lost as high as 47 per cent of their mature flocks, and there will be ruinous losses again this season unless poultrymen adopt more stringent methods than they have used in the past.

The drive against poultry mortality losses might well start with greater alertness on the part of flock owners in detecting birds out of condition, in destroying and removing quickly from the pen all sick birds and in a real appreciation of cleanliness.

Certainly drugs and so-called remedies have failed to solve the problem, much as they have been used.

There is too much "doctoring" of sick chickens and not enough clean. feeders, waterers and houses. It is useless, of course, to clean the droppings board and leave a side rail to a feeder or waterer filthy dirty. Dirt around the feed and water helps to give the birds every possible chance of thorough exposure to any disease or parasite present.

Faulty sanitation or flock management is probably not wholly responsible for heavy mortality losses now being suffered by flock owners. There is considerable evidence that certain strains of poultry may be lacking in. vitality. Future breeding may need to be done more with two-year-old stock and less with yearlings. More consideration might well be given to the effect of breeding on mortality.
