ATTORNEY GENERAL GIVES TWO OPINIONS.

One Concerning Election Law, the other, Justice's Cases.

Even though an army officer declar-ed his intentions of becoming a citizen of Maryland only six years ago, he must now do so again, if he has in the meantime been living out of the City. This ruling, based upon Maryland's old Declaration of Intentions Act, was made by Herbert R. O'Coner, Attorney General of Maryland, in an opinion to Stephen C. Little, Clerk of the Superior Court of Baltimore City.

The officer in 1931 was stationed in Maryland, but since has been transferred to Ohio. He now is about to move back to Maryland for permanent residence. When living here he de-clared his intentions under the law, and became a citizen and resident of Mary-

However, the law provides that one moving out of the State, although temporarily, must make an affidavit that he intends to return. This was not done in this case. In making the ruling Mr. O'Conor said:

"We regret very much to advise you that under an old Maryland statute, this officer may not be permitted to register and vote here without again declaring his intentions of becoming a resident and citizen of Maryland. Section 30, of Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland, provides that citizens of Maryland who remove therefrom are presumed to abandon their legal residence in this State unless, within a certain time of so removing they make affi-dayit before the Clerk of the Court that their removal is but temporary. This statute further provides that unless such affidavit is made, and unless such persons actually return to the State within the time mentioned in the statute, 'they shall be conclusively presumed to have lost their legal residence therein, and shall not be entitled to residence therein. titled to registration therein as legal

"While this officer may be considered a citizen of Maryland, he is not, at the present time, a legal voter in this State, due to his absence from the State and the fact that he did not make the affidavit above referred to. Therefore when he returns to this State next August, he should again make his declaration of intentions in order to establish his legal residence and preserve his right of franchise.

"We understand that this seems to create an unnecessary hardship, but this arises from the wording of this old statute, which has never been repealed. However in this case the pealed. However in this case the hardship is mitigated by the fact that no elections will occur this year, and, if the officer acts promptly upon his return, he will be eligible to vote at the next elections held in this State."

The Attorney General also ruled that justices of the peace in Maryland are not entitled to collect their reserve.

are not entitled to collect their costs,

The justice must look for his costs to the defendant, against whom costs were assessed." 99

AN APPEAL FOR GOOD ROADS.

It would seem to the writer and no doubt to many others, after an active ten or twelve years of road building throughout the various sections of our county, that for some reason the Taneytown-Uniontown road, Copperour county, that for some reason the Taneytown-Uniontown road, Copperville, Trevanion and Fairview, have There is always something new to been quite neglected

FARM CASH INCOME FROM MILK SHOWS GAIN.

Farmers' cash income from the nation's milk production totaled $1,417,000,000 for 1936, an increase of $128,000,000, or 9.9 per cent over the 1935 total, according to the Milk

Industry Foundation.

Farm milk income has increased nearly 50 per cent since the depression low. Cash milk income for December 1936 of $113,000,000 was 91.5 per cent of the 1924-29 average compand with the 78.5 industrial forms. pared with the 78.5 index figure for agriculture as a whole.

Since milk production in 1936 is estimated to have increased by 2 per cent to 3 per cent over 1935, the past year's larger cash payments to farmers are chiefly due to higher unit prices paid for milk. Increasing consumption of milk in fluid form, for which farmers received their highest prices per quart, also helped to increase dairy farmers' milk checks.

While supply and demand are in fair adjustment for the nation as a whole, there has been an unusually high production of milk in some sections of the country.

Farmers are evidently feeding their herds well despite high feed prices.
This, together with the high percentage of cows being milked, has caused a substantial increase in milk production in most markets.

To aid farm income this increase in production can best be marketed son is convicted and fined, and sent to through stimulating consumption of We should have said, Mr. and Mrs. hanna railroad. PAY THE DOCTOR!

"If you owe your doctor a bill, pay him promptly and you'll sleep and feel better. Most doctors are overwork-ed, have little or no leisure, give their services to the poor without charge, work holidays, Sundays and nights, answer calls in all kinds of weather. Yes, pay your doctor what you owe him and thank him besides for his services. If you consider his bill too high, tell him so frankly; reach an understanding and pay up. Your doctor is doing something for somebody every day, and that's more than you can say about most other men.

> Now, that's all O. K. for the Doctors, but it applies to the Editor too. He spends a lot of time getting ready to practice. He works long hours, often at night. He does not take many holidays, and goes to his office through all kinds of weather. He gives good advice for only $1.00 a year, and throws in, in the bargain, the news of the community-and does not tell folks what is the matter with them. His service does not end with the death of a patient, but follows to after the funeral ceremony.

> Neither does the Editor know everything, but he keeps on learning and passing it on to you. He also gives advice "in a jiffy" usually free of charge, and that is more than can be said of the members of some other professions. He needs his earned dol-lars too, so, why not pay the Editor, too, and "sleep and feel better?"

OPPOSITION GROWS TO THE COURT PLAN.

Senator Tydings now among those who Oppose it.

Supreme Court reorganization-plan is pouring in on Senators Tydings and Radcliffe in the form of letters, the most of them from Maryland. Only a few printed protests were in the lot.

Other Senators are reported as meeting with the same experience. Until Tuesday of this week Tydings and Radcliffe had received about 5500 letters, of which 5275 expressed op-sent out 25,000 questionnaires, of which about 3395 had been returned —2870 against, 525 for.

Farmers are divided more equally,

Grange leaders oppose, while some other farm organizations are for the plan, depending likely on the esti-mated benefits derived from new deal laws, rather than on the merits of the Court question.

Labor leaders are also in favor of the President's plan, also largely as a matter of "standing by" his apparent favoritism for "union" interests.

Sen. Tydings, on Tuesday came out in opposition to Supreme Court plan, making the 32nd, outspoken foe in the Senate. A few more Senators have qualifiedly joined the opposition, but the balance of power still rests within a few more than thirty members, including Senator Radcliffe, of Maryland, who have not yet expressed themsleves but are awaiting the report of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, and what amendments and changes, if any, this Committee may

The Senate has Judiciary Committee fixed March 9 as the date of hearings on the administration's Supreme Court bill, after which the Committee will report to the Senate, and final debate and a vote be taken in that body. The Senate has already approved a retirement bill, on full pay, after members reach 70 years, but as this is a voluntary retirement, it has little to do with the main bill. It is reported that two members had been considering retirement, a year ago. -----

CROP LOANS TO FARMERS.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 24-The emergency crop and feed loans which Congress authorized for 1937 are now available, according to information received from Washington by S. Thomson, Regional Manager of the Baltimore office of the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Section.

The opening date for the emergency loans to farmers is earlier by several weeks than in previous years and Mr. Thomson said the loan funds will be disbursed in plenty of time for early spring crops.

These loans will be made only to farmers who have no other source of credit. Farmers who can qualify for loans from Production Credit Associa-tions will also be held ineligible.

Four hundred dollars is the maxilum loan this year to any one farmer, but it is pointed out that in each case a loan will be made only in the amount actually necessary to grow crops or maintain livestock until pastures or forage crops are available. The interest rate this year is four percent per annum.

The emergency crop and feed loans will be made as in former years by field representatives, assisted by local crop loan committees in the various counties of this district, under the supervision of the regional office in Balti-

LETTER FROM CHINA Acknowledging Receipt of Small

Your good gift is received, and much appreciated. Thank you ever so much. Our Christmas treats are over for the day and I am tired but happy and I am writing to tell you of my Brownies' good time; but while I write there are thousands, millions of fire-crackers exploding all over the city. I thought at first that the Chinese had taken thus to celebrating Christmas, then as the noise increased I thought it must be an eclipse of the moon; but as it still increased I went out to investigate and find that Chiang Kai-shek has been released from Sian

As pressure is brought to bear, this ratio of opposition is expected to fall very materially, but voluntary sentiment from the intelligent classes is unquestionally very strong in opposition opposition.

"THE CHURCH CALLS TO YOU DURING LENT."

The season of Lent is a forty day period prior to Easter, the day of our Lord's resurrected life from the death of sin and the grave, to be our Lord and Christ in newness of life.

We observe the Lenten season in the sorrow of our hearts for our sins. We repent, we sacrifice, we draw near to Christ not with the idea of limiting our penitence and contrition of life to the boundary lines of forty days each year and when Lent is over feel free to go to our selfish ways, to neglect His Law, to come short in the exercise of our Christian faith,

Random Thoughts

WHAT WE THINK.

We once knew a man who said, "For days at a time I don't think about anything." This man was very quiet. The question was asked him that called for his odd answer. Perhaps he really meant that what he thought did not amount to anything of import-

What we think about, is important, as a rule. All of us know who's "workshop" an "idle brain" is said to be. But, like many another old saying, we can easily change it a bit and make it entitled to the same answer, as the personage referred to as having a "workshop" his work when brains are active or idle.

we "think" every day—every hour of wakefulness—about something. We may call it "making plans" but we think out plans. Another old expression is "a penny for your thoughts." What a safety it is that we do not have to sell them, when asked but can to sell them, when asked, but can confine them to ourselves; for sometimes by thinking out loud, we get into plenty of trouble.

Largely, as we think, so we are. What an incentive is here that we should always think set with the state of the state we should always think, act wisely and well.

For so doing causes others to think well of us, and this is often worth more than all else. It may lead to honors, promotion, success in life. Mercantile agencies sell the financial and prompt-pay status of merchants. No matter in what capacity our thought and action may be working, some-body is passing on the information about us.

WHAT DO THE JUDGES OF THE SUPREME COURT THINK?

The Supreme Court is naturally supposed to be a very thoughtful body, and to have very mature minds for the consideration of a very wide variety of topics.

It is also quite probable that in their private life, away from bench and gown, they read newspapers and consider topics social and political, very much like other folks.

If these surmises are correct, they must have individual opinions concerning their own cases, now very much to the front of the stage in all directions—the White House, the halls of Congress, the press, and just common citizens.

And so, it is rather pertinent wonthinking individually and collectively -of themselves in particular and the rest of the country in general? And especially does this apply to the four over seventy years of age?

A PLEASING PICTURE.

In reading a Printers' trade publication the other day, we found the leading article in it to be headed "Plan for Profit Making"; then folwas; replace all machinery over ten years old with up-to-date machinery; advance all prices to a real profit basenter it up on your cost of production card at $3.00, then add all the carefully ascertained costs, and another profit.

All of which reads splendidly; but we should like to know where his "pull" comes in, and who is his fairy grand-father? And especially, how can even a very profitable business junk its presses and linotypes every ten years?

The whole thing sounds like salestalk for the machine manufacturers; or perhaps of a million dollar man who runs a printing business on the side as a "fad"—like a racing stable, umpire. Even if the presidential plan or in some such way as to spend a were best, it should not now be aplot of money in order to avoid paying the government a big excess profits

We are sure that a case of this kind can not be duplicated in Carroll County. But, dear reader, this is not a defense of printing prices that prevail in Carroll county, for mostly they are way below a profit that is even respectable.

When the youth of such a great nation as Germany, noted for its | for to do so, either would dilute the beer, takes such a step, it is one for the whole world to notice, especially when the change is for greater phys-

(For the Record.)

The United States is the richest country in the world; the most prosperous and progressive; the freest. Why then change it?

It is a country of self-made men who have, by thrift and industry, ac-cumulated the largest number of the world's great fortunes, while at the same time the toilers (the men whose thrift and energy helped produce the fortunes) have received greater wage, larger incomes, built better homes, raised happier families, and given greater opportunity to their sons and daughters to 'carry on, than has any other country on the face of the globe offered its citizens or subjects.

Why is this so? We think it due largely to the opportunities offered and the freedom and liberty guaran-teed under our form of government with its three-fold independent, separate and distinct branches-The Legslative, the Executive and the Judicial-to make, execute and interpret, respectively, our laws. No better schemes could have been devised, by the founding fathers, to protect the interests of the citizens and the states, than the one we have with its checks and balances from the introduction of a Bill in Congress until its final inter-pretation and execution, than has been provided in the Constitution.

The House and Senate are a check on each other, by virtue of the fact that each must agree before a law can be passed, and the Executive holds check on both by the veto power, while the Congress has rechecked by its the Congress has rechecked by its ability to pass vetoed laws by two-thirds majority of each House.

And the Supreme Court has check on both the Legislative and Executive branches if laws are made or attempted to be made, passed and executed that are contrary to the Constitute of the Constitute o tutional grants. (Many people at the present time, we think, forget, if they ever knew, that The Constitution of the United States is but a grant or concession of the people as a whole of their rights to the general government to do only the things granted, and that things not specifically grantderment as to what they may now be ed, or clearly implied in the grants, are retained in the people, and that laws passed on subjects NOT GRANTED, are clearly unconstitutional.)

over seventy years of age?

It is not often that high public officials are so widely discussed, nor does it often happen—if at all—that the proprieties of the situation prevent of Congress the subservient tools of any executive who chooses to exercise his authority, and flaunt the will of a recalcitrant Congressman who would not do as the executive decreed. We think that much of this evil and the obvious of the property of the could be obviously if any world of prosessing the could be obviously if any world of prosessing the could be obviously if any world of prosessing the could be obviously if any world of prosessing the could be obviously in the could

In ALL games and sports there must be an umpire and referee, whose decision is final. No system of sports The writer quoted a printer as being his ideal of a good business man.

He owns a residence in a big town, a ing Fathers, created the Court of Last Resort, and wisely made tenure of official during good behavior.

They thus, at its creation, the court from all political influence and made impossible any punishment or discipline of its members during incumbency in office—impeachment alone being the only method for forceful removal. The president's recent brazen proposal to pack the court, is but a wish and determination to change umpires from the Judicial to the Executive Department (an idea certainly foreign to the wish of the founders of the republic) and to make the president instead of the justices of the Supreme Court the referee and proved or passed, but the changes should be brought about as the constitution prescribes by amendment to the constitution, making that change.

Again the proposal seems obnoxious, in that it would make the final arbiter one man who holds tenure of office for only four years, while at present the decision is in the keeping of nine EMINENT men of erudition and experience. (The fact of the matter is that one-The Chief Justice -has had far greater experience than the present president in all things relating to government, except the presidency alone, and he doubtless would have attained that honor but for a political fluke which angered one man who controlled one state and decided the election.)

We think a bare majority-5 to 4decision of nine learned judges far better than the decision of one man alone, even tho that one man were the president of the United States.

The Congress should not grant the president his wish to appoint SIX new Justices (two-fifths of the Court) court—if the learned men past seventy refused to resign, or would put a two-thirds majority of new unseasoned men on the bench if the Justices should step aside. In either case the work of the court, if well done, would be slowed down instead of being speeded up.

Three week's discussion since the proposal was made has shown:

1-None of the present Justices is incapacitated by age, and to intimate such thing is unworthy argument in biles of the country stop running toany debate by any body;

2-The docket of the Supreme Court is up to date and kept there;

3-To put six new and inexperienced men on the bench would prove calamitous now, and establish a prece- sion, if our great electrical, cement,

4-To pack the court to please the president would be to destroy the power of the Court and leave us under the power of a Dictator.

If the President succeeds in having passed the bill as he has had it pre-pared, it but proves he NOW con-trols not only the Executive but also the Legislative branch of the government. If he packs the court and the court does his bidding, then, he controls the Judiciary also.

Under such circumstances it would be just as well to do away with the Congress and the Supreme Court and let the All Highest rule by his own Severeign and Supreme Will.

One does not have to doubt the structure of the structure

One does not have to doubt the sin-cerity or the honesty of the President to oppose him in this mad desire he has manifested. He is too intelligent to fail to realize that tho he might not use any power his demand gave, that the precedent established, placed in the hands of a bad executive, would mean the destruction of our Democratic form of government

If the Congress of the United States is to function in the future effectively, and be really one branch of a tribune government, its members will not permit the Supreme Court to be tampered with as the present proposal would surely do. Baltimore, Md.

SIT-DOWN STRIKES.

In defense of the sit-down strike, it floods are bad enough. has been argued by its friends in automobile centers that workmen have property rights in their jobs. But never has, and never will fail. sion of a plant when they strike?

Obviously the claim that an employee has on his company through many years of faithful service needs wider recognition. Workers in many corporations need better protection. This is true of white-collar people as well as factory employees. But if the remedy were to seize plants through occupation, then it would be natural to find the oldest employees, who could assert the largest property rights, the first to approve the sit-down technique | personal property, to-wit: These strikes have been carried out principally by younger men, who had It is but natural that strong mind-ed men would hold all their own pre-pany: hence had awassed the small est property assets.

Akron's experience is notable. In the epidemic of sit-down in the Goodyear rubber plant there, most of the novel strikes occurred on the fourth shift of tire making, from 12 o'clock midnight to 6 A. M. This is the shift that the older workers shun, preferring some other of the four six-hour

A minority accident of employment which places a group at a strategic place in the Our weakest point now seems to be the fact that the Executive can make organization of production does not give the group the right to dictate the fortunes of the entire working

The philosophy of the sit-down strike, as it is being analyzed by dissenters in the labor movement, is the 60 pounds. doctrine of force. Bluntly put in labor circles, the practice is simply this: "Find out where you can, by use of a comparatively small number of men, stop the production; get hold of that spot; stay in there; management can't then use that vital equipment; and the whole works stops."

Companies are of course complaining. Yet for many years much of industry used its power to prevent labor unions from winning any foothold in great factories. Management then overplayed its hand. Today labor's left wing, swinging to the other extreme with its new opportunities under a friendly government, may also overplay its chance. On neither side does force make right.—Christian Science Monitor.

BACK ON THE JOB.

The making of parts and material for automobiles normally employs approximately 384,000 workers. Directly employed in the making of cars are approximately 293,000 workers. Reports from the different parts of the country indicate that General Motors furnishes good jobs, good pay and fair treatment for all. Hence the enthusiasm on behalf of the "backto-work movement."

Unemployment in the United States has been very materially reduced by the return to work of a total force of 215,000 in General Motors factories, a large percentage of whom were recalled after the six weeks of strike.

Imagine the demoralization that would fall upon the Nation should there be an insufficient supply of steel, on industry threatened by a strike. Already the United Navy has felt the pinch of a shortage of steel.

The wheels of modern industry are closely geared. Glass factories make windows and windshields for automobiles; which are just as essential as rubber tires. Both industries depend on automobile production.

Where would the petroleum industry be headed for should the automomorrow morning?

It is difficult to contemplate the losses that would overtake our country, recovering as it is from the depresdent that would ultimately be rulnous; textile and other major industries should suffer the losses from further strikes in Ford and Chrysler plants, in coal mines and in many other threatened industries.

See what happened in Sanford, Maine! Fifteen hundred men, probably about one-fourth the town's population, were thrown out of employment when one-half of the looms in the Sanford Mills shut down. The men were engaged in weaving automobile upholstery material. The "national assembly line" that slowed down in Flint, speedily produced unemployment for the "innocent bystanders" in the small Maine city.

The building of new roads and the hard-surfacting of additional thousands of miles of highways furnishes the soundest method in existence for the WPA, and other methods of public and private employment.

The happiness and comforts of workers in industry depend on the prosperity of our national industries and national institutions.

When the purchasing power of the public begins to fall off there are panics and depressions. When these conditions are man-made they are quite inexcusable. Droughts and

How to Establish True North and South Lines

If you are not a trained surveyor and do not know how to operate a transit, you will be unable to find true north and south without the aid of a surveyor and the instrument. If all you really want is approximately true north and south, advises H. B. Roe, Division of Agricultural Engineering, University of Minnesota, St. Paul, cut a long, straight slender pole or strip of board, about 16 to 20 feet long and set it up perfectly plumb. Then see that your watch has exact standard time, and on a clear day when you can get a clear shadow at some time before noon, say at 11 o'clock sharp, mark the outer end of the shadow. Then at the same length of time after noon, which will be I o'clock, mark the outer end of the shadow cast by the pole again. The point half way between the two points marked will be the north and south line passing through the foot of the pole. Remember, however, that this is rough and that the results will not hold in law. If the boundary line you wish to get is a legal line according to the United States survey, such as section line, or a 40-line, the chances are that it does not lie true north and south.

How Blue Veins Get Into Cheese Have you ever looked at a piece of ripe gorgonzola, and wondered how all the greenish-blue veins got into it? Most people think that age is the cause. It is nothing of the sort. Pencillium makes the mold, says a writer in Pearson's London Weekly. This strange word is the scientific name for a group of molds which are the main ripening agents in cheese. These molds are a kind of fungus which will develop on fruit, leather, and many other materials. Examined through a microscope, Pencillium species look like small brooms, and they can live and develop in cheese cracks despite the scarcity of oxygen. If it were not for the Pencillium in it, half the taste of gorgonzola would be gone.

How Tobacco Is Denicotinized To denicotinize tobacco fresh tobacco leaves are placed in immense tanks and subjected to a careful vacuum treatment. This vacuum causes the closed pores of the tobacco leaf to open, admitting of easier nicotine extraction. When the pores in the leaf are opened a charge of live steam is forced through the tank. This quickly eliminates the bulk of the nicotine.

First Use of "America" The Sixteenth century printer's house in the little town of Saint Die, in the Vosges, is where the word "America" was first printed. In 1507, fifteen years after Columbus discovered America, a group of scholars, editing the writings of Ptolemy, the Egyptian geographer, wrote a foreword describing the explorations of Amerigo Vespucci, the Italian navigator, who had made several voyages to what is now known as South America. They suggested that his name, in feminine form to correspond with Europe, Asia, and Africa, should be given to the fourth continent. One of them, Martin Waldseemueller, made a map on which he marked the new land as "America." The book and map were then handed to a local printer named Bazin. The map Bazin printed exists in Saint Die, and his house stands in a square in the center of the town. A tablet commemorating the baptism of America is fixed to the shop.

Pirate Days

Until 1820 Turkish warships operating from North African ports as pirates used to terrorize the commerce of the Mediterranean. Captive sailors were carried off by them to the slave market in Algiers or the prisons in Sallee. In the Seventeenth century Barbary corsairs used to waylay ships in the Bristol channel, and once a Sallee rover was caught in the mouth of the Thames. It was from Malta that resistence was most effectively organized by the Knights of St. John, who held the island until it was surrendered by their grand master to Napoleon in 1798. The island passed to Britain by the peace of the Amiens (1802) and it is the headquarters of the Mediterranean fleet.

Argentina's Wild Horses

It will be remembered that horses escaped from the Spaniards on the mainland of North America and multiplied on the fertile plains, says a writer in the Washington Post. Both wild horses and wild cattle multiplied on Argentina's pampas. Thus the Argentina gaucho (or cowboy) became a hunter of free-roaming cattle and horses, while the northern plainsman became a herder. Cattle stealing was never the serious crime on the pampas that it was in North America's wild West. because in Argentina cattle were free for the taking. No great ranch owner objected if a gaucho killed a steer for food, but it was considered bad form not to turn in the hide. Only the hides were valuable.

SOME WAYS TO MAKE FRITTERS

Only a Few of Many Methods Are Worth While.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THERE are almost as many ways of making fritters as there are foods to flavor them! All fritters, however, are made with a batter of flour, eggs and liquid. This batter is thin enough so that it may be dropped from a tablespoon into hot deep fat, or in the case of those corn fritters, which are known as "oysters," to be dropped on a griddle like a pan-

Some fritter recipes call for milk and some for water. I really prefer the water as it seems to produce a more tender batter. Some recipes call for whole eggs, well beaten, of course; others call for a separation of the yolks and whites, and still others for egg whites alone. Salt is used in all the batters and sugar is added if fruit is to be added to the batter.

Whatever recipe you use for fritters which are to be cooked in deep fat, it is very important to have the fat hot-very hot-about 395 degrees Fahrenheit, if raw oysters, clams, vegetables or fruits are combined with the batter. For a plain fritter which is to be served with sauce or sirup, a slightly cooler fat, a temperature of about 375 degrees Fahrenheit, may be used. It takes from three to five minutes, depending upon the size of your fritter, to produce a golden brown on the outside and to have the inside done enough.

With a fish fritter a tartar sauce may be served. With a fruit fritter a lemon or a wine sauce or maple sirup is usually served.

The business woman housewife will find fritters useful, as a main supper dish or as dessert, because they are so quickly prepared and Corn Oysters.

2 eggs. 3 cups grated corn. 3/4 cup flour. Pepper.

Beat eggs, add corn, flour and seasonings. Drop by spoonfuls on a well-greased griddle and cook like pancakes on both sides.

Oyster Fritters.

1 cup flour. 1/2 teaspoon salt. 3 cup water.

21/2 tablespoons melted butter. 1 egg white. 1 pint oysters.

Salt, pepper.

1 tablespoon lemon juice. Mix flour with salt, stir in water gradually and beat until smooth. Stir in melted butter and fold in stiffly beaten egg white. Drain oysters, dredge with salt, pepper and lemon juice. Drop one oyster at a time into the batter. Using a tablespoon, drop oyster mixed with batter into very hot deep fat (395 degrees Fahrenheit). Cook until golden brown and drain on soft paper. Serve with tartar sauce. Sour Cream Dressing.

½ cup sour cream. 1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar. 1 tablespoon chopped chives or onions. ½ teaspoon salt.

Pepper.

Paprika. Beat the ingredients together with an egg beater and serve with cucumbers or cabbage.

Cheese Custard. 6 slices bread. 4 cup butter.

½ pound American cheese, grated. 4 eggs, beaten. 2½ cups milk. 1/8 teaspoon salt. 4 tablespoons catsup.

Into a buttered square shallow baking dish place the slices of bread, well buttered. Over these sprinkle evenly the grated cheese. To beaten eggs add the milk and pour this over all. Sprinkle salt and dot with butter and then sprinkle catsup on top. Place this in hot oven and bake about twenty Cereal Cakes With Bacon. 3 cups cold oatmeal. 1 tablespoon minced onion.

1 teaspoon minced parsley. Salt. Pepper.

Corn meal. Bacon. Mix the seasonings with the oatmeal and form into small cakes. Roll in the corn meal. Put in a greased baking pan and place strips of bacon on the top. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) until the bacon is crisp. Serve for breakfast or luncheon Cube Veal Steak With Gravy.

1 onion. 2 slices bacon.

6 cube veal steaks.

2 tablespoons flour. 1 cup boiling water.

1 bouillon cube. Salt, pepper. Peal and slice onion, mince bacon and cook onion and bacon together until onion is brown and bacon crisp. Push over to one side of pan. Cook veal steaks two minutes on each side and remove to platter and keep warm. Add flour to bacon and onions and mix well. Add slowly the boiling water in which the bouillon cube has been dissolved and stir until smooth and thick. Season to taste. Serve with the veal cube steaks. @ Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

And in Him my faith is strong.

Brighter, fairer, far than living, With no trace of wee or pain, Robed in everlasting beauty, Shall I see thee once again.

Just two years ago we laid thee In thy silent house of clay, Fondly hoping in our bosom We shall meet thee, "some sweet day."

Sweet hope, we shall meet in the morning, When the clouds have drifted by, And long shall we stay in that country For like Angels, we never shall die. By her loving daughter, M. E. FOGLE.

Robert Cavelier de la Salle

On March 19, 1687, near the Trinity river, Texas, Robert Cavelier de la Salle was murdered by mutinous followers. He had attempted to found a French settlement near Matagorda bay, which he had mistaken for the mouth of the Mississippi, discovered by him in 1682. Disaster after disaster, now culminating in his death, had attended the enterprise. Yet the credit due his former exploit remains undimmed: he had traced the length of a continent's greatest inland waterway, later to become an all-important factor in the development of American travel and communication. Of him the historian Parkman writes: "America owes him an enduring memory; for in this masculine figure she sees the pioneer who guided her to the possession of her richest heritage."

The speed of comets, while not perceptible to the casual observer, is much greater than that of the planets, writes Dr. Thomas M. Beck in the Chicago Tribune. Moreover, comets are not limited to any particular part of the sky. They may appear in any part of the heavens and come from any direction. In general they move toward the sun, sweep around it in a wide curve, and then move back in the direction from which they came until they fade into darkness. The most striking thing about them is the fact that as they approach the sun they drag their tails behind them, but as they retreat they push their tails ahead-that is, the tail, instead of following the comet, always points away from the sun.

First California Mail Service

On April 19, 1847, the first regular mail service in California was established when the United States military authorities inaugurated a semimonthly "government express." Army despatches, private letters and newspapers were carried, free of charge, between San Francisco and San Diego by two soldiers on horseback, who started from these towns on alternate Mondays. Meeting the following Sunday at Dana's rancho, near San Luis Obispo, they exchanged mails. Each soldier then started back to the point from which he had come, arriving there in time to begin another trip the following Monday. The rush of settlers to California, following the discovery of gold, necessitated the establishment of Post Office department routes, which supplanted this original service.

"Cattle Resemble Masters" "Cattle resemble their masters"

say the Norwegians and we judge a man by the horse he has and how he treats his, asserts a writer in the Montreal Herald. Some horses are nearly human, some men are pretty nearly horses. By ties of sympathy we are bound to the horse. In his drab working life, the horse awaits and expects a word of appreciation now and then. In return he asks no questions. Like a true friend, he loves you because you are you—that is sufficient He does not criticize you; he adjusts himself to your moods and misunderstandings. He does not gossip or slander you. In the bright June days as well as the bleak December days of life he stands by you unchangeably.

PLAY TO BE PRESENTED BY I. O. O. F. BAND.

The 3-act mystery comedy presented by the I. O. O. F. Band entitled, "The Scarecrow Creeps," on Wednesday evening, turned out to be very much of a success. People just can't get done talking about it. Some of them are even coming to see it again. Therefore, here's our advice to those who missed it. Come early and be sure of a seat. The time is scheduled for 8 o'clock; the place is the Opera House, Taneytown, Saturday night,

This will be the last time the play will be presented in Taneytown. The members of the band and cast are planning on taking it to other towns, but nothing definite has been schedul-

MIMICRY NO SUCCESS

A man who prides himself on his powers of mimicry is always keen on adding to his repertoire. His latest is an imitation of the buzzing of a bee, London Tit-Bits says. After practicing assiduously in private, the day arrived when he considered it sufficiently realistic to try on his wife. Standing quietly in the hall, he began the buzzing noise and, gradually opening the diningroom door, gave full vent to the imitation. "Lifelike, dear, what?" he hazarded, smilingly. "Pooh!" his wife answered. "I

Robert Adam Was Famous

as a Furniture Designer Among the most distinguished furniture designers during the latter part of the Eighteenth century was Robert Adam, favorite of George III, bachelor king of England. Son of an architect, he and his brother James gained fame as architects under the partnership legend of the "Adelphi."

Adam traveled considerable when traveling was fraught with great A. M., at the home of Earl Kopp. dangers. Among his many extended trips was the one he undertook to the excavations of Pompeii and Herculaneum. In these ancient ruins he found many decorative and structural motifs which became part and parcel of his exquisite designs.

Most of Adam's furniture shows his architectural leanings. Some of the furniture Adam made was of mahogany with delicate carvings and dainty inlays. He originally introduced the shield back chair, but Last year, 204 Camps me abandoned it in favor of the wheelback chair.

During his activities in the building of homes for the wealthy and designing fixtures and furniture for the interiors Robert Adam found time to write and illustrate three volumes of his "Works in Architecture" which were dedicated to his patron, King George III. Adam's designs are frequently reproduced in dining-room furniture and occa- R. H. Riley, Director of the State Desional living-room pieces.

The Skin's Heat

Meters that measure the temperatures of stars, used to test the heat of the human skin, show that, contrary to popular belief, colored skin is virtually no better protection against heat than white complexions. Although black paint absorbs heat, it is found that black human skin absorbs no more of it than white. The star meters, which pick up the human heat rays at a distance and thus do not upset the skin's natural response by contact. show that man's skin measures heat changes as sensitively as the most delicate thermometers. A normal person can feel a temperature rise at a rate of less than one thousandth of a degree per second. His subconscious faculties are aware of the change within three seconds and immediately set his skin "heat regulators" to work.

Last year, 204 Camps met the State requirements and were duly placarded. In 1926, when the camp regulations were enacted, 48—less than half of the number that applied for permitswere found to be up to the required standards and were permitted to display the official placard which shows that the camp has been inspected and approved in accordance with the reguations of the State Board of Health.

Owners and operators of all camps in Maryland have been notified by Dr. partment of Health, that all existing permits must be renewed before the season opens; and that no camp may be operated without a license. In order that they may be ready for visit-ors as soon as the weather becomes favorable, the camp operators are busy getting their places in shape Over fifty have already applied, Dr. Riley said, for early inspections so that any necessary changes may be made and delay in the renewal of permits may be avoided. The regulations apply, Dr. Riley explained, to every camp or picnic ground in the State, that is used for six days or longer and that accommodates ten or more persons. To be duly certified each camp must comply with the regulations prescribed by the State Board of Health with regard to the general cleanliness of the buildings and grounds, the water supply toilet facilities and the disposal sewage, garbage and other waste. Adequate arrangements for the protection of foods sold on the grounds from pollution and from flies, are also required and the sources of supply and methods of handling milk, cream and ice cream must conform to the standard regulations for such

Island of Malta Really Made Up of Five Islands

The Island of Malta, forming as it Miller's—S. S., 9:30 A. M.; Jr. C. In the Island of Malta, forming as it does the most strategic naval base in the Mediterranean and Britain's most formidable station on the short route to India, in reality consists of five islands, four of which could be contained in the largest, which gives the group its name and which has an area of slightly less than 100 square miles. Two are mere rocky pinnacles which are used for target practice by the British fleet. The others are inhabited and have been likened to the Three Bears with Malta on one side, Gozo, the middlesized Bear on the other and Comino, the Little Bear in between.

Archealogically the islands present a pageant of western civilization from the dolmens of the Stone age to the most modern of naval bases; and the patois of the native Maltese is said to be the only remnant of the language of the Phoenicians, albeit it contains admixtures from the tongues of the Greeks, Romans, Saracens, Normans, Spaniards, French and English, who at various times have been the overlords. The remains of three temples built of great stone slabs attest the existence of pre-historic races, as do parallel tracks which have never been satisfactorily explained, but in solid rock and extending down into the sea. Gozo has been identified as the scene of Homer's legend of Ulysses and Calypso.

From tombs and other structures built by them it is estimated that the Phoenicians settled in Malta about 1000 B. C., supplanting a civilization comparable in some respects to the Minoan of ancient Crete, and later the islands were used as one of their bases by the Carthagenians in their disastrous wars with Rome.

Why They Are Artesian Wells Artesian wells are so called because they were first made in Artois, in France, where the oldestknown well of this kind in Europe was sunk in 1126. These wells are formed by boring deep down until water-bearing strata are reached underneath impenetrable rocks. The water rises through the bore hole into an ordinary well, except that it is exceptionally well protected by a brick and cement inner lining.

Why Writers Are Not Spellers Before the introduction of printing, there was no standard of spelling in Europe. Spelling phonetically produced widely varying results. The English language has the fewest definite standards of spelling, or to put it differently, the most exceptions to established rules.

HOW=

TO CHOOSE FUR COAT THAT WILL GIVE SATISFACTION.— Buying a new fur coat is an exciting moment in a woman's life. It is important, however, before buying, to study a few simple rules. Here are some points to follow when purchasing a fur coat:

Buy your coat in the correct size. A coat that is too small causes unnecessary strain on the furs, which makes them wear badly.

Be careful about style. Do not be attracted by novelties; pick a good classic style. Remember that one does not buy a fur coat every year. When you take that coat out of storage next season, you want still to like it.

When you purchase a fur coat, have the fullest knowledge and best advice that can be obtained. A dependable fur department in a specialty or department store or a good local fur merchant is the most logical place to seek such information.

Ask a reliable dealer to include a bill of sale with your purchase. On this bill of sale should appear the name of the fur, because, should the coat prove unsatisfactory, you will have no legal basis for action unless the bill of sale states specifically the name of the fur. Remember that price rarely bears any relation to the wearing qualities of furs. Rarity, color, softness, style, the number of skins used, the quality of workmanship and tailoring—these are what determine the price. An important rule of style is that only a tall figure should choose long-haired furs; a short figure should wear flat furs .-Good Housekeeping Magazine.

How to Care for Trees

to Keep Them Healthy

Periodic cultivation and loosening of the surface soil combined with fertilization and watering, is necessary to keep shade trees in healthy condition, says R. H. Peck of the Missouri college of agriculture. hade trees suffer from starvation, as a general rule, more than from ny other one cause.

On lawns and roadsides, hardpacked yards, and along sidewalks, the trees natural food (fallen leaves, twigs, and other decaying vegetation) is scanty, if not entirely absent. Both rain and air are excluded by heavy sod, hard-trampled earth, or pavement, and the tree needs both air and water in the soil. The resulting weakened condition invites disease and insect attack, which would never have occurred had the tree been in good health.

How to Paint Auto Tires White Liquid rubber is a preservative and beautifier of tires. It gives the tire a white coating. It is made of pure unvulcanized rubber in solution. It can be applied with a brush and if used at regular intervals, will, it is claimed, prolong the life of the tire, because it penetrates and runs into any small cuts or holes and seals them over, thus in a measure preventing moisture from reaching the fabric.

How Close-Ups Are Made Close-ups of dancers as they move through the intricate routine are photographed for the movies by a camera set up on a rubber-tired platform called a dolly. A crew of two or three men, called "dolly horses," rolls the camera carriage to and fro as the dancers move. A one-foot variation between camera and actors will throw the entire scene out of focus.-Popular Mechanics Magazine.

How to Preserve Eggs With Oil To preserve eggs with oil dip them for a few seconds into a bath of odorless, tasteless mineral oil heated to a temperature of 130 degrees or higher. This seals the pores in the shell and to a large extent prevents evaporation of water from the egg. The process is not designed to replace cold storage, but rather to improve the keeping quality of cold-storage eggs.

How to Treat Wounded Tree The proper procedure to protect a tree which has lost its bark is to bind the exposed surface with some preservative material, such as coal tar creosote. This guards against any mechanical injury and against decreased vitality of the tree due to loss of sap and attacks by insects. In extreme cases some material such as burlap may be used to wrap the exposed portions.

How to Separate Stamps When stamps having full gum stick together and one does not want to soak them in water they can be separated by placing a piece of tissue paper over them and then running a warm iron over the stamps. The stamps should then separate easily.

How Word "Gas" Originated The word "gas" was proposed by the Belgian chemist, Jan Baptista van Helmont in 1625 and adopted shortly thereafter. It was coined from the Greek, khaos.

How to Melt Chocolate If a little butter is rubbed on the inside of pan when melting chocolate for cake mixture, it will not stick to pan.

Castle of Crusader Is

Old Belgian Landmark Year in and year out Bouillon. Belgium entertains visitors to see the ancestral castle of Godfrey of Bouillon, one of the most famous of the Crusaders and owner of a miraculous sword, which was supposed to fly out of its scabbard automatically and slay infidels on

The castle, which dominates the village, was old even when Godfrey went there over 800 years ago to be duke of the section, with Bouillon as the capital. He did not remain long however, for in 1096 he joined the first Crusade to recover the Holy Sepulchre, fighting with valor at the storming of Jerusalem in

The same year Godfrey was elected king of Jerusalem, but he refused that title and took instead the one of Defender of the Holy Sepulchre. Then, presumably with the help of his miraculous sword, which was later enshrined, he completed the conquest of the Holy Land by defeating the Sultan of Egypt, but never lived to return to Belgium for he died a year later. Bouillon has other historic associations apart from those with Godfrey de Bouillon. Napoleon III stayed in the Hotel de la Poste there after he was defeated at Sedan, and Voltaire, Lafayette, the Empress Josephine, Victor Hugo and many others have visited the town.

Cholera Deadly to Swine

Cholera is the most deadly infectious disease of swine. As many as 250 or 300 hogs may be wiped out by it on a large ranch within a few days. It is estimated that this disease causes an annual loss of $25,000,000 to hog raisers in the United States. The symptoms are difficult to describe so that inexperienced stock owners may recognize the disease.

Young Giraffes Do Bawl

Like the Hungry Calves Most naturalists long have held that giraffes are voiceless animals, unable to make a sound when in agony. A challenge of this occurs in the report of the Kenya game warden, which avers that a young giraffe, separated from its mother, will bawl and low like a hungry calf, according to a writer in the Montreal Herald.

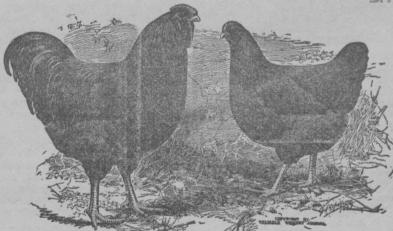

Whether mute or not, the giraffe is one of the world's most peculiar animals. It has at least two other claims to distinction. It is the world's tallest mammal and one of the most expensive animals found in menageries.

A giraffe's neck, long as it is, contains no more vertebrae than does the neck of a man. It is merely elongation of the vertebrae that elevates the giraffe's head among the treetops.

Possessing few means of defense, giraffes are protected by their coloration. Their irregularly marked coats blend so perfectly with the dappled sunlight and shadows of the trees on which they feed that at a distance they are difficult to detect. Thorny acacias do not prove a trial to them for the animals' tough hides protest them from long thorns, and their elastic tongues taper to pluck leaves without including the trees' piercing armor.

Lavender Favorite Perfume Lavender is one of the favorite perfumes the world over and enormous quantities of the dried flowers are used annually to make the perfume and other lavender products. The yield of oil varies from year to year depending on the weather and the age of the bushes. The plants are very tender to any frost. The oil has to be stored from three to five years before it sufficiently matured for use in the perfumery and other trades.

CHAPTER VII

Vance nodded with understanding. That being the case, I presume that you and Mrs. Garden have provided for young Swift in your wills." "That is true," Professor Garden answered after a slight pause.

"We have, as a matter of fact, made Woode and our son equal beneficiaries."

"Has your son," asked Vance, "any income of his own?"

"None whatever," the professor told him. "He has made a little sageway. money here and there, on various enterprises—largely connected with sports—but he is entirely dependent on the allowance my wife and I give him. It's a very liberal onetoo liberal, perhaps, judged by conventional standards. But I see no reason not to indulge the boy. It isn't his fault that he hasn't the temperament for a professional career, and has no flair for business." "A very liberal attitude, Doctor,"

Vance murmured: "especially for one who is himself so wholehearteddevoted to the more serious things of life as you are . . . But what of Swift: did he have an independent income?"
"His father," the professor explained, "left him a very comfortable amount; but I imagine he squandered it or gambled most of it

"There's one more question," Vance continued, "that I'd like to ask you in connection with your will and Mrs. Garden's: were your son and nephew aware of the disposition of the estate?"

"I couldn't say. It's quite possible they were. Neither Mrs. Garden nor I have regarded the subject as a secret . . . But what, may I ask," — Professor Garden gave Vance a puzzled look—"has this to do with the present terrible situation?'

"I'm sure I haven't the remotest idea," Vance admitted frankly. "I'm merely probin' round in the dark, in the hope of findin' some small ray of light."

Hennessey, the detective whom Heath had ordered to remain on guard below, came lumbering up the passageway to the study.

"There's a guy downstairs, Sergeant," he reported, "who says he's from the telephone company and has got to fix a bell or somethin'. He's fussed around downstairs and couldn't find anything wrong there." Heath shrugged and looked inquiringly at Vance.

"It's quite all right, Hennessey," come up."

Hennessey saluted half-heartedly and went out.

"You know, Markham," Vance this time. I abominate coincidences-"

"Do you mean," Professor Gar-den interrupted, "that inter-communicating buzzer between here and the den downstairs? . . . It was working all right this morningwith it as usual."

"Yes, yes," nodded Vance. "That's just it. It evidently ceased functioning after you had gone out. The nurse discovered it and reported it to Sneed who called up the telephone company."

"It's not of any importance," the mysterious 'he'?" professor returned with a lackadaisical gesture of his hand. "It's a convenience, however, and saves many trips up and down the stairs."

"We may as well let the man attend to it, since he's here. It won't disturb us." Vance stood up. "And I say, doctor, would you mind joining the others downstairs? We'll be down presently, too."

The professor inclined his head in silent acquiescence and, without a word, went from the room.

Presently a tall, pale, youthful man appeared at the door to the He carried a small black tool kit.

"I was sent here to look over a buzzer," he announced with surly indifference. "I didn't find the trouble downstairs."

"Maybe the difficulty is at this the buzzer behind the desk."

The man went over to it, opened | have shot poor Woody." his case of tools and, taking out a flashlight and a small screw-driver, removed the outer shell of the box. Fingering the connecting wires for a moment, he looked up at Vance with an expression of contempt.

Vance became suddenly interest-down and looked at the box. "They're both disconnected—eh, what?" he remarked.

"Sure they are," the man grumbled. "And it don't look to me like they worked themselves loose, either. "You think they were deliberately disconnected?" asked Vance.

"Well, it looks that way." The man was busy reconnecting the wires. "Both screws are loose, and the wires aren't bent-they look like they been pulled out."

That's most interestin'." Vance stood up, and returned the monocle to his pocket meditatively. "It might be, of course. But I can't see why anyone should have done it . . . Sorry for your trouble." 'Oh, that's all in the day's work," the man muttered, readjusting the cover of the box. "I wish all my jobs were as easy as this one." After a few moments he stood up. "Let's see if the buzzer will work now. Any one downstairs who'll answer if I press this?" "I'll take care of that," Heath interposed, and turned to Snitkin. "Hop down to the den, and if you hear the buzzer down there, ring back."

Snitkin hurried out, and a few moments later, when the button was pressed, there came two short answering signals.

"It's all right now," the repair man said, packing up his tools and going toward the door. "So long." And he disappeared down the pas-

Vance smoked for a moment in silence, looking down at the floor. "I don't know, Markham. It's dashed mystifyin'. But I have a notion that the same person who fired the shot we heard disconnected those wires

Suddenly he stepped to one side behind the draperies and crouched down, his eyes peering out cautiously into the garden. He raised a warning hand to us to keep back out of sight.

"Deuced queer," he said tensely. "That gate in the far end of the fence is slowly opening . . . Oh, my aunt!" And he swung swiftly into the passageway leading to the garden, beckoning to us to follow.

Vance ran past the covered body of Swift on the settee, and crossed Vance told the detective. "Let him | to the garden gate. As he reached it he was confronted by the haughty and majestic figure of Madge Weath erby. Evidently her intention was to step into the garden, but she "I wish this infernal buzzer drew back abruptly when she saw hadn't gone out of order at just us. Our presence, however, seemed neither to surprise nor to embarrass

"Charmin' of you to come up, Miss Weatherby," said Vance. "But I gave orders that everyone was to remain downstairs."

"I had a right to come here!" Sneed summoned me to breakfast she returned, drawing herself up with almost regal dignity.

"Ah!" murmured Vance. "Yes, of course. It might be, don't y' know. But would you mind explainin'?"

"Not at all. I wished to ascertain if he could have done it."

"And who," asked Vance, "is this "Who?" she repeated, throwing her head back sarcastically. "Why,

Cecil Kroon!" Vance's eyelids drooped, and he studied the woman narrowly for a brief moment. Then he said lightly: "Most interestin". But let that wait a moment. How did you get up

"That was very simple. I pretended to be faint and told your minion I was going into the butler's pantry to get a drink of water. I went out through the pantry door into the public hallway, came up the main stairs, and out on this ter-

"But how did you know that you could reach the garden by this route?"

"I didn't know." She smiled enigmatically. "I was merely reconnoitering. I was anxious to prove to myself that Cecil Kroon could

"And are you satisfied that he could have?" asked Vance quietly. "Oh, yes," the woman replied with bitterness. "Beyond a doubt. I've known for a long time that Cecil would kill him sooner or later. "You can't expect the buzzer to And I was quite certain when you said that Woody had been murdered that Cecil had done it. But I did not understand how he could have goted. Adjusting his monocle, he knelt | ten up here, after leaving us this afternoon. So I endeavored to find

"And why, may I ask," said mured Vance, studying the man in-differently. "But we'd much rath-Vance, "would Mr. Kroon desire to dispose of Swift?"

The woman clasped her hands the-atrically against her breast. "Cecil was jealous - frightfully jealous. He's madly in love with me. He has tortured me with his attentions . . ." One of her hands went to her forehead in a gesture of desperation. "There has been nothing I could do. And when he learned that I cared for Woody, he became desperate. He threatened me."

Vance's keen regard showed neither the sympathy her pompous recital called for, nor the cynicism which I knew he felt.

"Sad-very sad," he mumbled. Miss Weatherby jerked her head up and her eyes flashed. "I came up here to see if it were possible that Cecil could have done this thing. I came up in the cause of justice!"

"Very accommodatin'." Vance's manner had suddenly changed. "We're most appreciative, and all that sort of thing. But I must insist, don't y' know, that you return downstairs and wait there with the others. And you will be so good as to come through the garden and go down the apartment stairs.'

He was brutally matter-of-fact as he drew the gate shut and directed the woman to the passageway door. She hesitated a moment and then followed his indicating finger.

When we were back in the study Vance sank into a chair and yawned. "My word!" he complained. "The case is difficult enough without these amateur theatricals. Markham, I could see, had been both impressed and puzzled by the incident.

"Maybe it's not all dramatics," he suggested. "The woman made some very definite statements." "Oh, yes. She would. She's the type." Vance took out his cigatype." Vance took out his cigarette case. "Definite statements, yes. And misleadin'. Really, y'know, I don't for a moment believe she regards Kroon as the culprit." "But she certainly has something on her mind," protested Markham. "Oh, Markham-my dear Markham!" Vance shook his head sadly. "However . . . As you say. There is something back of the lady's histrionics. She has ideas. But she's circuitous. And she wants us to be like those Chinese gods who can't proceed except in a straight line. Sad. But let's try makin' a turn. The situation is something like this: An unhappy lady slips out through the butler's pantry and presents herself on the roof-garden, hopin' to attract our attention. Having succeeded, she informs us that she has proved conclusively that a certain Mr. Kroon has done away with Swift because of amorous jealousy. The lady herself, let us assume, is the spurned and not the spurner. She resents it. She has a temper and is vengeful—and she comes to the roof here for the sole purpose of convincing us that Kroon is guilty." "But her story is plausible enough," said Markham aggressively. "Why try to find hidden meanings in obvious facts? Kroon could have done it. And your psychological theory regarding the woman's motives eliminates him entirely." "It doesn't eliminate him at all. It merely tends to involve the lady in a rather unpleasant bit of chicanery. The fact is, her little drama here on the roof may prove most illuminatin'." Vance stretched his legs out before him and sank deeper into his

"Curious situation. Y' know, Markham, Kroon deserted the party about fifteen or twenty minutes before the big race—legal matters to attend to for a maiden aunt, he explained—and he didn't appear again until after I had phoned you. Assumed immediately that Swift had shot himself. Doubt inspired me to converse with the elevator boy. I learned that Kroon had not gone down or up in the elevator since his arrival here early in the afternoon

"What's that!" Markham ex-claimed. "That's more than suspicious-taken with what we have just heard from this Miss Weather-

"I dare say." Vance was unimpressed. "The legal mind at work. But from my gropin' amateur point of view, I'd want more—oh, much more. However,"—Vance rose and | meditated a moment—"I'll admit that a bit of lovin' communion with Mr. Kroon is definitely indicated." He turned to Heath. "Send the chappie up, will you, Sergeant?"

Heath nodded and started toward "And Sergeant," Vance halted him; "you might question the elevator boy and find out if there is any one else in the building whom Kroon is in the habit of callng on. If so, follow it up with a few discreet inquiries." Heath vanished down the stairs, and a minute or so later Kroon sauntered into the study with the air of a man who is bored and not a little

"I suppose I'm in for some more tricky questions," he commented. After glancing about him, Kroon sat down leisurely at one end of the davenport. The man's manner, I could see, infuriated Markham, who leaned forward and asked in

"None whatever," he said with cold anger: "Have you any urgent reasons for objecting to give us what assistance you can in our investigation of this documents you had to sign?" Kroon raised his eyebrows.

Markham swung round toward the

"That's for us to decide," he snapped. "Do you intend to answer Mr. Vance's question?" Kroon shook his head.

"I do not! I regard that question as incompetent, irrelevant, and im-material. Also frivolous."

"Yes, yes." Vance smiled at Markham. "It could be, don't y' know. However, let it pass, Markham. Present status: Name and address of maiden aunt, unknown; nature of legal documents, unknown; reason for the gentleman's reticence, also unknown.'

Markham resentfully mumbled a few unintelligible words and resumed smoking his cigar while Vance continued the interrogation.

"I say, Mr. Kroon, would you also consider it irrelevant-and the rest of the legal verbiage—if I asked you by what means you departed and returned to the Garden apartment?" Kroon appeared highly amused.

"I'd consider it irrelevant, yes; but since there is only one sane way I could have gone and come back, I'm perfectly willing to confess to you that I took a taxicab to and from my aunt's."

Vance gazed up at the ceiling as he smoked. "Suppose," he said, "that the elevator boy should deny that he took you either down or up in the car since your first arrival here this afternoon. What would you say?" "I'd say that he had lost his memory-or was lying."

"Yes, of course. The obvious retort. Quite." Vance's eyes moved slowly to the man on the davenport. "You will probably have the opportunity of saying just that on the wit-Kroon's eyes narrowed and his face reddened. Before he could speak, Vance went on.

"And you may also have the opportunity of officially giving or withholding your aunt's name and ad-The fact is, you may find yourself in the most distressin' need of an alibi."

Kroon sank back on the davenport with a supercilious smile.

"You're very amusing," he com-mented lightly. "What next? If you'll ask me a reasonable question, I'll be only too happy to answer.'

"Well, let's see where we stand." Vance suppressed an amused smile. "You left the apartment at approximately a quarter to four, took the elevator downstairs and then a taxi, went to your aunt's to fuss a bit with legal documents, drove back in a taxi, and took the elevator upstairs. Bein' gone a little over half an hour. During your absence

Swift was shot. Is that correct?" "Yes." Kroon was curt. "But how do you account for the fact that when I met you in the hall on your return, you seemed miraculously cognizant of the details of Swift's passing?" "We've been over that, too. I knew nothing about it. You told me Swift was dead, and I merely surmised the rest."

"Yes-quite. No crime in accurate surmisals. Deuced queer coincidence, however. Taken with other facts. As likely as a five-horse win parlay. Extr'ordin'ry.' "I'm listening with great interest." Kroon had again assumed his air of superiority. "Why don't you stop beating about the bush?" "Worth-while suggestion." Vance crushed out his cigarette and got up. "What I was leadin' up to was the fact that someone has definitely accused you of murdering Swift." Kroon started, and his face went pale. After a few moments he forced a harsh gutteral noise intended for a laugh. "And who, may I ask, has accused me?"

"Miss Madge Weatherby."

One corner of Kroon's mouth went up in a sneer of hatred. 'She would! And she probably told you that it was a crime of passion—caused by an uncontrollable jealousy." "Just that," nodded Vance. "It seems you have been forcing your unwelcome attentions upon her, with dire threats; whereas, all the time, she was madly enamored of Mr. Swift. And so, when the strain became too great, you eliminated your rival." "Well, I'll be damned!" Kroon thrust his hands deep into his pockets. "I see what you're driving at. Why didn't you tell me this in the first place?"

"Waitin' for the final odds," Vance returned. "You hadn't laid your bet. But now that I've told you, do you care to give us the name and address of your maiden aunt and the nature of the legal

WOE be unto you if you wait till spring to do something about that garden closet or corner you've been thinking about these many springs. Because then you'll be too busy with your digging. Better get started organizing tools and vases some winter afternoon when there's no golden weather to lure you out-of-doors.

Wouldn't a Mexican corner in the cellar be a bright thought for gardening paraphernalia. Calcimine the corner a bright adobe pink. Have some bins built for peat moss, fertilizer and such, and paint these bins electric blue and yellow and label them in contrasting but equally vivid colors. Painted wooden pegs on the wall can support smock and sunhat, shovels and weeders and edgers. A gay rack over a substantial work table is handy to hold the smaller tools, and shelves will be needed for books on gardening, a garden diary (times of plantings, pruning and so forth), containers, flower show schedules and the like. Throw caution to the winds and have a single galvanized wash-tub installed and paint it too, a bright mad color.

Don't be afraid to mix colors -if you've ever seen a Mexican blanket you know what we mean by real extravagance in pure color. Of course a Mexican corner would not be truly Mexican without a mural so get courageous and try one. A little burro should not be difficult to sketch, especially if you draw only the front of him, his head and two front feet. A rough caricature will suffice, painted brown and black in the right places, with eyes perhaps of .yellow. Hang old-fashioned wicker waste baskets on either side of this mural, just where they'd be hung if he were carrying things to market. These baskets can be painted too, and will be just the place for your dahlia supports, your twine and your flower pots, in varying sizes awaiting developing seed-

Abolish Guest Rooms.

We realize that it's pretty hard on a guest to be parked on the living room sofa, but just the same we're going in for the abolition of guest rooms. For the simple reason that they're used on an average of twice a year and that's not enough to justify wasting all that space the rest of the time. Make a secondary living room out of this space and you'll be surprised how useful it will turn out to be. In Philadelphia, it is almost traditional for a house to have and upstairs or a back living room. We like the idea ourself and are all for going back to the intimate designation of "sitting room." There are so many times in the life not been carried over today. Almost every family has an assortment of furniture that could be refurbished to make an upstairs living room. A sofa that clutters the living room, an old, but oh so comfortable rocker, a hassock that could be recovered, the draperies of several years ago that with a little dyeing could be used-all these with a little going over could make a pleasant extra room.

If there's no fireplace here, you might acquire one of those ready built mantels with a friendly gaslog to add its word of cheer. Slip covers for the old chairs, in a gay brown and apple green chintz, a hassock recovered in the same material with yards and yards of beige fringe sewn around its sides, old draperies dyed a dark, cocoa brown and, since most of our old furniture smacks of the late Victorian era, wall paper in a large wistful pattern for the walls.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL CUNDAY CHOOL Lesson

Lesson for February 28 THE NEW COMMANDMENT

LESSON TEXT — John 12: 20-33; 13:34,35.

GOLDEN TEXT — A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; even as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. John 13:34, PRIMARY TOPIC — A New Commandment.

JUNIOR TOPIC — A Great Man's Way.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—
What the New Commandment Means.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—
The Measure of Christian Love.

In the last week of our Lord's ministry on earth many important events took place, but we pass most of them in our present series of studies. The incident related in our lesson of today is of interest in and of itself, but it is of peculiar significance because it introduces a marvelously instructive discourse of our Lord.

Whatever had prompted their inquiry, we are delighted to note that the Greeks came with an earnest desire to see Jesus.

I. Seeking Jesus (12:20-22). A man has progressed far on the road to blessing when he makes known his desire to see Jesus. Coming to him means coming to the One who has the words of eternal

Note that the disciples were wise enough to bring the men to Jesus. The true function of every Christian worker is to bring men to him. On the back of the pulpit in one of America's greatest churches, directly where the preacher can see them as he arises to preach, are the words of our lesson, "Sir, we would see Jesus." Little wonder that a strong and true gospel is preached in that church.

II. Finding the Cross (vv. 23-33) The reply of our Lord to the Greeks and to the disciples who brought them to him, seems a bit singular at first glance. Did he not wish to receive them? They had probably come to see the great religious leader, the King of the Jews -why does he talk about deathwhy is his soul troubled?

The words of our Lord are clear. Men do not need an example, a leader, a teacher, they need a Saviour. It is as a sacrifice for sin that Christ will draw all men unto himself (v. 32).

We need to relearn that lesson. Leaders of the church are earnestly seeking the explanation of the rapid decline in the influence of the Christian church. It is a good sign that some are beginning to realize that the difficulty is in the realm of the spiritual. The barrenness of socalled modern theology has become apparent to its leaders and they have begun to talk about a "spiritual revival." But unfortunately we soon find that they use the expression to stand for something entirefrom a real scriptural revival. "The voice is Jacob's voice but the hands are the hands of Esau" (Gen. 27:22).

Let us make no mistake about it, a real revival will center in the cross and will manifest itself in denial of self for the glory of God.

One cannot forego mention of the fact that the last part of verse 26, "If any man serve me, him will my Father honor," was the motto of the late Dr. James M. Gray, whose life gloriously exemplified the truth of the passage. God is willing and ready to do as much for you and for me.

III. Loving One Another (John 13:

When these words were uttered our Lord was two days further in the last week before he was crucified. He was alone with his disciples in the upper room. What message does he have for them in that solemn hour? That they should love one another. That is a message that needs renewed emphasis in our day. The strife which fills the world has almost engulfed the church, and there is bitterness and strife where love should reign.

Let us observe carefully that it is as his disciples that we are able to love one another. There are two erroneous extremes to be avoided. First, we have the out and out conservative, who proclaims his belief in the Bible as God's Word, who is anxious that he be absolutely correct in doctrine, a really saved man, and who then becomes the kind of "fighting" fundamentalist who dismally fails God in the testimony referred to in these verses. On the other hand we have the liberal who has abandoned the scriptural basis of discipleship and who then boasts of his great love for his brethren. Love is no substitute for regeneration, and regeneration is no excuse for lack of love.

Courtesy of the Heart There is a courtesy of the heart, it is allied to love. From it springs the purest courtesy in the outward behavior.-Goethe.

Duty of Gratitude Gratitude is a duty none can be excused from, because it is always at out own disposal.-Charron.

"Commodity Dollar" Was

Invented Many Years Ago The "commodity dollar" was actually in use in Hingham a century ago, states a writer in the Boston

Manuscripts uncovered in Watertown Public Library by the Federal Historical Sources Survey show that Hingham paid its minister on a commodity dollar basis in 1803. The minister was Rev. Henry Ware, afterward the first Hollis professor of divinity at Har-

Rev. Henry Ware went to Hingham in 1787 and the inference is that his salary was $500 a year, enough and plenty in a period of low prices. But during the late seventeen-nineties there had been a "very great demand and high prices for all the necessaries of life" and the minister was at his wits' end to make both ends meet, for his salary remained stationary.

The remedy adopted by the parish was to adjust his pay on the basis of the average prices of the great staples between 1787 and 1803, and this settlement of the problem was accepted by the min-

Florence Nightingale Pledge

The wording of the Florence Nightingale pledge follows: "I soland in the presence of this assembly, to pass my life in purity, and to will abstain from whatever is deleterious and mischievous, and will not take or knowingly administer any harmful drugs. I will do all in my power to elevate the standard of my profession, and I will hold in confidence all personal matters committed to my keeping, and all family affairs coming to my knowledge in the practice of my calling. With loyalty will I endeavor to aid the physician in his work and devote myself to the welfare of those | committed to my care."

Happiness

The happiness of today is as im- | de Mars." portant as the happiness of tomorrow. You cannot postpone your enjoyments and lump them in one mass to take them after you have gained a certain position or won a fortune. You must take them, if you take them at all, as you go along. The capacity to enjoy is not a constant element in human life. There comes a time when desire fails. A man may deliberately sacrifice his enjoyments and reap thereby great moral advantage, but he cannot postpone them.

Sponges Reproduce Like

Certain Kinds of Fish Sponges reproduce in a manner somewhat comparable with certain fish. Sponges have no lungs. The sponges we are familiar with are one of their living counterparts after the flesh is removed. They can breed and live only in warm water, the sponge capital of this country being Tarpon Springs, Florida.

The largest sponge ever known, according to a writer in the Los Angeles Times, measured about eight feet in diameter, but the largest commerical sponge is of the order of three feet in diameter. One of the latter, it is estimated, will soak up almost a ton of water, or well over 200 gallons.

A sponge authority says the most interesting thing about the animal is its prodigious ability to make currents in the water it inhabits. In life the space and orifices seen in the bath sponge are filled with cells separated by tiny canals. The canals are lined with minute whiplike cells which keep the food-bearing water flowing in and out of the animal in a strong current.

Red Flag

Since 1791 the Red Flag has symbolized revolution. By a decree emnly pledge myself before God of the National Assembly then sitting in Paris, the waving of a red flag was to be the final warning to practice my profession faithfully. I a disorderly mob before the National Guard opened fire. It was flourished that year on the Champ de Mars; the mob did not disperse; several were killed; and the Red Flag became their symbol. It was first hoisted in England by the mutinous sailors at the Nore in 1797. Russia was the first country to adopt it as the national flag though the idea was suggested in the Second French Republic in 1848. Lamartine, the poet and Liberal leader, rejected the proposal, say-"The Tricolor has been carried in triumph round the world. The Red Flag has only been carried in shame round the Champs

Wasting Time

To learn never to waste your time is perhaps one of the most difficult virtues to acquire. A well-spent day is a source of pleasure. To be constantly employed and never asking, "What shall I do?" is the secret of much goodness and happiness. Begin, then, with promptitude, act decisively, persevere; if interrupted, be unruffled, finish it carefully -these will be the signs of a virtuous soul.

"Fourth Estate" Applies to the Newspapers.

The press is called the fourth estate because of its influence upon public affairs. Formerly in England and France, the church, the nobility and the commons were known as the three estates of the realm, states a writer in the Indianapolis News. There has been much discussion as to who first called the press the fourth estate. Authorship of the phrase is variously attributed to Burke, Carlyle and Macaulay. In 1840 Thomas Carlyle published his "Heroes and Hero Worship." In Lecture 5, of that work he says: "Burke said there were three estates in parliament; but, in the reporters' gallery yonder, there sat a fourth estate more important far than they all. It is not a figure of a speech, or a witty saying; it is a literal fact—very momentous to us in these times." Carlyle's style of writing is such that it is not clear whether or not he intended to give Burke's exact phraseology.
The phrase "fourth estate" does not appear in any of Burke's published writings and it is not known where Carlyle obtained his information. Some authorities have suggested that he may have coined the phrase himself. Three years earlier he published "The French Revolution." One chapter in the work is entitled "The Fourth Estate." It contains the following sentence: "A fourth estate, of able editors, springs up." But Macaulay had used the phrase as early as 1828. That year Macaulay wrote in the Edinburgh Review: "The gallery in which the reporters sit has become a fourth estate of the realm." A correspondent to London 'Notes and Queries," stated that he heard Lord Brougham use the phrase in the house of commons about 1823 or 1824.

The fifth estate is defined as a class or estate, next after the traditional four. Scientists have been termed the fifth estate.

His New Name

Every revolution throws up some curious quirks in human nature. In the French revolution they abolished nobility, prohibited religion and made a new calendar for themselves, and the story of M. de Saint-Janvier shows how all three worked out in practice. They abolished the "de" in his name because it smacked of nobility; the "Saint," because it reminded of religion; and the "Janvier" (January) because they had changed the calendar; so his name went down on the records as: "Citizen Nivoso, formerly De Saint-Janvier."

Why Frostbite Should Have Proper Treatment

The results of frostbite depend on the severity and length of exposure to cold and on the treatment given. A mild frostbite properly treated may never be heard from again; but if it is severe the condition called chilblain, or pernio, may result. For years following the frostbite the victim may feel a sensation of tingling, "pins and needles," and pain in the area that has been involved, every time he enters a warm room in winter.

These chilblain areas, says Hygeia, the Health Magazine, should be carefully protected from cold because they are more susceptible to frostbite than is healthy skin. The affected skin may easily ulcerate. Contact of wool with chilblain areas is usually decidedly uncomfortable; in this case, silk or cotton socks should be worn next to the skin. These may be covered with woolen socks.

It has been found that when the temperatures gets below 8 F., regardless of humidity or other conditions frostbite becomes common. When the temperature is between 8 and 14 F., frostbite is common only if the wind velocity is high. When it is 24 F., and above, frostbite almost never occurs, no matter what the other weather conditions may be.

Why Rubber Is Not Waterproof Rubber is not waterproof, says a paper read before the rubber division of the American Chemical society by C. R. Boggs and J. T. Blacke of Boston. "This is contrary to popular opinion, since many of its practical uses depend upon its ability to resist water," the chemists explain. "It does repel water when the exposure is intermittent and intermediate drying periods ensue; for this reason, rubber raincoats serve us well. If the exposure to water is continuous and prolonged, water is absorbed steadily. The rate of absorption increases with the temperature of the water and is also greater from fresh water than from salt sea water."

Why We Snore

Usually snoring is due to sleeping with the mouth open, and this may arise from one of several causes. The most usual of these, says a writer in London Answers magazine, is some obstruction in the nasal passages, and only a doctor can diagnose that from a personal examination. You could, however, try to find out if you sleep on your back. This often results in the opening of the mouth, with the resulting "night music." The actual cause of snoring is vibrating of the soft palate.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By BETTY WELLS

"I'M THE best little bean burner in fown," remarked Lucy through a mouth full of pins. "But that's because I'm such a wow at screwing screws, nailing nails and sewing seams," said she modestly. "But it's the truth, I get so involved in making something or other that I'm always forgetting all about what's for supper till I smell

We stopped by Lucy's one morning last week and found her up to her neck fiinshing up a screen to hide the sewing corner in her bedroom. There wasn't another spot in the house to be spared for her sewing machine and all the trappings involved in sewing, so she decided to make an efficient work corner, then screen the whole thing off so that it wouldn't spoil the looks of the room. Behind Lucy's screen was a small chest for material, a drop leaf cutting table and the sewing machine.

Lucy had built a five wing screen, even the frame, herself, and then covered it with the same pattern of cretonne that she'd used for the curtains and dressing table in the room. The edges she finished with soft green gimp the color of the rug. The best way is to make the winged screen with a wood frame and wall board, then stretch the cretonne over it on the outside. The inside can have cretonne over it, or it can be painted.

The screen turned out to be quite a decorative asset to the room. The walls were ivory color and the rug soft green. Lucy had painted the woodwork and doors powder green, and her cretonne for the curtains and dressing table skirt was a very flowery pattern with lots of rose in it on a very warm cream ground. Then for the bedspread she selected a plain all over candle-wick spread in rose. One chair in rose and another in light green completed the room.

* * * Crippled Tools.

Just try to get a good day's work out of a carpenter with a ten-cent store saw. As for trying to entice a plumber into using anything but the latest model wrench-goodness, don't make that mistake or you may get very properly high-hatted for your troubles.

All of which goes to prove that a lady with a house is much too patient with crippled tools. We've been thinking about the common kitchen variety of mops here lately, and how a frayed and bedraggled little model can put a crimp in the best of spirits. A new spring mop might prove to be a lot better investment than a new spring bonnet when you get down to it.

Here is another place where buying the cheaper sort is false economy. A good floor mop of heavy, absorbent cords is the first requisite of a mop family. Then there's the inevitable "wet" mop-for bathrooms and kitchens which should be as voluminous as possible. We've found the ones that are supposed to be self-wringers are not as efficient as the plain mops which you wring by hand. If hand-wringing is not your idea of fun-and it certainly isn't ours—a large pail with a wringer attachment is the thing

Then there is the small mop, with small head and a handle about two and a half feet long. We couldn't keep house without one. To swoosh up the splashings from the baby's bath or the remains of an enthusiastic shower. The area around the kitchen sink is another place that seems to be always collecting smeared spots and here again two shakes (or wipes we should say) of the little mop works wonders. This miracle, when dry, makes a grand quick duster-upper too.
