MORE VOTING PRECINCTS.

Are Possible for Use in Carroll County.

Setting up of 12 new election precincts in Carroll County is seen highly probable as result of a ruling handed down by the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The appellate court, in sustaining an action by Judge F. Neal Parke in the circuit court, ruled that the county board of election supervisors must provide an additional voting place in Mt. Airy district because that election unit has in excess of 600 registered voters.

On the basis of this ruling, no less than 10 districts in Carroll are in line for additional precincts, should they invoke the "over 600 registered voters" clause in the election law. Freedom, Berrett, Taneytown, Myers, Woolerys, Manchester, Hampstead, Union Bridge and Mt. Airy would each get one more voting place, while Westminster district would draw three additional precincts. This would result in Carroll County having 38 election precincts as compared to its present 26.

RED CROSS FIRST AID.

David H. Taylor, General Chairman and Otey C. Reynolds, Jr., Chairman of First Aid of the Carroll County Chapter of the Red Cross have announced that the Standard and Advanced Courses in First Aid will be given in the Longwell House at the corner of Willis Street and Longwell Avenue in Westminster.

The first class will be held Tuesday, April 1, at 7:00 P. M., and will run for three hours with one class a week. It is anticipated that this will be one of the largest classes yet to be held due to the fact that so many more people realize the advantages of First Aid Training. The courses will be open to all that are interested and it is hoped that many people in the various towns throughout the county will take advantage of this opportunity. Plans are under way for an instructor course to be given immediately following the completion of the advanced course.

This, of course, is tentative as the majority of first aid instructors connected with National Headquarters have been assigned to duty with the United States Army giving instruction to the vast number of draftees.

MEETING OF KIWANIS CLUB.

The Taneytown Kiwanis Club held its weekly meeting at Sauble's Inn in Wednesday evening, March 12, at 6 o'clock. Twenty members of the club were present; also Mr. Herbert Anders, of Westminster as a visitor and Mrs. Francis T. Elliot, of Taneytown, as the guest of the club. The musical part of the program was in charge of Raymond Wright, with Mrs. Wallace Yingling as accompanist.

The program of the evening was in charge of the Committee on Boys' and Girls' Work, Edward Reid, chairman. Mr. Reid introduced Mrs. Francis T. Elliot, of Taneytown, Chairman of the committee in charge of the Taneytown Summer Playground, who spoke of the work of the playground committee, the work that it has accomplished for the boys and girls of the community during the last six years, also some of the plans of the committee for the coming summer. Mrs. Elliot recalled the beginning of the playground idea for Taneytown as a project of the former Parents' Club. She praised the interest of Rev. A. T. Sutcliffe in carrying out the original idea and showed that much of the credit for the actual establishment of the playground was due to Mr. Sutcliffe. She mentioned at the same time the generosity of the Presbyterian Church and its pastor for the tender of the lot upon which the playground is located, a place described by Mrs. Elliot as being especially well-suited for the purpose. She traced the continued and increasing success of the playground through the last several successive summers, calling attention to the interest and enjoyment of the children and the relief of the respective parents that their boys and girls were being taken care of in a safe place. The popularity of the playground was evidenced by Mrs. Elliot's statement to the effect that as many as seventy-five children at one time have been observed enjoying the various facilities offered. For several seasons, on account of some aid received by the county, it was possible to employ a trained play supervisor, whose well-planned programs added much to the efficiency of the project.

The members of the Club listened with great interest to Mrs. Elliot's address, and pledged not only their continued support in a general way, but promised their aid in securing some needed added equipment for the coming summer.

President Harry M. Mohny, who presided at the meeting, called attention to the Minstrel Show, under the sponsorship of the Westminster Club to be given at the Westminster High School Building on Friday evening, and asked the patronage of the local Club. Also announcement was made of the Minstrel to be presented by the Parent Teacher Association of the Union Bridge School on Wednesday evening, March 26, at 8 o'clock, in the Opera House in Taneytown. This will be sponsored by the Taneytown Club, the proceeds to be used for the underprivileged children of the community.

The program next week will be in charge of the Committee on Support of Churches, Wallace Reindollar, Chairman.

WEEKLY LETTER

ON CONSERVATION.

Other Subjects Likely not Finally Acted on.

Editor The Carroll Record:

There have been a number of inquiries by local citizens concerning the conservation question in this State and to most of us the situation has been rather vague. Since the matter is of considerable importance at this time, and since the public has been only briefly informed about the facts involved in the conservation fight, I would like to explain the issue as it now confronts the Legislature.

For a number of years there has been a growing demand for some change in the Conservation Commission as it now operates in Maryland. At present we have a three man board or Commission empowered with the authority to make rules and regulations effecting our wild life throughout the State.

Experts on the subject of conservation of natural resources have repeatedly declared that our present Commission is too limited in scope and power. They allege that unless there can be some co-ordination in the administration and control of all of our natural resources (including game, fish, forests, water resources, etc.) there can be no satisfactory solution to our present problems.

In 1939 the political powers representing the tide-water sections of our State attempted to seize control of the resources in the Chesapeake Bay. These forces enacted a law that divided our Conservation Commission into two separate departments, one department to have control of the Bay and the other to have control of the upland game and fresh water fish. This was known as the "split conservation plan."

Immediately upon the passage of this law the conservation experts interested in the preservation of our natural resources circulated a petition asking to have this law placed on the ballot for approval or rejection by the voters of Maryland. By reason of this petition, with some 15,000 signers, the so-called "split conservation plan" was voted upon and overwhelmingly defeated in the 1940 election.

At that time the Governor stated that he regarded the vote of the people as a mandate for a unified or co-ordinated system of conservation. He then appointed a committee to study the matter and make its recommendations for the benefit of the 1941 General Assembly.

What actually happened in this Committee is not known, but the plan it recommended has been called a "conservationist's nightmare." This Committee would have us set up not just the two separate departments that the voters disapproved, but they propose something two and one-half times as bad, namely, five uncoordinated departments with independent power and authority. These departments are (1) tidewater fisheries, (2) inland fish and game, (3) forestry, (4) geology and water resources and (5) research and education.

This basic division of our natural resources is good. But the Committee has made only the slightest pretext at unifying or co-ordinating the activities of the various departments. It sets up an eleven man "Board of Natural Resources" to "co-ordinate the activities of the several state departments" but absolutely fails to give this Board any power to enforce co-ordination. The only constructive acts this Board is empowered to perform are to make annual reports and recommendations to the Governor. This plan is embodied in Senate Bill 310.

On the other side of the fence we have a Bill drawn by a group of conservation experts. These men, having no political or financial interests involved and who are interested only in the preservation of our natural resources, have drawn a Bill setting up the same departments but have unified and co-ordinated them under a seven man Board that does have the power to act. This Bill endeavors to set up a "unified conservation plan" and is before the Legislature as House Bill 418.

The question now is this: Are we to have a "split commission plan" with five independent, unrelated and unco-ordinated departments—or are we to have a "unified plan" wherein all departments are operated and co-ordinated under a single controlling board.

The politicians and commercial watermen want the former plan—the people interested only in the preservation of our natural resources want the latter. Who do you think will win? Sincerely,

STANFORD HOFF.

The Senate passed the measure to outlaw the Real Estate tax by 1943, and a constitutional amendment, authorized by Senator Dudley G. Roe, Democrat, of Queen Anne's County, will be placed on the ballot of 1942.

Bills continue to be introduced in both Senate and House, indicating the usual rush at the close of the session. Comparatively few bills have been enacted into law up to this time.

Federal and state highway officials agree to act on rushing work on defense roads, the likelihood being that numerous other road jobs may be side-tracked. Senator Tydings says no federal money is available for Maryland roads.

BOARD OF EDUCATION MEETS.

Abbreviated Report of the Last Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education of Carroll County was held in the office of the Board on Tuesday, March 4, at 9:30 o'clock. All members were present.

The minutes of the special meeting held in January were read and approved.

The bills were approved and ordered paid.

The resignation of Eileen Henze, Charles Carroll High School; Frank Clarke, Westminster High School; and John T. Hill, janitor at the Westminster Elementary School, were accepted with regret.

The Board approved the appointment of Marguerite Kuhns as a substitute teacher at Charles Carroll for the remainder of the year.

Horace D. Warehime was appointed as janitor at the Westminster Elementary School, effective as of March 4th.

The superintendent reported that preliminary plans for the Westminster gymnasium have been approved by the State architect. Messrs. Diefendal, Smith, Pool and Hyson were appointed as the building committee and were given the authority to approve the plans and specifications and to advertise for bids. Bids to be opened at the April meeting.

A brief report on the National Defense program as given in Carroll County, sponsored by the Board of Education and supervised by S. P. Caltrider, was made by the superintendent. This program is controlled by the State Department of Education and is financed entirely by the Federal Government. The following classes are now being taught: Westminster, Electricity, Russell Miller, instructor, enrollment 16; Welding, John Peeling, instructor, enrollment 16; Welding, Melvin Stern, instructor, enrollment 13; Union Bridge, Auto mechanics, Clinton Kelly, instructor, enrollment 16. Hampstead—Welding, John Hughes, instructor, enrollment 12.

The superintendent reviewed some of the bills in reference to education that have been presented to the State Legislature.

The next meeting of the Board of Education will be held on Monday, April 7th.

NEEDED NEW ROADS.

Governor O'Connor announced early in the week that about $11,000,000 would be needed for new Maryland roads likely in the very near future. These roads would be largely for National defense in the vicinity of Fort Meade for the transportation of men and military supplies; also for quicker communication with the Bethlehem Steel Company and railroads. As against this the Governor proposes to receive sums to chronic disease hospitals but not the almshouses.

TANEYTOWN SCHOOL NEWS.

AROUND THE WORLD.

A group of American tourists charter the good ship "The International" for a trip around the globe starting from Lakehurst one day in June. The very popular captain conducts the tour, describing upon arrival the characteristics of each country, making the journey of real educational value as well as pleasure.

After circling the globe, the ship reaches New York at sunset, July the third, and all characters gather in Central Park on Independence Day, where they meet on common ground after their eventful journey, which has indeed served as a real "Melting Pot," exemplifying, most happily the idealistic bringing together of all the nations into one large family.

The rehearsals for "Around the World," the annual elementary opera, show much interest and enthusiasm. Over two hundred students of the Taneytown Elementary School will participate in the production which will be given in the auditorium Friday, April 4, at eight o'clock.

INCOME TAX DEADLINE,

APRIL 15th.

The deadline for filing federal income tax returns is drawing near but the date of March 15 does not apply this year to State income tax returns.

Federal returns must be postmarked by midnight Saturday and a majority of local persons have mailed their returns. Because of the change in the State law this year, the date for paying State income taxes has been moved back to April 15 and they can be paid on the installment plan.

Hoff offers statistics to prove that the Board of County Commissioners, for a given sum of money, can build more miles of improved roads than the State Roads Commission can do with a like sum. He cites the present building program to prove his contention, pointing out that at the moment, under the State set-up, there are under construction 5.7 miles of road to cost about $34,000 per mile. "At the same time," Hoff further alleges, "the County Commissioners of Carroll County were building good paved roads in Carroll county at a cost of between $8,000 and $10,000 per mile."

The fireworks bill that has developed considerable backing, has been postponed until next Tuesday. The outlook seems to be that the present law will not be repealed, but may be amended.

CONGRESS VOTES 317

TO 71 TO AID ENGLAND

First Arms and Supplies are now On the Way.

What is known as the Lease-Lend bill, as amended by the Senate was approved by the House, on Tuesday, and sent to the President who signed the bill at once.

A $7,000,000 fund will be asked of Congress. Just what supplies are under way has not been announced.

The U. S. will send to Great Britain 400 ships, including Naval and Cargo vessels. About 100 will be combat craft consisting of motor torpedo craft and destroyers are expected to be included.

The British have downed 17 German bombers in repelling two night raids, and German vessels have attacked Scottish cities. In general, both sides have shown unusual activity in the last two days, and will likely continue during the coming week.

The war in general, in Europe, according to radio reports, has changed but little, so far as the general public knows. It is a succession of bombings so far as the two leading powers are concerned, while in Africa the British appear to be continuing to gain.

The entering of Bulgaria on the side of Germany has been followed by activity on the part of Turkey on the side of England and Greece, while Japan is playing a deep game, the outcome of which is favorable to Germany. And all of this makes the actual situation one of great doubt.

The German government resents U. S. aid to England, as "meddling," and calls President Roosevelt the greatest "referee for the whole world."

The U. S. is ready to supply England with large stocks of food stuffs from our own over-supply; also with coal and oil.

This action is expected to hasten the heavy attacks on England that have been in preparation mainly against Liverpool.

Yugoslavia one of the smaller nations in Europe has given in to the Nazi government, as it considers resistance as worthless.

BEST DAIRY METHODS.

Announcement has been made of the continuation during 1941 of the National 4-H Dairy Production Demonstration program, which is designed to promote a wider use of approved dairy practices, especially among rural youth. The program, now presented for the fifth consecutive year under the supervision of the extension service, emphasizes demonstrations on breeding, growing, fitting, feeding and judging dairy cattle, and the production of high-grade milk and cream on farms.

Reports from 43 states which conducted this activity last year revealed that thousands of demonstrations were given by 4-H teams before adult and junior audiences, disseminating information essential to improvement of the dairy industry.

County eliminations will determine the teams eligible for state finals. Medals are provided for first and second teams in each county. State winning teams will be given all-expense trips to the National Dairy Show at Memphis, Tenn., next October, to participate in the wind-up. The Kraft Cheese Company is providing all awards, which include $2,800 in college scholarships to be presented first and second place teams in each of the four extension sections.

Further information, as well as suggestions for carrying on this activity, will be furnished 4-H'ers by their county agent, the announcement stated.

TRAFFIC DEATHS INCREASE.

During the month of February 44 persons were killed in 43 accidents, against 23 in February 1940, on Maryland highways. Baltimore City led with 13 deaths and Prince Georges followed with 9.

Carroll County was free from fatalities, along with ten others, 307 persons were injured in the counties, and 423 in Baltimore City.

GUTZON BURGLUM.

Gutzon Burglum, known world wide for his heroic size statues of great men cut into rocky mountain sides and for his work in bronze groups, died March 8 after a brief illness.

His last great work was on Mount Rushmore in the Black Hills where he left gigantic faces of Jefferson, Lincoln, Washington and Theodore Roosevelt.

One of his best bronze groups is along Confederate Avenue, Gettysburg, on the North Carolina contribution war markers, it being a massive group in bronze of a group of soldiers ready to charge.

DAVID J. LEWIS MAY RUN FOR CONGRESS SEAT.

David J. Lewis, who has several times represented the 6th. Maryland District in Congress, as a Democrat, may be a candidate to succeed representative Byron, recently killed in an airplane accident.

Mrs. Byron is also a prospective candidate for the office held by her husband, and is strongly indorsed by women's organizations of the district.

STRIKES BECOMING A MENACE IN THE U. S.

The strike menace in the U. S. seems to spread, rather than subside, and it is interfering with the production of war supplies of most kinds. President Roosevelt is said to be planning for a strike mediator board that would act without legislation.

It is becoming generally agreed that union labor must co-operate with the government in the matter of its present war plans that stand for co-operation with England, and that if necessary, the unions must give way or suffer consequences.

It is not stated that there is a suspicion that strike leaders are aiding Germany, but the effect of this attitude bears that way.

The time lost by strikes is estimated at 7,817,860 man hours by the Secretary of Labor Perkins and Defense directors Wm. H. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman a specific recommendation for a mediator board to handle labor problems related to the defense program. No recommendation from board has yet been made.

MAJORITY RULES.

Whether always right or not, it's pretty hard to get away from. In fact, it is democracy in operation—it is the American way of government.

We start many a squabble in making our decision as to laws and customs; and these majorities sometimes lie close together a majority in one county may not want the majority in another county.

Even towns and communities disagree, and on down into favorites—even two men can get into a fist-fight. So, we are ruled by majorities from the election of a President on down as to the smallest group—we have even heard of a man picking himself.

FRIDAY, MARCH 14, 1941.

THE JOB OF AN EDITOR.

The policy of The Carroll Record always has been, to be fair. As a rule, it is not a "side taker" politically or otherwise—non-partisan describes it. The following paragraph always appears at the head of column 2, page 2.

"The publication in The Record of clipped or signed editorials does not necessarily mean that such editorials are indorsed by The Record. In many instances they are published in order to show varying opinions on public topics."

We mean just this. The Carroll Record is a "record" of news. It means that readers should investigate for themselves, unless we otherwise advise. Of course, we would not intentionally do things that are easily known to be wrong or untrue.

Use your own head, rightly. It is to our advantage, as well as to our credit to publish a decent fair-minded weekly that will be financially profitable. Those who would try to lead us into doing otherwise, are not our friends.

Of course there are "many men of many minds" and many measures of right and wrong who do not care for anything but having their own opinions published; and we can not always pick them out—no editor can do this, and, we are human.

THE QUESTION OF THE STATE'S BUDGET.

The county weekly newspapers of Maryland have in recent weeks been very generally urging a decrease in the Governor's budget, a policy that is unquestionably supported by taxpayers—business—professional men and industrialists.

Public meetings have been held, a busy circular letter campaign has been conducted, and the county newspapers plentifully supplied with "copy" ready for use.

Many figures have been published too, some of them showing large incomes, eventually to break up argument as to why taxes should be increased, but not mentioning the fact that borrowed money also enters largely into increased property values.

The Record is not well posted on either side of the question and acknowledges its inability to give a verdict for either side of the controversy; but it does believe that with many serious questions facing us, this is not a good time to spend and tax heavily, but rather one when we should "save-up" for possible costly eventualities.

ENGLAND IS OPPOSED TO HOOVER PLAN.

The plan of former President Hoover, that would have required England to remove the embargo on food shipments to Belgium in order that soup kitchens might be opened, and as he said, thereby prevent millions of children from starving, has been rejected by England.

The reason stated for the rejection is that as Belgium is at present under German control, and it would not fairly carry out the plan of feeding starving children only, to matter whether it would agree to do so or not.

Mr. Hoover says that he wishes no misunderstanding of his sympathy for the British cause, nor that the plight of the children in small democracies is due to German invasion, but his plan is to help the millions of children among the little Nations who have been our life-long National friends.

The British statement contends that the question was not one of simply insuring that any supplies so sent would be delivered, but represented a false humanitarianism that would be shown later in "other directions."

Mr. Hoover replies that the amount of food subject to seizure at one time would not be sufficient to be of material value for one day's use.

Belgium, it will be recalled, acted as a bar to the rapid invasion of France in the World War, until France and England could prepare to effectively repel the invasion, and finally bring about the Versailles treaty.

Apparently Germany has had but a small part in the present discussion and is making no promises.

ICELAND OF TODAY.

Iceland is a country of which we know but little, but it is one that is coming to the front in the world's problems. It is said to have been in its long history without a war, and not to want one now.

It has had a system of government all its own for some 900 years planned after that of Norway, its largest big neighbor, that more recently followed the Danish, and all in all has done very well for itself.

Since Denmark, through the fortunes of the present European war, has been forced to accept Nazi rule, England has of course become interested, and now has warships near at hand, and little cold Iceland is looking on with considerable apprehension. The following on the general subject has been clipped from an exchange:

"There are about 120,000 people on the island, most of whom are engaged in farming or fishing. Their principal exports are dried fish, wool, live sheep, horses, eider down, salted meat, butter, hides, skins, fish oils, and whalebone. Almost without exception, the people are Lutherans. They have a good system of schools and colleges and there is very little illiteracy. It is said that in no other country in Europe are so many books, in proportion to the population, printed and sold. Newspapers and magazines are also popular.

In recent years, many miles of good roads have been constructed, telephone and telegraph systems have been built, electricity has been installed and present-day methods of transportation introduced. The climate is modified by the Gulf Stream and is not much colder than in some parts of the United States. The people have always been friendly with the United States and, due to the war in Europe, are rapidly becoming good customers of this country.

Iceland with its liberty-loving people and its long history of democratic government would seem to be a country with which the United States could have much in common and to be deserving of a high place in the group of countries which are drawing closer together as a means of protecting themselves and each other from the inroads being made by totalitarianism on the democratic governments of the world today."

SOME SACRED BOOKS OF THE WORLD.

Each civilized and semi-civilized people, the world over, has its sacred book or books, and in each of them good things are to be found, and the fact that in all of them the moral principal — sometimes distorted — seems the dominating feature. This but proves that there is a God.

The Koran of the Mohammedans, written during the 7th. century A. D. by Mohammed and his early followers, is a guide to the faith and morals of a very large part of the inhabitants of south western Asia and northern Africa, and a part of India, and at present has enrolled probably three hundred million adherents, and maybe more.

The Eddas of Scandinavia, published in the fourteenth century A. D. formed the guide for the people of the land of the Mid-night Sun.

The Tripitakas, written about the 6th. century B. C. constitute the basis of Buddhist belief and religion, and is the foundation for the faith of a large part of the people of Asia.

The Five Kings of the Chinese are among the earliest sacred writings of the Chinese and go back to about the 11th. century B. C.; these were followed later by the Analects of Confucius which later became the basis of belief and practice of a large part of the Chinese people.

The Vedas of the Hindu form the basis and foundation for the Brahmin religion and were written about the 11th. century B. C.

These several writings above named constitute the leading world beliefs that claim and hold pace with the Christian religion that is founded on a collection of writings that extend from nearly fifteen centuries B. C. to some centuries after the death of Christ.

The Bible is the basis and guide book for the various christian faiths — and has as its followers the leading civilized nations of earth. Some of the "books" of the Bible are historic, some prophetic. The book that strikes me as significant is the book of Jonah, which has been discussed because of the life story therein chronicled of the principal character — Jonah.

Some critics failing to catch the true spirit and meaning of the message have criticised the story of Jonah as improbable or even impossible. These critics we think wrong. About a dozen years ago Colliers Weekly carried a story of a whaler that practically proves the story of Jonah and the whale possible. It seems that one of the sailors was swept overboard in a gale and given up as lost. Two days later a large whale was harpooned and brought in for booty and when being cut up there was found inside a man yet alive but unconscious. This man proved to be their lost sailor, who later recovered to tell the tale. Personally I doubted the story and so wrote Colliers. The editor curtly informed me that they did not print any stories without substantiating proof, so if you, gentle reader, doubt the story contact Colliers and be convinced.

To me the story of Jonah is one of the most interesting and important of the published Bible stories, because in it man's call to obedience is given, and the probabilities of reward for faithful service, and God's willingness to spare the wicked He has condemned for destruction.

"Jonah, go to Nineveh, that great city, and cry against it; for their wickedness is come up before me," seems to have been too big a job for Jonah to undertake and he fled and shipped by sea to an unknown land but a raging storm changed things and Jonah was picked by lot as the cause of the storm and cast into the sea, and immediately swallowed by a great fish that God had specially created for the purpose.

And there is the rub! That fish! Poor biblical critics who profess to believe that God could make the universe and all that is in it seem to fail to grasp the significant fact that an Infinite God who could create the world, also create a fish for a particular purpose, or cause a gourd to grow up in a single night to teach a lesson. So you ask if a fish swallowed Jonah how could Jonah live in the whale's belly? Don't a fish breathe? Hasn't a fish power to extract oxygen from water? Couldn't a God who could create a universe also create a fish with a gas tank?

The wonder to me is not that God could create the fish, but that the fish could stomach Jonah for three whole days. If Old Jonah had been a modern Jonah—son infested, saturated with nicotine and other poisons, I fear the old whale would have had a time of it to keep down such a morsel so long. Who that has read the story has not pictured to himself the old prophet, stooped in form walking by aid of a long staff, clad in long flowing black robe over the front of which his long gray beard spread out to tell all he passed that age and decrepitude passed by? Who has not, in imagination, heard Jonah cry out "Yet three days and Nineveh shall be destroyed."

In imagination I have seen the old man stooped beneath his burden, crying out his message". Yet three days and Nineveh shall be destroyed." "Yet three days and Nineveh shall be destroyed," and I have seen the children on their way to school as they danced around old Jonah, and I have seen them point the finger at him and heard them cry "listen to the old fool" and I have seen Jonah heedless of their gibes continue his cry "yet three days and Nineveh shall be destroyed."

I have followed the children to their homes, and heard them tell their parents about the crazy old fool who said Nineveh would be destroyed in three days, and I have heard them say to their parents "Ain't he a crazy old fool," and I have heard the parents say "Children you shouldn't say that, he is but a poor old man who has lost his mind". Children you must respect age. I have seen old Jonah the next day, stooped a little closer to the ground with the burden of the universe upon his back, and heard him cry out "Yet two days and Nineveh shall be destroyed." "Yet two days and Nineveh shall be destroyed," and I have seen the children on their way to school and at evening on the way home dance around the old man and heard them cry out "poor old lunatic" and I have seen these children rush home and have heard them say "Mama, the Old man is still out there, but he cries now 'but two days and Nineveh shall be destroyed'" and I have heard the children ask "Mama, ain't he an old fool?" and I have heard the parents reply, "hush children, you must not make fun of the poor old man".

Stooped almost to the ground I have seen Old Jonah, going thru the streets of Nineveh and I have heard him cry out with all the anguish of his soul "Yet one day and Nineveh shall be destroyed," and I have seen the nervous parents as they rot their children ready for school, and I have heard them in hushed whispers say "children you must not laugh, you must be good; run along now, and if the old man is still out there run back and tell mama what he says."

And I have seen the children from all over Nineveh on their way to school, and I have noted them stand in open-mouthed wonder as they saw poor old Jonah and heard him say "Yet one day and Nineveh shall be destroyed," and I have seen those children run to their homes out of breath and heard them say "Oh M-a-m-a the old-man-says, 'Yet-one-day-and-Nineveh-shall-be destroyed.' It-ai't-so-is-it-Mama?" and I have heard the parents reply "Hush children, the old man may be right, help me get down the sack-cloth, and help me get out the ashes," and in every home in Nineveh I have seen the parents and the children and the cattle covered with sack cloth and ashes, and I have seen all the members of the family in front of their homes out in the streets clothed in sack-cloth pouring ashes on their heads bending to earth, wailing and pleading to the Lord God for forgiveness, and I have seen Old Jonah as the people were repentant with the burden of Nineveh lifted from his shoulders straightened up and I have seen a city saved by the persistent preaching of one old man, and I have seen God repent himself of what he had said and I have seen a city saved because that city of sin put on sack-cloth and ashes and repented, and quit its mean deeds.

Yes, dear reader, higher critics may not see value in God's plan in introducing this story into His word, but to me it is one of the most wonderful of all the books, for it teaches me the great lesson that God works thru humble agency, and it further more teaches that when God points out a work to be done, the difficult, he expects man to arise and say "here am I Lord, send me."

'U-Turn' Is All Right

If for Sake of Safety

MILWAUKEE.—Tom White, an engineering student, made an illegal U-turn on an icy Milwaukee street, but got off with a suspended sentence when he explained that:

"Due to wheels accelerating in a given plane and the force of gravity acting in an angle to the rotating plane, it caused rotation perpendicular to the plane of the wheel rotation. In the interest of safety, I felt it better to complete the turn of rotation rather than break the turn and stall in the middle of the street."

In other words, his car skidded on the ice and he thought it safer to complete the skid than to apply the brakes.

Camel Fossils Found

Camels that once roamed the dry grasslands that are now rock strata beneath the soil of South Dakota are represented in fossil collections sent back to the Field Museum of Natural History here by an expedition under the leadership of Paul O. McGrew. The camels lived in America during Miocene time, about 18,000,000 years ago. Like the primitive horses that were their contemporaries, they later became extinct in North America. Mr. McGrew's search for fossils has been conducted largely in the vicinity of Wounded Knee, famous as a battlefield where white soldiers fought Indians in the later phases of the plains insurrections. The party has now moved on to northwestern Nebraska, where skeletons of other extinct camel species are being dug out.

Twins Changed Little

Wide differences in environment changed them but little, according to twin sisters separated by adoption in 1914 when they were five days old. After several unsuccessful attempts, Mrs. Lloyd E. Esmouf and Miss Agnes Walters were reunited recently at Seattle.

Northwest Inhabited 8,000 Years Ago, Scientist Finds

PHILADELPHIA.—The first evidence that man existed in the northwestern part of the United States 8,000 or more years ago and fashioned crude instruments to slay elephants, camels and horses for food was presented to the American Philosophical society.

Dr. L. S. Cressman of the University of Oregon discovered the remnants of the lost civilization beneath a bed of volcanic lava in south-central Oregon.

Never before had scientists discovered evidence that man existed in North America in those prehistoric times in areas other than the Southwest and the Great Plains.

It had been thought that man came to North America by crossing the Bering straits, moving immediately down to the warm Southwest.

Dr. Cressman's discovery indicates that some of the invaders stopped in Oregon and, armed only with crude stone spears, sallied out from mountain caves to prey on camels, elephants and other animal species which since long have disappeared from this part of the world.

New Ruptured Blood Vessels

Young Sidney Smith Jr. of Chicago is being hailed by the medical profession for developing a simple method of healing ruptured blood vessels.

So simple is the new method that it can best be described by comparison with the common duty of every housewife—darning.

Smith developed the process of sewing up ruptured blood vessels on the darning principle, using sugar rods, covered with a film of oil, as the darning ball over which the blood vessel can be stitched together.

After stitching is done, the sugar rod dissolves and disappears.

Smith, 28, has received his M. D. degree from the University of Chicago and was awarded the Harry Ginsburg Memorial prize for his research work in developing the new process.

Brilliant Fathers, Ordinary Sons

Brilliant fathers usually have ordinary sons because the boy has also a mother, and though the father may be a genius, the mother may not be. Half of the cells in your body come from your mother and the other half from your father.

How It Happened

"Hullo, old fellow!" said Smith brightly. "Haven't seen you about for some weeks. Where have you been?"

"I was laid up for some time," replied his companion.

"Sorry to hear that," put in Smith. "Flu, I suppose?"

"Yes; and crashed."

Good Business

Friend—Why do you have so many misspelled words and such bad grammar on the signs in your window?

Storekeeper—People think I'm a fool, and they come in expecting to get the best of me. Business is the best I've had for years.

Well Bred

"Heloise has thrown over her worthless affinity and returned to her husband."

"So?"

"Yes; found the loafer less desirable than the loaf."

Requisite for Success

Manager—But this play is too highbrow, it will never be a success. Author—That's where you are mistaken. People always praise things they don't understand.

FEESERSBURG.

The beautiful little red bird (Cardinal) gave warning early last week but few paid any heed, but early Friday morning snow began falling and continued 'til about 14 inches covered the ground, then more followed on Saturday evening 'til every bush and tree was thickly sprinkled and on Sunday morning one felt we were dwelling in fairy land.

Eight members of Mt. Union attended Lenten Service at Baust Church Wednesday night of last week and heard a good sermon, "The Knowing Christ" and good music by the choir. This week's service to be held at St. Luke's Winter Church. In the spirit of a good neighbor Roger Boop with his tractor and roller leveled the snow around Mt. Union Church on Sunday morning, making a nice broad pathway to the door which was highly appreciated. There were 32 persons out to Sunday School, on Sunday morning.

Our mail carrier on Route 1, from Union Bridge has been on the sick list the past week, and his substitute Norman Graham has been making the daily rounds. Mr. Jean John is relaxing in bed this week with a very sore throat the result of a cold. His mother is waiting on him and administering home remedies greasing his throat and giving him pineapple to eat. That last remedy sounds good to me.

Wilbur Miller, Jr., of Camp Meade paid a visit on Saturday night to his home. He called to see us and seems content with his new duties and praised the food and comfort of the camp. His parents and sister Miss Josephine visited him in camp the previous week.

Another of our Sunday School boys Russell Wetzel, Camp H 115 Infantry had leave of absence from Camp Meade over Sunday and visited his home folks. We were glad to see him at Church Sunday morning and know that he is content and has a true Christian Soldier's spirit.

Mrs. C. S. Wolfe attended the moving of her brother, Stanley Gilbert and family from Bethel Heights to near Carrollton. Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Graham are expecting to move from their home at Mt. Union to their newly purchased home in Union Bridge on this coming Saturday. Mrs. Graham has not been so well having to be in bed part of the time.

Mrs. Charlie Hyde of Middleburg, who was operated on for a serious case of hernia ten days ago is improving nicely.

Mrs. Wilbur Miller and daughter, Josephine, visited the scene of the Frederick fire on Monday. L. K. Birely has had his drive ways and back yard recoated with a coat of white stone.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Grindler and Mrs. Addie Crumbacker called to see Mrs. James Kalbach, of Bark Hill last week one evening. Mrs. Kalbach has been suffering very much the past few weeks.

Our neighbor J. H. Stuffle is installing a bath room and digging ditches which isn't a very desirable job as its too wet just now.

Miss Lizzie Birely is still on her back not enjoying life too well. Her arm seemed to be improving nicely till early Monday morning when she had a back set since then she is suffering much pain.

LITTLSTOWN.

On the eve of the 53rd anniversary of the great blizzard of 1888, when it snowed for three days in the Eastern States and the high wind snow bound the roads. While the snow storm of Friday and Saturday was 16 inches deep and what kept the snow from drifting was the light rain that fell, and what little drifting it did on Friday did not shut up the major highway as the state had their snow plows on the job. I was surprised when we went along with Mr. and Mrs. Carl Duttera to Taneytown on Sunday to attend the funeral of Mr. Hesson. I found the streets in Taneytown just the same as Littletown all because the snow on the pavements had to be cleaned off and no place to put it but on the road which caused the automobile driver to park on part of the road which was not the fault of anyone. And the state plows could not clean the street. The worst part was that the funeral stopped on Emmitsburg street where the slush was terrible and the street was jammed with cars but with the aid of the policeman who kept the traffic going with no mishap. The Mayor and Council of Taneytown can feel proud of such a good policeman. I believe in giving any man credit when he is entitled to it. There were many worse snow storms in January and February but none that I know of. In March in 1892 March 17 it began to snow about 4 o'clock and kept it up till morning and a 8 inch of snow had fallen, but melted just as fast as this one is doing.

POTOMAC EDISON NEWS.

Hagerstown, Md.—Determination of the winner of the second of the series of eight weekly contests being conducted by The Potomac Edison Co., in the territory it serves found the contest judges in complete disagreement as to which of two very splendid statements regarding the safety of the electric range as a cooking medium was the best.

The entries of Miss Eleanor Bane of Charles Town, W. Va., and Mrs. E. Bruce Allen of Moorefield, W. Va., were so outstanding in this second week's contest and each was so good that both had their champions on the board of judges who could not be influenced to decide unanimously on one or the other.

The decision finally agreed upon was to declare Mrs. Allen and Miss Bane joint winners and to award duplicate prizes of electric roasters to each of the ladies.

Mrs. Allen's and Miss Bane's entries thus join with that of the prize winner in the first week's contest, Mrs. Mark Leatherwood, of Mt. Airy, Md., in the select group from which the electric range winning entry will be determined.

Originally the rules of this electric range safety contest provided that only one prize—an electric roaster—would be awarded each week for that week's best statement and the writer of the best of the prize winning weekly statements would receive the grand prize award of an electric range.

However with one contest already having joint winners, the possibility exists that the judges will have more entries to judge in determining the grand prize electric range winner than had been planned for. And if the quality of the entries is maintained, they will have many difficult decisions to make in the remaining weeks of the contest.

Both of the second week's contest prize winners are familiar with the problems that housekeeping in general, and cooking in particular, present. Mrs. Allen was able to call upon the experiences of her years as a housewife in writing her statement. Miss Bane, although a younger person, has learned much, in the comparatively few years she has been responsible for her father's household, that was of value in writing her statement.

The rules for the electric range safety contest that is being sponsored by The Potomac Edison Co., appear elsewhere in this paper. Officials of the Company emphasize the fact that although each mail brings a bulk of entries in the contest, each one is carefully acknowledged and considered for the prize given the week the entry is received.

THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL

You have to be no great shakes of a prophet to see some very plain handwriting on the wall these days. The industrial machine of America is being geared direct to the defense needs of the country. That is the way folks in America want it to be, but one lesson we all have to learn is that it is too much to expect full speed ahead on defense business without affecting the amount of ordinary things that can be produced, and the cost at which they can be sold.

Everybody stands face to face with the fact that the things they buy are going to cost more, and what the farmer has to buy is no exception. It's a kind of a squeeze play. Because the only realistic way to look at what's coming is to face the probability that there won't be much more money coming in.

The one hope for the farmer in the immediate future is to find and put into effect every means and method he can discover to lower his cost of production. This sounds like old stuff, but so is human nature.

Farming is a business. It has many of the same rules and surely all the uncertainties of business. Most industries in this country are little businesses. Thousands of them are no bigger than the average farm. Men who know about such things tell us that in little industries there is too much self-satisfaction about costs. The owners are too willing to take for granted that their methods and their equipment are all right, or are the best that the business can afford. Ever so many little businesses fail because the owner does not spend time enough keeping abreast of new equipment and methods. So it is with farming.

A few weeks ago there took place a discussion with the owner of a small business about the fact that he was finding it impossible to compete with the market, and that he should do something about it before his business dried up completely and had to be given up to his creditors. He himself felt that nothing could be done more than he was already doing. But investigation showed that much could be done. Strangely enough, the real thing he needed to do was to learn some facts about his own business, and to get equipped to produce more cheaply.

But the fly in the ointment was that he had no real yardstick to measure his costs. He had a sort of cost system, but it was inadequate. It really told him nothing.

How many farmers find themselves in the same boat, really guessing, year after year, about what and where the costs are, and trusting to luck that enough will come in to make both ends meet?

It has always been a kind of mystery why so many farmers, sensible as they are, do not set up accurate records of their operations. It is easy to do. Almost any agricultural college or state university, even the U. S. Department of Agriculture, will be found eager to assist in any way possible to help their farm friends get a clear picture of the costs of production through simple bookkeeping methods.

Keeping books and studying costs with an eagle eye is like target practice: once you start, you have a burning desire to do a little better each time. You study guns and ammunition. You begin to watch the good shots, study their stance, and how they hold their rifle. Soon you get results, too, and what is more important, you know exactly why you got them.

The point is that cutting costs on the farm is in itself intensely interesting. But the real thrill of that kind of management comes when you count the profits that remain when you have cut out the waste items and attained real efficiency in performing necessary operations.

The word for the cycle of costs and prices that seems definitely ahead is inflation. When the skipper of a ship sees a storm ahead, he reefs his sails before it hits. Hammering at costs is the farmer's way of reefing his sails. It is the intelligent way to get ready.

Youngsters Need No Stimulants!

A born idiot has dignity, but one artificially created by alcohol has none, Angelo Patri wrote recently in a column for young people.

Writing for the Bell Syndicate, he said:

"The reforming of grown people never interests me. If we teach children what is good for them and do our best to protect them from evil we will not have too many adults to reform. That is why the cocktail hour that offers stimulating drinks to young people in their late 'teens and early 20's seems so dangerous to me.

"Young people are stimulated by the wine of youth. There is no drink as heady as that with which nature has stimulated them. It takes all they have to keep an even balance without taking on additional stimulation in the form of a cocktail.

"The afternoon gathering and the need for relaxation and gaiety are set in the day's routine by nature. Cocktails are not nature's way of relieving the situation and we who are in any way responsible for the welfare of young people should be quick to save the situation by providing the needful elements without falling back on stimulants.

"Music will help tremendously provided it is selected with an eye to its effect. Tea is a good stimulant. A good drink—tasty, sparkling, snappy—can be made by combining tea, fruit juices and ginger-ale. It can be lovely in color and when served in dainty glasses is quite as attractive as any cocktail. It will smell better and taste as good and it will do its work without robbing youth of its charm and its brains.

"A body without its mind is an awful sight, especially when that body is usually occupied by an intelligent, able mind. . . . It's an awful sight and one no young person would wish to imprint on friends' memories."

Bulging Eyes Pituitary Ill

"Bug-eyed" persons suffer from a disease of the pituitary gland at the base of the brain, the American Medical association was told.

The not-infrequent condition of protruding eyeballs has heretofore been regarded as a disturbance of the thyroid gland in the neck, Dr. Robert B. Aird of San Francisco declared, but it has been found that the condition often persists even after the goiter, or overgrowth of the thyroid, has been removed.

Over-secretion of hormones from the pituitary, he said, causes the muscles around the eyeball to enlarge and fibrous tissue to form, thrusting eyes outward from their sockets.

Unless the condition is relieved by operation the person may develop ulcers of the eyes, infections and possible fatal disease of the brain, Dr. Aird declared.

Child Growth Study Aided

A grant of $61,700 from the general education board will enable the University of California's institute of child welfare to go still deeper into its job of learning how children grow up.

For years the institute has been observing several hundred children, among scores who have been under scientific scrutiny since infancy.

The results already have provided a valuable foundation for teachers and others concerned with child development.

Under the grant, a supplemental research center has been opened for students and teachers desiring to use the institute's facilities. The financing also will permit extension of research.

SAGAS OF THE SKIES

By R. C. Oertel

FUTURE historians of the U. S. Navy may be puzzled by an entry alongside the name of Ensign Robert Winston, which will say:

"Forced landing in naval reserve land plane—net injuries, four wet feet." But in the entry will lie a tale of skillful flying, courage and the coordination of America's naval services.

Ensign Winston, a former test pilot, was aloft on a routine training flight in a two-seated biplane. Six hundred feet over Floyd Bennett Field, New York, and preparing to land, he discovered that his landing gear was jammed. Worse than jammed—one wheel had come down and the other stuck.

Ensign Winston turned to his mechanic, E. J. Marrone, penciled a note informing him of their predicament and asking if Marrone wanted to jump. Marrone preferred to stick with Winston and take his chances.

Over the Naval Reserve hangar Winston roared, dropping a note in his heavy glove to his commanding officer, Commander Smith, telling of his predicament and asking for advice.

Quickly the Navy went to work to prepare for all eventualities in thorough fashion. A guide plane was sent up to signal that Winston was to make a "belly landing" on near-Jamaica Bay. Two amphibians were taxied out to the Bay to indicate the most desirable landing lane. A Coast Guard boat stood by with motors turning, ready to dash to the rescue and bring the fliers to waiting ambulances on the shore. Then the guide plane swung low over the bay followed by Winston. Delicately the biplane was maneuvered onto the water, literally skidding to a stop. Immediately, Winston opened a "floatation gear," a device that buoys up the top wing and keeps the plane floating. Scarcely had the plane stopped its forward motion when up roared the Coast Guard boat to take off the two fliers with no harm save wet feet. The plane was towed back to a hangar where inspection revealed little if any damage, and the Naval Reserve resumed its routine.

Miss Yvonne Bradley (third from the right) has been elected Snow Queen and, with her court, welcomes the colorful crowds of winter sports fans who arrive by the thousand in automobiles and snow trains. Six steel toboggan slides and acres of skating rinks are now in operation, and three ski towers and 75 miles of marked ski trails are planned for this huge winter sports development under the supervision of the National Park Service and the Michigan State Park Department.

Americans Don't Drink

Tea? 94,000,000 Pounds

People who gobble up new ideas as quickly as Americans are bound to swallow a lot of hokum with their hot dogs. Most of us have completely forgotten the once-sacred formula, "Every day in every way I'm getting better and better," and many of us stopped eating the required apple a day some years ago, but as a mass, we still believe:

That we live fast and die young, ignoring the evidence of life-insurance companies to the contrary; that we're just a husky bunch of record-breaking athletes, when, as a matter of statistics, we are merely an excitable nation of spectators. Finally, there is a widespread belief that Americans don't drink tea, and, worse, the calumny that American men who drink it are sissies.

Although Americans "don't drink tea," 94,000,000 pounds of it came through the customs last year, enough to make 19,000,000,000 cups, or thereabouts. There are three things you can do with tea: You can use it to take ink stains out of rugs, the burn out of sunburn, and you can drink it. Therefore it begins to look as though another fallacy has slipped by our unguarded frontier, and, lest it become accepted as a fact and innocent men quarantined as sissies, let's get Polly to put the kettle on and boil down the truth from the mists of fancy.

REASON FOR SACRIFICE

By KARL GRAYSON
(Associated Newspapers-WNU Service.)

ATTORNEY GENERAL CHENEY was admitted at once to Inspector Piper's office. His attitude was one of familiarity and confidence; thinly masking knowledge of his own importance.

Inspector Piper rose at sight of his visitor. The inspector's attitude was respectful.

"Good morning, Mr. Cheney. This is rather unusual, isn't it? Frankly, I'm flattered."

Attorney Cheney extended his hand, smiled easily and snapped open a cigarette case, which he offered his host.

"Hello, Piper. I know you're busy; must apologize for dropping in so abruptly. Wanted a word with you about young Noyes."

Piper arched his brows. "Noyes? Victor Noyes? You mean that young nobody we booked last night in connection with the Proctor woman murder?"

"The same. Mind telling me the facts about the case, Inspector?"

Cheney's manner was slightly ingratiating. This was odd. Piper spread his hands in a gesture of resignation.

"On the face of it, it looks dead open and shut. The woman was found dead in her apartment. Shot through the head. Sound of the shot attracted the attention of two men passing through the hall. They crashed open Miss Proctor's door and found her lying on the floor in a pool of blood. Young Noyes was standing over the body with a gun in his hand." Piper shrugged.

"Dead open and shut. The kid was caught in the act of robbing the apartment and, in desperation, killing the woman."

Cheney saw the doubt in the inspector's eyes. He said, "Where's the hitch, Inspector? There's something screwy some place. You're not sold on the idea the kid killed her." The lawyer crushed out his cigarette. "Piper, I knew that boy when we were youngsters. Grew up in the same town together. He never seemed to me like a killer."

Piper was silent a moment. "Tell you what, Mr. Cheney, take a run down and talk with Noyes yourself. I'd like to check with your reactions after you've seen him."

Victor Noyes recognized the great attorney at once. He shook hands warmly, and Cheney saw that there was no trace of fear or dreaded anticipation in the youth's eyes.

"Sorry to see you in this jam, Vic. Read about it an hour ago. Tell me what happened. I'd like to help you, if possible."

Noyes laughed. He was a small man and weak looking. "You'll have a fine time helping me, Howard. I haven't got a leg to stand on."

"You mean you admit killing Grace Proctor?"

"I don't have to admit it. It's all settled as far as the public is concerned." He was silent a moment. Then, "Howard, I'm glad you dropped in. Remember when we were kids you once said I'd never amount to anything, never attract any attention? Those words have always haunted me."

"We were kids then, Vic. That's past. I'd like to help you now."

"Perhaps you can, but not in the way you think." Young Noyes' eyes were glistening. "Howard, I'm satisfied. I've always wanted people to know who I am. Well, I've got that wish. There isn't a paper in the country that didn't publish my picture this morning. Grace Proctor was a pretty popular opera star. But I'll bet she never got the publicity I'm getting now!"

"Man, you're crazy!"

"Maybe I am. After all, what is it that a man wants to live for? To realize an ambition, isn't it? To do something that will attract attention, to make people know who he is. Anyway, that's what I always wanted to live for. All my life I never amounted to much, or attracted any attention. I lost one job after another. I tried to live straight and honest, and found it didn't get me anywhere. Nobody knew who I was or cared. And all the time there was that burning sensation inside of me to attract attention. Howard, some people die to realize an ambition. I guess I'm like that."

Attorney Cheney looked deep into the younger man's eyes and saw there a longing that he had never imagined any man could possess. A glimmering of understanding came to him and as quickly vanished.

"Listen, you fool! You'll go to the chair for this, burn for something you never did! That's a hell of a way to die!"

"It'll be a long time before the trial is over, Howard, and folks will know who I am. The papers will be full of me. I'll read 'em every day, and that will be worth dying for."

Cheney still clutched the youth's shoulders. "Listen, you idiot! You didn't kill Grace Proctor! There was another man there! You were hiding in the room. You heard what was said. You saw him draw a gun and shoot. You watched him escape down the fire escape. And you let them think you did it! You're crazy!"

Noyes smiled. "Dramatic as always, eh, Howard. Yes, I think that would go over pretty good in a court room. But it wouldn't prove anything."

"How come?"

"Because you recognized that other man. You could identify him, prove he was there!"

For fully a minute the eyes of the two men looked deeply into each other's. Each knew what the other was thinking; each read accurately the message the other was seeking to convey. There was no need for words. Each understood.

Presently the man who would soon be charged with murder in the first degree, and who later would without doubt pay the supreme penalty, laid his hand on the arm of the man who had come to help him.

"Don't say it, Howard. I understand, and I'm willing to die. My life hasn't been worth living anyhow. With you it's different. You've accomplished all the things you've set out to do. You've made a name for yourself, become a big man. You've lived the kind of life I would have liked to live, but couldn't. And now the thing you can do that will help me most is to try and understand—and forget the rest."

Cheney stood back. The understanding that had lighted his face a few moments before returned and did not again vanish. He fought and triumphed over a desire to plead once more with the youth. And in that instant he harked back over his own experience, tried to compare his own life with that of young Victor Noyes and found himself groping for something to say that would change the youth's mind.

He turned at last and reached the door before turning. Victor was still sitting on the cot, smiling happily. Newspapers whose front pages emblazoned his name were strewn about the floor at his feet. His thoughts fled back to the night previous, to the weeks before, during which he had suffered the agonies of the damned in withholding knowledge of his mad love affair with Grace Proctor from his wife and the prying curiosity of the public. And then again his mind dwelt on Victor Noyes, and for the first time in months his soul was at peace.

Remembers Her Manners, Even While in Swimming
And there was the party on a houseboat anchored in a harbor on the sound. It was a hot July afternoon, and a lot of us were sitting around on deck, and suddenly somebody said, "Look! What on earth are they doing?" and we all looked. There was a large proud yacht anchored near by and what they were doing was obvious enough—they were lowering a dowager down the side of the yacht into the water. She was a large, proud dowager to match, and she wore a bathing suit and a vast straw hat; and it took two members of the crew to get her down the steps, and in. They launched her finally, however, while we watched fascinated.

Once embarked, she became a swimming hat, with plump white arms. She swam a breast-stroke, small and slow, but steady. Somebody said in a hushed voice, "She seems to be coming over here," and it did indeed begin to look that way, and presently there was no doubt about it. We all flocked to the rail to welcome her, and we all leaned over. When she was within speaking distance, she paused, and did a kind of dog-paddle to keep herself afloat and said, "Good afternoon, Is Mrs. Weeks on board?"

"No," we said. "No—unfortunately—Mrs. Weeks has gone ashore."

"Ah," said the seagoing dowager with a nod of her hat. "Sorry I've missed her."

At this point she sank a little, but came up again at once, blowing out water. She turned and resumed the small, slow breast-stroke—but for a few strokes only. Then she had a social afterthought, and she paused again, and dog-paddled once more, and added gravely—all of this was grave and courteous, as in a drawing room—"When Mrs. Weeks returns, will you tell her, please, that Mrs. DeCourcy K. Breckonridge CALLED?"

His People's People
The late Douglas Fairbanks said in an interview after a visit to England: "A very smart young Englishman of good family once got engaged to a Chicago girl. He told her about his splendid country home with its 45 gardeners and so forth, and the delighted girl exclaimed: 'O Bill, how lovely! We'll live with your people, of course.' But Bill said: 'No, I don't think so. You see, my people are still living with their people.'"

The Bell Tolls!

The bell peals, the liquor traffic says, for what alcoholic beverages have done to this nation since such narcotic drinks were returned to the public market place by repeal in 1933!

The bell tolls, the social and religious leader says, for what liquor has done and is doing in multiplying the human and economic miseries which always are the dregs in each drinker's cup!

The bell clangs an alarm to the nation, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union says, to stop what liquor is doing, to return to a sane, sober concept of life, instead of giving in on all fronts to human weakness and commercial greed!

Every American who is mentally awake knows that the nation faces serious problems resulting from the sale and use of alcoholic beverages.

Leaders of the liquor traffic advise their saloon-keepers to "curb excesses" or an aroused public will prohibit their trade.

Leaders of the temperance forces say these "excesses" and their bad effects spring from the "narcotic which the liquor traffic peddles."

Apologists for liquor point to taxes paid, jobs furnished, and grain bought by the alcoholic beverage industry.

Crusaders of the temperance forces say to look behind these claims and see the huge costs of liquor-inspired delinquency and crime, of wasted lives and opportunities, of actual economic losses.

In trying to evaluate this problem and to think through to a conclusion, the average citizen has run up against a mass of propaganda but a minimum of cold, hard facts.

If the American public has the facts, no one need worry about the public's final decision on any problem of great social importance. But, the public must have the facts, enlarged only by sound, logical conclusions which those facts and mankind's history will support.

The W.C.T.U. believes the facts point the way to personal abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the traffic. It has made available its 66-year collection of the findings of science on "What alcohol is and what it does" for presentation to the public in cooperation with this and other newspapers.

Given these basic, uncolored facts it will be up to the public to reach its own decision as to what is to be done.

Times Are Too Rapid For Robber on Bicycle

ST. LOUIS.—A hint to holdup men: Don't attempt a getaway on a bicycle in this streamlined age.

Cecil C. Hood tried, according to police, and came to grief in short order. They say he admitted entering Amos Johnson's grocery and taking $21 at gunpoint, then mounting a bike he had stolen previously and wheeling away.

His broadcast description was heard by three detectives in a scout car who saw him pedaling furiously along the street.

Tip Put Into Fare Box For Kindly Bus Driver
DALLAS.—Augustus T. Poovey, city bus operator, had explained as much about Dallas as he could to an elderly out-of-town couple riding his bus. Upon departing, the man said, "I certainly thank you for showing us around—here's a tip," and dropped a handful of small coin into the fare box. The fare box is emptied by the company. Drivers never share its content.

Miner Works 78 Years; Then Decides to Retire
LANSFORD, PA.—William Gibson, 85 years old, who went to work in the mines when he was seven and has worked in the anthracite fields ever since, has decided to retire.

He is the oldest employee of the old mining company in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania.

Newest Radio Cabinets Are Smartly Designed
Have you seen the new radios? They are housed in such smartly styled, well made cabinets that they are an asset to the furnishings of any room.

Progress in cabinet design has been rapid during the last few years. Before that time there was a period when it was practically impossible to get a radio in a moderately sized case. It was out size or nothing. Those were the days, too, of the huge, overstuffed couches and elephantine lounge chairs. Now they have made way for merchandise of better lines.

One well known manufacturer of radios is following traditional furniture designs in a fall showing. Four particularly good looking models are made in the style of Queen Anne Sheraton, Hepplewhite, and in the Regency manner. All are provided with automatic record changing devices.

The Queen Anne radio is handsomely simple and looks like a high-boy. Its brass drawer pulls increase the illusion, as does the lovely shell carving just below the top. The legs are cabriole with shell carving on the knee, and spade feet. Because of its colonial character, this model has been called the Williamsburg and is suggested for rooms that follow the popular Williamsburg trend. Of African and Honduras mahogany, it is 42 inches high, 26 inches wide, and has a depth of 17 inches. It has a drawer, useful for storing records.
