NEW CLUB HOUSE Being Built by the Taneytown Rod & Gun Club

One of the finest club houses in Carroll county is being erected on the 9-acre grounds of the Taneytown Rod & Gun Club, east of Taneytown. The building is 22x40 ft. is of cement block construction, having a basement and a 10x12 ft. kitchen. A 9x52 ft. porch is on two sides of the building. A large stone fireplace was built the club room. The composition roof is now being placed on the building----most of the work being done by the members of the club. The large pond on the nine-acre grounds has been stocked with fish, blue gills and bass, and now abounds with fish. The Club plans to open the pond to its members and guests for fishing on August 1st. Among the rules for fishing will be that every adult must have a license and every guest must be accompanied by a member. No barbed hook will be per-mitted, enabling the fisherman to throw back into the pond any undersized fish without a serious injury to the fish.

Besides being a haven for small game; the large body of water can be used as fire protection should the need arise in fighting fires. Trap shooting will be one of the sports to be enjoyed by any one interested in this pastime. The Club now has a membership of about 150 persons.

The sportsmen are to be commended on the clean, well-arranged club grounds that will be another pleasure asset to Taneytown.

GOV. McKELDIN AT THURMONT

Delivered Address "Here Is America" July 22

There are very few people in this troubled world of ours, very few in these United States and, I dare say, very few in our own State of Maryland who know that we are gathered here today to dedicate Thurmont's new Firemen's Hall.

In Paris, France, where the citizens are observing the 2,000th birthday of that great and beautiful city, the celebration of Thurmont's 200th anniversary, which we also are launching here today, hardly would be considered an event of world shaking moment.

And yet, these events are important-important to you and to me-important to America-yes, and important to the world.

Here is not just a new Firemen's Here is not just a little Maryland town that is older than the Nation it-

Here is America! Yes, here, symbolically, in brick and mortar is the United States of

Here in Thurmont is a part of our great and powerful nation—part of the bulwark of freedom and liberty in a world where powerfrl forces seek to enslave the bodies and the souls of men. In Thurmont, Md., there are smiling faces and well-nourished bodies —so different from the melancholy that has become habitual, and the near starvation that has become the way of life in many areas of earth.

In Thurmont, as in thousands of American communities, there is calmness in our determination to retain our freedom.

Here we find sane confidence in the future in contrast to the psychopathic hysteria of despair which is the curse of the burdened lands where the dictators have crushed the souls and minds of humanity.

Even while keeping eternal that vigilance which is the price of liberty, we must keep Thurmont's smiling faces and well-nourished bodies on all the main streets-on all the highways and by-ways of America. We can, and we must, retain our calmness and our confidence, without becoming lax in our determination to remain free, in the face of wars and threats of wars—in spite of the so-cialistic trends that creep into our own National government and in spite of the fakery that is peddled by our false prophets and our Utopian dreamers. That is the lesson of history and of history's repetition in our times. The rational became the irrational and the psychotic became the rule as a preliminary to the downfall of nations throughout the annals of time. Reason gave way to superstition, and fraud and charlatanry replaced honesty and decency among the people (Continued on fourth page)

AN EXPRESSION OF SYMPATHY

Dear Buttons:

While I am a perfect stranger to you, nevertheless, I am dictating this letter of condolence, in the only lan-guage I know which is canine.

I have read in the Carroll Record a report of your misfortune. I, too, am a dog. A Boston Bull Terrier. I am a little boy dog, and as the saying goes, boys will be boys. One day recently I stole out of my enclosure and took a stroll about town. I had always thought I was able to take care of myself. But on this day I learned that I had been mistaken. When I went up to a big German Police dog, lying on the lawn of his own home, minding his own business, and told him what I thought of him, he in turn told me what he thought of me. He pounced upon me, took my left hind leg in his big hungry mouth, bit down upon it with his massive jaws, and broke it. The shock was tremendous. My Master put me in a Dog Hospital where I was a convalescent for 15 days. Upon my arrival at the hospital, I was administered anaesthetic, placed upon an operating table, my leg set and put in a cast. I am back home again, even now whenever I get a chance, I will slink away from home. Yes, dogs will be dogs.

Please don't think I am impertinent in dictating you this letter. I simply want to extend you my sympathy, and to wish you a speedy recovery.

I hope hereafter that you may be Luyetta M. Wantz, administratrix of the estate of Mary Alice Wantz, more careful and observed as to where you trespass. Sincerely, Scotch, of Salem, Oregon.

The addressee of this message of condolence is a canine of Taneytown, Md. She was injured recently and is hospitalized for two weeks.

YOUR NEW SOCIAL SECURITY

There's a new look to Social Securty and full-fledged participants in the Social Security system should know what the recent changes mean to them. The following are some of the more important new features. 1. Benefits were raised, effective September 1, 1950.

2. Qualifying requirements for benefits are now much easier to meet. For example, anyone now age 65, or who will reach 65 before July 1, 1954, or dies before that date, needs only a year and a half of work on Social Security-covered jobs to be insured. This means that more older workers, and more families of workers who die, will get benefits.

3. World War II veterans, when they apply for retirement benefits or when they die, will have wage credits added to their Social Security records of $160.00 for each month of service during the war period. 4. The amount of earnings a person may have from Social Security-covered jobs without giving up his benefit check has been raised from $14.99 a month to $50.00 a month. Those age 75 and over can continue to draw benefits, regardless of the amount of their earnings. 5. Several new types of benefits have been added, including dependent husbands benefits, widower's benefits, and benefits for wives under age 65. The last applies where a man is drawing retirement benefits and is also getting benefits for a child under 18. In such a case, if the wife is in the household, she too can qualify for payments.

GRASS ROOTS OPINION

ELMER, N. J., TIMES: "It is agreeable to observe at this late date -34 years after the tragic establishment of Communism in Russia-that the United States Government is fully and amply clothed with constitutional powers to protect itself at all times....against the threat of imported anarchy and revolution. The power of the government to defend itself-and the people-against violence and terrorism in no way conflicts with the protections of free speech and free press guaranteed to law-abiding citizens under the Bill of Rights.' TAYLORVILLE, ILL., BREEZE-COURIER: "Some sage whose identity is lost in the mists of time spoke ing. 'The typical American,' he said, wants to put a setting of eggs under the old hen in the evening and have broilers for breakfast."

SILVER CITY, N. Americanism is a beautiful and a workable thought but it takes people to make it work and to make it beautiful. The same people can destroy it through selfishness."

PLATTSMOUTH, NEBR., JOUR-NAL: "There is much to be said in favor of the so-called economy drive in Congress. Undoubtedly some cash can be saved through judicious paring of appropriations and a closer watch on extravagances that cost the government money. We are somewhat afraid that most of the 'economies' will be washed out later on, as the Congressmen add pork barrel projects for the purpose of winning friends and influencing votes.'

One-Way Streets Unclogging Congested Traffic Arteries

One-way streets are growing in popularity as a means of unclogging congested traffic arteries in urban areas, the American Public Works Association reports.

Chicago is the most recent major city to unveil plans for making streets in its famed Loop area one way thoroughfares. Initially, only two streets carrying east- and westbound traffic in the downtown section would be affected, but at a later date four other streets would be designated for one-way traffic only. The proposed changes are designed to speed traffic and relieve congestion. Newark, N.J., has also established a series of one-way streets linking its downtown section with the Pulaski Skyway and to neighboring industrial districts.

Baltimore, which first tried oneway streets in 1939, has found through its "before and after" studies that making a street oneway results in an average of 100 per cent increase in traffic volume, a 75 to 90 per cent reduction in delays, and a 10 to 15 per cent reduction in accidents. However, the Association pointed out that the Baltimore studies did not mark the effect of one-way operations alone, but also the effect of imposing additional parking restrictions, installing additional traffic signals and substituting bus operations for street cars.

In Los Angeles, after test trials on two streets proved successful, the downtown businessmen's association endorsed a proposal to convert four streets to one-way in order to relieve the downtown traffic problem. According to traffic engineers who followed the Los Angeles experiment, the establishment of oneway streets was in no way detrimental to established businesses on the thoroughfares.

This conclusion is supported by a study made by Fresno, Cal., of merchant reaction in 50 cities of more than 50,000 population where oneway streets are being used. Merchants in 90 per cent of these cities report that one-way streets have no harmful effect on adjacent businesses. Merchant associations in only two cities felt that the one-way streets were harmful to business, although, initially, merchants led the opposition to conversion to one-way streets. The Fresno survey also showed that in 71 per cent of the cities, change-over to one-way streets had a beneficial effect on property values.

Eating Peas With Knife Was Once in Popularity

Although it may shock Emily Post, eating peas with a knife isn't unmannerly—it't just old-fashioned! According to research experts with the World Book Encyclopedia, forks have been used for cooking since ancient times, but table forks were curiosities even during colonial

It is believed that the table fork was first used in Italy during the 1100's. The wife of an Italian noble man considered herself too dainty to touch the greasy food with her fingers. She used a tiny gold fork which was modeled after the long carving fork. A guest at the table wrote an account of the event and described her method of eating as 'luxurious beyond belief. Instead of eating like other people, she had her food cut into little pieces and ate with a two-pronged fork."

However, grasping the meat with the hand and spearing it with a knife continued to be the popular custom, and the tiny fork was soon forgotten.

In England during the 1600's, an English dandy was ridiculed for his daintiness when he tried a table fork at social gatherings. The fork "fad" gained momentum and tiny forks of precious metals began to appear in all European courts.

Forks became a common table implement only after mass production made them an inexpensive

American soldiers in Korea are contributing to the natural history collections of the Smithsonian Institution. Among the recent acquisitions are a collection of Korean reptiles sent to the Smithsonian by Corp. William E. Old, Jr., of Norfolk, Va., who even before his enlistment was an enthusiastic amateur herpetologist. In a bombblasted Korean schoolhouse he found uninjured a small collection of native reptiles skillfully preserved in alcohol and well labeled as to species. This collection evidently had been brought together by some native school teacher. It would have been completely lost except for the timely arrival of one American enlisted man who was an amateur scientist. Corporal Old also has sent back several other specimens collected in Korea.

Crop Diseases

Crop losses running into millions of dollars are caused by virus diseases, such as the mosiac disease of tobacco and tomatoes, the bushy stunt disease of tomatoes, bean mosaic, tobacco necrosis, peach yellows, aster yellows, sugar beet yellows, and the mosaic disease of turnips. Not all plant virus diseases are harmful. A tulip disease known as tulip break, for example, "transforms ordinary flowers into beautifully variegated ones," and an ornamental plant called abultilon is turned into a "far superior decorative plant by infection with a mosaic disease.

Now well beyond the half-way mark and scheduled for opening to traffic in less than a year, the Chesapeake Bay Bridge, most ambitious engineering undertaking in Maryland's history, offers this view to the thousands of tourists who are daily using the Sandy Point-Matapeake ferries this summer. This photo, from the Maryland State Roads Commission, was made from the Sandy Point ferry slip and shows graphically the sweeping curve and carefully-designed incline that will carry the structure out and over the main Chesapeake Bay ship channel. Starting about 20 feet above the water at the shore line the structure will climb steadily to provide a clearance of 183 feet over the channel before starting its gradual descent to meet the Kent Leland shoreline.

FRIENDSHIP

Friendship is an asset. Friends compose our most valuable assets. Many people think only of some form of wealth when speaking of assets. It takes assets to produce wealth. Friends are one's greatest assets to-ward the production of wealth. Your success and mine is determined by the friends we have and keep.

We cannot live without friends. We need them always—both in life and in death. "No man liveth unto himself and no man dieth unto himself. Every life touches other lives. We were put here to be friends. True friendship means oneness with anoth-

"The friends thou hast and their adoption tried, grapple them to thy bosom with hoops of steel."

What would Napoleon not have given for a friend on the lonely island of Helena! Every friend you have you that are the loser. Powhere lose, you truly are the loser. Perhaps friends means more when one grows older. For then we have had time to evaluate their friendship. And he, who has a friend to accompany him to the end of a career, or to the end of life, as the case may be, is richer than Midas with all his gold. It was George Matthew Adams who said: "It is more profitable to hunt for a friend than for a gold mine, even though the search may take longer."

One day Wendell Phillips, lonely One day Wendell Philips, lonely and forlorn, walking the streets of Boston, met Nora Perry, the poetess, and inquired where she was going. The answer was, "To meet a friend." Inspired by the reply, Phillips made the request, "Please take me with you, I want to meet one." The Whole World Contributes To the Making of Perfumes

Did you know that the fragrance industry calls on the art and science of the entire world in its ever constant search to develop the finest in perfume products? Raw materials are gathered from every continent for the perfume artists to create the exquisite scents which are available

From France come many of the beautiful flower oils which form such an important part of perfumes. nowned perfume flower center, grow such aromatic blossoms as jasmin tuberose, lavender, nimosa and rose (the famous French Rose is caled rose de mai). Bulgaria is famous for its attar of rose. Yugoslavia contributes oak moss, Italy gives bergamot. In Asia? Musk comes from Tibet and cassia (cinnamon bark) from China, while India suplies sandalwood. Civet is taken from the famous cat of that name in Ethiopia, ylang ylang grows in Madagascar, geranium in the Bourbon Islands. Australia gives us eucalyptus and South America contributes bois de rose (rosewood) and the tonka bean. Central America brings us lemon grass and Balsam Peru. Our own United States supplies cedarwood oil and peppermint and citrus oils. From Canada comes castor (from the beaver) and hemlock. These are just a few of the hundreds of ingredients which are used in the making of perfume.

And how does the perfumer go about concocting the exquisite scents which are on the market to-It is a complex and highly scientific method. Before the actual perfumer-or "nose" as he is called in the perfume industry—starts his artistic blending, he must have a thorough knowledge of the thousands of aromatic substances available. Some of these ingredients are essential oils, gathered from flowers and leaves and roots. Others are tinctures from such products as civet and musk and ambergris. Various methods are used in obtaining the essential oils for the perfumers' use . . . distillation, "extraction," maceration, enfleurage. Each method influences the scent of the oil. The climatic conditions under which the flowers have grown give an individual character to the final product. For instance, the Bulgarian rose is distilled, while oils from the rose de mai of France are obtained by extraction, or enfleurage. Although all have a rose smell, each has its own characteristic note.

Small City Policemen Ride More Than Big Town Brothers

Shiny-bottomed blue serge trousers are replacing worn shoe soles as the mark of a city policeman.

According to the International
City Managers' Association, more cities are motorizing some or all of their police patrols. Statistics gathered for the 1951 Municipal Year Book show that late in 1950 a total of 1,122 cities over 10,000 population reported more than 16,000 cars and motorcycles in use for patrol duty.

In relation to the total number of policemen, smaller cities are more highly motorized than their larger counterparts, the Association pointed out. For example, in the big cities—those over 500,000 population—there are only six squad cars per 100 policemen, while in cities the size of Louisville and Denver -250,000 to 500,000 populationthere are 10 cars for every 100 police employees. In the smaller cities of from 10,000 to 25,000 population this ratio rises to 14 cars per 100

At least 34 cities now do all of their patrol work in motor vehicles rather than using foot patrols. No city reported using only foot patrols. The most common patrol methods remain the combination foot and motorized shifts. A total of 150 cities reported to the Year Book that they use oneman cars exclusively for police patrol work. An additional 624 cities reported using one-man patrols to some extent. More than 250 of these cities use the one-man patrols on day shifts only. One-man cars have the advantage of allowing cities to double patrols without increasing personnel, the Association pointed

Weird Specimens

Specimens of some of the world's weirdest creatures, the "flying dragons" of Malaya, have been added to the Smithsonian Institution reptile collections. They were collected by Maj. Robert Traub and Lieut. Vernon Tipton of the U.S. Army Medical Center in connection with a survey of Malayan animals possibly concerned in the spread of tropical diseases. The "flying dragons" are lizards. They have several greatly prolonged ribs to which are attached membranous sheets of skin. When these are spread out they enable the creatures to glide considerable distances from branch to branch of their forest habitat. They actually serve as parachutes, but they look very much like wings. They flash with colors that rival those of tropical butterfly wings when the liz-ards are in flight. Usually they are a brilliant orange with bands of black. The creatures also have brilliant-colored throat appendages, bright orange in the male and bright blue in the female. These lizards have slender bodies from a few inches to a foot long, and slender tails. In gliding, such a creature appears mostly "wings."

He also served as a member of the Board of International Missions, the Committee on Closer Relations with Other Churches, and the Board of Editors of the Board of Christian Education and Publication of the Evangelical and Reformed church. Dr. Harner contributed much not only to those who sat at his feet in the lecture room, but was so at home with youth and so familiar with the problems of the church that his coun-sel and advice were sought after by many. His passing marks a loss beyond description in the Church of Christ at large. Dr. Harner was the author and co-author of many books on Christian Education, Youth, The Church, and Missions

Dr. Harner is survived by his widow, Flora M., and two sons, Nevin and Philip, all of Lancaster.

In Sacred Memories of my Dear Sister, who passed away 6 years ago, July 30, 1945 and of her beloved hus-band, CHARLES P. WELK who died suddenly 7 months ago.

In the land of God's tomorrow
Beyond life's golden sunset,
Lies a city bright and fair
In the land of God's tomorrow
Where my loved ones waits me there,
Tis a place of wonderous beauty
Where they know no grief or fears
And where God himself in tenderness.
Shall wipe away all tears,
So I rejoice in knowing
That my loved ones, have found peace,
In that land of God's tomorrow
Where God's blessings never case.
Loving Sister.
MRS. CHARLES MARKER.

F., wish to express our sorrow and esteem of a faithful Officer for many years of Taney Lodge. He was a faithful and tireless worker in Odd Fellowship.

who followed mad leaders in their selfish ambitions down the road to national ruin.

Slaves and consuls alike aped those groping, crumbling Caesars who, in their greed and in their fear, decreed themselves gods or swore their descendants to deify them after death by executive action---as preliminar-ies to the fall of the Roman Empire.

Adolph Hitler and his breast-thumfing band of maniacs crouched at the feet of star gazers, palm readers, skull feelers, tea leaf artists, numerologists and seance conductors while they shouted their defiance at the true God and at man, and twisted their traitorous knives in the back of the Weimar Republic; and aping, confused and hysterical German populace joined the mad rush of the leaders to the scented rooms of the astrologers and other practitioners of the occult in a neurotic effort to tear the veil from the fate that they knew was about to engulf their land.

In Russia, today, the frightened keepers of a false indealism that got too big for them to handle have sought to drive God from the churches and from the hearts of the people and to force the population to kneel in suppliance before the hammer and sickle and to doff their hats in the presence of Stalin's picture in the public places.

And great masses of the people, not only in Russia but in other na-tions that have succumbed to her power, the people have become part of the international neurosis and madness.

Yes, there are fire stations in Russia, to---but no Firemen's Hall. They don't belong to Ivan, Serge and the ladies of the auxiliary. They belong to the Kremlin----to Joe Stalin.

Vladimir and Igor may belong to the Fire Company, but they are not volunteers. They are assigned there by the commissars.

Anton and Bogdan do not drop into the Fire Station for a social evening with the boys. They may go there under orders for a party meeting. They may go there to be told their production is too low, or to be questionally the production of the production of the production is too low, or to be questionally the production of the production tioned about some remark they were heard to make.

But Thurmont, Mdy, thank God, is not the Russia of today. This new Firemen's Hall is as American as the 7th inning stretch. This is yours. It is the club, the gathering place of the men-the volunteers---who are organized to extinguish fires in Thur-mont and the surrounding territory -- not start world conflagrations.

John and Peter, and Jo and Jack can come and go as they like. The auxiliary can use the rooms lor a sewing bee or a bridge party. There s no one in Washington----no one in high station----who can tell them when to come or when to go. There is no one in the Nation's capital or in any other place of power who can say who must belong to the fire company. If anyone in Washington wants to hold a town meeting in this Firemen's Hall for some good purpose, he must get your permission. If the purpose is not good, you can deny the use of the premises, whether the re-quest comes from the Governor of the State or even from the President of the United States, because----

Here is America! Thurmont, by American reckoning of historical time, is old, but to the ancient towns of Europe it is a babe in swaddling clothes --- but you and than the oldest household in Communist-dominated areas of Europe. There is no secret police watching your door, checking on your comings and goings, spying to see whose pic ture hangs in your living room, pry-ing to learn the identity of your guests, delving into the lives of your ssociates.

There was no one this morning to bar you from your places of worship. You are, indeed, more mature today than the people of Socialized England. You choose your own doctor at your own time. The industry for which you work is not the property of our State or of the Nation.

In spite of your youth as a town and our youth as a nation, we are more mature than the people of the ancient races of Asia, because we of the 48 American States have learned to live together. We have no tribal warfares. We have no leaders taking arms against other leaders. We have sound what their wisest men so long have sought --- a true Republic --- "the ast, best hope of Earth", because---

Here is America! Again I say, keep it that way.
Just as all of us, as Americans, are calmly determined to keep America free from foreign domination, you as citizens of Thurmont be calmly deermined to keep control of your local affairs and institutions---your schools, your park sites, your recreation activities, your police, and all of these things that belong to you as a community----including your new Firemen's Hall. Cooperate with your Fed. eral Government in the things in which we, the people, have charged the Federal Government with responsibility, such as national defense, in terstate commerce, and, when necessary, the waging of war. Cooperate with your State Government in the sphere of the State's responsibility and maintenance of primary roads the upkeep of hospitals for the mentally ill and the tuberculosis sufferers the educating of teachers for your local public schools, the operation of a State University, the coordination of public welfare, and, among other things the maintenance of a State military department.

But be alert against Federal and State infringements on those things which are traditionally yours.

Beware of the Federal and State handouts of money, which may appear to be a windfall, but which actually may be the wedge in the door to give the higher levels of Government control over your institutions.
So, as we dedicate this new Firemen's Hall here today, and as we start the observances of Thurmont's bi-centennial, let us also dedicate our-NORMAN S. DEVILBISS, U. H. BOWERS. BIRNIE STALEY, Committee. Selves to the maintenance of all our freedoms---our freedom as a Na-tion, our freedom as a State, our freedom as a County, and our freedom as a town.

Let us rededicate ourselves to that principle that the power shall rise from the people through the local levels of government, not loom over them like a cloud----a cloud that protects them from the glare of responsibility's sunlight, but threatens them with the dictatorial downpower of super control.

Let us resolve in the shadow of this symbol of the people's power to help themselves to drive from the seats of Government those who sell the favors of their offices, and who trade for illicit and unwarranted profits in the needs of a nation at war.

Let us dedicate ourselves to a moral reawakening---a renaissance of thinking as well as of behavior--to a public demand for honesty among our public officials---not merely the skin-deep honesty of the clever manipulator who avoids conviction---but the deeper, sincere and genuine honesty of the man and woman who think honestly as well as behave with apparent honesty.

We must never---as did the followers of the decadent Caesars, the bullies of the Third Reich, and, presently the saddists of the Soviet --- accept as normal the recurrent waves of crime in the Nation. We must, on the contrary, dedicate and rededicate ourselves to living as God---the real Giver of all our freedoms----would

We must keep Thurmont, and all the Thurmonts strong in their own rights --- so that we as a Nation will have our greatest strength, because Here is America!

Prediction: Racket Of Fortune Telling Continues Forever

NEW YORK-In this uncertain world, about the only prediction that can be safely made about the future is that fortune telling will continue to be a profitable racket, probably to the end of time.

Head of the Bureau of Records and Criminal Information of a large metropolitan area estimates that hundreds of thousands of dollars are squandered annually in his city alone by persons who are determined to consult fortune tellers at any cost. This includes a steady stream of ladies interested in learning what the future holds for them, from the bottom of a teacup.

The racket is as old as recorded time and even older. All that has changed are the names by which those who ply it are called. In Biblical times and during the Middle Ages, they were known as seers, soothsayers, sorcerers, stargazers, prognosticators, super - naturalists, and diviners. Today, they pose as swamis, card and palm readers, crystal gazers, numerologists, astrologers, spiritualists, and telepathists or mind readers.

The ancient city of Babylon, mistress of witchcraft, was a hotbed of sorcerers, diviners, astrologers, stargazers, and monthly prognosticators. Stargazer-priests spent most of their time on temple ziggurats measuring the angles and movements of the stars with "astrolabes" while their assistants drew maps of the heavens from the "data" assembled. Sorcerers and diviners made prophecies from thunderstorms, earthquakes, eclipses and even by consulting the clay models of the livers of sheep.

Court supernaturalists were handsomely rewarded by the Egyptian Pharaohs, including King Khufu who reigned about 2775 B.C. Typical reward for a day's work was a thousand loaves, a hundred jugs of beer, an ox, and a hundred bunches of onions.

In Early Greece, the future was foretold in sacred places called oracles, which were handsomely supported by the people. Most famous of these was the oracle of Apollo at Delphi, where a frenzied priestess suspended in a cauldron hung from a tripod, answered the questions of worshippers.

United States Population Increase High for 1950

NEW YORK, N.Y .- The population of the United States was increasing at the highest rate in its history during the latter half of the year 1950.

The actual population increase for the year was 2,474,000, but increase was greatly accelerated during the months from July through December.

Increased birth rates are expected to continue for the next decade. By 1956 or 1957 it is estimated that the country will have a population of 165 million -the number predicted for the nation in 1990 by some 1930 statisticians.

Perry and Soybeans In 1853, when Commodore Matthew Perry sailed from China with the American fleet, he had a vegetable in his sea chest which was to prove of extraordinary charcater some sixty years later. This vegetable-the soybean-had long been treasured in the Orient as a food. Today is is used in the manufacture of shortenings, bake goods, confectionery, cereal, beverages, paper, animal foods, cosmetics and innumerable other products. The oil from this bean is also used extensively by paint manufacturers in the production of fine paints and varnishes.

THIS 'N' THAT

The name, Philadelphia literally translated from the Greek means 'brotherly love' so that is just how the nickname of "The City of Brotherly Love" for Philadelphia came about!

A little boy was told to help in the kitchen by scrubbing the floor and was instructed to be sure and use plenty of "ELBOW GREASE". hour later, his Mother returned to the kitchen to find the lad in a squatting position on the floor, and when she said, "Why Tommy I thought this floor would have been finished long ago" to which the youngster replied, "I hunted everywhere, Mother but I can't find that elbow grease!"

Over Thurmont way, a man from Long Island liked these parts so much that he purchased a farm right there for his family which he will bring down in the very near future. He is a retired Government employee.

Rain-rain-rain! Wonder if that experimenting of those Atomic Bombs is the real cause of it all?

What a nice letter arrived from a dear little lady at the "Manchester Home" for Convalescents! She sure does admire the "Carroll Record" and some day I will be surprising all of That from one of my regular readers! Now, as I look back and re-call all those TOM-BOY Girls everyone turned out to be the best kind of women! So, Folks don't be impatient with that Tom-Boy Girl of vours!

Hen Spectacles Increases Egg Production

PARKERSBURG, W. Va. - It might look silly to the farmer and small-towners who raise chickens, but scientists report that spectacles would be very practical on chickens. They would increase egg production.

The spectacles, which allow the chicken to see only when its head is lowered to eat, are said to keep members of the flock from fighting among themselves.

The result is better dispositions and more eggs. Designed to fit over the fowl's beak, the spectacles are held in place by a pin fitted through the breathing holes in the beak. Hinged flaps of red plastic drop away when the head is lowered to eat and close over the eyes when the head is raised.

Citizens of Alabama Town Prefer Vice To Increased Taxes

PHOENIX CITY, Ala.—The people of the small town of Phoenix City went on record recently as prefering rackets to taxes.

In an unusual situation, an estimated 800 to 1,000 persons soundly applauded speakers who favored a "no-change" policy in the city government, which admittedly receives $300,000 a year from illegal enterprises. Two speakers who supported a cleanup of vice drew only mild

The rally was called to sound out public opinion on a proposal to raise taxes to replace money lost if the fabulous honky-tonk town should be

Roy Green, city commissioner, told the meeting that taxes would be raised all along the line after a cleanup, since $300,000 of the city revenue is derived directly or indirectly from rackets.

City Commissioner E. E. Reese declared at the meeting, "I'm not going to do what a handful of fanatics want us to do. You can no more force people to gamble than you can force them to go to church." Reese said a cleanup would put the city back into receivership, from which it was taken three years ago after more than 20 years. Arch B. Ferrell, circuit solicitor, acted as moderator for the forum, which drew an overflow crowd at the Russell county courthouse. Edwin Moore, long an administration critic, and John Luttrell spoke in favor of a cleanup, but neither completely favored the proposed tax increases as an alternate.

Winneshiek Milk Income Tops Two Million Mark

DECORAH, Ia.—The merchants of Decorah, shopping center of Winneshiek county, were greatly impressed recently by the preliminary report of the U.S. census of agriculture that revealed farmers in the county had a income of $2,870,-412 from the sales of milk, cream, cheese and butter during 1949.

The merchants were impressed because the dairy industry income represented a good slice of the town's annual business.

Biggest part of the income was from butterfat, which brought Winneshiek county farmers $2,063,235. Whole milk sold for $806,965. Related to the big dairy income in the county is the fact that most farms in the area are reached by all-weather roads. The average distance from a Winneshiek county farm to an improved road is .9 of one mile. Of the 2,711 farms in the county, there are 1,406 that are either on an improved road or within .2 of a mile of an improved highway. From 90 farms there is .3 to .9 of one mile of dirt or unimproved road before the farmer gets to the improved road. Only 130 farms in the area have more than five miles of dirt or unimproved road between them and their markets.

Telephone Firm Sued Over Fire Alarm Delay

WEST BEND, Wis. - A number of businessmen of West Bend have filed a $44,095 damage suit against the Wisconsin Telephone company, complaining that a telephone oper-ator failed to sound a fire alarm promptly, with the result that their stores and business were dam-

Last December a two story brick front building was gutted by a blaze despite the efforts of the volunteer departments of West Bend and Barton.

In the suit, former occupants of the building charged that a girl who reported the fire had to wait three minutes to reach a telephone operator, that the operator did not then sound the siren summoning the department until the second call was placed 14 minutes later.

Damages to the building and its contents, the complainants held, were due to the company's failure to receive and transmit the alarm; furnish service within a reasonable length of time; heed information and facts furnished to the operator, and exercise ordinary care in that only one operator was on duty at the time of the fire.

Fire alarms in many small towns that do not have their own system are sounded by telephone operators. The company denied the charges, saying it felt that it had answered fire calls without delay.

THE long black limousine with a uniformed chauffeur at the wheel came gliding slowly down the bumpy brick street and rolled to a stop in front of the little white house. No one got out.

From her bedroom Ann Marie heard the soft purr of the motor and peeked out through the living room. Yes, it was Aunt Sarah, with Jennings in front beside the chauffeur. She'd been dreading this moment. She glanced hastily around. Let 9 - Minute them come. Every-Fiction thing was orderly. Tommy was playing in the back yard. Their own little car was in the drive. They would know she was home. Then why didn't they Finally the car moved away silently, luxuriously, like a sleek cat that had stalked its prey. Ann Marie heaved a sigh of relief, yet she was angry too. The very nerve! She went about getting dinner in a cold, white fury. So that was her method! At dinner she told Tom. "Your Aunt Sarah was here today." "Well, fine! I knew she'd unbend sooner or later and call," he chuckled.

"Oh, she didn't come in. She just drew up her chariot in front and stared aghast at our humble abode. Probably seeing how the 'other half'

"Evidently she still can't stand the idea that you married beneath you. Some day I'll show that grand dame on her pinnacle just how far beneath you you really did marry, if I lose my temper sufficiently," she

"Whut'll you do, Mommy?" Tommy wanted to know, his eyes as big as saucers, his mouth stuffed "Whut's marryin' beneath you?" he demanded. They laughed.

"Oh, Daddy was upstairs and I was in the basement," Ann Marie told him jokingly.

But the thought rankled the next day as Ann Marie went about her work. Had Tom stepped down to her level, or had she come up to his, or was there any difference at all?

And then that afternoon the big limousine drew up to the curb again. This was too much! She would not go out and beg her to come in. Let them sit and stare. Only this time Tommy was playing in the front

"Are you Tommy Parkhurst, little boy?" Aunt Sarah called. Tommy went right on tinkering with his tricycle. "Sure. Are you Aunt Sarah Parkhurst?" 'Why, yes. How did you know?"

Her dignified expression almost cracked into the semblance of a smile under her black bonnet. "Oh, I've heard my folks talk about you and your big car." "Well! And what did they say?"

said.

you never liked it 'cause she was in the basement and Daddy upstairs when they got married and the preacher had to yell. Could you hear him clear out to your house?"

"No, I couldn't," Aunt Sarah answered, a puzzled expression on

"Maybe you were up on your pinnacle that Mommy says you sit on," he went on nonchalantly. "Do you like it up there on your pinnacle? Ain't it lonesome up there all Aunt Sarah was wiping off either a tear or a smile, but she called, "Come here, Tommy. You are very much like your Daddy used to be, did you know that? And I loved your Daddy very much." Aunt Sarah got out of the car and took Tommy in her arms. Then she turned to Ann. "My dear, you don't know how I've longed to come in, but I supposed you wouldn't care to have me. I've had James drive past night after night, but I couldn't get up the courage to stop. If you only knew how lonely I've been for Tom. RURAL SANITATION

Kentucky Town Solves Problem Of Sanitation

MT. STERLING, Ky. - What a small town can do about its sanitation problem has been demonstrated in this small tobacco and farming

Several years ago, garbage was collected in open trucks, which toured the city's residential and business areas with their smelly cargo. But that's all ancient history.

The city councilmen decided to invest in modern equipment to move garbage and refuse. They bought a new-type load-packer truck, which mechanically compresses garbage into tight bundles. The rear end of the packer is open only long enough for city workmen to dump garbage and refuse into it. There is no odor and no way in which garbage might be strewn about the streets—spreading all types of germs.

Sprayed the Sewers

The city fathers, working closely with the county health department, also bought a large power sprayer. It is used to spread insecticides on and around garbage cans and in areas where trash and refuse is

The health department even sprayed the sewers. Later, a longtime resident telephoned the department to congratulate it on the results of the sewer spraying project. "Are you going to keep it up?"

she asked. "Yes, lady, unless our money runs out," the chief sanitarian said.

"Now, look here, young man, if you need any money for such a worthwhile project you let me know and I'll get it for you."

The new equipment has all but eliminated flies and mosquitoes in town. Also, the department which formerly used five men and two trucks to make garbage collections in the residential and business areas, now uses three men and one truck. And the job is done better and faster.

Praised by State

The health department uses a fly counter to determine when to start ts spraying program. Once started the spraying is continued throughout the summer.

The county health department reports that the chemical treatment is used only as a supplement to improve sanitation, and not as an alter-

Representatives of the Kentucky health department agree that Mt. Sterling's sanitation program is tops in the state and wish that more cities had such a program.

Sanitation experts report the small town's sanitation program is not too expensive for other towns and could be adopted in almost any section of the country.

Claim Staked on Wooden Gold Mine in Iowa Town

FORT MADISON, Ia.—A Chicago metal-refining company has staked out a $20,000 claim on a "wooden old mine" in the town of Fort

It offered that amount for the right to rip up some 10,000 square feet of old factory flooring at the Sheaffer pen company plant when the gold nibs department moves into a new factory addition now under construction. "The prospectors" figure the old flooring will be worth that, and more, in 14-karat gold dust and chips that have been ground into the boards through more than 30 years of shaping gold

Another reason they expect it to "pan out" is that the floor also should yield some osmium, a superhard metal that is used on the very tips of better pens and actually is eight or nine times as expensive as

The pen company takes elaborate precautions to prevent day-by-day loss of gold. All aprons worn by workers in gold are laundered on the premises, the wash water settled out and the settlings smelted. along with floor sweepings and the dust from all the gold grinding and polishing machines. All told, Sheaffer figures these measures reclaim about $100,000 worth of gold each year that otherwise would vanish down the drain or into the dustbin.

Small Town Boy Tells Jet Idea to Air Force

ILION, N.Y.-A 13-year-old small town boy has set the air force engineers and big brass on their ears.
Ronald Wheeler, a bright eyed eighth grade pupil at Ilion junior high school, explained his idea for a revised type of jet engine to air force bigwigs recently.

He drew up plans and illustrations for adding a third combustion chamber to the ordinary dual chamber jet unit for a science fair. His teacher liked the plans and wrote to the air force. Later the air force asked to see the plans and to talk to Ron-

The boy suggested that a third chamber, or burner, could be used to increase take-off speed of jet planes and provide emergency power. It would be controlled by the pilot, who could shut it off when not needed and thus conserve fuel.

Air force engineers felt the boy might have hit upon semething worth while. Experts have been working on the same idea for "some time." EXECUTORS' SALE

Think of Brother

Lesson for July 29, 1951

THE Christians in the city of Corinth were bothered about a number of things. One of them never bothers anybody any more, and yet, strange as it seems, it throws a light on some of the hottest problems a Christian meets.

The Corinthian problem was beefsteak. We have a problem with that too, - that is, how Dr. Foreman are we going to pay for it? That wasn't the Corinthian problem. This was away back in Roman times. Every city had its temple where sacrifices were made to the gods. Sacrifices were of all kinds, from flowers to cattle. It was considered rather wasteful, after killing a big bull, to throw the carcass away; so after the ceremonies at the temple, the rose-garlands would be taken off the beast's neck, and the animal would be hauled away to some butcher's shop, where it would be cut up into roasts, steaks and what not, and sold over the counter just like any other meat. Now some of the Christians began to worry over their meat supply. Suppose I buy a steak in the market (one would ask) and suppose that steak came from a bull or a cow that has been killed as a sacrifice to one of these heathen gods? Won't that make me guilty of idolatry?

Your Conscience May be Clear, but-

So they wrote to the best man they knew, their old evangelist and pastor, the man who had converted them to Christ and organized their church, the Apostle Paul. They asked him about this and other things; and what we call "'I Corinthians" is his answer.

You might think this beefsteak problem trivial, but Paul never handled a trivial problem in a trivial way. He approached the problem in this way: Meat is only meat, he said; it certainly wasn't the bull's fault that he was part of a heathen ceremony. As for the butcher, he paid good money for the animal, in a perfectly respectable business transaction. Then where was the sin in eating such meat?

But wait a minute. Suppose you are dining out, and you happen to know where the meat came from, and everybody at the table knows, and somebody at the table isn't very clear-headed, and when he sees you eating the meat, thinks you must be approving of heathen sacrifices; then what?

Or perhaps, some one else is less enlightened than you; eating such meat seems quite wrong to him, but when he sees you eating it, he may (just to be polite) follow suit, and vet his conscience, not being an educated conscience like yours, will hurt him all the same. So what you do quite freely and rightly, causes another man to go against his conscience.

Think of Your Brother!

NOW, then, Paul says: "If what I eat makes my brother fall, I will never eat meat again, rather than make my brother fall." (American translation.) There you have the Christian principle.

The important question is not, "Is it any harm?" but, "What effect is this going to have on other people?"

We have seen that the basic Christian principle in all human relationships is the importance of personality. If an act, even a harmless and biameless act, hurts persons-makes them sin, makes them go against their own conscience, then the Christian's rule is at once: Don't.

The rightness or wrongness of a thing is not all in the thing itself: it comes from its effects on persons. Now apply this to some of our own problems of social living. Is drinking alcoholic liquor a sin? Is the use of tobacco sinful? Is dancing wrong? (-to name a few.)

Let us suppose, for the sake of the argument, that you are not harmed by such things yourself. It is a fact, however, that some people are harmed by them. Now suppose your act, which is quite harmless to you and done with a clear conscience, influences another and perhaps weaker person to indulge in something harmful to him? Then a Christian will say, as Paul said: If this thing makes my brother fall, I will never do it again. Which, after all, is more important to me, my own freedom or my brother's

'Mothballing' Process Is Said Much Improved

WASHINGTON—The United States Army's "mothballing" process, a system designed to protect "G. I." war equipment from rust and corrosion when not in use, may be greatly simplified as a result of tests now being conducted by the Army Ordnance Research and Development Division.

Proper packaging is of prime importance in protecting war materials from severe weather conditions and many of the protective methods adopted by the Army during World War II have proven to be expensive, complicated, and time consuming while failing, in many instances, to offer complete protection for the Army Ordnance may have the answer to the problem of providing long-range protection for equipment as a result of its exhaustive tests with a new chemical now being used commercially. The chemical, technically known as "volatile corrosion inhibite," is a powdery substance which releases a thin vapor, forming an invisable protective shield around steel or aluminum. The vapor film neutralizes the effect of moisture and air on the metal surface, thus preventing rust and corrosion from taking place.

Protective Wrapper

This inhibitor is applied as a coating on one side of a packaging paper and provides a wrapping for the equipment to be protected. Only very simple operations are required to fully protect a weapon or other steel objects from the danger of rust or corrosion; that of placing a clean gun in a treated wrapper and sealing the package. When the wrapper has been sealed, the vapor inhibitor completely surrounds the metal, penetrating to the smallest parts with its protective film to insure complete protection.

The vapor inhibitor would radically alter the present methods used to safeguard Army equipment. At the present time, Army rifles, machine guns, and other metal parts are being packed in a heavy grease for protection against rust and corrosion. Experts say that it is almost impossible to coat every part of a weapon because some parts are too inaccessible to reach with conventional preservatives. As a result, such parts go unprotected and may begin to rust within a short period of time.

Removing the grease and getting the weapon ready for use has presented additional difficulties. Ordinarily, cleaning rifles with a wire brush and solvent takes a skilled man at least 26 hours to prepare a case of 10 M-1 rifles for use. Because of the detailed cleaning required, many small parts are lost; parts that must be replaced before the weapon can be fired. With all these precautions, rust and corrosion still appear in small spaces.

Easier Cleaning

From the soldier's viewpoint, it is also evident that any new system of cleaning would be an improvement over the solvent and wire brush drudge. Now, Army Ordnance may have the answer to the "G.I.'s" dream of easier cleaning techniques.

Recent tests of the chemical have produced many significant results. If the treated wrapper should be punctured during shipment and moisture allowed to enter the package, the vapors will still protect | Nation's Popular Magazine with The a weapon even in the presence of 100% humidity. This protection lasts for a shorter period of time than that ordinarily given when the package is completely sealed, how-

A short time ago, a large number of rifle barrels protected by treated wrappers were shipped to Tokyo, Japan and placed in storage vaults. When the 90-day test period had ended, the barrels were removed from their protective packages and no evidence of rust or corrosion appeared. To further attest to the effectiveness of the vapor inhibitors, the rifle barrels gave the same appearance as newly processed parts.

Army Ordnance is now conducting experiments which may improve the old protective "cacoon," used at the end of World War II to protect planes, guns, and vessels from severe weather conditions. Researchers have developed a "shroud" or "cloak" treated with vapor inhibitors which may be placed over aircraft engines and objects of similar size in one operation. To date, these tests have produced highly satisfactory results.

Man Finds Smart Piggies Won't Always Act the Hog

WATERTOWN, Wis. — Contrary to popular belief, a smart pig won't make a hog of himself.

John Schroeder, Watertown, is now in the manufacturing business because he believed in a porkers ability to balance his own diet.

Schroeder built a hopper that contained 860 pounds of feed in an attempt to simplify his pig feeding problems. The feed was mixed with water and stirred by electricity, before passing on to a trough, from where the pigs help themselves. The automatic feeder was so successful that Schroeder now makes and sells them commercially.
