IT'S ALL OVER

It's all over but the voting, and that act remains for you and me to do. The candidates of each party are men of high caliber and proved worth and really, as far as you and I are concerned it matters little which is elected.

It is my personal belief that a change of party would be an improvement, not on account of the candidates themselves, but on account of the hangers on—the perpetual office holders. This condition is true regardless of party, and for me personally, were my party thus long in power, I'd change my party affiliation to help change that condition.

No matter what your party, or for whom you vote, let me urge you to do your given duty and go to the polls and vote on election day.

W. J. H.

A MEDAL FOR THE JUDGE

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough of the United States District Court at Washington, D. C., promises to become a Homeric figure in the history of labor-management relations. It is to be hoped that no one will try to depict him as the Nemesis of organized labor. To do so would be a mistake.

To be sure, Judge Goldsborough has twice enjoined the United Mine Workers and its president, John L. Lewis, and once hit them with the biggest fine in labor history for defying the order of a Federal court. But he acted here not on behalf of the other combatant in a private war but on behalf of the safety and welfare of the people.

Then, in the pension dispute, he took the miners' side and, in effect, rebuked the coal operators for their legalistic blocking of a program designed to bring "a little dignity" to the veterans of a hazardous calling.

Now, with a petition pending for another injunction against the miners and their chief, he has taken the role of mediator and brought about a settlement out of court of the dispute in the "captive" mines over the legality of Mr. Lewis' union-shop demand.

The Taft-Hartley Act does not directly forbid an employer to sign a union-shop contract with a union which has not qualified before the NLRB and held an NLRB-conducted election. If the law sets up such a prohibition, it does so by backing into it. There are doubts, therefore, to be resolved.

This newspaper suggested at the start of the strike that the steel industry's captive mines might sign the contract Mr. Lewis wanted with the union-shop clause contingent upon NLRB and court approval. Judge Goldsborough has succeeded in getting Mr. Lewis to sign the contract the operators had accepted and suspend the union shop clause pending adjudication.

A feat which, we would observe, rates a medal—Christian Science Monitor.

JOHN J. PERSHING

General of the Armies John Joseph Pershing was the fifth officer in the history of the United States to be granted that five-star rank for life. In his later years, and in the lengthening perspective of time, he had become the American military symbol of World War I. More than that, "Black Jack" Pershing represented in his person and in his career much of the typical and the best in the American military tradition.

His beginnings were humble. He was born in a railway section house in central Missouri. His own earnings paid his way through college—before West Point.

His career spanned American wars from "campaigns" against marauding Apaches in the 1880's to talks on grand strategy with Chief of Staff George C. Marshall during World War II.

He dutifully—as befitted his position—consistently, and prophetically urged adequate military preparedness as Mussolini and Hitler rose to power.

His bearing and his personality were the epitome of traditional American soldierliness—erect and immaculate in carriage and dress, poker-faced and curt, impersonally commanding, yet just and kindly behind the mask.

Looking back on the experiences of his predecessor, General of the Armies Ulysses S. Grant, and his contemporary, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, he rejected all attempts to promote him for high political office—a precedent which doubtless was not lost on two of his "boys", George C. Marshall and Dwight D. Eisenhower.

A landmark, as well as a bona fide hero, has passed from the American scene.—Christian Science Monitor.

SHORT STORY

Uncle Joe Rules
The Roost
By
M. J. COLLINS

BY GOL, woman, why don't you put that book down and come to bed?" Uncle Joe had just gone into the bedroom off the kitchen. Aunt Martha was comfortably seated in a rocking chair by the large old-fashioned stove, feet on the oven door, reading a love story. He slid cautiously under the sheets. "Ouch! It's cold!" he exclaimed. "My feet are like ice."

3 Minute Fiction

Aunt Martha ignored his meaning and groaning for a few seconds. "Don't tell me you want the old lady to warm up your feet!" she said tartly. "At this time of the year, spring, too."
"I don't care if it's the hundred and second day of spring. The way the weather is acting up now you'd think it was the middle of winter, the ground-hog must have seen about four shadows this year! Errr! I'm freezing."

"Oh, all right," Aunt Martha said resignedly, putting her book on the kitchen table and getting up. "What's that!" she exclaimed suddenly, cocking her head to one side.
"Somebody's stealing our chickens!" Aunt Martha cried excitedly. "I read about a gang that's doing it all over the country. Do something, Joe!"
"Get the shotgun!" Uncle Joe belatedly sliding out of bed. "I'll show them!"
AUNT MARTHA dashed upstairs to the bedroom they used in the summer and got his shotgun out of the closet. When she returned Uncle Joe was out in the kitchen, still in his night shirt. He had laced his boots on and had an old toque of Aunt Martha's pulled down over his ears.
"Where's that flashlight?"
"I don't know, you had it last."
"Get the lantern then."
"You're not goin' out there without your pants," Aunt Martha cried, aghast at his get-up.
"Stand aside, woman, this is a man's job," he ordered imperiously. "Ain't no time to fool around." He dashed straight for the chicken house, his night shirt flying. Aunt Martha, wrapped in an old coat, was close at his heels.
"There's nothin' in here," he told Aunt Martha a few seconds later. He peered around intently. "Not a thing," he muttered. "Good gravy! Scat you! Scat!" he yelled suddenly. There was a crash and the dim light of the lantern went out. Aunt Martha gasped at all the racket.
"Joe! Joe! Are you all right?"
There was no answer. Then Uncle Joe cried hoarsely, "Get the flashlight, Martha, there's three of them wandering around in here. Hurry!"

AUNT MARTHA opened the door cautiously. A very strong odor assailed her nostrils. She swung the beam of the light all over the place. Most of the hens were standing or sitting all over the straw-covered

"You're not goin' out there without your pants," Martha cried. floor, the lantern and shotgun were there also. "Joe, where are you?" she called.
"I'm up here."

Aunt Martha swung the beam upward. Uncle Joe was perched on the topmost roost, hanging on to a rafter, in the company of about 20 distraught hens. It was hard to say who looked the most alarmed, Uncle Joe or the hens. Aunt Martha laughed loudly.

"All right, laugh," he said sourly as he climbed stiffly down from his precarious perch. "What else could I do? At least I frightened them away."
"I don't doubt that," Aunt Martha said, dryly.
"Say, I don't feel any too warm out here," Uncle Joe shivered.
"You better git back to the house this minute, Joe Quinn, or you'll catch your death of cold." Aunt Martha took over the situation.

Uncle Joe permitted himself to be hustled into bed. As he sat up sipping the hot lemonade Aunt Martha had made him, he said, "I'm cold all over."
A short time later she brought in two old-fashioned hot water bottles wrapped in towels. She tucked in one at his feet and put the other at his back.
"There they are," she said sweetly. "That'll keep you warm."

Effective Method to Break
Dog of Chewing Habit Given
Associating Practice With Something Unpleasant Will Soon Bring a Stop

One of the most frequent questions from dog-owners is, "How can I teach my dog not to chew things?" The following suggestions by the Gaines Dog Research Center, New York City, represent recommended methods for training a dog to refrain from exercising his teeth on shoes, furniture and other household articles. Almost all puppies go through a chewing period—particularly when they are cutting their second teeth—and even older dogs seem to have a strong urge to gnaw on things. Dogs that are lonely or bored through confinement or inactivity are especially prone to this habit.
One of the first things to do in curing the chewing habit is to give the dog something of his own that he can chew on. A large raw knuckle or shin bone with the meat well scraped off should be kept where the dog can reach it at any time. Encouraging the dog to play with and chew on the bone will help to keep him from turning his attention to the rugs or furniture. Poultry, steak or chop bones should not be used for this purpose as they splinter easily and can cause serious injury to the dog.
Dogs should never be given old

Caught in the act

Traveling with a dog should be a great deal easier in the future for vacationists and other wayfarers, who find it necessary to take the family pet along on their journeys. The Gaines Dog Research Center, 250 Park Avenue, New York 17, N. Y., has recently completed a nationwide survey of hotels and motor courts to determine those which accept guests with dogs and has compiled and published its findings in the form of a directory available to dog-owners without charge. A preface to the directory gives helpful suggestions for simplifying the problem of feeding Tower while on the road and makes a plea for dog-owners to make sure that their pets do not cause annoyance to other hotel guests or damage to furniture or rugs.

Better Control of Farm Dogs Sought

The answer to sheep and poultry killings by roaming dogs lies largely with the farmers themselves, in the opinion of Harry Miller, director of the Gaines Dog Research Center, New York City.
"There is little hope for relief from such depredations until owners of farm dogs are willing to assume greater responsibility for them," he states. "This means knowing at all times the whereabouts and doings of their dogs. Sheep and fowl losses cannot be re-

Jonathan, Loyal Friend

Lesson for July 25, 1948

WELL might we term this a lesson on the facets of friendship. Rarely will one come upon such a splendid example of friendship in all literature. Coleridge put it well when he wrote, "Friendship is a sheltering tree." Diogenes Laertius, writing on Aristotle, says, "He was once asked what a friend is, and his answer was, 'One soul abiding in two bodies.'"

Dr. Newton

Such was the friendship of Jonathan and David—a sheltering tree—one soul abiding in two bodies. Although Jonathan's father attempted at least ten times to kill David, Jonathan was drawn the closer to David, with whose soul his was knit.

The record of this friendship is found in our scripture and devotional readings for the lesson, with the golden text from Proverbs 17:17, "A friend loveth at all times."

A PRINCE SHARES WITH A SHEPHERD

JONATHAN was the crown prince apparent. David was a shepherd boy. Saul expected to place Jonathan on the throne. God had selected David.

Jonathan would, no doubt, have made a better king than Saul, his father; but he had no desire to be king when he discovered the kingly qualities in his friend, David. Not once did Jonathan ever indicate any disappointment in not becoming king.

JONATHAN STANDS UP FOR HIS FRIEND

WHEN Saul openly plotted the death of David, Jonathan begged his father to reconsider his course and spare the life of the man who had killed Goliath and had proved himself the valiant friend of Saul. This was the final test of Jonathan's sacrificial love for David. He might have remained silent, thus aiding in the death of the one man who stood between him and the throne. But Jonathan was made of the stout texture which counts no sacrifice too dear for a friend. He was willing to stand up and be counted when it meant that he would not become king. Thus we see that true friendship is not always easy. It usually is very costly, but it pays big dividends in the coin of eternal wealth.

FRIENDSHIP THAT COSTS

AND like as Jonathan stood up and witnessed his lasting friendship for David, at a very great cost, so are we today summoned to this ennobling type of friendship for Christ. "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you," he once said.

Young people find it rather costly to be loyal friends of Christ today. There are many siren voices that invite young people to take the low road—social drinking, gambling devices of one sort and another, satisfaction of sensual desires. But the true friend of Christ will withstand these voices, choosing rather the high road of Christian gentlemen.

SACRIFICIAL FRIENDSHIP

"FRIENDSHIP is the loveliest flower in the garden of humanity," according to my cherished friend, Dr. Hight C. Moore. I would add this thought—true friendship flowers in the garden of humanity, but it finds its life in the Garden of God's Perfect Eden.

I have not known one single friendship that has impressed me that did not stem from above. "How can two walk together except they be agreed?" And the only cement that will hold human hearts together—one soul in two bodies—is the grace of God.

"Friendship is as God, who gives and asks no payment," said Richard Hovey, and not until the human will is yielded to the will of God, even as was the will of Jonathan, can sacrificial friendship come to flower and to harvest.

Magic Ministry

A club of ministers who use magic to illustrate religious lessons has been formed under the name of "Magi-Ministers." Most of the members practice amateur magic. One of their favorite tricks is the passing of a handkerchief through a tube marked "Church" which changes its color from black to white, illustrating how a blackened soul may be cleansed of sin.
