SPEED TRAP IN LITTELTOWN

Autoists are Warned not Violate the Law.

The Adams County Independent, this week, contains the following news item that is of interest, and a warning, to all autoists using the streets of Littletown.

"Due to various complaints being received by Council regarding speeding autoists and the failure of the Burgess to enforce the law regarding speeding was brought up for discussion at the monthly meeting of town council, at their meeting on Tuesday evening. Quite a heated argument ensued between Council and the Burgess. Council stating their position in the matter when called upon by the numerous complaints.

The Burgess stated that he was strictly opposed to a speed trap and since the law prohibited any other method of enforcement of the "Speed Limit Violator" he would place the speed traps in operation providing council would erect at the four entrances to the borough a warning sign to motorists that a speed trap was being operated.

The matter was more thoroughly discussed and upon motion of Charles H. Mehring, that warning signs to motorists of a speed trap being operated in the borough, be erected at the four entrances to the borough and that the Burgess enforce the speed limit law, the motion was duly seconded by Councilman Albert H. Kindig, and carried."

DEATH FROM HEART ATTACK WHILE FISHING.

Franklin R. Moser, a carpenter by trade, who had worked with contract or Allen Feeser, Taneytown, was compelled to quit work, about six months ago due to a heart affection, was found dead last Saturday night along the Monocacy, several miles from his home.

He had accompanied his wife, Mrs. Lillian Moser to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reaver, in the forenoon, and then left to go fishing along the Monocacy.

When he failed to return, at about 3 o'clock, a party was made up to search for him—Ralph Hess, Ralph Harver, Robert Smith, John Newman, Talbot Harrison, Lewis Clingan and Norman Selby. His body was found by his son-in-law, Ralph Harver and Ralph Hess. He had caught several fish that were beside his body.

Coroner Sherman Flanagan and Deputy Sheriff Shipley were summoned. His physician Dr. C. M. Benner pronounced death due to a heart attack, and no inquest was held.

He is survived by his mother, Catherine Moser, his wife and one daughter, Mrs. Ralph Harver, near Taneytown, and by the following brothers and sisters, E. Olin Moser, near Taneytown; Russell Moser, of near Littletown; John H. Moser, of near Detour; Maurice H. Moser, near Emmitsburg; Mrs. Harry Anders, of near Taneytown; Mrs. Emory Valentine, Emmitsburg; Mrs. Albert Riffe, Thurmont; Mrs. Harry Dinterman, Keyville, and Mrs. Raymond Eyer, Detour.

He was a member of Piney Creek Presbyterian Church, and had served as sexton for 12 years. Funeral services were held at Piney Creek Church, Tuesday morning, in charge of Revs. Ervin R. Morris and A. T. Sutcliffe. Burial was in the adjoining cemetery.

TANEYTOWN MAN IN AN AUTO WRECK.

Elwood Nusbaum, aged 21 years, of Taneytown, was the principal in a serious wreck on Wednesday night, in Emmitsburg, when the car he was driving crashed into the rear of a parked truck owned by Bernard H. Boyle.

Nusbaum was driving at high speed on East Main St., toward Taneytown, and after the truck was hit the car swerved to the side and continued out of control, crossed a sidewalk and crashed into a frame house occupied by Curtis Topper, and a brick house the home of Edw. Harting.

Considerable damage was done to the latter and a fence between the two buildings was demolished, as was the Nusbaum car. Nusbaum was taken to the Gettysburg Hospital after the accident.

On Thursday he returned to his home in Taneytown, apparently not seriously injured. What action has been taken in the case has not been definitely made public.

AN ERROR CORRECTED.

We regret that, through what was considered a reliable source, The Carroll Record published the name of W. H. Main, of Union Bridge District, as a Democratic candidate for nomination as a member of the House of Delegates. This is incorrect.

Mr. Main did, however, present his name as candidate for County Commissioner, which he afterwards withdrew, but not in time to do so under the law; therefore his name will appear on the primary ballot in this connection.

ROOP-ROYER REUNION.

The Roop-Royer reunion will be held at Meadow Branch Church, on Sunday, Sept. 4th. There will be regular morning Sunday School and preaching service. A basket luncheon at 12 o'clock, and an afternoon program beginning at 1:30. Governor Nice is scheduled for an address.

PRIMARY ELECTION UNUSUAL ACTIVITIES.

Preliminary to a hot contest in November.

Apparently the intensity of the campaign between Senator Tydings and Congressman Lewis for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator overshadows the battle between four or five Democratic candidates for the Governorship, while those for House of Representatives, Attorney General and Comptroller are apparently arousing little interest.

Candidates for nomination for county offices were slow in coming forward, but both sides are largely represented now, and the common voter is becoming an object for public sympathy, when the great mass of names is presented before him for marking his X marks.

The Record is unable to publish a complete roster of candidates, but approximately there will be about 30 names each of Republicans and Democrats in Carroll County. We may publish a complete list next week.

In Frederick county there will be from 37 to 40 names on each side. In addition, Democrats will have the opportunity of voting "second choice" for U. S. Senator and State Officers; but Republicans will vote only for one for each office.

There is the feeling on the part of many that this coming primary and general election may start a movement for a return to the former convention plan; as the great additional expense of the primary seems hardly justified by the results of its pretty complete trial.

The primary election will be held on Sept. 12, or two weeks from next Tuesday, and after that will come registration days that may also cut more figure than usual in the political horizon of this year.

Unquestionably the whole political situation before and after the primaries is intensified because the President and his policies are pretty direct issues—especially for candidate for the U. S. Senate and House—and those who are directly benefited financially by some of the new legislation will feel urged to show their gratitude.

These will be matched very likely by the votes of those who do not feel the same way. So, all of this jockeying and contention for inside tracks previous to the primaries, will be matched by like urges prior to general election day.

The present feverishness, however, is likely to subside after the primaries, because a large number of present candidates will be "out of it" for another two years—so far as personal ambition is concerned—and something like very serious thought will take its place.

The coming two years are apt to be memorable ones in the history of American politics, and the thoughtful individual voter will see the importance of his own contribution to the November ballot box of 1938.

THE REOPENING OF SCHOOLS

A Number of Requirements to be Observed.

The Board of Education would like to call to the attention of all parents to the following:

1. Schools will open on Thursday, September 8th. A full day's session will be held.
2. Buses will operate over same routes and schedule as of last year.
3. Children to enter the first grade must be six years of age on or before December 1, 1938.
4. All beginners must present a certificate of vaccination.
5. All beginners must present a birth certificate.
6. Principals and teachers will be in their respective schools all day on Wednesday, September 7, to make transfers and adjust schedules.
7. Attention is called to the motoring public that all vehicles must stop behind school buses when unloading and loading pupils. This is a county law.

SCHOOL ZONE SIGNS.

"School Zone" signs, disregarded during the vacation period, will soon take on their full significance as a life-saving agency, the Keystone Automobile Club declares in a bulletin calling motorists' attention to the responsibilities attendant upon motor vehicle operations at the beginning of the fall school term.

Co-operation of drivers in the movement fostered by the Club for the protection of school children is urged by George E. Keineipp, Manager of the Club, who emphasized the many dangers confronting children returning to school after being freed for several months from the restraints imposed by school safety education.

The Club manager also stressed the fact that thousands of children will be attending school for the first time.

"These youngsters," he said, "have not had the benefit of safety instruction in the classrooms, and in their behalf we appeal particularly to motorists. To a very great extent, the safety of first-year pupils will depend upon the care with which motor vehicles are operated, not only in the vicinity of schools, but on all streets where children are walking on their way to and from their classrooms.

"All drivers are strongly urged to use the utmost caution where children are crossing streets. No one can foretell when a child is going to rush forward from a group into the path of moving vehicles. Because of this uncertainty the duty devolves upon the motorist to have his car under such control that he can stop at a moment's notice. Safe drivers never take chances where children are concerned."

DON'T FORGET VACCINATION.

"Don't forget your youngster will have to be vaccinated against smallpox before he or she can be enrolled in any public school in Maryland. Have it attended to without any further delay, if it has not already been done," is the advice of Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health to parents of children who have reached school age this year and who will start to school this fall.

"Our Maryland law" Dr. Riley continued "requires every child to be vaccinated against smallpox before he or she can be enrolled in any public school in the State. Physicians are expected to vaccinate all babies under their care before the children are a year old. Until the children are of school age, the responsibility for having it done rests with the parents.

After that it is shared by the teachers and other school authorities. Any teacher, school trustee or commissioner of a public school who admits a child who has not been successfully vaccinated against smallpox is liable to a fine of $10.00.

"Smallpox is very contagious. Anybody who has not been protected against it is likely to contract the disease if exposed to it. It is much more prevalent than any one is likely to realize who does not keep in touch with health and sickness conditions in other parts of the country. The only way to avoid having the disease is through vaccination.

"Parents whose children have not been protected against smallpox should go to their family doctor and have it done at once."

NEW LUTHERAN CHURCH FOR HAMPSTEAD.

The Present Building was Erected over Fifty years ago.

The Hampstead Enterprise, this week, contained the following news article:

"Sunday, August 21, was a notable day in the history of the Lutheran congregation of Hampstead. The occasion was the breaking of ground for the new Church and Sunday School buildings of the St. Mark's congregation of that place.

The event marked the consummation of many years of planning and working on the part of the pastor, the Rev. F. H. Schrader and members of the church council and the various organizations and members of the congregation. For several years money had been accumulated for the purpose but the goal still seemed some distance in the future, when two donations of one thousand dollars each were made by interested members. The larger gifts proved the necessary stimulus to bring about the congregation's hopes and prayers of many years. After proper action by the church council the matter was laid before the entire congregation at a meeting held July 24. The congregation with great enthusiasm endorsed the plans of the council and authorized them together with a special building committee to go ahead at once.

It has been more than a half-century since a similar service has been held by the Lutherans of Hampstead. Few of those present could remember when the former structure was begun. However, there were a few, and these together with the new members, joined in thanksgiving not only for the glory of the former house, but in anticipation of a greater glory to come in the future house.

The church structure is to consist of two buildings, one a Sunday school building with rooms for separate classes and a basement for social purposes, with kitchen equipment, etc. This building will care for a school of about two hundred and fifty members and provide a rallying center for all social activities of the congregation. The church building will provide seating for approximately two hundred."

Readers may not always know just why certain sums were paid for certain purposes; nor why expenditures were not made for certain other purposes; but if they did know all of the facts, they would likely be satisfied.

CRUELTY TO CHICKEN CASE.

A Mt. Airy Minister is the Defendant in the Cast.

Rev. Frank E. Williar, minister and poultryman, of Mt. Airy, was before Justice Albert Mitten, Westminster, on Wednesday, on a charge presented by the S. P. C. A. Society, of Baltimore, that he kept a chicken in a five gallon jar for experimental purposes.

John Wood, Westminster, Attorney for the defendant, did not present any evidence for Rev. Miller. Isaac Loeb Strauss, Baltimore, appeared for the S. P. C. A. Society. Charges were made after the minister had displayed the chicken in the jar in a window of his establishment in Westminster.

It is said that the minister had repeatedly stated that no cruelty was attached to the experiment, but that the exhibition was intended to show that a chicken, given proper sunlight and a balanced diet, would under sanitary condition, weigh more at the end of a given period than if raised under less favorable circumstances.

Justice Mitten withheld decision in the case for a few days. It is rumored that no matter how the decision is made, it is likely to be appealed to the Circuit Court.

AN EVEN (?) TRADE.

The following is a clipping from a state of Washington Weekly newspaper—

An editor friend tells us the following true incident: For years the editor had given a certain organization a liberal amount of space for club news, announcements and items of a similar nature. One day the editor learned that the head of the organization had placed a $17 printing order with a job shop.

"How did you come to give that other shop that printing order?" the editor demanded of the club president.

"Why didn't you give us a chance at it?"

"Well, I'll tell you," said the club president, in all seriousness. "We've been giving you all our news for several years, so we decided it was only fair to divide up our business and let the other fellow do our printing."

(And this may be true—it sounds like some of our own experience.—Ed.)

BOTH OFF.

"What are these things?" asked the customer.

"Pencil-erasers," said the shop-girl.

"I don't want anything that will erase a pencil—I want a pencil mark eraser."

"Have you lead pencils?"

"We haven't any lead pencils. We have wooden cylinders with graphite inside them. Will they do as well?"

Random Thoughts

A WRONG DEFINITION OF "GOOD BUSINESS."

There is a surprisingly large lot of things done, solely because "it pays" in dollars and cents. What some call "good business" consists nowadays in "out smarting" the other fellow as in a horse-trade, when it is commonly said that each fellow in the deal must "use his own eyes," and not complain if he gets the worst of the bargain.

There is enough of this sort of business practice to cause suspicion that there are no honest business men anywhere, but that all are bent solely on "getting the best of it" in all deals.

Of course, this is not true. There are even honest horse dealers. Their business simply calls for exchanging—or trading—very frequently, when there are no market prices that apply.

Most men who are in any business as an occupation, are honest. Many customers are apt to make believe that an occasional trickster represents the character of everybody who has something to sell.

And this lopsided angle plays an important part in making trading relations anything but an agreeable job, and the successful general business of the country so hard to conduct.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 26, 1938.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

Perhaps we too generally note and comment on regretfully the passing of old things—old times, old customs, old ways, old landmarks, and the like, for all of this is but representative of the logical order of things.

America, for instance, was here hundreds of years before 1492 when Columbus performed the discovery act. Its history was pretty unimportant until the mid 1600's.

Its actual settlement as a "new world" struggled along until the late 1700's; and its independence as the United States of America was delayed until July 4, 1876.

And so, we find that what we call, "history," brings with it, naturally, "new times," or, as we are saying now, "new deals."

We have gotten our great inventions in the same progressive manner. It is true that there is "nothing new under the Sun." Our inventive genius has merely discovered hidden powers and treasures within natural raw material that have been in, or on, the earth since its creation.

Perhaps the past fifty years have been more productive along this line than has any like previous appearance; and this has unquestionably been because of our greater intelligence, and research; or maybe it has been the force of necessity, compelling invention.

Mostly, our progress as a nation has been both creditable and advantageous. Evils have made progress too; but we are optimistic enough to believe that life is now more worth the living than in what we sometimes idealize as the "good old days." Certainly, there is much more of ease and comfort, and a let-up in hard physical labor pretty generally. We have greatly less of illiteracy, and more of the intelligence that counts in directions quite worth while.

But, it must be admitted that we are perhaps growing too rapidly; going too fast in untried directions; doing things just because we have the power to do them. In fact we are using the old saying "knowledge is power" too literally and too liberally for knowledge may be power with danger attached—power may destroy, as well as build up.

And just now we may well pause a bit in our speedy ways of doing and "reforming" things. We are being surfeited with "new deals." We need to "stop, look and listen," and look ahead with more care for safety.

And this can only be done by forces for good, operating with watchful care, forcefully and fearlessly—good "for the people" and "by the people," being sure of including "all" of the people.

We do not place incompetents and unskilled operators in charge of our improved machinery, and we must not do so with our governmental affairs. We need to become more familiar with our good old patriotic song.

"My Country, 'Tis of Thee Sweet land of Liberty; of thee I sing; Land where my fathers died, Land of the Pilgrim's pride, From every mountain side; Let Freedom Ring."

"My native country, thee; Land of the noble free, thy name I love! I love thy rocks and rills, Thy woods and templed hills, My heart with rapture thrills, like that above."

Let music swell the breeze, and ring from all the trees, Sweet Freedom's song. Let mortal tongues awake, Let all that breathe partake, Let rocks their silence break; The sound prolong.

Our Father's God, to Thee, Author of Liberty, to Thee we sing. Long may our land be bright, with Freedom's Holy light; protect us by thy might, Great God, our King."

POLITICAL PROMISE-MAKERS.

Naturally, candidates for public office must be promise-makers. They must expect to be, and the public expects them to be—and fulfillers as well. This would not be a difficult job to perform if all voters wanted the same thing—but they don't. It might also be an easy job if voters either wanted nothing, or were forgetful—but they are not.

A candidate may have a liberally disposed mind, and be willing enough to promise all things to all people—and some do, and take chances—but if elected and fails to make good, his promises are very apt to come home to roost.

Once in a very great while there is an exception to this rule, accompanied by an alibi that places the failure to perform on the shoulders of enemies, making the promise vender appear in the light of a victim of arch traitors to good.

Or, if not this, then the promiser tries to show by his record, and that of others, that his intentions were good, and that he was not at all to be considered as deceiver of the people—and, sometimes, this works.

When candidates have no record back of them for voters to spy into, they are fortunate. "Try me and see," is a plausible plea. If a man has no background of having once robbed a hen-roost, this may be held to be a good argument why he would not steal something more valuable.

NORTH OF THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

Americans who have thought about it have generally recognized that an attack which brought a world war to Canada would bring that war to the United States. President Roosevelt's pledge of help to that "part of the sisterhood of the British Empire" should it be attacked by any other empire therefore is not a sudden broadening of that field in which American sentiment already has accepted international responsibility.

What is notable is the statement-in-advance of deliberate intention to act positively in Canada's behalf. Between being drawn into a war because a belligerent's arms have come close enough to threaten American territory and announcing that Americans would take steps out of neighborliness and kindred ideals there is a difference. It is as important a difference as that between ordinary "war games" to test defense forces and today's vast maneuvers which in the eyes of Germany's neighbors amount almost to mobilization.

That neighborliness and kinship should be stressed with such an utterance at a time when the rift between democracy and totalitarianism is accentuated by vast displays of force is even more notable. If there are any doubts in European chancelleries as to where American sympathy would lie in the event of a conflict between governments that extol individual freedom and those that scoff at it, the sequence of Secretary Hull's radio speech and President Roosevelt's address at Queen's University should help to dispel them. If there are many Americans who feel that Pan-Americanism can be a substitute for the broader international outlook, the obvious relationship between Canada and the United States should clarify their views.

In pledging aid to a neighbor on the north, President Roosevelt by no means committed the United States to any war not of its own choosing. He did not say American doughboys would follow Canadians to any future Flanders. He said only what few Americans would deny. It was his saying it that made the difference, and the time he chose in which to say it.—Christian Science Monitor.

"INFLUENCING" THE PRESS.

A Senate investigating committee has uncovered evidence that a large corporation made vigorous efforts to induce certain newspapers to take an editorial attitude friendly to the corporation's interests. That is pointed to by radicals as a scandalous state of affairs.

No evidence was produced that the efforts to win editorial support were successful, or that there was anything contrary to the public interest in the objectives of the corporation.

What many earnest reformers overlook is that alongside the right of the press to express its views on any subject without restraint there exists the equal right of anybody, individual or corporation, to try to bring editors around to a particular point of view. The final decision is up to the individual judgment of each particular editor or publisher. That is the essence of the freedom of the press.

Every editor has to be constantly on guard against those, in Government or out of it, who try to "use" his paper for their own ends. For every such effort by private interests there are hundreds made daily by the Government's huge staff of press-agents and propagandists.

For every newspaper which succumbs to efforts to influence its editorial opinion, there are probably scores of men in public office who betray their trusts by selling official favors. A New York State Senator, highly regarded as an able legislator and a man of character, committed suicide recently rather than face the charges against him of taking money in large amounts in payment for his influence in obtaining jobs and promotions for people in public office. A grand jury had indicted him on seventeen counts.

A real investigation into such practices, if it were possible, would disclose thousands in Federal, state and municipal positions of trust who use the power of their offices to feather their own nests. They get away with it because the voting public pays no attention to public affairs between elections.—Middletown Valley Register.

PATRIOTISM CALLED CURB ON 'ISMS.'

Albany, N. Y. (IPS.)—A plea for "good, old-fashioned American patriotism" was made here by Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, commandant of the Third Naval District, at a meeting of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"What we need today," Admiral Woodward said in his address, "is more of that good, old-fashioned, honest-to-goodness patriotism—the kind that gives a tug at the heart-strings and makes a person feel proud to be a citizen of these United States, the greatest country on earth; the kind that gives us an internal glow when we see our flag waving on high; the kind that inspires us when we hear the national anthem."

"It is alien 'isms' particularly, and all other unfriendly influences in our midst which seek our ruin, that all loyal Americans should unceasingly combat by building up the patriotic character of our rising generation," he said.

PATRIOTIC WOMEN PRESERVE AMERICA'S SHRINES.

With the glowing example set by an invalid Southern woman, Miss Ann Pamela Cunningham, who organized, in 1853, the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association and raised $200,000 to restore and preserve the run-down and weed-grown estate of our country's first President (a labor of love which the Association is actively continuing), patriotic women of the United States, foremost among whom are the Daughters of the American Revolution, are actively planning to preserve some of the better known of our nation's shrines, as well as fittingly mark thousands of historic sites.

Among these ventures is the restoration of Stratford Hall in Westmoreland County, Va., the birthplace of two signers of the Declaration of Independence and of Gen. Robert E. Lee. In this undertaking, women representing all parts of the country are to have an active part.

The Daughters of the American Revolution have furnished the surrender room at Moore House in Yorktown, where the terms of Lord Cornwallis' surrender to General Washington were drawn up.

A movement is underway, headed by Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, "The Manse" at Staunton, Va., birthplace of Woodrow Wilson. Mrs. Hull stated, "I was born in Staunton, too. Naturally, I am interested in making a national shrine of the home of one of Virginia's most famous statesmen."

In commenting upon the interest of the women in preserving and marking historic spots, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt recently stated that this was "a unifying influence in the nation."

Such voluntary action by citizens also constitutes the most sincere tribute to the man or woman whose memory the shrine preserves. Indeed it may be doubted whether one is worthy of such a memorial whose services to his country or to humanity were not of sufficient importance to inspire such spontaneous action on the part of his countrymen.—Scottish Rite Service.

ARE YOU A HYPOCRITE?

The average motorist is an unconscious hypocrite. That's a strong characterization—but a little impersonal analysis will substantiate it.

How often have you roundly criticized some driver for an offense which you commit periodically yourself? How often have you taken comfort in the thought that accidents are caused by some reckless breed of motorists with whom you have nothing in common, thus dodging the fact that only pure fool's luck has saved you from a crash on a dozen occasions? Have you ever attempted to get a ticket "fixed"—even though you pay lip service to the cause of aggressive, impartial law enforcement?

It is a fact that a large proportion of accidents are caused by the reckless, ten percent, but the other ninety percent periodically take chances and are responsible for many of our annual auto deaths.

Who, for example, doesn't sometimes pass a car when the stretch of empty road that can be seen is too short for safety? Who doesn't occasionally succumb to the lure of excessive speed—even though he has little or nothing to do when his destination is reached? Who doesn't periodically neglect necessary repairs to brakes, lights or steering mechanism, on the theory that he will get around to it when more convenient?

We'll go a good way toward reducing accidents when the average driver begins asking himself such questions and returning honest answers. Accident prevention, so far as it concerns the human element, is a personal, individual matter—and each individual has to really want to drive safely at all times before he can analyze his driving errors and correct them.—Industrial News Review.

Vineyard Pests Are Lured to Death By Pale Blue Light

PACIFIC GROVE, CALIF.—Pale blue light, beckoning through the darkness, proves a fatal lure to the grape leafhopper, serious pest in vineyards, it was reported here before the meeting of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, by J. K. Ellsworth of the University of California.

Females of the species responded most readily to the deadly blue will-o'-the-wisp. Counts of large sample catches showed 88 per cent female insects. Which, of course, is all to the good from the viticulturist's standpoint; females are the ones that produce new crops of leafhoppers.

Many light colors were experimented with, before the attractiveness of pale blue was discovered. Other colors attract other insects. The lights have also been used as an easy means for obtaining insects to feed to laboratory animals.

The lights lure the flying victims. When they arrive at their gleaming goal, they fly against high-tension wires that kill them instantly.

Hens Say "Thanks" With Eggs.
Hens in poultry houses ventilated and warmed by electricity say their "thank yous" with eggs, reported J. C. Scott of the Puget Sound Power and Light company.

The problem faced by his company was to provide better working conditions for the hens kept in small individual cage nests in a large "egg factory" in the Pacific Northwest. The solution was found by shutting doors and windows, and blowing air in through a ten-inch opening near the ceiling. Baffle plates were used to prevent drafts, and electric heaters warmed the incoming air when frosty weather came.

The results, Mr. Scott stated, were healthier, more comfortable hens—and, of course, more eggs in winter when prices are best.

Forest Diseases Spread By Wind Blown Insects

OTTAWA.—Aerial invasions caused by winds blowing large numbers of dangerous insects hundreds of miles in a few hours constitute a menace to our forests and agriculture, Dr. E. P. Felt, entomologist of Stamford, Conn., told the American Association for the Advancement of Science here.

Dutch elm disease, now a serious problem in the eastern United States, is being spread presumably by wind drift of the European elm bark beetle, the principal carrier of the disease, Doctor Felt indicated.

Using balloons to measure the travel of insects drifting at considerable heights in air currents, he came to the conclusion that this mode of travel is more important than hitherto believed.

Winds may carry insects in large numbers for 800 miles under exceptional circumstances. Insects drifting at rates of 50 to 100 miles per hour are not uncommon.

The appearance each year of the southern cotton moth in New England and southern Canada is attributed to wind drift, and Doctor Felt believes that the recent distribution of the European spruce sawfly in a large part of New England is due to the wind.

Novel Pipe Design Used By Engineers at Denver

DENVER, COLO.—The longest self-supporting pipe in the world has been erected at Denver on the basis of a new theory of engineering design, according to B. G. Norfolk.

The pipe, which measures 78 inches in diameter, spans the North Platte river for a distance of 205 feet and is supported only by a single pier at the middle and, of course, at the ends. This achievement was made possible by preventing distortion of the pipe at the supports through the use of stiffener rings. Further, the wall thickness of the pipe was reduced and tapered. The pipe is only 1/4-inch thick at the ends and 1 1/2 inches at the center, although it is designed to carry 40 million gallons of sewage a day.

Where the pipe is supported at each end it rests on legs which in turn rest on rollers to allow for movement due to expansion.

Preserving Trick Makes Minnows Enduring Bait

LONDON.—A process of preserving minnows and sprats, which may revolutionize angling and start a new fashion in jewelry, has been reported by Councillor Fred Nevison of Barnard Castle.

When preserved by his method, minnows and sprats, he says, are perfectly dry, hard and unbreakable, while retaining their lifelike appearance.

Nevison finds that these preserved minnows are far more alluring as bait for trout and salmon fishing than untreated minnows.

The process has been patented, and various specimens for fishing purposes and for personal wear are to be put on the market.

"The idea came to me through the bursting of a minnow when I was fishing. My friends laughed, but I was determined to go on with my experiments. I see great possibilities in the idea for the preservation of rare specimens of fish for museums and schools.

"I've preserved frogs, newts, caterpillars, and even a blue-bottle, which was so lifelike that when I pinned it on my coat my friends kept trying to knock it off. I have mounted newts, small frogs, and minnows. They make fine tiepins and brooches."

RICH FOSSIL STORE IN SURFACE STRIP

Offers Interesting Study of Pliocene Era.

BERKELEY, CALIF.—One of the greatest fossil beds in the United States has been discovered in Contra Costa county, Calif., and is being worked by the University of California.

Secrecy of the discovery has been maintained to date owing to the fact that the bed is on private property, but it is now admitted that it ranks in importance with the famous Ranch La Brea in southern California.

The layer, in which the fossils of animals, birds and reptiles of the Lower Pliocene period of three to four million years ago, are imbedded, is about two feet thick, runs along near the surface of the earth for about 100 feet and then goes to a depth that has not been ascertained.

The great number of fossils in the bed is attributed to the fact that it represents an ancient water hole or valley water course to which the early creatures came to drink—and to die. No other reason can be supposed for the accumulation of so many specimens in one spot.

The fossils are much more ancient than those of the La Brea pits, but not nearly as well preserved.

One of the best specimens taken out is that of a dog of the most primitive type yet found. This is the short-jawed type, with bone-crunching teeth similar to those of the hyena. It is about the size of the German shepherd dog but more heavily built. It was a branch of the family tree of the dogs and later became extinct.

Many Indians in Early Ohio

Indian tribes living within the present boundaries of the state at the time the white settlement commenced were the Erie, or Cat tribe, one of the earliest to inhabit the state, who dwelt in the region south of the lake, to which they have given their name; the Iroquois, who inhabited northeastern Ohio; the Wyandots, the entire northwestern part of the state; the Delawares, most of the region east of the Scioto; between the Scioto and Miami rivers were the Shawnees, while beyond lay the lands of the Miamis, which extended westward into Indiana, observes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Various other tribes had occasional residence in the state—a remnant of the Mohegans who had united themselves with the Delawares, a few bands of the Senecas and Tuscarawas, and a single band of Ottawas.

Alaska Salmon Will Be Studied by Scientists

WASHINGTON.—Scientists of the bureau of fisheries this summer are starting a thoroughgoing investigation of the salmon fisheries of Bristol bay, Alaska, for several years the scene of Japanese fishing operations.

The Bristol bay region is famous as the most important area in North America for the production of red salmon, its fishery products having an annual value of about $12,000,000.

The Japanese have explored the high seas fishing grounds and know a lot about the salmon, but scant information is available in Washington as to what happens to the salmon after they leave the rivers for their migration to the sea until they return to the shore areas to spawn.

Some of the questions for which federal experts soon hope to find an answer are: Where are the feeding grounds of Bristol bay salmon during their sojourn at sea, covering a period of from one to four years? At what time of the year and where do the schools of salmon congregate before they start their swim to shore? What are the routes of this migration, and what are the factors affecting the migration, such as age, food supply, growth and homing instinct? And what legislation or administration action is necessary to conserve the supply of salmon?

Invented Game of Chess

It is said that the politicians of Hindustan invented the game of chess, or board-warfare, to keep the minds of men off real warfare. The Hindu name was chatur-anga, the four angas or members of the army—elephants, horses, chariots, and foot-soldiers. Finding of well-worn chessmen on the site of the ancient city of Tepe Gawra in northern Iraq is evidence, says London Tit-Bits magazine, that chess or some very similar game was played by the people of Mesopotamia as early as 4000 B. C. The Persians called the game chetrang; the Arabs, shatranj; later the Italians corrupted this to scacchi; whence the German scach, the French echec, and our chess.

Efficiency

"How about two of them?" asked the druggist of the man who was buying a toothbrush. "One for your wife?"

"No, thanks. When I buy a new one, I always give her the old one."

He paused while several other customers in the store gasped, and then he added: "She uses it to clean her shoes."—Emporia Gazette.

Joan of Arc Story One

Of the Most Appealing

Few stories in history are more appealing than that of the French peasant girl, Joan of Arc, who saved her country, but was soon afterward burned at the stake, writes Leslie Hartley in the Washington Star.

Born during the Hundred Years war, Joan, who was very pious, was deeply troubled by the woes of her country, much of which had been taken by the English and their Burgundian allies.

When she was only fourteen, she said she heard heavenly voices which commanded her to liberate France and have its king crowned.

So Joan brooded and prayed for three years, but when the English laid siege to Orleans she was moved to action. Journeying to the king to ask for an army to defend Orleans, she was regarded as insane at first, but eventually convinced the court of her sincerity.

Dressed in a shining coat of mail, mounted on a steed, and at the head of an army which was inspired by the courage of this mere girl, she seized the English forts and made a triumphant entry into Orleans. The maid had fulfilled one of her missions.

Now Joan returned to Prince Charles and demanded that he go to Rheims, where all kings went to be crowned. Eventually she coaxed the indifferent king to comply with this wish, and stood at his side during the coronation.

Joan now had many enemies, however, and even the king failed to show his gratitude and allowed her to be seized by the English. The maid was tried as a "witch" and sentenced to be burned at the stake on May 30, 1431.

As she died, however, the French people shouted: "A saint has died to save France." Revered as a heroine, she was later canonized, and in 1920 was placed on the role of saints.

Devil's Island Prison

Cares for Few Convicts

Every one knows of Devil's island, but not many know the truth about it. Ever since the settlement was founded more than half a century ago it has caught the popular fancy, not only on account of its name, but also on account of the celebrities who have been sent there, relates a writer in the Chicago Tribune.

As far as the general public is concerned, there is only one prison in French Guiana, and that one is on Devil's island. As a matter of fact, the island houses only a dozen or so convicts, as compared with 8,000 in the remainder of this French possession.

Devil's island receives only one class of prisoners: the men convicted of having betrayed France. Captain Dreyfus was one of these. Those found guilty of crimes other than treason are incarcerated on the mainland or on St. Joseph and Royale isles. These latter two, along with Devil's, form a cluster about 10 miles off the mainland. Devil's itself is a solid rock of about 35 acres, with little on top except coconut palms and a few small buildings, most of them stone and cement cottages.

The waters raging about the island are so fierce, and the sharks so numerous, that escape is impossible.

Obtaining Attar of Roses

Attar, or otto, of roses is a perfume or essential oil distilled from certain varieties of rose. Flowers are gathered and at once placed in copper stills heated with a wood fire, and partially filled with spring water. The distillate from the first operation is again distilled and the distillate received in narrow-necked bottles. This distillate contains a large proportion of the oil suspended in the water, and on allowing it to stand at a temperature not exceeding 60 degrees Fahrenheit, the oil gradually rises to the top and is skimmed off. About one ounce of attar is the yield from 150 pounds of rose-leaves.

Cockroaches Hide During Daytime

Cockroaches have flattened horny bodies and large spiny legs, which enable them to move quickly. They remain hidden by day in cracks and crevices, coming out at night to search for food. They are especially fond of all foodstuffs liked by man. The eggs of cockroaches are developed within a horny capsule or packet, which is deposited by the female, usually in a warm moist place. The young nymphs hatching from the eggs are similar in general appearance to the adults, but are smaller and lack wings. They shed their skins several times while growing. Cockroaches emit a peculiar odor which is sometimes imparted to food over which they have walked.

Houseflies Carry Disease

Little was known of the disease-carrying ability of flies until the time of the Spanish-American war. Scientists studying the typhoid fever epidemic at Camp Chickamauga found that the food of soldiers encamped there was contaminated with the germs of the disease by flies which had fed in the latrines and traveled from them to the kitchens and mess halls. Since then it has been repeatedly shown that house flies carry other diseases, particularly those of the intestinal tract.

Reducing and Goiter

By
DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

ONE of the tragic results of reducing weight too rapidly either by reducing the amount of food eaten or by taking one or more of the "obesity" cures is to find that when the desired weight has been reached the loss of weight continues. With this continuous loss of weight other alarming symptoms appear—loss of appetite, nervousness, trembling of the limbs, sleeplessness and rapid heart beat, until finally the severe form of goiter—exophthalmic goiter or Grave's disease—develops.

Some years ago research in the Lahey clinic, Boston, reported a number of cases in which Grave's disease resulted from the use of thyroid extract to reduce weight.

Dr. J. H. Means, president of the American College of Physicians, Boston, and his associates, Drs. S. Heitz and J. Lerman, in the Annals of Internal Medicine, record 35 cases of goiter following loss of weight. In 14 of these cases the loss of weight before the goiter symptoms occurred was due to the reducing cures.

Symptoms and Diet.

Dr. Means and his associates warn physicians and patients against too vigorous reducing cures for overweight. And in cases where operation for goiter is found necessary that the patient be built up as much as possible before operation.

The general symptoms of this loss of weight are general weakness, loss of muscle tissue, thinning of the blood, weakening of the heart muscle and loss of morale or ambition.

To correct the condition the following diet suggestions should be followed: (a) Plenty of starch foods—bread, potatoes, sugar; (b) plenty of foods rich in vitamins and minerals—milk, cream, butter, cheese, leafy vegetables, tomatoes, oranges; (c) plenty of fat foods—butter, cream, egg yolk.

Meat and white of eggs—animal proteins—are not considered advisable, as they "speed up" the body processes and may prevent gain in weight.

Need for Exercise.

Years ago when it was found that rest, fresh air, and rich nutritious food would halt the progress of tuberculosis, it was not unusual to see these patients return to their homes, plump, with a good color, and apparently perfectly well. In a few months or even weeks it was noticed that this weight was gradually being lost, that the appetite was poor, and the cough was returning. Another stay in the sanatorium then became necessary.

The loss of weight and strength in many of these cases was due to the fact that the individual did not follow the method of living taught him in the sanatorium; he became careless about his rest periods, food, and the outdoors. In the majority of cases the loss of weight and strength and the return of the symptoms of tuberculosis were due to the fact that the patient had rested almost entirely at the sanatorium and had taken no exercise whatever. Thus when he returned home and attempted to do some physical work, there was no strength in muscles, heart, and lungs, and the relapse followed.

"Serbia," Not "Servia"

"Serbia" is the accepted English form of the name of the Balkan kingdom which became part of Yugoslavia after the World war. Before the outbreak of the war "Servia" was the favored spelling of this name in America. In fact, on February 2, 1897, the United States geographic board adopted that spelling and it was followed by the Department of State. But "Servia" was objectionable to the inhabitants of that country because of its analogy with Latin "servus," meaning slave, and because the Slavic spelling of the name in Latin characters is "Srba" or "Srbija." Accordingly, on March 3, 1915, the geographic board reversed its earlier decisions in favor of "Serbia."

A Totalitarian State

A totalitarian state is one with a highly centralized form of government under the control of a political group which permits no recognition nor representation to other political parties. In dictionaries a totalitarian state is defined as a state, conceived of as having one political party co-extensive with the population, in which the individual is entirely subordinated to the state. It is a highly centralized state under the control of one political party. Other political parties are suppressed or "co-ordinated" into one party. The conflict of classes is obscured by emphasis on organic unity of state.

Opossum Only One Among

Animals That 'Act Dead'

There are actors in the animal world. What would you think of a creature that could act so well that it allowed itself to be vigorously beaten without showing the least sign of life?

There have been actual cases recorded of the American opossum lying low while this was done to him, and it is from the habit of this little animal that we get the term "playing 'possum" which is used when anybody keeps specially quiet and "says nuffin," notes a writer in London Answers Magazine.

Many of the lizards sham death to get out of harm's way, and toads, too, not being endowed by nature or a quick getaway, deflate themselves and assume unnatural shapes to escape trouble.

The African buffalo is another experienced actor. Many an unwary hunter has brought down one of these magnificent beasts, and without taking the precaution of reloading his gun, has approached it thinking it dead. When he got near, the wounded animal has suddenly got to its feet and charged, although it was apparently dead only a moment before.

This is not just an odd case of the buffalo being stunned, for experienced big-game hunters all tell of the same characteristic.

You will not be surprised to hear that monkeys are adepts at lying low when there is trouble around, and even elephants have been known to "act dead."

Titanic's Last Menu Is Cherished by Survivor

PITTSBURGH.—A menu of the last dinner served on the Titanic just before she struck the iceberg that sent her to the bottom of the Atlantic in April, 1912, is the prized possession of J. I. Flynn, a Pittsburgh department store executive. Flynn, who believes the menu is the only one in existence, said he had been offered $3,000 for it.

Flynn recalls that at dinner on the night of the disaster he had asked some friends to write their names on the menu. "It would not fit in to my tuxedo pocket," Flynn said, "so on deck I put it into my overcoat pocket."

He was sleeping when the alarm was sounded. He jumped from his bed, flung the overcoat over his shoulders and dashed on deck. A sailor commanded him and Edward Calderhead, another passenger, to man a boat loaded with women.

Cats as Large as Lions Lived in Maryland Cave

Monster cats, as big as lions or tigers and probably just as fierce, were the terrors of western Maryland about a million years ago. Bones of these creatures, together with those of 46 other animals who lived near the city of Cumberland at some interval early in the last Ice age, have been described by a Smithsonian Institution paleontologist.

These bones were gathered from a limestone cavern, opened when a railroad cut was being constructed, and represent a strange assortment of creatures ranging from mastodon to crocodile.

The presumption is that in Ice age days the cavern was a natural trap with an opening directly on top through which the animals fell. Once inside, there was no way to get out.

It was a curious assemblage of northern and southern animals. Bones of wolverines and martens, types now found only in the far northern woods, are mingled with those of tapirs, which now range no farther north than Central America.

This can only mean, the Smithsonian man believes, that the bones were assembled only over a very considerable period, possibly several thousand years, during which there was a notable change in the climate. The Ice age extended over approximately two million years. But during this time there were several retreats and advances of the glaciers with intervals of relatively warm climate.

Tanager Not Friendly Bird

The tanager is not what one would call a friendly bird, like our robin or cardinal, and some of the experts even go so far as to call him stupid. The female of the species is such a plain bird that few persons would even suspect that they had any relationship to each other. This is the almost universal rule in nature. The males often are gaudy in coloration, whereas the females are very plain. The peacock and peahen are excellent examples; so are the male and female guppies, in the aquarium.

Marten Prized for Its Fur

With the build of a dachshund and the color of a red fox, the sleeky marten is highly prized for its fur. So soft and rich looking is its pelt that it has been nicknamed the "American sable," says a writer in the Washington Post. Martens are shy, but for their size, are among the most bloodthirsty of all animals. They live in trees, kill rabbits, squirrels and other small game. Despite this, they make good house pets. Once tamed, they're death on rats and mice.

Violin and Cello Built

For Solos in Large Halls

PASADENA, CALIF.—After eight years of experimentation, Dr. Hugo Benioff, associate professor of seismology at the California Institute of Technology, has a violin and a cello that are calculated to solve the problem of volume in solo performances in huge auditoriums.

The instruments have the conventional forms and outlines except that the wooden front and back are omitted. In the place of these resonance chambers, a small aluminum container is placed beneath the strings. In the case of the cello, the container holds a small piece of crystal. Vibrations from the strings cause the crystal to vibrate. A wire carries these vibrations to amplifying devices and thence to a loud speaker.

In the violin, a slightly different principle is used. In place of the crystal, there is an electro-magnetic device. When a string vibrates to the magnetic field of this device, a current is produced which is amplified on the loud speaker.

ALMANAC FOR '39 FORECASTS UPSETS

World Events of Sweeping Importance Seen.

LONDON.—Foulsham's Original Old Moore's Almanack, which claims to be published under an original copyright dating back to 1697, prophesies world events of sweeping importance for next year. The decline of Benito Mussolini's dictatorship is predicted for November, 1939, the lunation of which "is adverse for Mussolini, whose sway will be rapidly declining through discontent fostered by economic stress, partly through the reigning dynasty now exercising much more control than hitherto in Italian affairs."

Of July the Almanack says "Italy and Germany appear to be both faced with financial and economic troubles of so stubborn a nature as to be incapable of relief merely by resort to the printing press and these difficulties are likely to render the position of Mussolini somewhat precarious."

Trouble for Stalin Seen.

Josef Stalin's danger month is May, when "political affairs in Russia, likewise that country's relations with other powers, appear to be involved and matters may be further complicated by the eclipse of Stalin." An obvious threat of hostilities between Russia and Japan is predicted.

In December "there is some danger of a clash between the United States and Japan, who may again be guilty of aggression in China—in which case our kinsman's patience may be strained to breaking-point. Alternately or in addition, Russia may be involved, for Mars sets at Moscow."

But as early as January, the Almanack says the lunar position at Tokyo suggests a break with America. Boom conditions are prophesied for America at the end of June, with bountiful crops and good trade in Italy in July.

President Roosevelt is promised "an immense and well-deserved personal triumph" in September through playing a leading part in preserving international peace. This may include, the Almanack says, "the final settlement of at least one war abroad."

British Scandal Forecast.

In May the British government "will be worried by a scandal affecting a member, and distressed and embarrassed by retirement of two of its greatest figures."

The Almanack says further: "In the event of its difficulties precipitating a general election, the government of the day would probably be returned to power, but possibly with a reduced majority."

In June the views of the British government "may be at variance with those of the masses and an election is possible in this or the preceding month. At this time wars and rumors of war will loom large on the political horizon, but the majority of people will favor a refusal to take sides and be for keeping out of war at all costs, provided only neither our national honor nor our vital interests are at stake."

The horoscope of Neville Chamberlain indicates that it would be wise for him to retire in the middle of 1941 and mentions Anthony Eden as his probable successor.

FIGHT ON 'RACKET' PROBLEM OF FARMER

League for Less Noise to Campaign in Country.

NEW YORK.—Noises that disturb sleep slow up industry and produce jangled nerves are no longer a problem which concern only the big city, according to Earnest H. Peabody, president of the League for Less Noise, whose organization has launched a battle against "racket."

Gone are the days, says Mr. Peabody, when the farmer's little white cottage by a country road provides a haven from the raucous clatter of automobile horns, the roar of traffic and the screech of car brakes. Super-highways, with four-way traffic lanes, a continuous flow of express trucks all hours of the day and night, impatient drivers pounding on nerve-shattering claxons and the staccato roar of open exhausts, have taken the roar of the city to the wide open spaces.

Down With Clatter.

The League for Less Noise, molded by civic indignation and allied with science, is campaigning against unnecessary clatter. While Mr. Peabody's organization fights for city and town ordinances that do away with useless tooting of car horns, blaring radios and phonographs at unseasonably hours and unneeded blasts from steam whistles, science moves ahead with its fight on machine and construction vibration, producer of much of the noise and discord that slows up efficiency in industry.

Apologists for unnecessary noise, Mr. Peabody pointed out, often urge that "noise-haters" are merely cranks. Any normal person, they have insisted, can become accustomed to any kind of noise or vibration in a few days. Investigation and study, however, have proven the fallacy of this belief, he declares.

Supporting the contention that noise and vibration slow up workers, Mr. Peabody offers as an example the experiment of two investigators, H. C. Weston and S. Adams, who selected comparable groups of workers engaged in weaving cloth on factory looms. Loom rooms where such weaving is done usually are very noisy. Two rooms were chosen; one of about average noisiness, another which had been quieted as much as was practicable, although even this still was noisier than the average New York street.

Production of cloth in the two rooms was compared. Workers in the quiet room came out about 8 per cent ahead, confirming the conclusion from all similar investigations that noise hinders successful human effort and that quietude assists it.

Introduction of rubber mountings, called "vibro-insulators," to put machinery in its "stocking feet" and for use in concrete building construction, have done much toward lessening noise and vibration.

A recent seminar on timber and concrete held by Prof. John M. Lessells at Massachusetts Institute of Technology at Cambridge, brought out the three-fold purpose of the vibro-insulator: to reduce maintenance on the machine itself; to save the concrete, or other foundations from deterioration, and to reduce physical fatigue and make for more efficient workers.

Rubber Mountings Help.

Automobile engineers now know positively that the maintenance on parts of both engine and chassis has been materially reduced by the use of rubber mountings on the engine. Punch presses, and other badly vibrating machines, now ride on rubber.

Science, however, has not confined to cities all of its efforts toward vibration and noise elimination. Tractors which formerly clanked noisily across field in front of plow or cultivator, now glide quietly over the same surface on pneumatic tires.

Farmers and residents of the smaller communities are also benefiting through the co-operation of the railroad companies in the drive for less noise, with the introduction of mellow-toned train whistles which provide the same warning signal but eliminate the ear-splitting screeches of former devices. The Florida East Coast railroad now has the muted whistles installed on all its engines. The installation followed a ballot by persons living along the right-of-way after four whistles had been demonstrated.

Plastic Surgery Is Added

To Skills of Embalmers

DENVER.—Plastic surgery has been added to the skills which the modern embalmer must understand.

C. W. Porterfield, of Holton, Kan., first vice president of the National Association of Funeral Directors, explained to the forty-first annual convention of Colorado Funeral Directors that many embalmers have become professionals in their skill as plastic surgeons.

"A knowledge of plastic surgery enables the embalmer to make like the features of persons marred in automobile accidents and through mutilating diseases," he explained.

Psychology is another field of learning in which the undertaker should be informed, Porterfield said.

"The funeral director," he said, "is learning a better understanding of the psychology of grief and how to assuage that grief."

Mail Franking Privilege

Held by Adams for Life

John Adams, as a member of congress, was among the first to be accorded the mail franking privilege and this he retained as ambassador to the various courts of Europe, as Vice President under Washington, as President and afterward, by special act of congress, for life. Aside from Jefferson, recalls a writer in the New York Herald Tribune, no other President has had the privilege as long as Adams and, curiously, both died on the same day, July 4, 1826, exactly 50 years after both had signed the Declaration of Independence.

In the first election of 1789 Adams received the second highest number of electoral college votes and was declared Vice President. He accepted the office, albeit with a bit of chagrin as he did not relish being second, and although he had great admiration for Washington, he felt that his own contribution to the cause of the infant republic had merited the greater reward.

In the vice presidency he served the two terms under Washington during the formation of the first political parties. The Federalists, led by Hamilton, believed in a strong central government, and the Democratic-Republicans, followers of Jefferson, in the supremacy of the states. Adams belonged to the former but begrudged Hamilton the leadership and as a consequence all but missed the presidency in the election of 1797.

Adams' term in the presidency was not happy. He was out of harmony with his party. The country came to the verge of war with France, which Adams' personal action evaded but at the expense of much of his prestige at home. Lastly the notorious alien and sedition laws which he had supported brought resolutions of disapproval from several of the states. He was defeated for re-election and in 1801 retired to his home in Quincy, never again to take part in public life.

City of Pittsburgh Was

Named for William Pitt

In the tall, imposing figure of William Pitt, earl of Chatham, the American colonies had a distinguished champion in the British parliament in the period before the American Revolution.

Much of Britain's dominance of North America, writes Leslie Hartley in the Washington Star, was due to Pitt's efforts and in a series of expeditions against the French he had cultivated the loyal co-operation of the colonists.

When England began a program of taxation which these colonists regarded as unjust, Pitt championed their cause. He secured the repeal of the stamp act passed in 1765 and protested again when a tax was levied on tea, glass, paper and other articles.

As the quarrel deepened, Pitt, in 1775 introduced a bill in parliament which declared the supremacy of England over the colonists in all cases except taxation and he added: "You cannot conquer the colonists."

Though he was never willing to recognize American independence, he continued to plead for conciliation.

America did not forget his friendship and among others, the city of Pittsburgh is named in his honor.

Howler Monkey Is Noisy

The howler monkey, whose deep-throated voice echoes through the depths of the Panamanian jungles can be heard in the jungle day and night, and many visitors have mistaken it for the roar of lions. His voice, like that of the singing toad, is louder from a distance, decreasing in volume as one approaches. But even at close range it is unusual when compared with the birdlike notes of white-faced and other species of monkeys. Even though he is small in comparison to a lion, the mantled howler is the largest and heaviest of all New World monkeys. His fur is unusually beautiful, shading from very dark brown tones to light. He is of a gregarious nature, traveling in troops and swinging through the tree tops. He swings by his tail, a characteristic peculiar to New World monkeys.

Hawaii Has Largest Volcanoes

Colossal is just another adjective to rangers in the United States National park on Hawaii island.

The most westerly park in America contains, the rangers report, these features: Kilauea, the world's largest active volcano; Haleakala, the world's largest extinct volcano; Mauna Kea, the highest mountain in the world rising directly from the sea (13,825 feet). Mauna Loa (13,675 feet), the largest single mountain mass in the world, and the world's most symmetrical mountain; Halemaumau, the world's only volcanic fire pit where one may safely drive to the very brink of the crater.

Hanging Gardens for King's Wife

The Hanging Gardens of Babylon were a system of terraced gardens near the Euphrates river, attached to the palace of King Nebuchadnezzar, which was 60 miles from the present city of Bagdad and not far from the eastern border of the Syrian desert of northern Arabia. It is said that Nebuchadnezzar constructed these prodigious gardens to gratify the whim of his wife, Amyitis, to have something of her native hills and forests near.

Coffee a Most Flexible

Bean Used in Many Ways

The world does move, as proved by the historical fact that once it was necessary to "bootleg" coffee, notably in Mohammedan countries, because it was classified as an intoxicant and banned by religious regulation. The advent of the "coffee house," or "cafe," centers of political, artistic, and social life in many a country of the western world, marked the triumph of science because it had been discovered that coffee was only a mild stimulant, and there is a world of difference between a stimulant and an intoxicant, observes Jessie Marie DeBoth in the Boston Globe.

Coffee was not even known to be edible or potable before the Ninth century of the Christian era, and it was not until the middle of the Sixteenth century that the ban against it was permanently removed everywhere in the world. Originally called "cawaah," in its Oriental spelling, coffee came by way of Europe into the Baltic sea area, thence into Holland and England, and thence to North America. The western world dominates the coffee trade and ranks high in coffee use.

When we step in to buy our favorite blend, ground to suit our own method of brewing, for just a few cents a pound, it seems hard to realize that when the coffee houses in England first had it coffee cost $20 a pound. Naturally, it was not then a household beverage, and many are the stories written around the meetings of the big-wigs, intelligentsia and better financed leaders of the day, who gathered in the public coffee houses to discuss the problems of the moment.

Most coffee sold is blended from a number of different kinds of beans, each with a character of its own. What you like depends upon your personal preference for certain of these characteristics, and there is everything available from the light, mild blend to the heavy, mouth-filling flavor that seems to fill the house with its tantalizing odor.

No Division Between the Words in Oldest Bibles

In the very oldest Bibles in the world there is no division between the words. A line might look like this: NOWHENJWSWASBORNINBETHEHEMOFFJ. These are called uncial manuscripts and only two or three are in existence, according to a writer in the Montreal Herald. The Bibles used by men whose parents might have seen the apostles themselves were early translations, for holy men were soon at work translating the Scriptures into nearly every language of Christendom.

When everything was done by hand there was always the danger of copyists making mistakes, and indeed towards the end of the Fourth century so many mistakes had crept into the Latin versions that Damascus, bishop of Rome, looked for some one to go to Bethlehem to translate and revise the Hebrew Scriptures, and with the help of Greek and Latin manuscripts bring out a new Latin version of the Bible.

A monk was chosen for the task. His name was Eusebius Heironymus, but he is known in history as St. Jerome. He lived in a barren cell in Palestine and he carried through, practically unaided, his great work which is called the "Latin Vulgate." His New Testament was finished in the year 385, and he afterwards translated from the original Hebrew the Old Testament, the whole being done in a manner which no other scholar of his day would have been capable of doing.

Cabinet System the Idea

Of President Washington

President Washington practically created the cabinet system, which was not provided for in the Constitution, although that document made provision for the division of administrative duties into various departments, the heads of which should be required to make reports of the activities of their departments to the chief executive, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The administrative branches originally were three—the department of state, treasury and war. Early in his presidency, Washington instituted an advisory council of the three department heads. This was the beginning of the cabinet meetings, which have been held ever since.

An officer called the attorney general was a part of the government from the beginning, but he was originally an adjunct of the judiciary, to be prosecutor for the national government and counsel to the President and department heads on matters of law. Washington soon added the attorney general to his advisory council, but it was not until 1870 that this officer was made a cabinet member and the head of the department of justice.

In 1798, incidental to preparations for war with France, the Navy department was created separate from the war department. The postmaster general did not become a cabinet member and head of a separate department until 1829.

In 1849, a number of offices and bureaus previously distributed among the other divisions were combined into the department of the interior. The department of agriculture was set up in 1889, having existed previously as a subordinate branch of the interior department. In 1903 a department of commerce and labor was created, and in 1913, it was divided into two departments.

Pewter Once Held Favor, Then Made Into Bullets

Pewter was the product of a time when economic conditions governed actual needs, and neither in composition nor design was it other than what it was intended to be—an unpretentious household commodity for daily use.

Pewter speaks of the days in our country when history was in the making. We associate with it the stern and vigorous life of the early settlers. Surrounding it is much of pathos and romance, for more than one piece of choice pewter was thrown into the melting pot to make bullets to defend the home established in the new land.

For a period of nearly 100 years preceding the War of the Revolution, notes Alice R. Rollins in the Los Angeles Times, it was practically the only tableware available. Gradually it had supplanted the wooden ware used during the early years of settlement and in turn gave way to the china and silver of more prosperous times.

Although much of the pewter used in the earlier part of the colonial period was brought from England, a great deal of it was made by craftsmen of the colonies.

Almost every community had its pewterers. Little skill was required to produce plates, basins, mugs and the like as they required only casting, finishing on a lathe and a little soldering or welding.

Many of the designs were copied from the English pieces which were shipped to the colonies, but on the whole the American pewterers confined themselves to making plain and practical pieces of their own designing.

Lesson for August 28

ELI: RESPONSIBILITY FOR OTHERS

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 3:11-14; 4:12-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—Train up a child in the way he should go. Proverbs 22:6.

PRIMARY TEXT—When God Spoke to a Boy.

JUNIOR TEXT—When God Spoke to a Junior.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Should We Do as We Please?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Challenge of Christian Fatherhood.

The responsibilities and privileges of fatherhood need special emphasis, and the lesson of today gives excellent opportunity for such consideration. Too often the rearing of children, which is almost inevitably largely in the hands of the mother, is entirely delegated to her, and the father becomes the man who pays the bills, occasionally carries out a severe act of discipline, but otherwise is almost a stranger to his children.

Girls as well as boys appreciate and respond to the loving and understanding fellowship of a father who really improves the opportunity to build himself into the lives of his children.

Eli is a striking illustration of a man who had attained an honorable position in life and who had discharged his public duties with success, but who failed his own boys, because of weak indulgence. Not a few Christian workers have followed in Eli's path.

I. A Weak Father and Vile Sons (3:13).

The sons of Eli were wicked men who dared even to use the service of the temple for the gratification of fleshly appetites and lusts. (See 2:12-17, 22.) Eli protested against their most flagrant sin (2:23, 24), but evidently he had lost his influence over them, for they did not hearken. It is not always true that the wickedness of a son is the result of weakness in the father, nor is it always the case that weak fathers have vile sons. Often the sons live far better lives than their fathers, and frequently a godly and faithful father suffers the heartbreak of having a wayward son. But usually "like father, like son" is true. Boys learn from their fathers—not so much by words of admonition, as by deeds. Let us tell our boys how to live by first living a consistent Christian life, and then lovingly but insistently requiring of them during their days of irresponsibility conformity to the standards of God. We need to build moral fiber into American youth of our country if it is not to fall into the decadence of the civilizations of the past.

II. Judgment—Personal and National (3:12, 14; 4:17).

Sin brings a horrible harvest of sorrow, suffering and judgment, not only to the individual but to his family, and ultimately to the nation. No man can ever divorce himself from his relationship to his family. His people will suffer for his waywardness, perhaps more than he suffers himself. The nation is made up of homes, and consequently when the family suffers the nation will suffer too.

There is a strange theory current that social and political entities have an existence apart from the people who make them up, that our people can drink and gamble and steal and kill, and yet somehow we will still be the "land of the free and the home of the brave." America is what the families in your community and mine are, and our families are what we are. May God help us to be better fathers, mothers, brothers, and sisters.

III. Responsibility and Opportunity.

This division of our lesson is drawn from no special portion of the Scripture lesson, but is presented to place squarely before us the fact that we (and we are speaking specifically to fathers) have a plain and inescapable responsibility for our family life, as well as to emphasize the fact that this is not a responsibility of which we should be afraid. It is God's gift of glorious opportunity.

Eli was a personal success as a priest. He had many commendable qualities, not the least of which was his gracious recognition of the ministry of Samuel, who had grown up in his presence and yet who was recognized by Eli as the messenger of God. (Compare Mark 6:4 and I Tim. 4:12.) But he missed life's greatest opportunity by losing his own boys. Sad to say, many a father has followed him, yes, even we are sorely tempted to make our business (and it may be the "business" of the Lord) the thing of primary concern, and let our children fit in where they may, or not at all.

Let us look on the brighter side in closing our study and recall the inspiring contribution that has been made to our national life, to our spiritual life and our social advancement by those who have come out of the most humble of homes, with the most meager worldly advantages, but with the rugged characters—physically, morally, and spiritually stalwart—which have been nurtured in a true Christian home. It pays, not only for the person and for the family, but also for the nation, to have Christian fathers.

"A man who shows himself too well satisfied with himself, is seldom pleased with others, and they in turn are little disposed to like him."

More than 10,000 cities and towns in the United States now have public water systems, as compared to only 3,000 communities with waterworks in 1900.

Because the many candidates are all "het up" just now, is no reason why voters should become so too. They should keep cool and quietly study the situation. In so far as the Governorship is concerned, we believe one candidate about as good as any other.

Settling an Estate — is no job for an Amateur

A good friend is often a bad executor, as court records plentifully show.

Unless you have a friend who is a unique combination of lawyer, accountant, real estate agent and tax expert, with a longer lifeline than you have — don't name him as your Executor. Instead, have your lawyer draw your Will, appointing this institution as Executor and Trustee. You will then have the assurance of faithful professional handling of the intricate and highly-technical problems involved.

In the interests of your heirs appoint a Corporate Executor and Trustee.

The Birnie Trust Company TANEYTOWN, MARYLAND.

THE suggestion has often been made that banks should "create more credit."

The truth is that a bank is only one of the parties necessary to the creation of credit. The other is a worthy borrower, able to employ bank funds profitably and to repay them when due.

This bank has money to lend. It is anxious to make sound loans. If you wish to borrow, we will welcome your application.
