JAPANESE BEETLES HERE Several Ways of how to Fight Them Most Effectively.

The Department of Entomology of the University of Maryland says that Brief Sketch of Each Day's large numbers of Japanese beetles are now emerging in infested sec-tions of Maryland and that hundreds of people are inquiring about control.

There are four definite things any one can do that will aid in control, according to L. C. Burns, County Agent for Carroll County. None are perfect, he says, but all will help. They are trap, spray, treat lawns, and plant flowers and shrubs that the beetle does not feed upon.

Traps properly operated will catch large numbers of beetles, Dr. Langford states. Last year 40,000 traps were operated in Maryland and more than 615 barrels, or 42 tons, of beetles were caught.

beetles were caught.
Ordinary sprays will not kill the Japanese beetle, he says, because they will not eat sprayed foliage.
However, sprays will keep the beetles off most foliage and keep them from destroying it. A good spray may be prepared by mixing four tablespoonfuls of arsenate of lead with three tablespoonfuls of flour and one gallon of water. If a non-poisonous spray is wanted, mix one and one-half ounces of 4 per cent Derris with one gallon of water. Spray the plants every week.

Lawns may be protected from beetle grub injury, and for a period of five years, by treating with 10 lbs. of arsenate of lead to 1,000 square feet of grass. Treatment may be made at any season of the year, but best results may be obtained if treatment is made in July.

Mr. Burns says that the State, in its cooperative retardation program this year, is operating approximately 100,000 Japanese beetles traps. The trapping is supplemented by parasite colonization work and demonstrations on spraying, dusting, lawn treat-ments, and agricultural adjustment

OLD-TIME BRASS BANDS.

A picture of the sixteen members of the Union Bridge Band of 45 years ago, was published in The Pilot, last week. Friend Stonesifer has a way of thinking of something new from the old times, that stirs up present interest, and this was one of them. Only five of the sixteen members of this band are still living—Bernard M. Hesson, Preston Rinehart, Clarence Gray.

quite a bit of rivalry among them as to which was "best," and each had its champions, largely representing local spirit.

We recall the Oak Orchard Band, one at Uniontown; the Mt. Pleasant or 'Hell town" band, and one at Copperville that developed into a Taneytown band. Of course, there was one in Westminster, one at Pleasant Valley, and for a time there was a colored band that met in a school-house near McKinstry's Mills.

The most—if not all—of these bands had band wagons of the chariot type, usually painted bright red with name of band in yellow on each side. As we recall the leader sat on a high front seat while the bass drummer was high up at the rear. There are, of course, better bands today, more ex-tensive and colorful, but they have hardly the prominence once enjoyed by the old ones.

CEMENT PLANT REOPENS. Is Now Up-to-date and has Abundant Raw Material.

The Union Bridge Cement Co., after extensive improvements and re-modeling, reopende its plant last week, and is now among the very best Cement Companies in the East, and is now working at almost full capacity. The new construction includes huge cement silos for the storage of the finished cement, vast storage bins for the raw limestone and shale, a modern power plant, a new "raw and finished" mill and a waste heat boiler plant. Work is under way on a building for the workmen to use to change clothing before and after work.

The quarries of the plant are located about half a mile away in Frederick county, while the plant is in Carroll County. Limestone and shale are dynamited, loaded into cars, powered by a Diesel electric locomtive, by means of a steam shovel and carried directly into the plant. There is an unlimited supply of limestone on the company's property.

The new power plant generates all of the power necessary for the plant, while the waste heat boiler plant utilizes the waste heat from the kilns to make steam for power. The old power house at the plant has been abandoned.

At the plant laboratory, everything entering into the making of the cement is tested daily and analyzed before the processing begins. The loss in burning the mixture in the kilns is estimated at 22 percent. estimated at 33 percent.

The plant employs a large number of persons from the Union Bridge section. The superintendent is Guy S. LaForge, of Middleburg.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

Organized religious bodies throughout the nation had a total membership of 52,378,026 persons 13 years of age or older in 1938—an increase of 950,568 over the previous year.

This report was being happily noted by many of the religious—minded last week. It was included in the 1939 edition of the Yearbook of American Churches, compiled un-der direction of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and was drawn up by Dr. Herman C Weber, secretary to the general council of the Presbyterian Church.

There were 32,940,965 Protestants 15,492,016 Catholics and 2,930,332 enrolled Jews—all at least 13 years old—in 1938, the yearbook reported. Among Protestant denominations, membership figures included these: Southern Baptist, 4,315,270; Method-ist Church North, 3,980,280; National Baptist Convention (Negro), 3,-437,930; Methodist Church South, 2,495,100; Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. 1,826,044; Disciples of Christ 1,484,337; Northern Baptist Convention, 1,408,501; Protestant Episcopal Church, 1,361,167; United Lutheran Church, 1,140,962; Synodical Lutheran Church, 1,140,962; Synodical Lutheran an Conference, 1,024,774; American Lutheran Conference, 1,024,774; the National Council of the Congregational Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches, 1,003,079; Clemson, C. Pierce Snyder and Chas. the Christian Science Church, 202,-

This was one of several bands that existed in Carroll County at about that time, or before, and there was 1937. The Protestants had 223,229, the Roman Catholics, Jews, 4,150. Among the Protestants, the Southern Baptist Convention had the largest number of churches-

Contributions to all denominations amounted to some $729,000,000. The Methodist Church received the most of any Protestant group-$59,074,-101.—Pathfinder.

TAX BILLS ARE BEING PAID VERY PROMPTLY.

The customary annual state and county tax bills put in their appearance throughout the county about a week ago, and payments are reported to be unusually prompt, due in part no doubt to the 2% cash discount on county taxes; but in larger part to the fact that "ready money" seems more plentiful.

The law in force for several years permitting taxes to be paid in half-year installments has proven popular; and that there was no increase in the rate has also helped.

month of 1938.

According to our summary 12 or 34 percent of the persons killed were pedestrians. Of this number there were 4 children, 2 playing in roadway, 1 stepping from in front or behind vehicle, and 1 crossing not at intersections. Of the adult pedestrians killed, 2 were walking in road left side against traffic, 2 walking in road, right side with traffic, 1 hitching on vehicle, 1 stepping from in front or vehicle, 1 stepping from in front or behind vehicle, and 2 crossing not at intersection. Thirteen or 37 percent were passengers, two or 6 percent were bicyclists, and eight or 23 per cent were the operators themselves.

Most of the accidents occurred on straight roads, and curves, on clear days, dry concrete roads, and during the hours of 11:00 to 12:00 midnight. Sunday had the largest number of deaths, with nine. A majority of these accidents can be attributed to operating too fast for conditions, with various other violations, in passenger cars with no defects, operated by white, normal males, between the ages of 20 to 29 with five years or experience.-E. Lee Elgin, Commissioner.

A FARMER'S WIFE Gives Advice on How to See the World's Fair.

A recent issue of The Rural New Yorker gives the following letter from an Ulster County, N. Y., farm-er's wife as to how to see the World's Fair. Here are a few of her suggestions:

"You can bring your own lunch, for there are special free eating accommodations, where booths sell milk, coffee and soft drinks—one near the American Radiator Building, another near the Westinghouse exhibit, and a third in the amusement area, north of the boat house.

"I do not think it wise to drive to the Fair grounds in your car as it costs to park and you are quite a distance from the entrance. The subway takes you right into the Fair entrance. The minute you pay your 75 cent admission, the place is yours. Foreign buildings, government buildings, commercial exhibits, are only too glad to have you come in free; besides the free spectacles and per-formances are staged daily. You pay only at private concessions. Just start walking in any direction and walk in wherever you see an entrance and they don't stop you.

"Be sure to go into the 'Forward March of America' and you will thank your lucky stars you are still living in 1939 and not 1892, for you'll and you will thank your lucky stars you are still living in 1939 and not 1892, for you'll have the first yourself walking along the first yourself walking along the start walking the start wal suddenly find yourself walking along cobblestone gas-lit streets and you'll bump into a 'cop' of the 1892 days. The street is friendly as you walk along and even visitors like ourselves in that yellow lighted street look as though they are a part of the show. "You may suddenly desire to phone the folks back home and you can do it free at the Telephone Building, but there is a catch to it for your conversation is not very private. Your two way talk will go over loud speakers to the audience composed of visitors just like yourself. They get a laugh out of it but we small-towners are used to party lines.

"In the Steinmetz Hall you'll find a really 'magic kitchen.' This is a good place to rest your aching feet for you can sit down during the nine-minute demonstration.

"With the strength you still have left, you must walk into the Belgian Congo Building. Five ruge tap-estries cover an entire room. The colors are so blended that at first you think they are artificially lit up. Yes, you can go over and touch them. I did anyway."

Random Thoughts

OUR BATTLEFIELD.

Nearly everybody has one, either recognized, or unawares. There is an enemy-or maybe an army-for us to meet.

It maybe within ourselves and not apparent to others; or it may be out in the open as we meet opponents who dare us. Sometimes we unconsciously meet enemies. We do not expect them, so can hardly conceive that we are in danger. Alertness need not be suspicion, but we do need to be ever-lastingly careful that we neither mislead, nor are mislead. The cultivation of a clear conscience is essential, and usually when we are in doubt we should decide-don't! We can afford to be called a "sissy" sometimes, but the calling of this very indefinite name depends for its truthfulness, on the calibre of the caller. Battlefields are sometimes necessary to provide safety to self and others. Do not avoid them, nor unnecessarily enter them. But, fight to win whatever is worth having in our own particular case—and good character is one of the very first of these "whatevers." P. B. E.

CAN'T DO ANY BETTER!

The above are expressive words. They are the motto, or actuating motive, back of many of our decisions, and the courses we take. They are back of strikes. They lead to our decisions in which we try to win at the cost of somebody else. They represent the force of necessity.

As to whether our wages are high enough for a service rendered, is not so much a problem in equity as it is one of whether we can get more by the use of what we consider demands that can not be turned aside, nor avoided.

We may have a house to rent, when and where houses are scarce. We go over the situation in an analytical way. We consider say $20.00 per month. We take a survey of prevailing wages and do a bit of figuring.

This house, or apartment, may have rented at $10.00 per month some years ago. But times have changed, and, so far as we can see, the tenant is compelled to pay $20.00 now, because "He can't do any better".

Or we may be selling something of very general use-a necessary of life. We can sell this item at a fair profit at 15 cents per pound. But we have an "inside track" on this product and hold to the 20 cents because-purchasers "can not do any better."

Then, this same plan works in another way. There is certain work to be done, and help is not abundant. We have in the past been glad to get 20 cents per hour for this work, but because help is scarce, we demand 30 cents an hour because—as we figure -"he can't do any better."

This is the idea simply expressed. It takes innumerable forms, and enters into a wide list of occupations. It is the biggest question of the day. Must the "boss" give in "pay the price" and then pass it on to consumers-or does he go out of business. If the latter, then what?

If the business men or manufacter quits, conditions at once result in "unemployment." Just now, "the government" is supplying relief by borrowing and issuing bonds representing public debt-and higher taxes. So far, this plan has not represented more than temporary relief, followed by the inevidable issue of more bonds and increased taxes.

What will the end be to? How long can the "can't do any better" plan last? Who is at fault? Largely we believe the cost of living has been added to through improvident spend-

The list of "wants" has increased faster than is reasonable—faster than it was even only twenty years ago. It is assumed now that the government "can't do any better" than to encourage this modern more spending habit.

The argument is that "the people" make "the government," how the government must also represent the people. So, we will have strikes and unemployed and relief laws, and taxes, indefinitely, and soon somebody, somehow, must show that the "t" must be cut off the word can't.

RAILROAD PROBLEM EASY TO SOLVE.

The railroads do not seek subsidies. They do not contend that all regulation should cease. They ask only that all forms of transportation be treated equally—taxed relatively and regulated relatively. As a matter of fairness and of sound business logic they contend that all forms of transportation should pay their own way and that none should be permitted to pass part of the real costs of service on to the tax-paying public.

"Public opinion alone can bring about the adoption of a new transportation policy-one that will afford equal rights to all forms of transportation and grant special privileges to none."—Railroad Data.

TITHE TAXES.

Those old chaps who ruled things in early Biblical times must have been pretty level-headed, or if they made mistakes failed to record them. The tithe system of taxes (for all purposes mind you—secular as well as religious) to run things, seems to have been well thought out and well wrought out, and as far as history reveals, produced an abundant revenue to run the government without the necessity of mortgaging the future by spending in excess of receipts.

Even a tithe (one part out of every ten) is a pretty heavy tax when you come to pay it, but tithes do not touch bottom in this day of "promised" economic security.

The Congress has just appropriated for government expenses for the next year about 13 billion dollars, while tax experts tell us the National income will hover between 65 and 70 billion dollars. Granted the income will be 70 billion, to take at a single slice 13 billion dollars for government expenses, and experiments, means that not only a tithe is taken for taxes but almost two tithes, and this mark you is the visible tax.

When to this double tithe visible tax is added, at least another tithe for invisible taxes, it is evident that at least one-third of our efforts are necessary to support the luxury of a government—a government (tho the best in the world perhaps) which spends far too much of its intake to paint the fences and water the wil-

There is far too much of our government intake being used to blow the whistle instead of being conserved to ruin the machine. Each billion dollars that is spent means seven and seven-tenth dollars for each man, woman and child in the country, and when it is realized that this present administration has run the national debt up to 40 billion, with at least 5 billion more self liquidating debts that will never be liquidated, and that 20 billions or more of this debt belongs to this one administration alone, it is easy to see what the visionary planners have cost you and me and every other citizen, viz $7.7x20= $154.00, but that isn't all the cost; the | maintain that the absence of the man debt goes on eternally and annual in- on horseback is likely to prove fatal terest must be added, and (believe it to the army which tries to ignore his or not) paid.

Early Chinaware Popular

With Lovers of Antiques The great reputation which old English china gained for itself in Europe and America in the late Eighteenth and early Nineteenth centuries is due largely to the charm of its useful wares. By useful wares we mean the services of china made for table use, states Alice R. Rollins in the Los Angeles Times. Entire services, with all the pieces decorated to match, were not common until well after the middle of the Eighteenth century. Many of the factories producing them have long since passed out of existence. Such examples as have survived add pleasure or regret to the collector, according to his ability to classify or obtain them.

Other services were the productions of famous potters whose names have been associated with them by reason of some special form of decoration which is unique. This, together with an original limited production, has made them rare and desired by those collectors who like something out of the ordinary. In this connection we mention the unusual "Mocha" ware, first produced by the English pot-

Baby Otter, Badger and

Other Animals Like Play Most playful of all wild creatures are otters, for even when full grown they cannot resist anything in the shape of a ball that floats. Baby badgers romp together, puffing out their fur until they look like black and white balls, then bouncing round and round on their short stiffened legs. A favorite game is for one to mount a fallen tree, and its companions to try to pull it down, relates Oliver G. Pike, F. Z.

S., in London Tit-Bits Magazine. Young polecats play a similar game, but are far more graceful. As they prance around, their slender backs are arched, and they look most attractive in their rich dark brown glossy fur. Badgers, polecats, stoats, and weasels have very little method in their play, unlike the organized games of the otter.

I doubt if anyone has ever detected play among fish, or seen lizards or snakes indulging in games. All these are cold blooded and are only active when the temperature is warm enough to give them an interest in life.

The play of foxes will often turn to tragedy so far as the farmer is concerned, for if they get among fowls they will kill one for food then, like puppies, chase everything that moves. If the birds had the sense to keep still the fox might pass them by, but he will slaughter them by the dozen while they continue to run.

Impressed: Dorothy and Bill came up from Washington for a little visit with Mom and Pop and needing a haircut, Bill went to a barber who used to do his work when he lived on Washington Heights. The barber was very glad to see him and that of course led to conversation during which Bill remarked that he would be a guest of the President at the White House the next Wednesday evening. The barber endeavored to conceal it, but Bill, being a newspaper man, could detect doubt, so he produced the invitation which the barber read with great care. Variation: A couple of out-oftowners, a little the worse for wear, dropped into a downtown spot for further refreshment. Soon they became rather well acquainted with a young man who had a supply of excellent stories. Suddenly, the young man was attacked with a headache of great violence. Taking a dollar from his pocket, he asked one of the out-of-towners to go to the corner drugstore and get some aspirin. The out-of-towner was quite willing, but a complication arose. New York is full of crooks, the young man said, and he wanted to be sure the out-of-towner wouldn't vanish with his buck. The upshot of it was the out-of-towner left his wallet and his pal as security. When he returned, he found his pal but not the young man. The pal said the young man with the headache had become so ill he had had to retire to the wash room. An investigation disclosed the fact there was a door leading from the wash room to the street.

Night Street Scene: Curiously bent and misshapen figures stealing out of shadows . . . and darting up to garbage cans . . . A policeman whistling softly as he strolls along swinging his club . . . Romeo a Forgotten Man in Home Town

Final Resting Place Not Known in Verona.

VERONA, ITALY.-Romeo Montecchi, suitor of the famed Juliet, is a forgotten man in his home town of Verona.

Although according to Shake-speare's tragedy the immortal lovers died together rather than be separated, no evidence is to be found here of the final resting place of history's foremost lover.

Juliet's tomb instead is placed on the banks of the river Po and is the object of visits of newlyweds. Even the home where Juliet was born with the famous balcony under which Romeo pined with love is the scene of lovers' pilgrimages. The home is identified by a metal tablet on the outside wall indicating that it is the "palace" of the Capulets, Juliet's parents.

Romeo's home, which still stands in a small nearby street, likewise is forgotten and abandoned. The coat of arms of the proud Montecchi family now surrounds a blacksmith's shop.

Although tradition says that Romeo was buried with his beloved Juliet, the marble indication on the latter's tomb has no reference to Juliet's tomb is placed in a crypt of a small chapel erected, together with a cloister, during the last century after the stone coffin had been chipped two inches by souvenir hunters. It stands alongside an old Franciscan convent built in 1230 which, according to numerous authorities, is actually that of the celebrated Friar Lorenzo da Reggio, Shakespeare's "Friar Lawrence," who blessed the secret marriage of the two unhappy lovers.

The cloister is bordered with chestnut trees and cypresses and gay with bright flowers, fountains and old stone seats. In the center of the shady cloister stands a bust of the poet of Stratford on Avon, on a slender column, sole guardian of the tomb of "True and Faithful

Romeo is even forgotten in the "fan mail." Outside of Juliet's tomb there is a small letterbox labeled "Mail for Juliet." According to tradition, Italian lovers believe that visitors who drop a message in the box will be lucky in love. According to the old custodian of the tomb, Ettore Bellina, Romeo has never received a line.

Research Reveals Cats

And Dogs Mental Equals CINCINNATI, OHIO.—The only difference in the intelligence of a dog and a cat is that a dog is "something of a socialist while a cat is an individualist," according to Dr. Charles M. Diserens, assistant professor of psychology at the University of Cincinnati here.

Dr. Diserens, who has made a life-long study of cats, says that persons who favor dogs over cats or who believe dogs have a higher degree of intelligence just don't know their cats. He believes one animal is about as intelligent as the other and that there is little difference in their nerve centers.

Although classifying cats as rugged individuals, Dr. Diserens wants it understood that felines have a genuine capacity for gratitude. He says this fact may often be noted during and after medical treatment. when they become deeply grateful and very often more affectionate.

Some cats are aggressive, some are lazy; some like to fight, some avoid scraps; some appear to think philosophically and some think quickly and practically, Dr. Diserens says, but all display individual personalities as distinct as those of human beings, he adds.

Magnesium in Great Demand

Available Supply Short of Present Requirements Of Industry.

WASHINGTON.-Increasing demand for magnesium, competitor of aluminum, is now reported to be in excess of the available supply, and plant extensions are predicted. The present capacity in the United States is about 3,000 short tons.

"A cubic foot of aluminum is onethird the weight of a cubic foot of structural steel, but a cubic foot of magnesium weighs only twothirds as much as aluminum," says the National Geographic society.

"Magnesium costs 40 per cent more per pound than aluminum, but because of its lighter weight, the cubic foot of magnesium would cost slightly less than the cubic foot of "One-twelfth of the earth's crust is aluminum, but magnesium can be obtained from sea water which covers twice the land areas. All domestic magnesium today comes from Michigan brine wells, but magnesium compounds are being produced in the United States today from sea water.

"Magnesium possesses many of the qualities which have made aluminum valuable to industry; it can be machined as are other metals; it can be hammered into shape, drawn into wire, or extruded into various forms.

Used in Airplanes.

"Because of its lightness, magnesium has been entering more and more into airplane construction, this industry consuming about 70 per cent of the magnesium castings produced. These are mostly alloys of magnesium and aluminum, the alloys being stronger than either metal separately. Extended use of magnesium can reduce the weight of an airplane almost 200 pounds.

"To armament and self-sufficiency programs are ascribed the increased world production of 18,000 tons, of which Germany produced 10,000 tons, according to estimates of the U. S. bureau of mines. It is today the lightest structural metal commercially available.
"Government scientists predict the greater use of magnesium in the manufacture of motor cars, buses, trucks and trailers, in line with the present trend toward the reduction of the weight of these products. Domestic resources, in their opinion, can supply an expanding demand without increase in price.

"Nowhere is magnesium found as a metal; it occurs only in its several compounds. The sulphate, epsom salts, was discovered in 1695, but the metal itself was not isolated from the known compounds until 1808, thus antedating aluminum by about 16 years. Commercial production did not begin in the United States until 1915.

"Because of its unusual qualities, magnesium is already being used in widely varied products; it is used in vacuum-sweepers and also in bread-slicing and bread-wrapping machinery; in reel magazines for motion picture cameras, pneumatic tools, and needle bars in the textile industries; in binoculars and in optical lens-grinding forms, in lightweight radio equipment—and in fire-

Compounds Important. "Far more important from a tonnage standpoint than the metal itself are the compounds. These are used in making cement and stucco, in plaster-board and partition tiles, in insulating materials; also in fertilizers and in large quantities for furnace linings in the metals

"The most common form is the carbonate, 'magnesite,' which is mined in many places. The only commercial sources in the United States are in California and Washington, which together yield 200,000 tons a year, valued at $1,500,000.

"Russia is the largest producer of magnesite, but exports little. The principal exports have come from the Austrian region of Germany, and from China and Greece. The largest exports have gone to Japan. During the World war the price of magnesite jumped from $20 a ton

May Solve Dispute Over Shakespeare

Pages in British Museum Identified as Bard's.

LONDON.-Hope of a definite settlement of the claim that Francis Bacon, Lord Verulam, wrote the plays of William Shakespeare, was offered in three faded, blotched scraps of paper preserved under glass in a show case in the British museum.

Dr. Robin Flower, deputy keeper of manuscripts of the museum, said that he believed, after years of study, that the fragments were written by Shakespeare, and thus were the only original Shakespearean writings known to exist, aside from a few mere signatures.

"If my verdict is correct," he said, "we shall be relieved forever of the wearisome assertion that anybody else but Shakespeare wrote Shakespeare."

The three fragments, in untidy writing, are ranged in the museum alongside open pages of a manuscript book in Bacon's neat, scholarly hand. They are three pages from the play on Sir Thomas More, and are part of the world famous Harleian collection of the museum, the collection of Robert Harley and his son Edward, in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries.

"The conditions in which these pages were written," Dr. Flower explained, "imply that they were the original composition of a journeyman dramatist called in by his company to patch up a play to certain features of which a censor might have been expected to object. And the great lawyer (Bacon) or the magnificent nobleman (the seven-teenth earl of Oxford) whom wild theorists prefer to Shakespeare as the author of Shakespeare's plays do not fit easily in this role."

It was in 1769, more than 150 years after Shakespeare's death, that the theory was first advanced that Bacon really wrote Shakespeare.

that Bacon really wrote Shakes-peare's plays. Little attention was caused then but the theory was revived in 1848 and the controversy over it has raged ever since.

Manufacturers Now Use Scents to Boost Sales

BUFFALO, N. Y .- The manufacture of odors has reached the boom stage because producers of various commodities have discovered that "the better it smells the better it sells," according to Dr. Harold G. Hewitt, assistant chemistry professor at the University of Buffalo. "The old can of glue appears now with an odor of spring flowers," Dr. Hewitt pointed out. "The painter offers not only the color you wish, but paint that is free from the socalled 'paint odor.' The food industry has taken to scenting the inks which appear on food packages to make the product more attractive. Most articles of clothing have the odor of starch employed in manufacture masked with perfume."

Declaring that emotions can be influenced by the nose, Dr. Hewitt recalled how scented stationery was followed on the market by books and magazines with delicately scented pages to give their readers added enjoyment.

'It would not surprise me at all," he said, "to learn that soon not only will we buy gasoline which is tinted to suit our eyes, but probably scented to please our nose."

Chinese Hold Classes

In Caves in Mountains KWEILIN, CHINA. - Students from various parts of China are now flocking to the caves in the mountains of Kwangsi near here.

When schoolwork seemed at a standstill as the Japanese were incessantly bombing this mountainous province, a Chinese teacher, Tao Tze-shing, hit upon the idea of using the 18 huge caves for schoolhouses and it proved at once an unqualified success.

The Han Min middle school, formerly of Nanking, the Kiangsu educational institute, and the China vocational educational institute which was once in the French concession, Shanghai, are all now in the large Kwangsi caves. In the smaller ones are libraries.

Numerous radio sets have been placed in these improvised schoolrooms and the students are kept fully informed of all that is going on in the present clash. Often they can hear appeals and exhortations sent out from Chunking by Gen. Chiang Kai-

LIFE OF STOWAWAY IS NO LONGER EASY

Adventure Now Stripped of Old-Time Romance.

BOSTON.—Capt. Nels Helgesen of the steamship Puerto Rico believes that the day of the romantic stowaway is over and that he prospers only in the realm of fiction.

"Stowaways today must run the gauntlet of a sharp-eyed ship's personnel and equally keen immigra-tion authorities," said the captain.

"This doesn't mean that they don't try to get away with it, however. On one trip from Puerto Rico we apprehended one of these nervy fellows right on the gangway in New York with several hundred dollars in his pocket. He was dressed in a way that rivaled Clark Gable but the immigration authorities found he had no landing card and that of course exposed him. "Another case was that of a young fellow whom the deck steward nabbed going from first to second class, excactly one hour out of San Juan, P. R., on the way to New York. He was hatless, dressed in blue serge suit and had managed to put away a heavy lunch before he was spotted.

"Knowing that next morning we would come within hailing distance of the Borinquen, another of our steamers, we wirelessed the other vessel to be on the lookout. Then, when we came within about a mile of her, we lowered a lifeboat over the side with the stowaway and four seamen who rowed him to the other

"On his arrival back home, I am told the young man was quickly jailed but later released with a heavy fine which his relatives were obliged to pay. "Heavy fines are imposed by the government on a steamship company which allows a stowaway to make his illegal entrance into the country, thus possibly becoming a burden and public charge. Such penalties are likely to become stronger as time goes on, so that surveillance aboard all vessels tends to become to become correspondingly strict.

"Though stowaways are no longer put to work scrubbing down the decks as during rough-and-tumble sailing ship days, the lot of a modern stowaway is not a thrilling one. He is clapped in the brig or a lonely stateroom and permitted neither to talk nor see anyone until he is returned to his original starting

RELAX RULES TO AID AGED COUPLE IN BORDER DRAMA

German Pair, Denied Entry To U. S., Permitted to Cross Line Daily.

MEXICALI, LOWER CALIF .-Early every morning an aged couple, he wizened and bent, she white-haired and motherly, carefully pick their way through the crowded streets of this Mexican border town, apologetically approach the massive wire-mesh fence that marks the international boundary, receive a nod of approval from customs guards and pass through into the United States. Each night at dusk they return.

A little slower, perhaps a bit more tired. Again a nod from officials, and once more they enter Mexico. He is a "man seeking a country," a once-prosperous merchant exiled from Germany who, unable to gain immediate entrance to the United States, sought death because his feet could not walk upon the land that his eyes each day could see through the wire fence. She, his wife, became eligible under the immigration quota to pass through the customs gates that barred him. But, ever faithful, she stayed by him, hoping and waiting for the day when they would be able to walk side by side across the boundary into America.

Their names and the strange story behind these daily walks across the border are known only to customs officials who have withheld their

Speak Broken English.

Months ago they had arrived in this dusty, hot capital of Lower California. Hope alone was their only salvation. They spoke no Spanish and only broken English.

Each day they set out for the American consulate seeking that prized envelope that would tell them their names at last were included on the immigration quota list of those privileged to cross the border.

They had never given up hope, for they had surmounted so many obstacles to get this far, surely their way would not be barred for long now that they were in sight of the land they had traveled so far to reach. But always the answer was 'Maybe tomorrow.'

At last one day officials at the consulate handed the wife her precious envelope. His? They were very sorry, but he was not listed in this quota; perhaps the next one.

Wife Declines Entry.

Although she was able to cross the border under the new quota, she refused to go until that time when he, too, could accompany her. So each day they continued their visits and each day were met by the same reply: "Not today; maybe later."

At last the frustration of his desire to take that one step into the country he had sought as a refuge drove him to attempt suicide.

It was his wife who saved him. She found him dangling from a chandelier in their hotel room, a bed sheet tightly wrapped around manneck. Aided by two hotel employees, she cut him down and managed to revive him. It was then he avalained how, maddened by the able to achieve, he had given up hope and sought the only other escape he knew-death.

When the immigration officials learned of the suicide attempt and the reasons for the attempt, they broke precedent and granted the couple a request unusual in department history.

He was an alien and as such he could not reside in the United States but until such time when he would be included in the quota, they allowed him to accompany his wife into Calexico for the day, provided he returns to Mexico by nightfall.

In Remembrance of my dear husband, SAMUEL T. BISHOP, who passed away the third of July, 1939.

God took my loved one from me, It was His holy will There's not a day that passes Which does not fill my eyes with tears.

Surgeons Don Blue Coats

As Eye Aid in Operating BOSTON.-Men in white have given way to doctors in blue in the neuro-surgical operating rooms at City hospital. Surgeons explained that white uniforms sometimes produced a "glare" which interfered with the vision of a doctor performing a deli-cate operation. In the neuro-surgical operating rooms, they said, extremely delicate brain operations are performed and surgeons cannot afford to risk any eye distraction or fatigue which might be caused by an all-white room plus white uniforms. Hospital authorities believe that eventually all surgeons will wear blue when operating.

Engineers Move Hamlet From River to Safety

VIDALIA, LA.—This sleepy little cotton town, which has fought the Mississippi river since it was founded in 1802, has retreated for the last time.

Since the day when the Spanish dragoon captain, Jose Vidal, set foot on the land which later became the site of the town, residents and nearby plantation owners constantly have been forced to flee for their lives before the mudway waters of the flooding river. But they always returned when the waters retreated.

United States army engineers de- 24. creed that the town must move. Where the town's business activities were transacted, a levee is being constructed to stop the steadily en-croaching waters of the river that once brought glories to one of the South's principal cotton-shipping ports.

Six blocks away, a new Vidalia, retaining much of the historical wealth of the Old South, is gradually taking form. Only a brown spread of slowly flowing water soon will be visible where the New Orleansbound packet boats once nudged the levee while Negroes packed bales of cotton aboard.

Vidalia has been retreating slowly for the last century, due to the river's habit of cutting new channels and undermining the man-made buttresses.

Clydebank Yard Builds Motor Liner in 28 Weeks

GLASGOW.—In the record time of 28 weeks an 11,000-ton ship, 530 feet long, has been built at Clydebank. She is the New Zealand line motor passenger liner Essex. Construction was speeded up to make way for naval tonnage. Special apparatus will suck in 33,000 cubic feet of sea air every minute and distribute it among fruit for cooling and preservation. Apples breathe, and the gases they exude will be trapped, cooled and wafted through the holds to prevent fruit tainting.

Jury Service Excuses Seem to Be Weighty

AKRON, OHIO. - George W. Crouse Jr. thinks he has some good reasons for not doing jury service.

Appearing before Clerk of Courts V. T. Bender, Crouse put it this way:

"I'm secretary of an insurance company, so attorneys never let me serve on damage cases, and don't like to play cards, so there's nothing for me to do but sit around. Furthermore, I'm a farmer, and this is the farmer's busy season."

Clerk Bender, a farmer himself, said he thought Crouse's dismissal might be arranged.

DANCE TEAM

By NED O'DOHERTY © McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

HE stage door of the only theater in Hilltown swung open and the dance team of Elaine and Edmund stepped out into the glistening rain swept street. With hunched shoulders and lowered heads, they hurried towards the hotel.

The girl entered her unpretentious room followed by the man who slowly removed his coat and hat and, with a gesture of disgust, threw them into the farthest corner. The girl, from force of habit, it seemed, picked up his discarded clothes and carefully hung them up. "Elaine," the man said finally,

"I'm completely fed up. For three years now I've been playing these one-horse towns, working like a Trojan, and what's the result? We all but break our necks doing difficult tap routines which brings us a lot of applause, but you can't eat ap-

Elaine came over and put her arm about his shoulders. Blonde, silken hair fell down in waves about her neck. Soft eyes filled with moisture which was somehow prevented from becoming tears.

"Don't, Ed," she urged. "Don't take it like that. Let's fight just a little longer." He lifted her chin and brushed the tip of her nose with his lips. Just a peck it was; just a friendly, brotherly peck. Too brotherly, Elaine thought.

"O. K. kid," he mumbled, "I'll see you tomorrow."

And taking his coat and hat he left the room. Elaine was sitting in the lobby when he came down next day. He saw her, waved, and stopped to talk with the coquette who reigned supreme behind the cigar counter. Elaine smiled. Strange why she cared so much for him. Well, she did, and that was that.

A few minutes before they went on the stage, Eddie came to Elaine's dressing room for the usual limbering up. While they were in the midst of their intricate dance, someone knocked loudly upon the door and entered without the formality of waiting to be asked in.

Eddie was irritated at the interruption.

"Who are you?" he demanded angrily of the newcomer. The man smiled.

"I," he began, "am the answer to a hoofer's prayer. My name is Lyons, which is beside the point, so I'll get to the point. I was sent down here to prevail upon you to pack your duds, and prevail further upon you to rush to Harrison's office in New York. Well, here I am prevailing but you don't seem to be packing. How come?"

Eddie glanced about the room as if in search of something with which to tie up the lunatic. Not finding anything, he asked instead:

"What, my good man, are you talking about?"

The man laughed: "I forgot. Dear me, I forgot to tell you Harrison is producing a new musical comedy and the old fool is laboring under the delusion that he needs a hoofer. And you're elected." With some effort he searched for something in his pockets. Eventually he found what he was looking for. "Here's your railroad ticket," he said, and dropped it carelessly upon the dressing table. When Lyons had gone, Eddie grabbed Elaine and danced her round the room.

"I'm made," he shouted. "I've got a break at last! Broadway!" Eddie danced that night as he had never danced before. Elaine was in a daze. She had never before been so heavy on her feet, and she wondered, vaguely, if it was the weight of her heart that was holding her down. Later in his hotel room, Eddie rushed about packing his clothes. Elaine lay back in an easy chair and gazed intently at the discolored

"Eddie, if you are sure they don't want me, too, what . . . well, what shall I do? I mean I can't do the act alone."

Eddie ceased his packing. He frowned, but only for a moment; then he smiled.

"Listen, Beautiful," he laughed.

"A swell looking little dame like you would have only to lift her little finger and she would have a thousand partners."

Elaine arose quickly and hurried from the room. She hated herself for crying, but she couldn't help it. At any rate it would be the last time. Never again would he be the cause of her People do not cry for those they no longer love. Eddie arrived in New York next day and went directly to Harrison's office in the Strand building.

Harrison came from behind his desk and shook hands. "Glad to see you, Eddie," he said, "but where's your pretty partner?"
"My partner?" Eddie frowned.

"Speak up, man!" he growled. "Where's the better half of your act?" Eddie fell back with a be-wildered look in his eyes. "The better half?" he gasped. "The bet-ter half? Oh! Why, I left Elaine in Hilltown."

Harrison chewed on his cigar ferociously.

"Listen, son," he said, tapping Eddie on the chest, "you get that pretty dancing partner of yours here in a hurry if you want to work in my show. Without her, you couldn't have a seat in the gallery." And he walked away.

Five minutes later Eddie had the Hilltown hotel on long distance. "Where's Elaine?" he shouted. "Yes, the cute little girl with the blonde hair. Where? Hollywood? When? Oh! . . ."

Then after what seemed like ages, waiting for the operator to put through a person to person call to Hollywood, Elaine's sweet voice on the other end:

"Hello?" "Hello, Elaine, dear. This is Eddie. You know, your old partner. Listen, honey, could you come to New York right away? I have a swell proposition for you. You and I are going to dance together in the big show. I fixed it all up. What train will you take? I'll meet you."

Minutes ticked by before Elaine's cool collected voice answered

Of course I wasn't interested while you and I were together, but when you decided to step out for yourself-well, I had no alternative. So I've signed a contract for a year at two hundred a week. When Blood Clots

When blood is exposed to air, it clots. This reaction is caused by a blood chemical called thrombin. Without it human beings might bleed to death from the merest scratches. Some persons have less thrombin and bleed more than others. They are poor surgical risks. They make it hard for the surgeon to see what he is doing, and some-times lose so much blood that it is necessary to interrupt crucial operations to make transfusions.

Dog's Ribs, Teeth, Tails A dog has 26 ribs-13 on a side. Nature has supplied each with a normal set of 42 teeth. They have 20 teeth in the upper and 22 in the lower jaw. A cat has to be content with only 30 teeth, humans with 32. The tail of a dog, if left undocked, contains between 16 and 21 small bones. Sometimes one of these bones is broken by an accident, and if not properly set, the dog will forever have a crooked tail.

11 Lighthouses in U.S. in 1789

300 Erected Since Control Passed to Federal Government.

WASHINGTON.-When in 1789 the United States took over under federal control the existing lighthouse system, there were only 11 lighthouses standing. At Cape Henry, the Commonwealth of Virginia had set aside a tract of land for erecting a permanent lighthouse. Plans had been drawn and materials purchased when the government assumed control. The state deeded this land to the national government and sold it the stone and other materials purchased for the constructions. tion of the stone lighthouse. In the act authorizing the deed of gift of land to the government, there was inserted a clause stipulating that the national government should within a specified time erect the lighthouse, writes John William Edwards in the Richmond Times-Dispatch. Default meant the land reverted to the Commonwealth of Virginia. So, in a short time, the new stone lighthouse atop the landing dune of Cape Henry began its century of uninterrupted service to the sea-borne commerce of the Chesapeake bay.

Now More than 300.

There are more than 300 lighthouses in service in the United States today. Some of them have served for a long, long time, while others are as new as next year's motorcar.

Minot Ledge lighthouse at the entrance to Boston's harbor is a familiar landmark to those who voyage to city by the way of the sea. This lighthouse stands upon a reef of rocks seldom seen above the surface of the water.

Cape Race lighthouse on the Newfoundland headland is another familiar lighthouse. Near unto this point lies the shortest sea route from New York and Boston to England, and ships going and coming from the St. Lawrence river also pass close by it. It has a modern light of more than a million candle-

This huge rock, which lies a mile off shore, was a great danger to passing ships, and it was with difficulty that the rock was scaled, a foothold gained, and later from the tower a light with a candlepower of 160,000 cast its flashes 18 miles to sea.

Down Cape Hatteras way, that ever-alluring shore, there are several lighthouses familiar to Virginians, in story as well as actual

U.S. Health Service Gets Odd Questions

Supply Liberal Education In Human Curiosity.

WASHINGTON.-Letters to the United States public health service provide a liberal education in human curiosity, ignorance and credulity. Recently the public health service made a detailed analysis of nearly 10,000 letters it had received, requesting or offering information the general subject of health, and in its decorous, objectively, scientific way, marveled at the re-

Of the 9,795 letters analyzed, the largest number—1,372—came from New York state, Pennsylvania running second with 806. The District of Columbia was third with 532 and Illinois fourth with 515. Far down the scale were Nevada with six letters, Delaware and Wyoming with 16 each, and Vermont with 19. From foreign countries, presumably including American territorial possessions, came 133 letters, and seven were listed as of unknown origin.

Many of the letters are entirely proper, asking specific or general information on the subject of public health, and providing interesting clues to national interest in health. But others offer sure cures for diseases, usually for large sums of money, and still others request information which the health service is unwilling or unable to give.

Some of the questions asked concern the susceptibility of a human being to rabbit fur; how to get rid of germ-phobia; are there drafts, besides in a store; the age of the youngest human mother; how to preserve life; the use of dried chicken gizzard or of honey in the treatment of cataracts; the food and health value of barracuda, and

REHOBOAM: A MAN WHO MADE A FOOLISH CHOICE

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 12:1-5, 12-17, 20. GOLDEN TEXT—A man's pride shall bring him low.—Proverbs 29:23.

"He did evil because he prepared not his heart to seek the Lord"this is the divine epitome of the life of Rehoboam as given in II Chronicles 12:14.

Life is full of choices, and the decisions we make determine our destiny both in this life and in the life to come. Since the great issues of our life may hinge on the simplest of choices, it is obvious that we need guidance at every point and in every moment of life. The counsel of men, the right impulses which are born of good breeding, the light of knowledge—all these may help us to make right choices. But since there is only One who has all the knowledge, who can see the end from the beginning, who has all the power to make His decisions effective, it is obviously folly of the highest degree to do without His holy guidance, especially since God is willing to give it without money and without price even to the humblest believer.

Men and women, let us not follow the foolishness of Rehoboam. Let us seek first God's kingdom and His righteousness, and then we are assured that everything else shall be added unto us (Matt. 6:33).

The picture before us is astonishingly up-to-date. People were crying for relief from tax burdens. One group of leaders counseled moderation; another group, said in effect, tax them all you can and keep on spending. The king, who in a monarchy had the final decree in his power, replied to the plea of the people with the 900 B. C. equivalent of our modern slang expression, "Oh, yeah?" and the ten tribes promptly revolted.

I. A Reasonable Request (vv. 1-

Governments exist for the people, not the people for the government. Political leaders seem to forget this axiom and begin to rule as though they need not listen to the reasonable pleas of the people. Tax burdens rise, regimentation of the life of the nation takes place, and sooner or later the people rise to overthrow the government. It happened in Rome, it was back of the French Revolution, it brought an uprising of the serfs of Russia, it can and will happen elsewhere if men who rule do not listen to reason.

Rehoboam made at least one wise decision-to wait three days before speaking and to seek counsel. He brought up in the palace of Solomon, without proper training for his place as king, he was quite unable to make immediate answer to their request. Incidentally, we note that much of the folly of Rehoboam is chargeable to the neglect of his father to rear him properly. May that terrible thing never be said about you and me regarding our children.

II. An Unreasonable Refusal (vv.

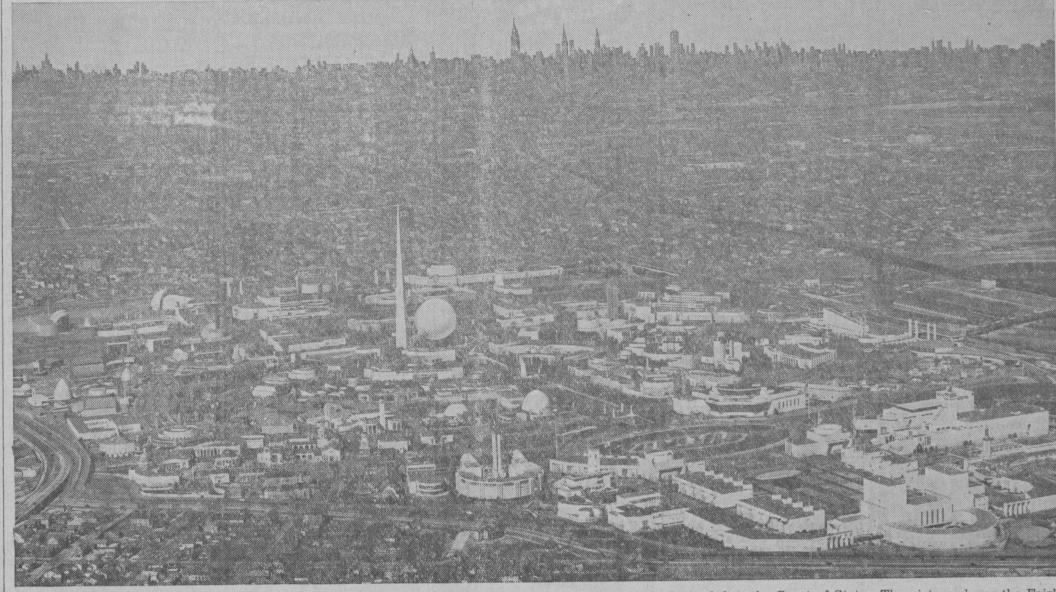

The picture of the two groups of advisers is a most graphic one and should afford the teacher an excellent opportunity to show young people especially, how important it is to heed the counsel of their elders. Even so youth stands today at the fork of the road. Let us in all kindness, love, and tact seek to help them choose the right way.

III. The Inevitable Revolt (vv. 16, 17, 20).

The people, long submissive and apparently servile, ultimately come to the point where they think, and when they do, dictatorial rulers tumble from their self-made thrones. Would that the people of the earth realized the power which they have and that they would use it for the glory of God. Rehoboam felt the power of the people who revolted, others have followed him, for it is still true in the world that the rulers "do evil" because "they prepare not their hearts to seek the Rehoboam, who had awaited the arrival of this crucial hour in anticipation of taking his place as the king of the ten tribes, was ready, and was at once chosen as the leader of those who withdrew from the rule of the house of David. Rehoboam's sin brought this about, but it was also in the counsels of God (v. 15). As Alexander Maclaren expresses it, ". . . the historian draws back the curtain. On earth stand the insolent king and mutinous people, each driving at their ends, and neither free of sin and selfishness. A stormy sea of people, without thought of God, rages below, and above sits the Lord, working His great purpose by men's sin. That divine control does not in the least affect the freedom or the responsibility of the actors. Rehoboam's disregard of the people's terms was 'a thing brought about of the Lord,' but it was Rehoboam's sin none the

Every policeman in New York City is familiar with the plan and is equipped to give visitors first hand information on methods of obtaining registered and sponsored rooms.

Priests as Firemen

In 1705, King Louis XIV of France founded the Paris fire brigade. Forty firemen formed the first brigade, and they were recruited from workmen used to doing their jobs high above the ground. A number of years later, an auxiliary fire brigade was formed for the guarding of Paris. This was composed of four companies of priests. great bell of the cathedral of Notre Dame was used as a fire warning. On one occasion, when there was a big fire at the famous hospital of the Hotel Dieu (which adjoins Notre Dame), 20 of these firemen-priests were burned to death in trying to rescue the patients.

Deep and Shallow Water Provided there is sufficient water to float the body, the depth of water makes no difference to the swimmer, its buoyancy being the same in both cases. The popular belief that swimming is easier in deep water is incorrect, though perhaps the mental effect has some influence. A person swimming in shallow water knows that on the least fatigue he may stop swimming and stand on the bottom; in deep water he knows he cannot do this but must exert himself to swim well and under these circumstances it may seem easier to him.

Prevent Sickness

Science of Nutrition Has Made Great Progress

Varied Diet Helps

By EDITH M. BARBER

MEDICAL practice has changed materially within a generation. Wise persons go to the doctor be-fore they are sick in order to re-main well. Periodic health examinations and preventive medicine interest physicians fully as much as the treatment of disease.

One of the best preventive measures which can be taken and one of the most common prescriptions has to do with the daily diet. At a meeting of a medical association, a nutritionist was invited to address the gathering upon this subject. In her talk she mentioned the fact that nore progress in the s trition had been made in the last 25 years than in all previous time. While minerals and vitamins in capsule form are an asset in the treatment of diseases caused by inadequate diet, she made the point that the principal sources of dietary needs should be natural foods from the garden, grocer, orchard, dairy and butcher shop.

As has been stated so often in this column, a good varied diet containing plenty of milk, fruits and vegetables, some eggs, meat or fish and cereals, sweets and fats will insure the foundations of good

The Garden of Eden On the supposition that the Garden of Eden narrative in Genesis describes a real country, any number of efforts have been made to establish its location, and many books have been written on the subject, often widely disagreeing. Some have located Eden near the town of Kornah, in southern Babylonia, not far from the Persian gulf. This is at the junction of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, in what is now the British mandatory kingdom of Iraq. Others have placed the Garden in Armenia, near the sources of these rivers. The region near Damascus, in Syria, has also been suggested; and some extremists have argued that it was in America, or Australia, or at the North Pole. The general opinion is that the description in the second chapter of Genesis refers to southern Babylonia.

MARYLAND CROP REPORT.

College Park, Md., July 11, 1939.— The total acreage of Maryland field crops for harvest this year is about two percent below last year, accord-ing to the July 1 crop survey made by the Maryland Crop Reporting Service. Small increases indicated for corn, oats, barley, rye, tame hay, to-bacco, and soybeans are more than offset by a drastic decrease in winter wheat and a small decrease in potatoes and cowpeas. Indicated yields for most of the main crops are below last year but near average except corn, which is about 4 bushels per acre above average. Total production of main crops is indicated to be below last year except barley, rye, and sweet potatoes.

Corn. Thee stimated acreage of corn is about 1 percent more than the acreage harvested last year. The indicated yield of 35 bushels per acre this year is below last year, but considerably more than the 30.6 average bushels for the period 1928–37. Stocks of old corn on Maryland farms is above both last year and the average. Corn is in fair to good condiction over the State. The grow is tion over the State. The crop is somewhat later than usual due to delayed planting caused by dry weather during planting time. On July 1 the crop ranged from a few inches high to tasselings in some Wheat. The drastic acreage reduction this year together with an indicated yield below last year have reduced the crop below those produced in 1932 and 1933. Excepting these two years the crop is indicated to be the smallest since 1875. The estimated crop this year is 7,334,000 bushels compared with the 1928-37 average production of 8,419,000 bushels. A considerable acreage has been turned under for green manure especially in the 5 Southern Mary-land Counties. Dry weather hasten-ed maturing in some areas and reduced earlier expected yields.

Oats. Although the acreage is estimated to be larger than last year the indicated production is 1,161,000 bushels, or 12 percent below the 1,312,000 bushels produced last year. The dry weather stunted the plant considerably and heads are light. The indicated yield this year is 27 bushels per acre compared with 32 bushels last year and 28 bushels the 1928-37 average.

Barley. The acreage was materially increased this year. Most of the increased acreage this year is the increased acreage this year is 74,000 compared to 41,000 last year. Present yield prospects of 30 bushels per acre indicate a crop of 2,220,000 bushels—by far the largest crop ever produced in the State. The acreage from 1889 to about 1929 remained at less than 10,000 acres. The acreage more than trebled between 1929 and 1932 being about 31,000 acres in 1932. 1932, being about 31,000 acres in 1932

Campus Love Revealed In Letter 82 Years Old

OXFORD, OHIO .- Love will find a way out-even after 82 years.

From the historic walls of Fisher hall, at Miami university, workmen recently extracted written evidence of the secret "crush" of a sophomore coed in the late 1850s for a mustachioed upperclassman.

The coed, Emily Jack, from Muncie, Ind., one lazy afternoon in spring was engaged in writing a letter to her parents when she glanced out the dormitory window and saw Ike Jordan, her secret hero, walking on the campus. In her absent-minded reverie, Miss Jack wrote the name of Ike Jordan four times on the letter before discovering the error. She threw the defaced letter on a shelf, where it slipped through a crevice in the dormitory wall.

Billboards on Highways

WASHINGTON .- The bureau of public roads, in its report recommending a nationwide national defense highway system, took a crack at the billboards and roadside stands, labeling them "positive menaces" to driving safety which "must be controlled."

"The mere presence of these numerous, close-crowding objects and establishments is a distraction to drivers of vehicles," the bureau said. "Some of them, by every conceivable device, endeavor to attract the attention of drivers of vehicles from their primary responsibility; most of them contribute largely to the hazards of unexpected stopping, turning, and emergence upon the highways of both vehicles and pedestrians.

"All are positive menaces and must be controlled, and the only probability of material improvement lies in a general and substantial widening of the rights-of-way of the more important roads, together with effective border control.'

Tobacco-Chewing Deer Is Pet of New York Section

ROCHESTER, N. Y .- A deer that breakfasts and dines in Hamlin farmhouses, sees his young friends off to school and roams the fields impatiently until they return. The deer, usually called Peter, was tamed by CCC boys encamped at Hamlin. It was turned loose last November and immediately struck up a lasting friendship with the Hamlin school children.

By all rules of nature a deer is supposed to be timid, but this one will knock you over or sit on your

Even passing motorists don't frighten the year-old deer. A handful of tobacco, Peter's only vice, will tempt the pet inside the car. Peter scorns the companionship of 15 other deer in nearby Hamlin Beach park.
