CARROLL COUNTY'S CENTENNIAL

Will be Celebrated with an Appropriate Program.

Carroll County was formed on January 19, 1837, and its government was established on the first Monday of April of that year. It is appropriate that adequate preparation should begin for a public celebration of the approaching One Hundredth Anniversary of Carroll County's creation. During this period, Carroll County has advanced in population, wealth and general prosperity. Within her borders there has been a notable progress in the arts and sciences, in commerce, manufacture, agriculture and business and in education and in transportation. Through the industry, frugality, capacity, intelligence and character of her inhabitants, Carroll County has achieved high ranks among the counties of the State and of the Nation. Nowhere will there be found greater beauty of scenery, healthfulness, well being and contentment. For these great natural and acquired blessings, gratitude to a beneficent Providence, and to the sturdy and admirable labors of past generations makes this Centennial an opportune occasion to commemorate the debt to our forebears and to confirm a resolution to dedicate ourselves to the service and welfare of Carroll County.

For the purpose of starting the preparatory work required creditably to celebrate the Centennial, it will be necessary to secure funds, which the County Commissioners believe the citizens of the County will wish to raise; to determine upon the nature and time of the memorial ceremonies and celebrations; to name the various committees to secure the co-operation of all civic, social, commercial and municipal bodies and other organizations, so that a general participation of the body of the entire county be assured, and every interest be represented; and, generally, to do all those things incident to the success of the occasion, the County Commissioners of Carroll Co., do appoint as a General Committee of the Centennial celebration, with full power to act in all matters, the following persons:

COUNTY WELFARE ACTIVITIES REPORT.

Various Cases and Expenditures Stated in Itemized Form.

Members of the Carroll County Welfare Board met in regular session on Friday afternoon, July 3, at the local offices. It was decided that monthly meetings, hereafter, will be held on the first Wednesday of each month instead of the first Friday.

The Welfare Board is now caring for: 246 Old Age assistance cases; 18 aid to dependent children cases; 17 blind cases; 27 general public assistance cases.

Assistance to all the above mentioned categories, in a recent month, not including administration, amounted to $4,340.17. During the same month; 12 counties spent less than Carroll; 10 spent more, the highest expenditure being $21,024.13.

The burden of direct relief has shifted from State and Federal governments to the counties themselves. Since April 1, 1936, all money spent for this type of relief has been provided by the counties or by Baltimore City.

The special legislative session levied taxes for social security, but funds from these sources have not yet become available for direct relief. They are expected to become available in August or September.

Of Carroll County's 27 relief cases in June; 12 are persons who have been badly crippled for years, some bedfast, or have been helplessly paralyzed; 6 have not yet reached the age for Old Age assistance; 2 were recovering from illness; 2 men who would be employable, but for the fact that each has one limb amputated; 1 widow whose earnings must be supplemented; 1 mother with two small children, not eligible for aid to dependent children funds; 3 families with employable members to whom help was given one or two weeks in the month:

a. Man ill with flu; wife just returned from hospital.

b. Temporary assistance until family of six could return to their home county.

c. Assistance to family of seven until husband secured work.

The month of July was begun with 24 persons needing general assistance. A report on Old Age Pensions revealed that:

1—6 new applications had been approved and granted in June.

2—21 applications were withdrawn or rejected.

3—18 applications will be investigated within 10 days or 2 weeks.

4—17 applications received during May and June, unless very urgent, will not be investigated for 8 to 10 weeks.

A citizen's committee has been appointed by Chairman, Lewis H. Brumbaugh, to work with a committee already appointed by the Carroll County Medical Society to consider several proposed health projects for the county. Members of the citizen's committee are:

Langdon Burns, Claude Kimmy, Alfred Nussbaum, Albert Mitten, Edwin S. Gehr, Mrs. Esther K. Brown, Miss Bonnie Custerbender, Mrs. Frank Myers, Rev. Orris G. Robinson. The Board adjourned at 4:00 P. M.

A DISAPPOINTING MAP.

A lengthy write-up in one of the issues of the Baltimore Sun, last week attracted our attention, as it referred to a map of Maryland and Baltimore published by the Tourist Development Bureau of the Baltimore Association of Commerce.

We promptly applied for a supply of the maps for distribution, expecting something up-to-date and complete in the way of a state map. Their arrival dispelled our anticipation.

The artist omitted such Carroll County towns as New Windsor, Union Bridge, Taneytown, Hampstead, Manchester, Woodbine, Union Mills, Silver Run, Keymar, Detour, and other smaller places. According to the map the only places in the county are Westminster, Mt. Airy, Sykesville and Keysville.

All other counties in the state were treated in like manner. The map of Baltimore is largely limited to the business section of the city, and the main highways entering it.

THE PLAY GROUND OPENED.

The play ground sponsored by the Parents' Club, was opened on Thursday morning, July 2nd., met an excellent attendance. The site is a large grassy plot, with both sunshine and shade, in the center of the town, away from street traffic and dangers. We invite mothers and fathers to come with their little ones, and spend a time watching and enjoying their play. The following is an addition list of contributions.

The sand for the large sand box was contributed by the Taneytown Grain and Supply Co.
Rev. and Mrs. Bready $1.00
Central Garage 1.00
Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dern .50
Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Ohler .50
Sherman's Store 1.00
J. Albert Angell 1.00

RECEIVED TOO LATE.

Notwithstanding our warning notice in our issue of June 26, several letters from correspondents, and other communications, were received last Thursday afternoon and Friday morning, after The Record had been printed. Following our custom, we are not publishing the correspondence in this issue, as the items of news are out of date.

SHENANDOAH NATIONAL PARK

One of the Nation's Most Attractive Resorts.

Accepting for the nation from the State of Virginia one of the most beautiful natural parks in the country, President Roosevelt formally dedicated Shenandoah National Park last week (Friday, July 3) before more than 50,000 people.

An 84 mile drive from the Nation's Capital will take the motorist to the national park which is expected to become, within a short time, one of the nation's great public playgrounds. In two hours, one can go from the hustle and bustle and excitement of Washington into a paradise of waterfalls and streams, mountains, valleys and canyons, meadows, hollows and gaps of astonishing beauty and variety.

Within the 176,429 acres of the Virginia parkland are facilities for camping, pic-nicing, horseback riding, hiking and fishing. Guard rails insure safety on the spectacular mountain roads. Fire hazards have been eliminated as nearly as possible. Picturesque trails have been cleared. Tables and benches have been provided at places that look out on the most interesting vistas.

But, alluring as these attractions may be, it is the motor trip along Skyline Drive that will prove the high point of fascination for most visitors. Magnificent panoramas are unfolded for the motorist on the drive—a broad, smooth, macadamized highway that runs along the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains at altitudes ranging from 3,000 to 3,500 feet. Numerous overlooks and parking areas open vistas of the Shenandoah Valley—the cradle of the nation—twenty-five miles wide at some points.

There is the picture from Skyland, the highest point on the drive, of Hawkbill and Stony Man Mountains, the highest peaks in Northern Virginia. There is the lovely Cascade Falls, trembling down White Oak Canyon. There is the wild Rapid Run made famous by President Hoover as the site for his summer camp.

Attractions that will fascinate the geologist, the bird lover, the historian await the visitor to the Shenandoah National Park. Geologically, the region embraced by the park is said to be one of the most interesting in the State. More than 40 species of birds have been counted in the park within a single season. No matter from what angle the park is approached there are reminders of battle and marches and of such leaders as Jackson, Sheridan and Lee.

The section boasts a rich variety of trees and flowers. There are hemlocks, pines and cedars, oaks, hickories, birches and maples; and in their seasons may be seen the blossoms of dogwood, the trailing arbutus, mountain laurel and goldenrod. Trillium, honeysuckle, violets, wild roses and azaleas are found in great profusion.

In going his way along the drive, the traveler will come upon an intriguing peoples. For throughout the park are primitive shacks of the Blue Ridge mountain folk, many of them believed captured British soldiers who were quartered near Charlottesville during the Revolution.

The park, which will be maintained as an all-the-year-round recreational area, is under the supervision of the National Park Service of the Department of Interior.

FOURTH OF JULY CASES.

Ralph H. Waltman, Westminster, died Monday evening at Maryland University Hospital from the results of an automobile accident near Pikesville early Sunday morning. The driver of the car was Jesse Hoffman, and Hayes Brown, Westminster, was also in the party that was on the way home from Baltimore. The car left the road and crashed into a telephone pole. Both Brown and Hoffman were injured. Waltman was about 23 years of age.

George Trish, Hanover, was drowned in Conecago Creek, near New Oxford, on Saturday, while trying to save 10-year-old Catherine Doris Smith, of New Oxford, from drowning. The water was high and the stream swift due to rains on Friday night. Both were good swimmers.

Trish had just arrived at the creek with his wife and three children, and on creams for help being heard he removed his shoes and plunged into the water. A strong undercurrent is supposed to have prevented him from saving both himself and the girl.

Four persons were injured when an auto driven by Mervin Mummert, Route 2, Taneytown, turned over several times on the Littlestown-Gettysburg road last Saturday night, and five persons were injured, four of them requiring hospital treatment. Mummert was driving south, and in attempting to pass a car went off the left side of the road and rolled over.

The Fourth of July, this year, listed the largest number of deaths—391—since 1931 when 483 died. Complete reports will increase the number for this year. Motor vehicle accidents accounted for 232 of the deaths, with drowning cases second.

John Wills, near Emmitsburg, was found guilty, Monday night by Justice Ecker, in Thurmont, and sentenced to the House of Correction for 3 years for the larceny and unauthorized use of an auto owned by Francis S. K. Mathews, of Emmitsburg. The theft occurred on July 4th. He had driven the car a short distance when he crashed into a telephone pole across from the old Emmitt House, badly damaging it. Wills is said to have a long-time bad record with the use of automobiles.

WESTERN FARMERS AND DROUGHT LOSSES.

Great Heat and Drought Covers a very wide area.

Farmers in Maryland—in most of the East, in fact—are fortunate. They have little cause for complaint of any kind connected with crops. They are actually profiting in the rising price of wheat, because of the extensive crop failures throughout most of the western wheat growing states. Conditions in the Dakotas, Nebraska, Montana and Minnesota, are especially serious, due to the great heat and long continued drought.

Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and other states are also heavy sufferers. Naturally the wheat market reflects the situation, the Chicago price advancing to within a fraction of $1.10. In addition, the loss in cattle has been immense, and grasshoppers are adding to the seriousness of the losses.

The Agricultural Department and other Federal agencies are of course extending aid. Already about 100,000 families in the drought area are receiving help in the way of losses and employment, and this must be kept up for a long while. Farmers are being given work on PWA and AAA projects.

Heat records are ranging from the 90's to 106, 112, and 119 degrees, the highest being in North Dakota. In the Chicago area, on Tuesday over 20 deaths due to heat were reported. The total drought losses are estimated at around $300,000,000.

Scattered showers in the Chicago area, on Thursday, brought some relief from suffering, but the destruction of crops continues. In some sections the farmers slept during the day and harvested their wheat by moonlight, rather than take the chance of sun strokes.

Rains have also fallen in parts of North Dakota, Minnesota and Iowa, while a few small areas had regular downpours. Along with the rains the market prices on wheat and corn dropped, showing how sympathetic prices are with even slight weather changes.

The heat wave drifted over the week progressed, breaking a record of sixty-five years with electrical storms that caused estimated fire losses of $100,000.

The loss to wheat alone in South Dakota is now placed at $140,000,000, and in Wyoming to various crops at $5,000,000.

PROF. WOODEN ON A CRUISE.

John F. Wooden, Jr., Principal of the local high school will sail from New York, on Saturday for Europe. Mr. Wooden is traveling and studying in the interest of his own work. His itinerary includes a short Mediterranean cruise. Stops will be made at Azores, Lisbon, Portugal, Gibraltar, Algiers, North Africa and Palermo, Sicily. On the continent, he will visit Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Holland, Belgium, France and England.

For information concerning the school, Mr. Guy P. Bready should be seen during Mr. Wooden's absence.

MARYLAND'S WHEAT CROP.

According to reliable estimates obtainable, Maryland's wheat crop practically escaped the drought losses that have affected so many states. A reliable estimate now places the crop at 7,750,000 bushels, in the state.

Frederick county perhaps heads the list for average bushels per acre, some yields being as high as 32 bushels. Carroll county reports numerous cases of 30 bushels, but the average will be considerably under that, perhaps around 20 bushels. All reports show the grade to be high for milling purposes.

The corn crop, as yet, does not warrant such expectations as for wheat, as field conditions vary widely in the some localities, and even on the same farms.

MORE INFORMATION CONCERNING COUNTY FINANCES.

We were aware that our statement last week concerning the tax rate, and loans paid off, was incomplete. We publish the following as being more in detail.

Dear Mr. Editor: Your short article in last week's issue as to the tax rate and amount of bonds paid off, is correct. Fully aware that county statements are complicated and often not read, may I say that there will be paid off in addition to the $25,000 mentioned above the following items:

$58,000 of the new school building loan; $15,000 of Manchester school; $16,488 of Mt. Airy balance; $2,000 of road bond issue.

Last year the amount paid off was approximately the same plus the repairs to the Court House.

Sincerely yours,
NORMAN R. HESS.

ANOTHER "DRY" WAVE.

Another "dry" record is reported in a gain of 149 percent in dry towns during 1935, distinct headway having been made in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. Figures are now published showing that in 1935 out of 1838 counties 583 voted dry, and in another survey just made 61 towns and 183 counties have voted dry.

The anti-liquor organizations are confident of having nation-wide prohibition by 1945 according to the present trend.

BLUE RIDGE RALLY TO BE HELD ON COLLEGE CAMPUS.

The Greater Blue Ridge Club is sponsoring three rallies this summer—July 12, in New Windsor, July 19, at Accident, Garrett Co., Md., and July 26, at Eastern, Md. The 1st. of these rallies will take place on the college campus, on Sunday afternoon, July 12, at 3:00 o'clock. All alumni, patrons, friends and prospective students of Blue Ridge College are urged to attend.

A very fine program has been arranged. R. Paul Smith, of Hagerstown, who has recently become a member of the Board of Trustees will give the address of the afternoon. John Addison Englar, baritone, Baltimore, will present a group of solos, and Miss Violet Gipson, of Queen Anne, and Miss Ruth Ann Nussbaum, of New Windsor, will sing a soprano and mezzo-soprano duet. There will be a humorous reading by Wilson Herrera, of the Class of '35. An Alumni Male Quartet will also be heard several times on the program. The personnel of this quartet is Nevin Fisher and Wilson Herrera, tenors, John Young, Jr., baritone, and LeRoy Scharon, bass. In case of rainy weather, the program will be held in the auditorium.

THE MARKER REUNION.

The annual Marker Reunion will be held Sunday, July 12th., at Mt. Tabor Park, Rocky Ridge. Wm. H. Marker, of Tyrone, is President of the association; Howard C. Marker, Middletown, Vice-President; Upton Marker, Tyrone, Treas.; Merwyn C. Fuss, Taneytown, Secretary.

THE LINWOOD CAMP.

Replying to Mr. Gorsuch's inquiry in his last week's "First Page Editorial" in the Westminster Times, we give the information that the camp meeting near Linwood was first held in 1871, in the month of August, but was not always held at the same spot. It was first held in a woods belonging to Ephraim Garner; two or three years later it was held in Engleman's woods, and finally in the woods owned by Samuel Haines.

For quite a number of years it was very largely attended, and we think was held annually until about 1900, under the auspices of the Uniontown Church of God.

Random Thoughts

CHRONIC OBJECTORS.

If we do not like a certain thing, that is no reason why we should dislike those who do like that certain thing. The woman who is said to have "kissed a cow" was within her rights—especially if it wasn't our cow—and even if it was, it should be left to the cow to do the objecting.

This is something like the correct conclusion regarding our likes and dislikes in general. If we see a spot of tar on a sidewalk, why not walk aside from it instead of trying to find out who was responsible for the spot, and perhaps find a law that fixes a fine for spilling the tar.

For if we busy ourselves with the movements of others, when derelictions or habits are not actually detrimental to the public welfare, it would be best to pass by on the other side, instead of calling the police.

There is a sense, of course, in which peaceful men and women should act as non-commissioned police. There are habits, intemperances and immorality, that require resistance by the strength of decency and morality, but the majority of objects we have in mind, or not of that class.

A chronic critic is himself or herself an object of suspicion. We find such in the church, in society at large, and in common everyday politics. And, they are usually known. Their excess of trivial criticism causes them to have only a small following. They are practically a harmless common nuisance.

The "Franconia" World Cruise

(Prepared by request for The Carroll Record by Miss Carrie L. Mourer.)

PORT ELIZABETH AND DURBAN, SOUTH AFRICA. PART IV.

On the night of Feb. 7th, about 10 P. M., we rounded the Cape of Good Hope and sailed eastward, arriving at Port Elizabeth at 6 A. M., the second morning after.

We had a long drive through dairy farming country to Sea View, on the beach, returning along the ocean front. This coast is very picturesque and rugged and, at times, dangerous to shipping. There were the remains of several wrecks and the shore was strewn with lumber which no one was allowed to use.

Port Elizabeth, sometimes called the Liverpool of South Africa, is the second port in importance of this country. It is a hilly city, somewhat like Seattle, in its steps and terraces.

The General Motors have an assembling place here and it was reported that the Firestones were going to build a factory here.

We visited the famous Snake farm where five hundred snakes were being used for scientific purposes. The poison was being extracted from their fangs by having them bite through a rubber cover over a cup. This poison was sold for curing snake bite and epilepsy. Johannes, the black attendant, handled those poisonous reptiles as nonchalantly as if they had been so many ropes. He had been bitten sufficiently to be immune.

A day and a night from Port Elizabeth, north-eastward, and we reached Durban, in the State of Natal. This is a gay, colorful city with plenty of sunshine and an equable climate.

We had a lovely fifty mile drive in and around the city. Here are situated the largest drydocks in the Union. We drove thru a large animal and bird sanctuary and at one place the trees and roadway were filled with little gray and black monkeys, very clean looking. Berea Heights is the residential section and the streets were bordered by large poinciana and jacaranda trees, a beautiful sight when the scarlet and purplish blossoms are out.

The Botanical Gardens contained a great variety of shrubs and trees, the camphor trees being immense.

In an unfenced, vacant lot along one of the streets, Zebras were quietly grazing.

Durban is an up-to-date city with a long, beautiful water front lined with large hotels. The parks are lovely and spacious, containing gorgeous flowers and trees.

In the afternoon we were taken to a Zulu village, some distance from Durban. The kraals or huts (pronounced crawls) were made of sapling framework covered with long reeds and were round in shape like a huge raspberry. The interior was burned black from the fire in the center which burns day and night, the only opening being a low doorway. A few clay cooking vessels were the only furnishings except some matting on which these people sleep, naked, on the earthen floor.

We saw some native Zulu dances, performed by about fifty men. The chief of the tribe, distinguished by a circle of tiger skin around his head, gave the orders and led, all brandishing their cow hide or tiger skin shields and long spears. They wore G strings of beads with tails and feathers dangling down in front. The Zulu women formed the background. Most of them wore coverings of gay print over chest and middle. The married women wore their hair in an oblong shape at the back of the head, mixing the hair with mud and drawing it out into this knob. The engaged girls wear theirs in mud mixed strings down over their faces, a weird sight. Many strings of beads were worn and anklets of silver wire, sometimes extending to the knees. Around some of the necks we saw designs of bead work which we were told were love letters.

These Indians have large reservations, free, but the chief must pay a tax of about five dollars, annually. They sell baskets and bead work.

The next day, we went by train, seventy miles, to Pietermaritzburg, capital of Natal. This train was of the European variety and very comfortable. We were treated to mineral water and delicious little apples, on the way.

We went through the Valley-of-a-Thousand Hills, covered with verdure and banana groves and grazed on by hundreds of cattle. Most of the farming is done with oxen, four being hitched to a plow and as many as eighteen to a wagon. The thatched kraals prevailed and seemed to fit into the landscape so much more effectively than the more modern corrugated iron roofs.

We had luncheon at the main hotel and drove around the city and out to World View, 3600 ft. where we had a gorgeous view of miles of landscape.

We visited an interesting Dutch Museum and saw old costumes worn by the early settlers as well as a trekkers wagon 100 years old. We rode back a different way and saw a beautiful waterfall besides the kopjes (hills) and kloofs (sharp valleys), as in the morning.

On the third day we visited the Art Museum of Durban which was filled with beautiful paintings by native artists as well as reproductions of the world's best pictures.

Many Indians (Asiatic) live here and we enjoyed their Bazaar. Here men sat cross-legged, in their tiny shops, plying their trades: tailors, jewelers, basket makers and bead workers. We visited the Kaffer restaurant, too, but did not partake of their wares.

The ricksha men were the distinguishing feature of Durban! The rickshas looked like grown up, old-fashioned, baby buggies, with shafts. The men, who pulled these vehicles were especially got up. Their legs were painted in different designs with white paint to represent stockings. Tight fitting knee trousers and blouses of black constituted their array and on their heads they wore a huge fan shaped feather and bead head gear

Kept Macaroni a Secret

Naples was the center of macaroni manufacture for so many years that the Pompeian road leading into it was broken to bits by the continuous procession of wagons and trucks hauling in hard wheat and flour, says the European Cookbook for American Homes. The process for making macaroni was kept secret until the fourteenth century, when a Frenchman got hold of it and took it back to France with him.

Perce Rocher

The huge rock, Perce Rocher, is formed like a giant battleship moored in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and looms up formidably from the angry waters off the coast of Gaspe peninsula, with romantic Bonaventure island in the distance. This island was once the haunt of a privateer captain and is now a bird sanctuary, where many thousands of gulls, white gannets and cormorants find a refuge.

Success in Life

The success of life—the only success in the true sense—lies in its quality of living day by day, and not exclusively in its achievements, and still less in its acquisitions of possessions. We can live in aspirations, in good will, in generosity, in love, amid the most limited, narrow, and trying circumstances.—Lillian Whiting.

with several pairs of horns attached. They were a sight to behold!

The stores were up-to-date and housed in modern structures. We had luncheon, one day, at the Royal Hotel, a fine, modern place. On most days we returned to the ship for meals, and by this time we felt as if we were going back home.

In the country around Durban flourished large fields of sugar cane, this furnishing one of the chief industries of this section.

Many people from the interior come to Durban to spend the winter as our people go to Florida or California to avoid the cold weather. We left Durban on Feb. 14 and had a Valentine party on shipboard that night.

The development of special miniature-sized loud speaker apparatus by the Bell Telephone Laboratories enables groups of people widely separated to be united by what is known as a conference telephone service. This service, described by J. F. D. Hoge, telephone laboratories engineer, enables a telephone conversation to be held simultaneously with several people at one or both ends of a telephone line.

The equipment consists of a small compact loud speaker set, which is housed in a wooden cabinet. The total weight is approximately eleven pounds, but it has sufficient sound output to serve a group of from 75 to 100 people under favorable room conditions.

Two forms of service are available, according to Mr. Hoge in the Bell Laboratories Record. In one, the telephone line may be connected to either the telephone set or the loud speaker. This service is more applicable where an address of some length is to be received over the telephone line during which time it is not desired to use the line for talking in the other direction. This loud speaker set and associated apparatus may be installed on a permanent basis or for temporary use as occasion demands. Another connection may be established so that two-way conversations can be held just as in everyday telephone calls.

Conference telephone service with the use of loud speakers has a particular appeal to business executives who wish to speak directly without change or emphasis with groups of people.

Employees, for example, may hear the executive's voice directly as though he were speaking to them personally. In this way his personality and enthusiasm come to them just as if he were in the same room. This type of loud speaker was developed in 1933, and is now widely used, according to telephone officials.

FACTS AND FIGURES ON YOUR TELEPHONE

BY Elmer Hill

With thirty-seven ship-to-shore telephone calls in a single day, all previous records were broken with the sailing of the Queen Mary on her maiden voyage to New York as the giant liner steamed up the North River. Before the ship left Quarantine a total of seventy-four telephone conversations, a number far exceeding the total of any previous Atlantic crossing since the inauguration of this service, December 9, 1929, had been made. In addition, Bell System radio telephone stations inaugurated more than thirty broadcasts from the ship over the networks serving the United States.

Telephone conversations with the ship linked passengers with telephones on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, in the Middle West and in Canada. Many of the calls were made from the staterooms of the passengers, 500 of which are equipped with telephones over which radio connections may be had. In other cases passengers talked from public telephones located here and there on the ship.

The first call was established when the Queen Mary was a few hours out of Southampton. Telephone calls from and to the ship continued with increasing frequency with the result that before sighting the coast of America it was necessary to set up two circuits connecting with the Bell System radio telephone station to handle the calls, which included five connections to London through the New York switchboard.

The Queen Mary brings the total of ocean liners having telephone connection with the Bell System up to nineteen. This comprises practically all of the large transatlantic liners, including the Empress of Britain of the Canadian Pacific. This ship likewise has ship-to-shore service right into its cabins, which keeps its passengers in touch with home and office not only on transatlantic voyages, but on its annual cruises around the world.

Columbus Cathedral

The Columbus cathedral, Havana, is situated in Cathedral square at the foot of Empedrado street. Columbus cathedral was the center of religious ceremonies held under the Spanish domination. It maintains as its most valuable tradition the fact that it held within its walls the remains of Christopher Columbus—removed to Seville when Spanish rule ended in Cuba. There is a contention, of course, that the real Columbus relics are buried in Santo Domingo and that those that were once interred here were the relics of Diego Columbus, brother of the great navigator.

THE NEGRO'S NEED.

A Birmingham, (Ala.) judge recently stated, "No Negro has ever been brought into my court who had passed the sixth grade in school." Unfortunately too many never get the chance to make any grade adequately. In the summer quarterly number of the American Scholar, Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, characterizes the support given to Negro education in America as "grudging and unfair."

During the financial stress of recent years, several southern states felt compelled to cut educational appropriations to the bone. What this meant to schools for Negro children is indicated in this statement by Mr. Embree:

"The average for all southern states for which figures are available is an annual expenditure of $12.57 per Negro pupil, as contrasted with $44.31 per white pupil."

The value of school plant and equipment he places in the ratio of $37 per Negro pupil to $157 per pupil in the white schools. "Poorly trained and abominably paid teachers" and shortened school terms complete a doleful picture.

Prejudice used to say that education makes the Negro more susceptible to criminal impulse. The Alabama judge's experience disproves that. Tuskegee and other southern institutions are eloquent testimony of what has been done for the Negro, and also of his desire and ability to absorb education. But even several swallows do not make a summer, and a new generation in the South protests that a few halls of higher learning for its colored population do not make an ideal scholastic system.—Christian Science Monitor.

TANEYTOWN 4—MIDDLETOWN 2.

Last Saturday's game was not an easy one to win. The Middletowners played well, but not quite well enough; and could not collect hits. Rommel was out of condition with a sore arm, but showed his best form in the last half of the game, and had 12 strike-outs to his credit.

Middletown started out like winners in the first inning with a single and a base on balls, placing runner on third, but two strike-outs in a row ended their chance. Taneytown on five bunched singles in the 4th., and eight men at bat could score only two runs.

The next scoring was in the seventh when Hitchcock hit a homer, and Riffe who had reached first on a scratch hit, scored on a 3-bagger by Blettnier.

The ninth inning showed a bungle rarely seen in baseball. With the score 4-0, and Middletown at bat for its last chance Remsburg, was presented with a pass to first that led to the occupancy of 3rd. base; then came two strike-outs. Catcher Wildasin thinking the last third out, threw the ball to a Taneytown outfielder as a keepsake, and naturally Ramsburg trotted home with the first tally. Rudy then connected for a home run; but the next man up made an even dozen of strike outs for Rommel.

JAPANESE BEETLE TRAPS.

In co-operation with local officials, the U. S. Department of Agriculture is now placing men in the field to ascertain the spread of the Japanese beetle. This insect is a pest of economic importance in the eastern section of this country where it has become established. It feeds as a grub on roots of grasses and other plants, and in the adult stage on foliage, flowers, and fruit of a variety of plants. Metal traps are used to capture the adult. A trap of the type most frequently used is pictured. While placing and in inspecting traps it will be necessary to enter private property, and the co-operation of the public is solicited. Police officials have been notified of the nature of the work. The inspectors bear credentials which will be produced on request.

The Japanese beetle spends most of its life cycle in the ground as a small white grub. However, in the summer, the adult is present and it is in this stage that the more serious damage is done. The adult is about the size of the common potato beetle, but is colored differently. The head and thorax are green and the hard wing covers brown. Positive identification are the five white spots down each side of the abdomen and two white spots at the tip. First appearance is generally noted on grape leaves or in the blossoms of flowering plants. The adult does not eat large holes in the leaves, but feeds between the veins giving the leaf a lace-like appearance.

A trap consists of a four-winged baffle, mounted on top of a funnel, to the bottom of which it is attached, a receptacle. The assembly is suspended from a wire upright which is set in the ground. A portion of the baffle is cut out and in this is placed the bait dispenser. From this block is vaporized the odor of the chemical attractants. The beetles attracted by this odor fly against the baffles and fall down into the receptacle where they are trapped.

Employees engaged in this survey do not have specific information about plant pests in general. Residents should direct requests for plant pest information to the State Department of Agriculture. For additional information about the Japanese beetle address U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, Glenwood Avenue & Henry Street, Bloomfield, New Jersey.

Civilization requires slaves. Human slavery is wrong, insecure and demoralizing. On mechanical slavery, on the slavery of the machine, the future of the world depends.—Oscar Wilde.

The earliest use of the phrase "almighty dollar," in literature is believed to be by Washington Irving in "Wolfert's Roost, a Creole Village," in 1937. The idea, however, is older than this.

There are two important words beginning with the letter "d"—debt and deficit. Instead of watching too closely our p's and q's, we should pay more attention to our d's.

SONG AND DANCE

The weary theatrical agent sat back in his chair. He had given auditions to at least twenty young women who wished to adorn his chorus, and he was tired.

Then came a timid knock on the door, and a rather faded young woman entered.

"Excuse me, sir," she said, "but—" "All right," he said, resigned. "Sing something."

"But—" "No voice? Can you dance?"

"No, I blooming well can't," she snapped. "But if you'll stop being funny I'll start scrubbing the floor. That's what I came in for."

Going Jimmy One Better

Brown was taking his boy through the zoo.

When they came to the gorilla, the youngster asked, "What is that, daddy?"

"That's one of our ancestors, my boy."

Grandmother, to Deborah's intense surprise, was already up.

Almost before Deborah had told a maid that they were ready for their breakfast, Pilar came downstairs, with her red beret on her smooth dark head and her bag in her gloved hand. "I find that I must go back at once to San Francisco, Mrs. Larned. I'm terribly sorry to go. Good-by," she said firmly.

"I can't think of it," Grandmother protested. "You must have breakfast." She turned to the maid. "Joan, tell the cook that we want a tray of coffee and toast as quickly as it can be prepared."

Pilar glanced at her watch. "Oh, very well," she said, a little ungraciously. "I'm anxious to get home by night," she explained.

Tubby was the last one down. "Well," he said jovially, "here we all are, eh? What've you got your hat on for, Pilar? You're not leaving us, surely?"

Pilar gave him a disdainful glance. "I suppose you'll be heart-broken."

"Well, you know how it is," Tubby said cheerfully.

The group had just moved out to the veranda when there came the roar of a laboring small engine from the road at the left.

A small battered roadster turned in at the gate. With a splash and clatter of gravel it came to a stop.

Deborah's heart dropped like lead at the sight of the driver.

As the car stopped, Bryn rose, walked down the steps and stopped. His eyes met the triumphant eyes of the man driving the other car. For a moment, Bryn and Graham stood facing each other, Graham half out of his car. Then, without a word, perfectly calm, Bryn turned toward the veranda.

Deborah lifted her eyes and met Bryn's in helpless anguish. Bryn was smiling at her, a steady, warm, comforting smile that seemed to tell her that everything was all right, that she had nothing to fear. She could not understand. He came up the steps and stood beside Grandmother's chair. Tubby and Simon were standing helplessly on the grass. Sally and Madeline had retreated to the doorway, and stood there, hand in hand, watching Grandmother, too. And Pilar, still and unmoving, sat in her chair behind the vines.

Stuart Graham, with that black smile of his, came across the grass from the driveway. He swung his wide shoulders confidently, and Deborah wished wildly that Bryn would go out and do something to him . . . anything . . . to stop that confident, steady advance, to wipe off that triumphant smile, to save Grandmother. But it was too late.

He stopped on the lowest step. He faced Grandmother. He bowed to her.

"Good-morning," he said brightly. Grandmother inclined her head.

"Good-morning," she replied. "You are Mrs. Larned," he stated.

"I think you will have heard of me, and from me. My name is Graham."

"Indeed?" Grandmother murmured, entirely calm. Her pulse beat was swift, but steady.

He stiffened at Grandmother's "Indeed?" "Stuart Graham," he repeated distinctly. "From Boston."

Grandmother inclined her head. "How do you do," she said coolly, with perfect self-possession, perfectly unmoved. "I knew your grandparents, I believe. And your father, too. I hope they are quite well?"

"Say," Graham demanded roughly of Bryn. This isn't Mrs. Larned herself. It's somebody dressed up to look like her. What're you trying to do, put something else over on me?"

"I am Mrs. Larned," Grandmother said quietly. "You are Stuart Graham. I quite understand. Is there something I can do for you? Your father, as I remember him, was a gentleman, and he was my friend. Can I help you in any way for his sake?"

"You are Mrs. Larned?" he asked, incredulously. "You are Mrs. Larned, and you sit there as calm as ice when I tell you that I am Stuart Graham, and that this . . ." he indicated Bryn contemptuously, "that this fellow is nothing more than an impostor, a man who's been taking advantage of you, who's married your granddaughter without your consent?"

"This is all you have to say to me?" Grandmother asked. "Nothing that you have said seems to me particularly interesting, or of any importance. I understand. And what, then?"

Graham stood foolishly for a moment, regarding her with disbelieving eyes. Then "This is a fine kettle of fish," he said. "Your husband took every precaution to see that Deborah and I should marry each other, and without any compunction whatever you let her marry another man. What about me? I've been banking on marrying her, all my life!"

"I am sure that banking is a very well chosen word," Grandmother commented.

He flushed darkly. "That's all very well, I suppose you realize that she doesn't get the money, now that she's married this smart guy who's got you would around his finger? I suppose you can afford to snap your fingers at that, at deliberately throwing away everything your family ever had?"

"Mr. Graham, I cannot think that this is any of your affair," said Grandmother, quietly. "I am sorry, but I cannot possibly see why you concern yourself with this matter. It no longer is any concern of yours. Your interest, it seems to me, is a trifle belated."

Grandmother put Deborah's hand firmly away from her, and stood up. "And I will add, now that I have seen you, that I shall thank God every moment of the remainder of my life that it is none of your concern, that when you had the opportunity to make it so, you thought us beneath your respect. I would rather have starved, and Deborah with me, than to have her marry you. I would rather see Deborah where her mother is, in her grave, than in the hands of such a man as you are."

Graham drew back. "You believe anything you're told, don't you?" he sneered. "I suppose you think this is a very romantic marriage, this match between the girl and a young rolling-in-gold millionaire, this James Weldon Shipley Brynildson, Third, who pretends to fall in love with your precious granddaughter and marries her at sight. Well, let me tell you, it isn't half as romantic as it looks. Do you know what he is? He's nothing but a cheap adventurer, that's all, going around the world buying thrills with his money. This is a new one, this is. He hasn't done this before. But wait . . . when he's tired of his new toy, then you'll see what'll happen. He'll drop her like a wrung mop-rag."

"That's enough," Bryn said sharply, and stepped forward. He turned to Grandmother. "Is there anything further you wish to say to him?" he asked her quietly.

"Nothing, my boy," Grandmother answered steadily, still standing proudly. "Then," Bryn said directly to Graham, "on your way. Go on," he said between his teeth, "if you know what's good for you."

Graham backed off precipitately. "Just a minute," Tubby said softly. "Where did you get all your information about our hero?"

"It's none of your damn business," Graham said.

"Let him go," Bryn said sharply to Tubby. "It's obvious, isn't it?"

Pilar, back in the shadows, stirred. With a set frozen face she rose, walked past Grandmother and Deborah and Bryn, standing together at the top of the steps, and past Graham staring at her. She went across the grass and got into her car. She started the motor. The car turned on two wheels, scraped Graham's fender, and darted off, without a backward glance from Pilar.

The morning, Bryn discovered, had somehow whirled itself away. Pilar was gone; Graham was gone. Tubby and Madeline had gone wandering off into the woods, with an apple apiece, and an injunction from Sally not to return until Tubby could look at Madeline without that dazed expression. Sally herself had taken a cushion out to the lawn after lunch, with that avowed intention of getting another layer of sun-tan, but she had promptly gone to sleep there in the heat, and Simon had carried out an umbrella and erected it over her to keep her from burning. Grandmother was asleep, too, on the couch before the open window in the sitting room. Bryn left the room softly, and shut the door behind him; and then he went on with his search for Deborah.

He went down the path toward the brook with long, quick steps, and came at last to the solid ring of trees that formed the back of Deborah's most hidden sanctuary.

Bryn rapped lightly on the tree trunk under his hand. She turned, quickly, and looked up, her eyes dark and still full of dreams, her mouth red and soft. Bryn stood between the two trees, and just outside them. "May I come in, Deborah?" he asked.

She dropped her lashes. "If you . . . wish," she said in a low voice.

He squeezed through the opening and came down the slope toward her. She was seated in the hollow like a throne, with a level bank to sit on and a sloping bank covered with thick green grass. She did not speak. Bryn went down the slope and came to a halt below her.

Deborah would not look up. Bryn moved nearer and dropped down a yard away, his eyes upon her. "Haven't you forgiven me," Bryn asked at last, gently, "for not telling you that Grandmother knew? I told her on that ride."

"You did try to tell me."

"Tell me what's troubling you, Deborah. All the fears and worries are gone, dear."

She caught her lower lip between two white teeth. She shook her head. Bryn moved closer to her. He tried to take her hands, but she pulled them away.

She swallowed. Then, "I wish you'd go away," she said under her breath. "Go away?"

"The others are going today. After dinner. You could go with them."

"Go away, Deborah? Go away from you, you mean? Leave you here? Go back to San Francisco?"

She nodded, her eyes on the leaf.

Bryn put his face down into his hands. After a long time he said, slowly, "I don't understand, Deborah. This morning you . . . why, you gave me this flower!" he said, touching it. "I thought you were beginning to care a little about me."

She did not reply.

He looked down at Deborah's bent head. "That's final, then?" he asked quietly. She did not answer.

"Sorry," he said after a moment. "I suppose I was a fool to think that you could possibly care about me. You're so exquisite, and so fine, and you're not made out of ordinary stuff like the rest of us. I might have known from the beginning that it wasn't any use. I think I did know, Deborah, so you needn't reproach yourself."

She was gazing up at him, still with that anguished look in her eyes. Bryn managed a smile. He held his hand out. "Shake hands?" he inquired. "If you don't mind, Deborah, I think I'll go now instead of waiting until tonight."

She got to her feet slowly. Her face was as white as chalk. She put her hand in his. "Good-by," she whispered, and he stood for a moment looking into her eyes, then turned away.

"No," Deborah said clearly. "No. It isn't any use. I can't let you go." She was beside him, her hands on his arms, her face upheld to his. "I can't let you go," she said. "I don't care what you think about me. I don't care if I am a new kind of toy to you. I don't care if this is only a part of an adventure to you, an adventure that will be over . . . tomorrow, or in just a little while. I don't care about anything, or what happens to me, only I can't let you go away from me. I haven't got any pride or any strength left." Bryn stood, motionless, staring down at her in bewilderment. "Don't you understand?" she cried again. "I . . . I love you."

"Love me?" he repeated incredulously.

"You mean," Bryn repeated, with dawning understanding, "you mean, you love me?"

She lifted her wet lashes and looked at him. With a little groan he moved his arms at last, and closed them tight around her. He bent his head, and put his lips to her eyelids.

"Deborah."

She turned her head, slowly, and looked up at him. A flood of color swept over her face. He smiled tenderly down at her. "You funny little chicken," he said. "Do you think it would be much of an adventure just to marry anybody, Deborah? Do you think I would have offered to marry just any girl at all who happened to be in your predicament? Not in this world, you foolish baby. The minute I saw you standing there in the office, Deborah, something said to me . . . there's your girl, Bryn, out of all the world. I was completely lost from that very first look, sweetheart, and I wasn't going to let you go no matter what happened."

"I was afraid to do anything at all for fear I'd lose you, and it's been just about as bad ever since we were married. You don't know how often I've gone out and cut firewood and hammered nails just to keep myself away from you."

Deborah turned and buried her face again in his shoulder.

He put a hand beneath her cheek, and turned her head again. His eyes looked down into hers, and gray clung to violet again, but there was a new expression in both. Then, slowly, he bent his head, and put his lips down to hers, so soft and young and innocent.

"Deborah," he said gently, "I love you. You're the only girl in the world, as far as I'm concerned, Deborah . . . will you be my wife? What I'm asking you now is whether or not you think that some time you might love me enough really to be my wife. I couldn't hope for so much yet, but later, when you get to know me better, and trust me more, do you think you could?"

She began to understand. "When you're a wife you think about . . . that is, about having children, don't you?" "If you want children."

"Well," Deborah said positively, "I do. There isn't any difficult about that. I've wanted them for years and years. I built this playhouse for them, long ago, for a little boy and a little girl." She looked at him and smiled. "So that's all right," she said.

"Yes," he said after a moment, "that seems to be all right. I think we could practically count on something like that eventually." He reached into his watch pocket and drew out a ring box. Then drew out the ring. He lifted Deborah's hand, and slowly took off her wedding ring. He slipped the new ring on the finger where the wedding ring had been, lifted the hand and put it to his lips. "That's your engagement ring, dear," he said.

Deborah looked down at it. It was a great gleaming pearl, flushed, the palest rose, and set exquisitely in thin gold filigree. "It's . . . lovely," she breathed.

"It was my mother's."

Deborah looked up at him.

"When you want your wedding ring," Bryn went on carefully, lifting a curl on her temple, "when you're sure of me, and positive that you're making no mistake, and when you get to know that you feel about me the way I feel about you—as nearly as you can, of course . . . and can't live without me, I'll be very glad to put it back on your finger. As far as I'm concerned, Deborah, I never did approve of long engagements."

It was time at last to say good-by to the guests. Sally and Madeline got into knitted dresses and Simon and Tubby into knickerbockers, and their bags were put into the car, and Grandmother had insisted on having Gary pack a basket of fruit for them and at last they were gone.

Grandmother went to bed early, tired from a hard day. Deborah and Bryn sat near the door, and looked across at the moon. "I can't believe that you're real, and that you love me, and that we're here together, alone," he said. "Tell me again, Deborah."

She told him again, and when Deborah looked at him she knew that she loved him for always, and when he spoke his voice rang in her heart.

After a long time he rose. "You'd better get to bed, sweetheart," he said, and his voice held the deep low note in it she was beginning to understand. "It's been a long day for you, too."

"Are you coming up too?"

"I'll take you up. I'll carry you up," he decided, and slipped his arms beneath her. They reached the top at last, and were in her sitting room.

"Why did you wear your wedding dress tonight?" he asked.

"Oh," Deborah murmured, "just because. Do you . . . like it?"

"I'll never forget the first time I saw you in it, Deborah."

She looked up at him. "This is the last time I'm going to wear it," she said. "It's so delicate, and old. I'm going to save it for . . . that is, I'm going to save it."

"Aren't you going to wear it just once more, Deborah? When . . . just one more time, sweetheart?"

"No," she said under her breath. "This is the last."

He bent and kissed her white shoulder where the lace sleeves lay against it. "There, then," he said. "That's what I wanted to do the other time I saw it." Then he kissed her lips again, quickly. "Good-night," he said. "I've got to go."

"Why?"

"Oh, Deborah!"

"I don't know why," she said. "Simon stays with Sally. Always. Doesn't he?"

"Yes, but . . ."

She stood on tiptoe and put her arms about his neck.

"Oh, Bryn, you are a big silly," she said contentedly. She kissed the cleft in his chin, and put her palm against his cheek. "I thought you didn't approve of long engagements?"

Lesson for July 12

WITNESSING UNDER PERSECUTION

LESSON TEXT—Acts 3:1-4:31.
GOLDEN TEXT—We ought to obey God rather than men.—Acts 5:29.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Brave Peter and John.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Two Brave Preachers.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Two Brave Witnesses.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Courageous Witnessing for Christ.

In I Corinthians 1:21-23, Paul sets forth the attitude of the world toward Christ and his gospel. The one who preaches Christ crucified must expect opposition, and even violent persecution. This attitude of the world, instead of being a deterrent, should be a spur to activity.

I. Peter Healing the Lame Man (Acts 3:1-11).

The place (vv. 1, 2). It was at the beautiful gate which leads from the outer to the inner court of the temple. This helpless man had been placed at the entrance of the place of worship where he might receive the sympathetic attention of worshippers.

2. The man (v. 2). This beggar was infirm from his birth. He was not more than forty years old (Acts 4:22). When he saw Peter and John, he asked alms.

3. The method (vv. 3-8).
a. Gaining the man's attention (v. 4). Peter and John commanded him to look on them. He asked for money and got healing.

b. Peter commanded him in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth to rise and walk (v. 6). This was the very thing he had been unable to do all his life, but with the command went the ability to do.

c. Peter took him by the right hand (v. 7), gave impetus to his faith, not strength to his ankles.

4. The man's response (v. 8). Strength at once came to him. He stood, walked, leaped, and shouted praises to God.

5. The effect (vv. 9-11). The people were so filled with wonder that they ran together to behold this thing. There could be no question as to the genuineness of the miracle for the man had been a familiar figure for many years.

a. This helpless man had to be carried to the temple. Men and women out of Christ are so helpless that they need to be brought where the life of God can be applied to them.

b. Peter, taking the man by the hand, shows the manner of helping the lost. Christian witnesses should bring them to Jesus.

II. Peter Witnessing Before the Multitude (Acts 3:12-26).

Though this miracle directed the attention of the people to Peter and John, Peter seized the opportunity to present Christ to the people.

III. Peter in Prison for Christ's Sake (Acts 4:1-4).

1. The leaders. Both priests and Sadducees joined in this persecution (vv. 1, 2).

The priests were intolerant because these new teachers were encroaching upon their functions. The Sadducees did not believe in the resurrection, which was a vital part of the apostolic preaching.

2. The result (vv. 3, 4). Though they were held in bondage by chains, Christ continued to work. The number of believers greatly increased.

IV. Peter Witnessing Before the Sanhedrin (Acts 4:5-21).

1. The inquiry (vv. 5-7). The inquirers admitted the reality of the miracle but they wanted to know what it signified.

2. Peter's answer (vv. 8-12). With stinging sarcasm he showed them that they were not on trial as evildoers, but for doing good in the name of Christ to the helpless and needy man.

3. The impression upon the Sanhedrin (vv. 13-21).

a. They marveled (v. 13). They were made conscious that they were on trial instead of sitting as judges.

b. They took knowledge that Peter and John had been with Jesus (v. 13).

c. They forbade them to speak in Christ's name (v. 18). They could not deny the miracle or gainsay the accusation brought against them, so they attempted intimidation.

d. Peter and John's reply (vv. 19, 20). They expressed their determination to obey God rather than men.

e. Their release (v. 21). Seeing that the people were on the side of the apostles, the rulers were helpless.

V. The Church at Prayer (vv. 23-31).

As soon as Peter and John were set free, they hastened to their fellow disciples and told their experiences. They praised God for deliverance and prayed for boldness to speak the Word of God.

Pulling Together

If the money getters would line up behind the knowledge getters, and all pull together in a definite well-organized plan, we'd raise the standards of human life higher than the most fantastic imagination ever dreamed they could be raised.

Loving Others

One whom I knew intimately and whose memory I revere, once in my hearing remarked that, "unless we love people we cannot understand them." This was a new light to me.—Rossetti

"I understand that Chevrolet is now enjoying the biggest demand in its history."

"You're right. And there's a good reason. Everybody knows that this new Chevrolet is the first motor car with all modern advantages to sell at such a low price—it's . . .

The only complete low-priced car!"

Moscow . . . Telephone connections including radio, wire and cable throughout the Union of Soviet Russia will be greatly improved by a new radial system connecting cities, towns and communities in administrative units or divisions with trunk lines connecting with other units, according to Foreign Communications News of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Fourteen main telephone centers and 3,800 administrative centers are being created for quicker service.

United Soviet Russia is one of three countries with as many as 100,000 telephones that do not have connections with the international telephone network.

Union City, N. J. . . . Young minds are apt. Myron Heineman of Union City, according to the United Press, telephoned his mother from New York City recently and, while talking, she asked to be excused long enough to answer the door bell. Myron on the other end of the line heard a man demand his mother's jewelry. Hanging up the telephone quickly to break the connection, he called the Union City police and dispatched them to his mother's house in time to save the jewelry. The bandit escaped, however, with $100 in cash.

Tokyo . . . Successful operation of transoceanic telephone service established between Japan and the United States, December 7, 1934, has prompted the government to greatly expand the international network of radio telephone service during the next five years, according to the Japanese Advertiser of March 18, 1936. The ministry of communications advises that this comprehensive program will include the establishment of transmitting and receiving stations at Tokyo and Osaka, replacing the present center at Nagoya. The Tokyo equipment will be used for communicating with Europe and the United States and as well for international radio broadcasts. The Osaka station will be devoted to the use of telephone service to the far east and the south sea areas, although it is stated that this latter station will be able to take part of the European traffic, if necessary.

Rio de Janeiro . . . A new radio telephone service connecting Rio de Janeiro with Bahia has just been given a comprehensive test by the Federal Department of Telegraphs, Assistant Commercial Attache A. W. Childs reports to the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. This, he reports, will constitute a notable improvement in internal communications. The new service was reported as being ready for commercial operation within a very short time. Special telephone booths have been constructed on the ground floor of the Department of Telegraphs for the convenience of the users of this service.

BALANCE IN KANSAS

Topeka, Kas.—Kansas, whose Gov. Alf M. Landon's policy is "deeds, not deficits," was expected to close its books on a balanced budget at the close of the fiscal year, with a bigger amount of cash on hand than it had at the end of the 1935 fiscal year, according to the report of J. J. Rhodes, state treasurer. Rhodes reported that the unencumbered cash balance in the state's general fund May 31 was $1,572,481, compared with $889,591 at the same time last year.

TOPEKA, KAS.—Plans are under way to welcome representative thousands of visitors from all over the United States for the ceremonies in which Gov. Alf M. Landon will be formally notified of his nomination as the Republican candidate for the Presidency. The notification will take place at the state capitol July 23 at 8 p. m. To facilitate the attendance of the vast throngs who will pledge their support to Governor Landon in the November election, railroads have announced special reduced rates of one cent a mile for the occasion. ## PATTERNS OF WOLF PEN

Copyright, By The Book-Merrill Co. N. W. U. SERVICE

● Saul Pattern was the first to come to Wolfpen. Striding through the Kentucky Cumberlands in 1785, he climbed a huge rock pinnacle to gaze spellbound at the marvelous panorama of virgin country beneath him. Four generations later the Patterns still revel in the complete isolation of their beautiful mountain valley. But an air of impending tragedy now spreads over Wolfpen as the world closes in . . . threateningly.

Early American Plants

Exactly 50 years after Columbus discovered America, a learned German botanist, Leonhard Fuchs, published a thick book in Latin, says a writer in Successful Farming. It was filled with really well-made illustrations, among which is the first known printed picture of corn plant. And Fuchs called it "Turkish Corn," because, he said, it "has been brought to us only recently, from Turkey, Asia and Greece." (Fuchs also called one type of pumpkin, another American plant, a "Turkish Cucumber"!)

Picturesque Utrecht

Situated on the old Rhine, Utrecht is one of the most picturesque cities of Holland. The hurricane that swept over the city in 1674 destroyed its fine Gothic cathedral which was begun in the Thirteenth century, but spared its graceful campanile, which raises its beautiful head 300 feet above this city of spires. Utrecht is traversed by two fine canals, the Oude and the Nieuwe Gracht, which are spanned by many bridges.

Our National Tree

The national tree of the United States is the sequoia. The only place in the world in which it grows is California, and there only in certain restricted regions. It was selected as the national tree in a popular contest held in 1935 in which 3,000,000 women and children voted. Second choice in the contest was the elm and the third choice fell to the pine. The sequoia is not only the national tree, but the largest, and probably the oldest tree in the world is of this species. This is the General Sherman thought to be between four and five thousand years old. It is 273 feet high and 36 feet in diameter at the thickest point. It stands in Sequoia National park.

There is no MORE HUMAN PLACE than a BANK

In spite of the large amount of business it must complete in a day, and in spite of its usual marble and metal, brick or stone appearance, the average bank is an exceedingly human place.

Bank accounts are storehouses of hopes, ambitions and safeguards. Checking facilities are more than conveniences—necessities, in fact—to going businesses and to those individuals whose health or occupation makes it impossible for them to get around to pay bills in person. Safe deposit boxes alone could tell a powerful story of treasured keepsakes, memories, homes protected by insurance.

All in all, a bank is closely mingled with the lives of the men and women who make it their financial home. This bank is one where you are as welcome as in your own home.

Was once a luxury to most folks. The high cost of production made it so, but today Ice Cream is produced and sold at such lower cost that it is actually regarded as a food necessity. For this reason, when you buy Ice Cream, choose that which is really made from pure cream and milk—free of skim milk powder and gelatine. Some brands are—some are not.
