Visitors to Hawaii Always Head for the Famed Beaches

When visitors arrive in Hawaii, they generally head first for the beach.

If the closest sands are at Waikiki, they'll spot surfers working over boards at beach clubs, or riding the far-off waves, for Waikiki is surfing headquarters for these tropic U.S. islands.

Pale-skinned vacationers get thrills as well as suntans by renting boards and taking lessons from the beachboys. Or they may go for expertly-guided rides in outrigger canoes, which catch the waves for long, swift glides.

In Old Hawaii, surfboard riding or "He'e nalu" was done with thin, flat boards five to seven feet long, or thick, cigar-shaped boards up to 16 or so feet.

Now most popular are solid redwood boards five to 10 feet long, and balsa-redwood and hollow boards 10 to 14 feet.

There's no shortcut to expert and trick riding, but visitors often after only a day's lesson are able to navigate lying down, and a few surprise themselves by riding a roller standing up.

Waves become surf when they break over the edge of the reefs which protect Hawaii's calm swimming waters. Each surf is named, and board addicts have kept charts through the years which indicate how often and what month specific "breaks" may be expected.

Waikiki surf varies from the three or four-foot "small" or "Canoe" surf to the grand but rare "Zero Break", when surf forms out from shore and waves are 30 feet high.

Shoplifting Sisters

Women shoplifters—amateur and professional—are one of the biggest problems facing department stores today. Recent years of soaring living costs have brought an influx of shoplifters to all large cities. But it is the amateur shoplifters—whose offenses amount to less than the professionals—who cause the most trouble. The majority of shoplifters are women—all ages and incomes—bent on getting something for nothing. They rarely succeed for long, and enough tears of repentance have flowed in the offices of store detectives to float a fleet of ships. Experienced shoplifters have many devices for their job: hidden gimmicks in their clothing to get their loot out of sight, and even improvised laundry marks and seemingly authentic sales slips to prove the articles were honestly purchased.

The Eavesdropper

One night, at a party, French statesman Talleyrand was discussing international politics with a foreign ambassador who was the dullest member of the diplomatic corps. For endless minutes, the ambassador talked on, repeating himself over and over. Talleyrand, praying for deliverance, nodded his head wearily.

The diplomat had been talking for an hour, when another guest, seated at the other end of the room, nudged his companion and pointed to the yawning guest.

"Shh," he whispered. "You are overheard!"

Uncle Sam Says

More of my young nieces and nephews will be in school this fall than ever before. One of the important lessons they will learn is that America is a free country with Liberty for all. They will also learn that there are two forms of Liberty—political and financial—and that one of the best ways of preserving these is to purchase U. S. Savings Stamps through their School Savings program. Parents are now realizing that the early teaching of the habit of thrift will bring dividends of success in later years.

In spite of the favorable season grass and corn were beginning to show the effects of the high temperatures we have been enduring for the past week. Just an hour ago we underwent a torrential rain which lasted an hour. According to a pan we placed on the lawn two inches of rain fell in our section. This should give the corn fields and pastures a good drink.

And speaking of rain, the good people of Kansas City have had more than they ever hope to see again. It's a tragic thing to see a city flooded by a river on the rampage. There is so little that anyone can do, but hope that the water will soon recede. It would be a very kind and friendly gesture if each small town and large city would send to the people of Kansas City some token of their sympathy with the sad plight of so many homeless people. It could be clothing, food or money, preferably money since most of the damage is to property, which must be cleaned and repaired.

Mrs. Charles Heim of Baltimore spent the past week with her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Keyton. Mrs. Heim celebrated her 80th birthday last Wednesday.

Sergeant Psychologist Keeps His Troops Happy

WITH THE FIRST MARINE DIVISION IN KOREA—A rare combination—psychologist and mess sergeant—but Marine Master Sergeant John H. Riggs of Oceanside, California, meets the requirements.

The mere mention of food being dehydrated seems to have an annoying effect on Marines. But Sergeant Riggs mixes a little practical psychology with careful preparation and seldom a dissenting note is sounded about breakfasts served to the First battalion of the 7th Marines.

The solution: When Marines have fresh eggs on the morning menu, Sergeant Riggs saves the shells. Then, on succeeding days when the dehydrated eggs are served, the cooks merely scatter the real shells in the trash dump. Pronto, the troops leap to the conclusion that they are having fresh scrambled eggs.

Just strewing shells in sight is usually sufficient, but Sergeant Riggs admits, "Sometimes we sprinkle a few shells in the dehydrated eggs to be really sure of the effect."

Music Prof's Worm Hobby Pays Better Than Waitzes

TALLEQUAH, Okla.—Worms and waitzes could be said the hobbies as well as the livelihood of music professor Lloyd K. Herren.

Herren divides his time and attention between music classes at Northeastern State College and 30,000 hybrid red wigglers that he raises in his back yard. Together they net him a nice income, the worms probably providing the largest share.

The professor not only sells the worms in wholesale lots to fishermen, but also sells the enriched dirt he raises them in to farmers for fertilizer.

Herren says that his worms are valuable because they wiggle much longer than the garden variety when they have been placed on a hook and immersed in water.

"It's not the size of the worms that get the fish," he says. "It's the wiggle. Mine wiggle for 15 minutes under water."

Just as Effective

Jud had been given a jail sentence for stealing a keg of beer. An elderly lady, who made it a practice to visit the prisoners, sought to comfort him. "Remember," she said brightly, "stone walls do not a prison make." "That may be," replied Jud, gloomily, "but they sure keep a fellow from getting out."

Original Letters Provide Intimate Views Into the Past

WASHINGTON, D.C.—"If I were to go over my life again I would be a shoemaker rather than an American statesman." Thus wrote aging John Adams, second President of the United States, in philosophical retirement with his beloved classics at his home at Quincy, Mass., in 1801, shortly after his term expired.

The original letter is one of several hundred items, providing a panorama of intimate home life in the early nineteenth century, of an Adams family collection recently placed on exhibit at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

The collection was placed on deposit with the Smithsonian about a year ago by Mary Louisa Adams Clement, of Edge Hill, Warrenton, Va., direct descendant of both John Adams and John Quincy Adams. With the donor's death last fall the material became a permanent part of the national collections.

It is, by and large, the sort of material that would have been accumulated by a well-to-do American family of the period, but augmented through the wide connections of the Adamases as diplomats and statesmen in some of the most crucial years of American history.

There are six original manuscript letters from John Adams and John Quincy Adams. Among the most interesting articles in the collection is a manuscript poem, a parody on Byron's Don Juan, by John Quincy Adams.

The entire collection comes close to being the contents of an antiquarian's treasure chest, quite aside from its historic significance. Listed under jewelry, for example, are more than 50 items. Notable among them is a coral tiara set on a silver comb with individual coral beads set on a gold scroll design, which is shown in the best-known portrait of Mrs. John Quincy Adams. Notable among the items is a naturalist's hand microscope used by John Quincy Adams, who as an early disciple of the natural sciences played a leading part in the establishment of the Smithsonian. Included, also, is a set of game counters owned by the sixth President, made of brass set with turquoise in a jet holder—in a velvet and satin-lined leather case.

'Mama' Doll Spills Beans By Crying for Investigator

NEW YORK, N.Y.—The little doll said "Mama" in a pleading voice, but the sound was music to the ears of John Carroll, detective.

He heard the doll cry out just as he was leaving Mrs. Georgia Smith's Brooklyn home after a routine check for a $1,700 diamond ring reportedly stolen from one of her employees.

Carroll broke open the doll held by Mrs. Smith's small daughter. There, he said, he found the multi-carat sparkler.

Mrs. Smith was held in $2,000 bond on a grand larceny charge. The doll didn't even get indignation from eating carats.

Protest Bonfire Rally Cancelled by British Rain

LONDON—Four housewives who attempted to stage a protest bonfire of ration books at the Houses of Parliament recently reckoned without the frequent British rain.

The demonstration was to be staged by the British Housewives League against "an outworn and unjust system of food rationing"—with speeches and everything.

A sudden downpour huddled the four "firemakers" under the quadrangle of a parliament building—alone save for scores of newsmen, photographers and police. One woman tried to fry her ration books in a frying pan, another tried a kerosene-soaked coffee can. But the wind and rain were too strong. Everybody went home.

Russians are Using Carp To Tend Their Rice Fields

LONDON—Russia recently reported that carp were being used to tend rice fields in the Kazak Republic.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said that some 200,000 yearling fish had been placed in the rice paddies, with this explanation:

"This is very beneficial to the rice plants, as the carp, in search of food, destroy rice pests and the larvae of the malaria mosquitoes. They also stir up the mud, thus helping the growth of the plants. This increases the rice yield, on the average, by seven centners a hectare."

A centner is 110.23 pounds and a hectare is 2,471 acres.

Liberty-Bound Soldiers Not Foiled by Bus Strike

BUELLTON, Calif.—A group of GIs alerted for Korea from nearby Camp Cooke found a simple and adequate solution here when a recent bus strike tied up their transportation.

Unable to get rides into Los Angeles—200 miles away—for week-end pleasures, they appropriated a boulevard stop sign from a side street and set it up on the US highway 101 freeway.

By the time a highway patrol car arrived to investigate, not a GI was in sight. All had caught rides to Los Angeles.

Intoxication Through Nose Impossible, Scientists Say

Can a person become intoxicated simply by inhaling a large amount of alcohol?

"It is virtually impossible," say two Yale scientists who have conducted extensive tests to establish industrial and legal standards for the control of alcohol vapors.

David Lester and Leon A. Greenberg, Research Associates in the Yale Laboratory of Applied Physiology, found that in normal breathing a person cannot inhale enough alcohol vapor to lose his sobriety.

Even when the person is breathing fast, such as under great physical exertion, he does not take in an amount of alcohol vapor that would affect his physical and mental powers enough to be considered "intoxicated," they report.

The two Yale scientists describe their tests in an article, "The Inhalation of Ethyl Alcohol by Man," in the June issue of the Quarterly Journal of Studies on Alcohol published by the Yale Laboratory of Applied Physiology. Mr. Greenberg is also Assistant Director of the Laboratory.

In their tests they found that up to 62 per cent of the alcohol vapor inhaled can be absorbed into the blood stream. The remaining 38 per cent is usually passed out by exhaling. The alcohol that is absorbed into the blood stream is oxidized fast enough by the body to prevent intoxication.

The results of the tests indicate, however, that a person who is drinking alcohol will become intoxicated much faster if he is in a room with large concentrations of alcohol vapor in the air.

The Yale scientists also had a warning for persons receiving the Antabuse treatment for alcoholism. Antabuse, which is the common name for the drug tetraethylthiuram disulfide, is taken internally during the treatment. If the person drinks alcohol while he has Antabuse in his system, he immediately becomes violently sick. This nauseating experience is usually enough to cause a person to lose his taste for liquor, and at the same time serves as a warning against future drinking as long as he has Antabuse in his system.

Return of Welsh 'Exiles' Moving Musical Rite

CARDIFF, Wales—The "land of foreigners" is preparing a golden voiced welcome for an unparalleled number of its "exiles" in 1951.

The "land of foreigners," as if you didn't know, is the Principality of Wales. The somewhat unkind term is the one by which the mountainous, mysterious land was known to the Anglo-Saxons for centuries after they, foreigners themselves, drove King Arthur and his native British knights into the hills, in spite of everything Merlin could do. The "exiles," of course, are any Welshmen unfortunate enough to live in more barbarous, uncouth lands, and, as far as the Welsh are concerned, that includes England, too.

The factor that made Wales "the land of the foreigners"—its inaccessibility for centuries—had an incidental effect which makes it one of the most interesting countries in the world today. To a greater extent than any of the other diverse peoples who make up the British population, the Welsh have preserved an ancient culture and language almost completely uncorrupted by outside influences. To visit the Eisteddfod, the great national festival of Wales, which will begin August 6 this year, is to be transported to the almost legendary world of 1,500 years ago.

Much Ceremony
The welcome to the exiles is one of the most moving of the traditional ceremonies of the Eisteddfod. The exiles, numbering more than a thousand, and headed by the Leader of the Welsh Exiles, are conducted to the stage in a ceremonial procession.

After the ritual welcome, whose origin is lost in the mists of antiquity, the whole gathering joins in the singing of Welsh hymns and folk tunes. Since there are ordinarily more than 30,000 people present and since each of them, as are all Welshmen, was "born with a thrush in his throat," the great paean is an unforgettable musical experience.

This year, according to the British Travel Association, the Eisteddfod takes on added significance, for it has been designated one of the 29 major arts festivals being held as part of the Festival of Britain.

It's a safe bet that few of the others will rival it in the eyes of the visitor. The oldest cultural event of its kind in the world, it dates back in more or less its present form to the Twelfth Century, although it is believed that gatherings of the bards may have been held as early as the Fifth Century.

Cultural Expression
There's much more to the Eisteddfod than singing. It is the highest expression of the Welsh cultural tradition. Each day for a week, there are competitions between poets and prose writers, singers, musicians and artists of all kinds. In the evenings there are concerts by the magnificent choir of 700 voices, which has been training for two years for the occasion. This year the choir, drawn from the region of Llanrwst, the site of the 1951 Eisteddfod, will feature Dvorak's Sabat Mater and Brahms' Requiem.

The musical and dramatic events will be interspersed with rituals and ceremonials performed by bards in flowing white, blue and green robes. They will be culminated by the Chaining of the Bard (The Welsh Poet Laureate for the year.)

The ancient Eisteddfod has recently acquired a young and lusty brother in the Llangollen International Eisteddfod which will be held for the fifth time this year, during the week beginning July 3. The National Eisteddfod is strictly Welsh in character; the Llangollen festival annually brings together outstanding choral and folk-dancing groups from all parts of the world. In their picturesque national costumes, they compete for a variety of prizes during the day and join together in the evenings for informal concerts and dances.

Satisfied Customers Keep Restaurateur in Business

BLUEFIELD, Va.—The magic of good cooking was exhibited here recently.

Pete Loizos now owns a fashionable, well equipped restaurant because citizens of Bluefield like his cooking. Pete once owned a $14,000 establishment across the line in Bluefield, W. Va., but it didn't succeed. He lost his lease and was forced to move.

A group of satisfied customers came to the rescue. They raised $14,000 and turned it over to Loizos for stock in a new restaurant. Pete started a new restaurant 50 feet over the state line in suburban Bluefield. He borrowed $70,000 from the bank and set himself up right.

Skeptics said Pete had another failure on his hands because the restaurant was so far from downtown, but in 18 months he had paid back $30,000 of the bank loan. Last year Pete gave a dinner for all those who had contributed to the $14,000 ante. They surprised him by turning over all their stock in his restaurant—no strings attached. Pete's place looks like a sure hit.

SHORT STORY

The Young Old Folks

By Matthew F. Christopher

"THERE!" Dave said. "The ceiling's finished. Now, you've got new stairs, new walls in the living room and bedrooms, and a new porch." He lifted his chin defiantly, and something like a cold glint entered his brown eyes as he gazed down at his mother.

"Anything else you going to do?" Drusilla glanced at him warily, clutched his arm. "Dave!" She sounded so weak, like a child.

His mother stared up at him with a soft flame burning in her cheeks. She was so short, thought Drusilla, so small against her son.

"Why? What's the matter? Dad and I—we were talking about putting in a new kitchen floor, too."

Dave shook his head. "There you go! Ever since you bought this place that's all you and Dad have been doing—fixing and fixing. For a couple of old people you're certainly throwing your money around."

3-Minute Fiction

"I'm only fifty-five," said his father solemnly, puffing quietly on an old, black-bowled pipe.

"Dave laughed dryly. "Well? Don't you think that's getting along?"

They walked together through a field that separated their home from Dave's folks.

After lunch he took a nap, and Drusilla sneaked quietly out of the kitchen door and started back across the field to Mother and Dad Parsell's.

"I didn't have anything to do," she explained, "so I thought I'd come back and visit awhile. Dave's sleeping. Mother said you're going to put in a new kitchen floor. What kind? Oak?"

"Oh, no, Mother did not mean that. We just want to save the old floor, then put on inlaid linoleum. She left soon, for fear Dave would get up and not find her there."

When he woke there was still time for supper, and Drusilla suggested a little ride through the country.

"The road down toward the lake," she said. "We haven't seen the Acklings so long! And Mrs. Ackling has been so sweet to me!"

"OH, DRUSILLA — and Dave! It's so good to see you!" "Come around the house. John is back there, working on the terrace."

They followed her. Drusilla stopped and stared surprisedly at the vari-colored flagstones that made up the terrace. At one corner, which was not quite finished, a white-haired figure dabbled with a trowel. He looked up, his red face crinkled in a smile. "Well!" he exclaimed. "Look who's here! How are you, Drusilla? Dave? My, you're both looking so young you make me feel old! How's the folks, Dave?"

Dave had hurt them. She could see that in the soft tears in their eyes, and their mouths that hung, limply at the corners."

"Good, Mr. Ackling, thanks."

"Doing any more on that house of theirs?"

"Some. Just finished—"

"Mrs. Ackling!" Drusilla exclaimed. "What's that down below here? A flower bed? Oh, it's beautiful! Dave, look!"

After work the next day she saw Dave drive past the house, and from the back door she saw him stop at his mother's. She waited for the sound of the car's motor to start up again, for he should be coming home to eat. Minutes went by. What was Dave doing?

She heard the motor. She stared at the car, waiting for it to move. Suddenly, she realized it wasn't the car. And then, hurriedly, she ripped off a sheet of wax paper, covered the food on the table, and started running across the field to Mother and Dad Parsell's.

When she peered through the door of the kitchen, the noise that came from within was so loud she could barely think. But she could see Mother Parsell sweeping one side of the old floor that was slowly changed to new, her round, rosy cheeks puffed up in a smile. And Dad Parsell, his mild, contented face in the center of his own smoke fog, holding an electric cord, so that Dave wouldn't run over it with the sander.

You can count on
when you cook with
ELECTRICITY

Cooking results depend largely on the right amount of heat in the oven, or under the pot or pan. That is why cooking with electricity is far more reliable. Heat in an electric range oven is controlled automatically. Simply set the heat control at the temperature your recipe calls for. That's exactly the temperature you get—never a little more or a little less.

That is also true of the surface units. The same switch position always gives the same amount of heat.

There is no guesswork about cooking with electricity. Women who cook on electric ranges expect, and get, PERFECT RESULTS.

There are electric ranges to suit

Community Living

Lesson for July 22, 1951

THERE is one way to get along in any neighborhood without any trouble at all: just have nothing to do with any one. But that is not only not a Christian way of living, it is not practical.

You need the community and the community needs you. If you want to tell the world good-bye, go rent yourself a room on the 17th floor of some apartment house in New York. You won't be bothered with callers! But if you live in the typical American town or country community, you not only cannot help knowing everybody more or less, but you want to know them, you need to know them.

The Community Includes Everybody

SOME communities cease to be communities and become exclusive clubs; no strangers can break in. A lady in a very old county in a long-settled state, said of her next-door neighbor: "That family came here sixty years ago; they don't really belong here."

Now a true community ought to include every one in it, and it isn't a real community until it does. Jesus' parable of the sheep and the goats suggests this.

The trouble with the "goats" was that they just never saw the down-and-out members of the community at all. Your own neighborhood has in it, perhaps, some lonely people, unfortunate people, some human left-overs. What is the community doing for them?

The Church and Its Own

ONE practical thing that Christians can do for their communities is to see to it that no Christian suffers want. However much we may disagree with the Mormons, there is one feature of the Mormon church which the rest of us might take to heart: in all the depression of 20 years ago, there never was a Mormon on relief.

Probably in most small communities the separate congregations are not large enough to do this kind of thing effectively; but surely in a community where there are as many as three or four different denominations, they might all plan together so that whenever any Christian got into a strait, the rest of the Christians would stand by to help him.

There will always be a need for general organizations such as the Red Cross or the Grange and the Community Chest; but if Christians always stood by Christians, the rest of the community would at least have less to worry about.

It Takes All Kinds

THE ideal community is one in which everybody is a Christian and indeed all belong to the same church. But such communities are few and far between. Most of us live pretty close—and sometimes uncomfortably close—to people who are not Christians, except perhaps in name, and who may be hard to get along with.

How can we live with such people in a Christian way? Paul, in Romans 12, makes some practical suggestions. He knew very well that no city or town in the Roman Empire was Christian or anywhere near it; yet he shows how to have the Christian spirit never-the-less.

Christians should be the most valuable members of any community. But are they? Is this true in your community? If so, what is it that the Christians contribute? And if not, is it maybe the Christians' fault?

The Law Above Laws

A group of people who act toward each other in no better way than the laws of the land require, may be a neighborhood but it is no community.

The laws (and useful they are, to be sure) can regulate our behavior, but they cannot touch our hearts. They can forbid us to harm our neighbor, but they cannot force us to feel kindly towards him. For complete community, something more than law is necessary; and again Paul puts us on the track of it.

Love is above all law; it does not break laws but it goes far beyond them. It is not the law-abiding citizens who are the best ones; the true ornaments and treasures, the First Citizens of a community, are the love-abiding.

Spending Habits In Marked Shift From Pre-Korea

WASHINGTON — The American consumer's "appetite" for various goods and services appears to have experienced a striking shift since the war as compared with prewar years, according to a study of personal consumption expenditures by the U.S. Department of Commerce.

In general, there has been a greater concentration of the consumer spending dollar on durable goods and on food at the expense of some of the nondurable goods and the service sectors of the economy. This trend was evident well before the Korean impact on the economy, even though in some areas intensified by that development.

True, all classifications of goods and services have experienced a marked increase in dollar sales in the last decade, accompanying the rise to total personal consumption expenditures from $72.1 billions in 1940 to an annual rate of $195.8 billions in the fourth quarter of 1950, a 172 per cent increase. However, durable goods and the food classification have shown a substantially greater percentage gain than this, while the other classifications have lagged.

Boom in Durable Goods

The greater-than-normal concentration on durable goods purchases, led by automobiles, was particularly pronounced in the last half of 1950. As a result, purchases of automobiles and parts in the fourth quarter of 1950 were at an annual rate of nearly $13 billions, or almost five times the $2.7 billions of such expenditures in 1940, and at the same time were equivalent to 6.5 per cent of all personal consumption expenditures in that period compared with 3.7 per cent in 1940.

The second biggest percentage gain was shown by furniture and household equipment where consumer expenditures rose from $3.8 billions in 1940 to an annual rate of $13.1 billions in the fourth quarter of 1950, a rise of 245 per cent. The entire durable goods classification hit an annual spending rate of $30.0 billions in the fourth quarter of 1950, nearly four times the $7.9 billion total of 1940, with its proportion of total personal consumption expenditures rising from 11 per cent to 15.3 per cent in the period.

Food Expenditures Rise

Food expenditures have risen to a level considerably above their prewar relationship to income.

Total expenditures for food and alcoholic beverages, which are classified together in the Department of Commerce analysis, rose from $20.7 billions in 1940 to an annual rate of $62.1 billions in the fourth quarter of last year, an increase of exactly 200 per cent. The rest of the nondurable goods section showed an expenditure increase from $16.9 billions to $42.2 billions in this period, a rise of 150 per cent. For services, total expenditures increased from $26.6 billions to $61.5 billions for the period, a rise of about 130 per cent.

Hoppy's Sidekick Now Star Of Big Television Program

NEW YORK, N.Y.—Gabby Hayes, the familiar sidekick to such famous stars of the west as Hopalong Cassidy, Gene Autry and Roy Rogers for many years, has finally branched out on his own, and bids fair to rival them all for popularity.

Gabby, cast in the role of the comic companion for the dashing Westerners, has deserted Hollywood for a show of his own on television. On his popular NBC video offering Sunday afternoon the bearded old character tells stories to two youngsters and also introduces stories in American history that are dramatized by live actors.

Although his business address is different, Gabby's appearance remains the same. He still wears the heavy collection of facial sage brush familiar to kids everywhere. During performances, he takes out his upper bridge to stay in part with his characterization, which has become almost authentic. Only 66, he has been doing the "old coot" act in show business since 1910.

A reported salary of $125,000 lured Gabby away from the wild west.

Pianist Finds Arrangements Fine—But Something Wrong

NEW YORK—Pianist Alexander Brailowsky was once scheduled to play a concert in a small South American city, where no other concert artist had ever appeared. The virtuoso was fearful, lest the auditorium manager, certainly of no experience, would bungle the arrangements. However, the moment he stepped on the stage, his fears left him. The hall was packed.

The audience greeted him wildly and he was forced to take one bow after another. Finally the din ceased and he turned to take his seat at the piano. With lifted coattails, he stopped agast at the discovery that there was no piano on stage!

Frantic efforts were made to locate that one item forgotten by the auditorium manager, but none was found and the concert was called off.

Higher Education Doesn't Help Gal's Matrimonial Chance

NEW YORK, N.Y.—Higher education seemingly hinders rather than helps the American girl's chances for romance that leads to matrimony.

Among women at ages 35 to 44 with less than seven years of schooling, almost 95 per cent have been married at one time or other, according to Metropolitan Life Insurance Company statisticians, whereas among those with more schooling the proportion married declines to 90 per cent for high school graduates, and to 83 per cent for those with at least one year of college.

Girls with higher education who do marry, the statisticians observe, acquire husbands with more schooling.

Encouraging to marriage-minded girls is the finding that prospects for an early marriage, traditionally excellent for the average American girl, have become even brighter in recent years. The total number of married women in the United States has increased by some 8,000,000 since 1940, now standing at about 38,000,000.

"The present total reflects the marriage boom of the war and immediate postwar years," the statisticians point out, "and is a record high, not only in absolute numbers but percentage-wise to the adult population as well."

The statisticians also show that: American wives are relatively young—two fifths under 35 years of age, and only one sixth over 55.

In three fourths of all families the wife is somewhat younger than her husband. In only one family in eight is she older than her spouse, and then generally by a small margin. In the remaining eighth of the families, husband and wife are the same age.

About two out of every three American women were employed at some time before they were married, and many continue to work after marriage until the first baby comes. Almost one half of all wives are employed through the first year of marriage, as against less than one in five at the time of the fifth wedding anniversary.

Currently, the odds are two to one that the wife will outlive her husband!

Russians Have Developed New Crossword Stickler

MOSCOW—Crossword puzzle fans have long been familiar with a three-letter word defined as a Central Asiatic animal—the Yak. Now the Soviet press has come up with a new puzzler.

A special dispatch from Ulan Ude, capital of the Buryat Mongolian Republic, says that a new, valuable type of agricultural animal has been produced by cross breeding the Tibetan yak and domesticated cattle. The new animal—crossword material, for sure—is called a hainyk, which roughly could be translated as "sturdy."

Ah, Texas, Even the Birds Are Better Than Average!

LOS ANGELES—Zoologists at the University of California at Los Angeles have disclosed that the Texas nighthawk has been fitted by nature with a built-in cooling system in its mouth. The inborn icebox allows the bird to sit on its nies in 110-degree temperatures, they say.

According to the scientists, the natural refrigerator works like this: When temperatures rise, the bird opens its mouth; unique throat muscles fan air over large veins; moisture from oral surfaces is evaporated, cooling the hawk's blood supply.

Dr. Raymond B. Cowles said that nature apparently worked out this system. The night-flying bird, which has no sweat glands, must sit on eggs under a broiling sun. They cover their eggs during the day, he explained, not to keep them warm, but to keep them from being parboiled.

Even Animal Life Hard Hit By the Housing Shortage

CHICAGO — With the housing shortage, what more could one expect?

George E. Green built a two-flat bird house three years ago and put it up in a mulberry tree in his back yard.

He was not too surprised when a family of squirrels took up residence in the first-floor flat this year. After all, there is a shortage of hollow trees in the neighborhood.

He was startled, however, when two blackbirds inspected the second-floor flat, found it to their liking, and moved right in. So far, all is harmony.

Village of 40 Persons Likes Police Chief Very Much

MANTOLOKING, N.J.—This seashore resort village of 40 persons was apparently very grateful for Police Chief J. Harrison Herbert's long service record. They gave him a gift of $1,400 and 25 silver dollars when he celebrated his 25th police anniversary. His wife received a watch and an elaborate floral bouquet.

A lot of money for so few people to give? Sure, but it works this way. Mantoloking jumps to a summer population of 1,500 and the summer residents helped out, too.

Doctors Credit Cortisone With Saving Animal's Life

Cortisone was credited in Chicago with saving the life of a dog that was almost burned to death.

Citing a newly reported case, the American Veterinary Medical Association said that a dog was brought to Texas veterinarians for treatment after suffering critical burns.

The dog, a prized 4-year-old female pointer, had been trapped in her pen during a grass fire. Deep burns covered nearly half of her body, and the case seemed hopeless.

Because severe burns exhaust the adrenal hormone supply, veterinarians decided to give her cortisone, a synthetic adrenal gland hormone, along with other drug treatment to combat internal complications.

Improvement was steady under this treatment. After 25 days, the dog was well enough to return to her owner. After three months, healing was nearly complete. There were only a few scars and these did not interfere with her hunting.

The AVMA said that cortisone also shows promise as a treatment for arthritis and certain eye diseases in animals, but it is in such short supply that veterinarians cannot obtain it for routine use in their practices. Practically all of the cortisone now being produced is going to hospitals and physicians for treating human disease. However, larger supplies are expected to be available next year.

THE VICTOR

The victor wields the sword
And holds aloft the shield
He will not to the enemy
His power of victory yield.

He stands erect both bold and strong
He will not quail at infamy
Nor to the right go wrong
For he is bold and strong.

His sword is his protection
His buckles is his shield
He does not quail before the foe
Nor to his strength will yield.

He has a mighty industry
His conscience is his guide
He will not to the foe give up
He will not ever yield.

He stands for God and country
His courage is his meed
He cannot be discomfited
He must at last succeed.

God gives him courage thus to stand
For God and Home and Native Land
He ne'er will quail, he cannot fail
He leads a noble band.
