TEACHER SALARY QUESTION DISCUSSED AT LIONS CLUB

Representatives of the Carroll County Teachers' Association carried their bid for a salary increase to the citizens of Manchester when they attended a meeting of the Lions Club on Thursday, July 10.

Grayson Shank, chairman of the Salary Committee, told the Lions that the teachers were counting on the mutual interest of teachers, parents and citizens in the future of the children of Carroll County to solve the problem which confronts them today.

Jesse Starkey, president of the CETA, stated teachers desired a salary adjustment, not a raise. Such an adjustment is needed because of the constantly rising cost of living which absorbs any increase granted. He maintained that the proposed raise would stop the large turnover of teachers and would keep Carroll County from being the training ground it is for those who get experience here and leave.

A resume of action already taken on the state and county level on the salary issue was given by Mrs. Urith Shipley. Andrew Mason urged the Lions to consider the facts which were presented and follow up with positive action.

The teacher salary question will again be brought before the public when other representatives meet with the Hampstead Chamber of Commerce next week.

The Association will provide speakers for any group which desires to hear the facts of the case. Contact should be made with Stephen Lerda, Hampstead, or John Manspeaker, Westminster.

ACCEPTS NEW POST

Don R. Webb, for seven years associated with the Potomac Edison Co., Taneytown, recently left to assume an advanced position in Washington, Pa. His active participation in community events during his sojourn here contributed greatly toward civic betterment. He served the Taneytown Recreation Association faithfully as its secretary from its inception and DON R. WEBB was a member of the Board of Directors. His willingness to share responsibilities in group work was indicated by offices he held in Taneytown Lions Club, Taneytown Rod & Gun Club, Chamber of Commerce, and others.

In appreciation for his services rendered the Taneytown Recreation Association, the board of directors, at their last meeting before Mr. Webb's departure, presented him with a Lord Elgin wrist watch. Although the gift was a personal gesture from the board of directors themselves, it was presented not only in their behalf, but that of the whole Recreation Association which Mr. Webb had so generously served.

The work is being done by contractor E. E. Stuller, of Taneytown, and the Manchester Hardware Company of Manchester. Electric work is being done by J. E. Shaffer, of Reisterstown. Further report was given on progress in the preparation of working drawings for the building project at Sykesville, which will in substance, be the same type of project as is now under way at Manchester. WATERSHED PICNIC AND CONFERENCE

Indications of a large attendance at the Deep Run-Big Pipe Creek watershed picnic and conference on the James Shriver farm meadow near Union Mills this Saturday have been received by the sponsoring committee.

The response to invitations sent to the 218 farm families in the watershed has been heavy during the past week, according to L. C. Burns, county agent, who is secretary of the Carroll soil conservation district board of supervisors. The picnic will begin at noon and the panel discussion will begin at 1 o'clock.

The discussion will be the first of its kind held in Maryland, with farmers themselves discussing the problems and needs in their watershed. At a preliminary meeting of members of the panel held at the Solomon L. Hoke farm last Friday night, the group decided to discuss such matters as farm income, increased quality and productivity and the relation of conservation farming to production and income.

Members of the panel group are Mr. Hoke, discussion leader, Francis Hering, Paul Tasto, Guy Wain, John Dubs, Solomon Miller, Herman Remsburg, Mrs. Vernon Wolfe and Mrs. Rock Zumbum. Mr. Burns will present a summary.

The conference will be the opening event of a statewide observance of Maryland Land Week. Demonstrations will take place next week in St. Mary's, Charles, Prince George's, Calvert and Anne Arundel counties to encourage the use of soil and water conservation practices and to impress the public with their dependence upon the soil.

SCOUTS TO COLLECT PAPER SATURDAY, JULY 26

Another gathering of rags, old iron, paper, and magazines will be made by Taneytown Scouts of Troop 348 a week from tomorrow, on Saturday, July 26th. While it helps to have paper securely tied in bundles, loose paper is welcomed, and the call for iron and rags, including mattresses is even greater than for paper.

A large percentage of the troop held their meeting last Monday at Crouse's Mill, where a swimming meet designed by Stanley F. Frock, Explorer Adviser, proved the great interest swimming has for most young people. In a ball and spoon water race the winning team was George Abrecht, William Pittinger, and Edward Schildt. For more experienced swimmers the novel game of capture the flag (played in the water) was a test of endurance won by Philip Lawyer, Ronald Markle and Robert Rock in the first contest and then again, with Robert Fuss joining this group, in a second battle for one's opponents' flag.

After a general swim using the buddy check system conducted by Mr. Frock, announcements to the Explorer members quoted the reservation deadline of July 21 for the cruise in Navy vessels to Nova Scotia which will take place August 16-21. All members of the troop are urged to register for the Broad Creek camp week August 2-9.

I wish you health—life's greatest wealth!
I wish you always near so that I may help to cheer

Believe it or not, Folks—Easter Lilies in July right outside the parsonage door! I leaned down to caress them and such a Heavenly scent! The Gladiolos are beautiful in their array of brilliant colors. I planted the bulbs very early this year.

That saying, "When it rains—it pours!" That was really evident looking across the farms last week.

Then one clear day there was a beautiful sight which I never saw before. The farm hand on a tractor coming down a road making a very odd noise with his mouth as a call to the Hereford cattle to follow him over to the opposite field for their fresh pasture with the Master following up the rear on horse back! See what I mean, Folks?

Thinking of that very rainy day, Ladies, put Your Observer to washing all the windows on the interior plus the pictures and mirrors so as the day would be a full one taking place of the

IKE GETS A NEW COMMISSION

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, who resigned his NATO command on Memorial Day, emerged seven weeks later from his first political convention the unanimous Republican choice for the presidency. It was, as all America knows by the grace of radio and television, the bitterest, most hard-fought, noisiest convention since Theodore Roosevelt split the party in his battle with President William Howard Taft in 1912.

But the issues of 1912 fade into insignificance in comparison with the terrifying problems, spawned by twenty years of appeasement, to pressure groups at home and to both friend and foe abroad, that confront the head of our nation.

In uncounted millions of words in four days of impassioned speeches, Republicans assured us our salvation lay in their policies, regardless of their equally impassioned differences as to which Republican could make them work.

And we shall soon be told, from the same hall in Chicago, that only the Democrats can save us... and for the benefit of that curious breed among us who would rather be with the winner than be right... that only the Democrats can win.

This latter claim will be no idle boast. Back of it lie the cumulative force of 20 years of patronage, 20 years of expanding the Federal payroll... and the prospect of a Republican party divided against itself.

We do not think, however, the Republicans will long be divided. Action on the convention floor to make the 614 Eisenhower vote unanimous, followed a well-established and wholesome Republican pattern. But it was the immediate, aggressive action of General Eisenhower himself that will do most to heal the schism. In walking across the street to call on his defeated adversary... in saying to the all-but-crushed Senator Taft: "I came over to pay a call of friendship on a very great American", and asking for aid "essential" to his election and the execution of Republican policies... the presidential nominee displayed to those who were previously unimpressed, an unsuspected and commanding talent for political as well as military leadership.—National Industries News Service.

DEMOCRATS MEET IN CHICAGO

Soon the Democrats will take over the spotlight with the opening of their nominating convention in Chicago. It promises to be a colorful show. Here is a rundown of the leading candidates and a brief analysis of their chances—based, as the securities dealers always say in their prospectuses, on information which is believed to be reliable but is not guaranteed.

Estes Kefauver. The Senator from Tennessee with the coonskin cap has shown far more pulling power among the voters than any other aspirant to the biggest job in the world. He has suffered only one severe setback, when Averill Harriman beat him badly in the District of Columbia primary. His reputation as a crime-buster and an implacable foe of corruption is a tremendous asset. But the Administration wants no part of him, has gone all-out to stop him, and that will probably prove fatal to his ambitions.

Richard Russell. Senator Russell is well-liked in Administration circles—he has voted for most of the Truman proposals. But the professionals doubt that he has enough popular appeal to win in November. He is a distinct possibility for the second spot of the ticket.

W. Averill Harriman. Mr. Harriman is one of the wealthiest men in the country, and he is also about 1000 per cent for the Truman policies. He seems to have the White House blessing. His reputation is that of a hard-working, sincere and rather colorless administrator and diplomat. His major liability is that he hasn't started any fires or even sparks among the electorate. The commentators don't give his D. C. win much importance. In the first place, D. C. residents can't vote in general elections. In the second place, the Negro vote was a decisive element, due to Mr. Harriman's civil-rights' position. In the third place, the Administration went right down the line for him, as part of the stop-Kefauver strategy. These factors wouldn't be significant in a national election. He is a possibility but not a probability.

Albin Barkley. The Veep, who was in politics before most living Americans were born, has indicated he'd like the nomination. He could conceivably get it if a deadlock results.

Adlai Stevenson. Governor Stevenson has not sought the nomination, and has said he prefers to continue his work in Illinois. But his seems to be a case where Barkley is willing if the delegates want him badly enough. Many political writers and observers think he would be the Democrats' best bet by a long shot. His record in Illinois has been excellent—he has effectively fought the long-entrenched gamblers and grafters, and proven himself a top-flight administrator. As a speaker, he is A-1—he has been compared in this regard to the late President Roosevelt, and almost everyone who knows him seems to find him an attractive and compelling personality. In many respects his views go along with the President's, but there are important exceptions. For one thing, he believes in taking the waste out of government—he is said to have described himself as a close man with a buck, whether it is his own or the taxpayers'. As a vote-getter, he proved extraordinarily able in his run for the governorship. A political unknown, he carried the state against the powerful GOP machine by 500,000 votes.

Last, but certainly not least, is a confident, tough man named Harry Truman. Some still think he would accept a draft. Stranger things have happened in the strange world of politics. —Industrial News Review

M., CURRENT-ARGUS: "The Office of Price Administration's state office at Albuquerque has 68 employees, and the Albuquerque office's annual payroll is $324,000, which does not include office expense or expense accounts... A check of the payroll records discloses that many of those with soft OPS jobs are state politicians... It should be remembered that the state OPS office in Albuquerque is only one of 48 scattered around the United States, in addition to local offices... This is just one indication of how the Federal government spends the billions of dollars collected in taxes from the American citizens."

ADAMS, N. Y., JEFFERSON COUNTY JOURNAL: "In 20 years... the Federal Debt has multiplied 13 times; Federal spending has multiplied 15 times; national income (the money we earn to pay these costs) has multiplied less than seven times."

NEW SHARON, IOWA, STAR: "Conservatives in Congress fear that Federal spending has reached the point where voters receiving government checks will be the major factor in electing Presidents."

SOCIAL SECURITY INFORMATION

If you are now 75, netted at least $400 from your business in 1951, and expect to make at least that much in 1952, you are now insured under the Social Security Act.

Beginning with the month in which you are 75, you may receive your monthly insurance check regardless of how large your income from your business may be.

In most cases, it probably would be better to make your claim in January 1953, as it would probably result in a higher monthly payment. If you file in January 1953, you may get paid for that month and all six months before January. While you would lose checks for April, May, and June 1952, the larger payments you could get back to July 1952 would offset, in time, the three checks you would lose. Visit your local social security office and let them discuss your case with you. They can advise you what to do—file now—or wait, until January 1953.

Resolution regarding Dr. Cromwell. Resolved;

That the Carroll County Board of Education notes with extreme regret the death of Floyd G. Cromwell, State Supervisor of High Schools and well known in Carroll County. Dr. Cromwell made many major contributions to the schools of the county and by his enthusiasm and interest stimulated teachers, principals and administrators. He was well-loved and highly respected in Carroll County and his passing constitutes a serious loss to the State of Maryland. It is further resolved that a copy of this resolution be included in the minutes of our Board on July 8, 1952 and that a copy be sent to Mrs. Cromwell.

The Board adjourned at 12 a. m. to meet for a regular session on August 12, 1952 at 10:30 a. m.

SEPTIC TANKS VERSUS CITY SEWERS

Living away from the convenience of city sewers is no fun for many home owners who have found "septic tanks" not the complete answer for sewage disposal.

Nature has a way of "digesting" the sewage when it enters a septic tank, but to permit complete digestion, there must be a perfect balance between fats, starches and proteins contained in the sewage.

When septic tanks fail to function either by filling up or giving off a foul odor in the filter field where the tile is laid, it is a sign that nature cannot cope with the kinds of solids and liquids entering the tank. Too much fats in the sewage will form a cap over the top of the liquids in the tank, thus sealing off the surface and stopping digestion. Detergents also upset the digestion.

All these troubles end up with the owner being forced to have the septic tank pumped out, a job that is costly and certainly not pleasant.

Nature has been given a big boost in this job of digesting sewage in the septic tank through the introduction of a project called Enzymatic.

The manufacturer parallels Enzymatic action to the manner in which digestion is carried on in the human body. Unless the stomach and glands can produce enzymes, it is impossible to dissolve the solids and digestion cannot take place. With Enzymatic, the manufacturer claims to have over 70 different enzymes, each one formulated to split and liquefy a specific type of fat, protein or starch as found in sewage.

Also included in the formula are bacteria cultures of enzyme producing bacteria which feed upon the liquids created by the enzymes. The bacteria, in absorbing the liquids, give off gases, clear liquids, additional enzymes and inorganic elements.

Being a powder, Enzymatic is poured directly into the toilet bowl and flushed. Initial treatment for a 500 gallon septic tank consists of ¼ can per week for 4 weeks and then ¼ can each month thereafter. Costing $1.50 a can this permits complete protection for a septic tank for about $6.00 a year. It is reported that septic tanks treated with Enzymatic need not be pumped out for a period of 10 to 20 years depending upon how much solids are in the tank when treatment starts.

There are still more cesspools and outdoor privy-type toilets than inside toilets in the United States. The manufacturer recommends using Enzymatic to liquefy the solids in these type of sewage facility, using one can every six months. In this type of installation Enzymatic is merely sprinkled into the pit or flushed into the cesspool.

Of interest is the information that Enzymatic is being used by hundreds of cities throughout the country in treating sewage at large sewage disposal and treatment plants.

For further information in securing this substance or other data pertaining to it, The Carroll Record office will be glad to give the firm's name and address.

Radio Relay System Used In Rural Phone Experiment

Residents of rural areas without telephone service to nearby communities soon may have such service available without installation of interconnecting wire lines, if an experiment with a new type radio relay system proves successful in Virginia.

The first such experimental system has been installed between Five Mile Forks and Alsop, Virginia, a distance of 10 miles.

Dial telephones have been installed in seven homes in the Alsop area. They are on a single party line, connected by wires on the conventional manner. Their connection with Five Mile Forks, however, is by the new radio relay.

The Alsop party line is connected by wire line to a radio station in the area. A similar radio station is located at the Five Mile Forks telephone exchange.

The radio system operates automatically. The stations are housed in weatherproof cabinets and mounted on telephone poles. Their antennas are directional, that is they beam the radio signals at each other rather than in all directions. Due to the high frequencies used such radio relays are limited essentially to line-of-sight operation. Even so, relays of 40 to 50 miles are possible.

'Jet Gas Gun' Sprays Dye on Bank Robber

A Canadian has developed a device which he calls a "jet gas gun" that will make the work of bank robbers a more unpleasant and unprofitable business.

Not intended to kill or injure permanently, it operates on a pressure principle. It shoots dyed ammonium hydroxide from a tiny nozzle under 2,000 pounds pressure. The idea is this:

A bank teller under threat of a pistol has no chance to call for help or ring the burglar alarm. But, quite unnoticed, the teller by a quick foot movement can trip the gas gun apparatus on the floor.

Immediately a stinging blast of ammonia—with its telltale purple dye—is sprayed on the robber—and he is left blinded and ill.

Even if he escapes from the building he will be easy to spot for several days until the dye washes off. The dye will never come off the currency, so he can never spend it.

The inventor says that not only banks but trust and bond companies, taxi companies and other businesses where cash is handled openly can be protected by the device.

Young Hay Preferred

Ferdinand the bull may be preferred flowers, but cows seem to like their hay cut in the bud stage—before it is mature. Dr. W. E. Peterson of the University of Minnesota recently reported on tests in which cows fed leafy green hay that was too young to have blossoms ate forty-nine pounds of corn silage per day and took all the grain they were given. But when the same cows were offered a choice, slightly older grade hay their feed consumption went down to about twenty-two pounds of silage per day and over half of them ate no grain at milking. The reason for this, Dr. Peterson said, is that the cows don't like the lignin formation that makes mature hay harder to digest. They even preferred dark, rained-on—but young—hay over leafy green hay old enough to have purple flowers.

Water for Industry

Although the average citizen of this country personally uses only about one gallon of water a day, almost 1,000 gallons are consumed on his account, according to a recent bulletin, "Water for Industry." It takes about 65,000 gallons of water to make a ton of steel, for instance. The bulletin, designed as a guidebook on plant location with respect to water supplies, strikes an optimistic note in regard to the nation's over-all water situation. It stresses that proper study and engineering methods may permit linking up surface and underground sources to provide supplies for new plants in an area without overdeveloping withdrawal.

Lumber Without Wood

There is a new kind of "lumber" about to come into prominence, which doesn't originate in trees, can't splinter, and can't burn, but which can be sawed, cut, and joined like an ordinary two-by-four. It isn't really lumber at all, but aluminum formed to resemble familiar wood shapes and products used in the building field. Not yet in commercial production, the product—called "Alumber"—does not have to be standardized because sections can be cut to fit individual needs. Buildings can be knocked down and reused, or the parts themselves can be reused in different applications.

Farm Income

The national farm income for 1951 rose to a new high of $32 billion, but production expenses rose too, so the net income of nearly $12 billion was about $2 billion less than the all time high of 1947. California had the largest agricultural income followed by Iowa, Texas, and Illinois. The western states enjoyed a greater increase than did other sections. Livestock marketing was up 21 per cent from 1950, crop marketing was up 5 per cent.

Everything but the squeal
 Meat packers boast that they use every part of a pig but the squeal. Now telephone linemen are using heavy-duty work gloves made from bacon rind! After extensive tests, it was found that bacon rind gloves are tough and durable, but soft and pliant. Also they cost less than comparable leather gloves. Your telephone company constantly seeks ways to provide better telephone service at low cost.

Youth prevails
 A judge recently ruled that teen-agers can use the telephone even though their parents object. Of course, teen-agers, like adults, will find that it is to their benefit on a party line to keep calls reasonably brief. Not only does this allow important calls to reach them but it permits others to use the line. This neighborly co-operation gives everyone better service.

FEESERSBURG

Some expressions, by being over used lose their effectiveness. Such is the case of the phrase "drawing a red herring across the trail." The recent speeches at the Republican Convention were filled with the "red herring" expression and it may interest some readers to learn just where this phrase originated and what it means. A red herring is a herring of special grade that has been heavily salted and slowly smoked to give it a rich brown or reddish color. The red color of the herring is due to the peculiar process of curing. Red herring has been a famous product in England for hundreds of years. John Strange, a Member of Parliament in the time of Edward II (1301-1327) agreed with the burgesses of his district to take his wages in red herrings. "To draw a red herring across one's path, track or trail" means to attempt to divert one's attention from the real question by raising a side issue. The saying originated among sportsmen and was suggested by an old practice described as follows in Gentlemen's Recreation in 1686. "The trailing or dragging of a dead cat, or fox (and in case of necessity a Red-Herring) three or four miles and then laying the Dogs on the scent." Dogs have a keen scent for red herring, and if one is drawn across the trail of a fox it will mislead the hounds. As a matter of fact, drawing a red herring across the trail, in that exact form, is an American phrase and dates back only to the 19th century.

Statistics are generally dull reading but it has been proven that by repeating something often enough, it finally penetrates the mental processes of the population and sooner or later produces the desired results. We hope by this method to awaken the driving public to the hazard of driving recklessly and under the influence of alcohol and induce the public to take some drastic action against irresponsible drivers. We recoil in horror at the knowledge that deaths due to war have reached the staggering figure of 1,005,600 since 1775. But we accept with only a slight raising of eyebrows the fact that since the year 1900 there have been 1,018,500 traffic deaths.

As one mother said, with great disillusionment not so long ago: "When Jimmy was killed during the second World War I felt he gave his life for the sake of many, but when Dick died last week in a traffic accident he gave his life for the mistakes of the few."

The Democrats are going to their convention next week in a worse predicament than the Republicans while the Republicans had one outstanding candidate in "Ike," the Democrats have none. While Kefauver is popular with the voters, he seems to be very unpopular with the men in control of his party. It may do the Democrats a lot of good to take a lesson from the Republicans and allow the delegates to do their own voting. The American public is becoming wise to the way of Conventions and are resenting the fact that they have such a small voice in choosing the men who actually head the two party tickets.

One trouble with the country is that its problems are bigger, but its politicians are the same old size. —Dan Bennett.

WILLHIDE—SMITH

The marriage of Miss Mary Virginia Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Officiating at the single ring ceremony was the pastor, Rev. Dr. Frederick R. Seibel. The chancel of the church was decorated with palms, candelabra and altar vases of white gladioli. Escorted by her father, the bride was attired in a floor length, long-sleeved gown of lace over slipper satin with a fitted bodice, scalloped neckline filled with illusion and a lace overskirt with scalloped hem. A small lace cap embroidered with seed pearls secured her fingertip silk illusion veil and she carried a white Bible decorated with a white lover's knot, white roses and ivy. The bride's gown and those of her attendants, fashioned on the same lines, were made by her mother, Mrs. George Harman, the matron of honor, was costumed in blue net over taffeta and carried a heart-shaped arrangement of babybreath, pink roses and blue corn flowers. The flower girl, Miss Martha Harman, wore rose organdy and held a crocheted basket of flowers. The bridegroom, who was graduated from the Thurmont high school in 1943 and the Bliss Electrical School in 1947, is an employee of Moore Business Forms, Inc. When they return from a trip, the couple will reside in Thurmont. Mrs. Willhide's going away costume was a suit of aqua linen with white accessories and she wore a white corsage.

one I had planned. Remember always to place a little ammonia in the water for it does make those windows shine! Have you noticed that brown is a most difficult color to get in any shade in a dress and the stores will admit that there are many calls, but, "Sorry—no browns!"

Years ago that clock called "The Big Ben" was on the market then came along "The Baby Ben" and now the interesting "Ben Wrist Watches!"

Did you hear MacArthur's speech other night on TV?? In just one year he has changed greatly getting much thinner and older in appearance plus his voice which had seemed so powerful in his uniform! That reminds me thinking of nomination—am positive it will be Taft! Eh? Was reading in a paper where it stated that just 17 Presidents were nominated in the city of Baltimore in a period of 40 years. That's news!

Here's to that school girl and boy! I do hope you are not being idle since school has closed for the summer vacation. When you go back to school and you are asked to write a composition on just how you spent your summer just what would you really write? Don't think only of pleasure but manage to secure work of some kind doing odd jobs for any household. Go out and ring the bell of each home and make inquiries if they have any type of work to be done and when you do that job be sure it is done perfectly for that will be your advertisement.

You will start to make a reputation for yourself immediately that the phone calls will come in for you from other sources. Perhaps, there may be lawns to cut, windows to wash, house-cleaning jobs even car washes! There are dozens of jobs just waiting for you. AND ALWAYS REMEMBER THIS TO DO IT PERFECTLY EVERY TIME! To be reliable is one of the biggest assets in life and it will take you places when you can be depended upon. Then remember always that in life there are jobs that we all do not like in every detail—that each one never, never be discouraged! So, now young Miss or Young Boy, you have had several weeks of rest and vacation and be determined to do something worthwhile this summer. Don't wish for something—you know there are always three types of people in life—those who sit and just wish for something, those who talk about it and never do anything and then those—Thank God—who have the real back bone—who really are the DOERS!

Which class do you belong to? If you want a delightful drink always handy in the house ready for the unexpected callers in the summer time—try this and especially if you have those delicious Red Raspberries down on the farm! To two pounds of fresh fruit not exceedingly ripe, put it in quart for 24 hours in a stone jar, then strain it through a sieve without breaking the fruit. Pour the liquid on two pounds of fresh fruit let it stand 24 hours and strain it as before. Then add to every pint of juice one and a half pounds of sugar. Put it in a stone vessel and let it stand in boiling water until the sugar is perfectly dissolved. When cold, take off the scum and bottle for use. This is from the wonderful cook book by Mrs. B. C. Howard called, "Fifty Years in a Maryland Kitchen". This book was published many, many years ago and it has just about everything pertaining to the kitchen and the stove for the housewife you will say that special drink is much nicer than any Pepsi or Cola or Grape juice. It will be just different and the color is radiant!

You will be asked for that recipe! And here's a new and convenient one if milk is not obtainable at the store or if it is a holiday! There is a powdered fresh milk on the market now in a package and this carton holds 3 full quarts of milk. It is packed by The Defiance Milk Products Co., in Defiance, Ohio. It is very good to always keep one of those cartons handy, "The Deel Beauty Brand" obtainable at any grocery store. There is an interesting free booklet called, "Keep 'em Healthy" for the mere asking to that concern. Write for yours today!

Your Observer expects to spend her vacation in a tiny Bungalow by a running Brook way back off the beaten path and yet only about seven miles from the Parsonage.

Have a grand week-end, folks. Be careful in driving and drive slowly. You know that saying still exists and always will—it is better to be slow than to be sorry! Until next week, D.V. I am,

Faithfully,
YOUR OBSERVER.

Let's Think

by G. H. ENFIELD

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF HAND-SHAKING

Hand-shaking has been a practice for ages. Especially is it a custom of friends, and of those who are looking for favors. It isn't observed between enemies or pronounced foes. Hand-shaking is very conspicuous near and friends of candidates are in the process of establishing good will, and rounding up additional voters.

In addition to the hand-shake, frequently, there is a slap on the back or shoulder, betokening that the recipient is a great fellow or a "swell" guy. All such gestures carry weight in a political campaign. Those who watched by television the Republican National Convention in Chicago must have seen how extravagant these gestures were.

And they will be just as lavish next week at the Democrat National Convention. When the campaigns are over, much of the hand-shaking and back-slapping will go into oblivion for a season. While voters sense the purpose of this increased friendliness, nevertheless, they rather enjoy the momentary demonstration for it gives them a conspicuousness as ones whose votes and support are recognized as important. In other words, the practice places a premium upon them, and who doesn't like to wear a "blue ribbon!"

Hand-shaking goes back to the days of chivalry. In the days of chivalry every man carried a dagger or a sword. This was regarded necessary both for the purpose of honor and of self-preservation. Men were easily insulted, and often with little or no provocation, did not hesitate to puncture or to slash the throat of another.

When, therefore, one man wished to let it be known that his intentions were good and peaceable, he extended his right hand, thus, signifying that he placed himself at the mercy of the other by thrusting aside his sword or dagger. If the other man reciprocated this gesture of friendliness, he likewise extended his swordless hand, and then each grasped the hand of the other in token of mutual trust and friendship.

Thus we have the origin of shaking-hands as a mode of greeting, and a sign of friendship and good will. In the practice, we still use the right hand, and where there is enmity neither hand is extended. From childhood we are taught not to extend the left hand in hand-shaking, without being told why. Since the left hand did not bear the deadly weapon, it did not need to be shown to be weaponless.

Clothes Reveal Your Character And Personality

NEW YORK CITY—The way you wear your clothes is a dead giveaway of your character, say psychologists. For instance, women who are careless about stocking seams are generally gossipers.

For Instance

These are just a few of the many ways clothes reveal your personality, according to a psychological survey by Judith Chase Churchill in a national magazine.

Here are some other scientific findings which will confirm your intuition about people you know.

Dowdy dressers are vain. Chances are a tackily dressed woman is convinced her personality is so engaging that she doesn't need adornment.

Unhappy wives buy the most clothes. Intimate surveys show splurging on clothes is one of a woman's chief compensations for lack of marital satisfaction.

The office glamor girl who comes to work in fussy dresses is not a gad-about. Her fancy getups are a dead giveaway that she has little social life outside office hours.

The Jealous Type

If your husband raises the roof when you wear extreme clothes you can be sure he's possessive and jealous. If he likes you in modest clothes he's aggressive.

People who have a habit of fixing a friend's tie, flicking lint off their clothes and such, feel inferior. It's their way of trying to make you notice them.

And, believe it or not, psychologists say your husband doesn't mind your clothes extravagances as much as he pretends. He gets the satisfaction that's denied by his own drab garb.

Cocker Spaniel Is Wired For Sound By Loving Master

LOS ANGELES—We've heard a lot of shaggy dog stories, but this one tops them all. It seems, Phil Savage, an electrical engineer in Los Angeles, owns a black little cocker spaniel by the name of Laddie.

A few months ago, Mr. Savage, and his son Phil, Jr., also an engineer, noticed that Laddie was ignoring their commands. At first they thought the dog was just being stubborn.

Instead of letting their pet live out the rest of his life in a soundless world, they did what few dog owners would have the imagination to do. They built Laddie a hearing aid.

The device functions like a miniature public address system. It is of simple construction and is battery operated. Sound is picked up by a "microphone" (similar to an ordinary telephone operator's mouthpiece), amplified by a two tube radio circuit, and transmitted to the dog's ear through a standard headset earpiece.

The Savages consider their dog a success, but predict a bleak commercial future for it. Laddie—and, presumably other dogs, too—just won't learn to turn the aid off and on!

Lessons to Learn

A STORY of the Orient tells of a youth who asked a sage for help against a powerful chieftain whose enmity he had incurred.

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes in the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 574), "The very circumstance, which your suffering sense deems wrathful and afflictive, Love can make an angel entertained unawares."

Perhaps we have come to the point where, like the children of Israel at the Red Sea, we are confronted with what seems an impassable barrier, and yet we can neither remain where we are nor retreat.

We need to "stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord" instead of becoming alarmed when confronted with frightening situations.

That tender love which lies at the core of all being will abide with us through all trials and tribulations, to comfort and deliver.

San Franciscans are hoping that the renewal of service on the California Street cable lines will not mean a change of color scheme.

Layers are like factories..

Look at your pullets this way. Someday they'll be egg-making factories. And, like industrial plants, it takes capacity to turn out the highest production. So start now to develop your pullets' egg-laying equipment. Build up their frames, crops, gizzards and intestines to handle large amounts of feed. Beacon's 70/30 Feeding Plan builds husky birds. Takes only 30% of nutritious Beacon "18" Growing Mash. The other 70% is low-cost scratch grains! See us for details.

Hero, Artist, Saint

Lesson for July 20, 1952

THE GREAT TRAGEDY of life is that man has three incompatible ideals. So says a famous thinker of our time. These three are the hero, the artist, the saint. The hero's virtue is strength; the artist's is beauty, and the Saint's is holiness. A hero, in the course of his heroic acts, does things which would stain the honor of a saint and which are too ugly for a sensitive artist even to think about. Saints on the other hand are often most unheroic; they "wax valiant" in submission, not in fight; and they often care very little for beauty. Artists likewise may be personal cowards and live anything but saintly lives. Yet society needs all three, though the values one cherishes may be just the opposite of what the other prizes. Very rarely, the same man may show traces of artist, saint and hero.

Dr. Foreman

Hero Gideon
THE WORD "judge" in the Book of Judges usually means what we would call a hero, a military man with a successful record. Then, as now, if a man made good in the army he was after thought of as an army man. His title and his rank stuck to him his life long.

We think of General Grant as an army man, and of Lee as another; though one was President of the United States and the other one a distinguished college president.

So Gideon comes down in history as one of the "Judges" who delivered Israel from a powerful enemy. This time the enemy was the Midianites, a roaring nuisance if ever there was one. Midianites were nomads, they lived where they pleased, and they lived off the peaceful farmers wherever they were.

There were so many that their army looked like a swarm of locusts. They were seen only once a year, but that was enough. They would wait out in the wilderness until the crops were ready for harvest; then they would dash into the country, raid every farm from border to border, and skip out again, leaving the Israelites on the edge of starvation for another year.

How Gideon, a small farmer and a timid soul by nature, became the hero who nearly exterminated the Midianites and set his people free, is one of the most fascinating tales in the Old Testament. The people loved him and remembered him for that one thing above all: he could fight!

Gideon the Artist
THERE ARE MORE WAYS than one to be artistic. General Gideon painted no pictures, carved no statues, wrote no poems. But he was an artist all the same. There is something artistic about any good workmanship, and it is as true of military campaigns as of everything else.

Incidentally, generals have a temptation to overlook this. At the Battle of Fredericksburg in the American Civil War, when the northern army was marching into the grinding trap which Lee and his generals had prepared, Lee remarked that it's a good thing war is so terrible, otherwise we should become too fond of it. He was speaking from the general's viewpoint, of course. The private is seldom in danger of being too fond of war.

At all events Gideon's campaigns were just as "beautiful" in all details as anything Napoleon, Lee, Hitler or Hannibal ever invented.

Can a hero be an artist? In his way, yes; like any other craftsman, he can do a necessary, rough and dirty piece of work in a way that calls out the exclamation: Beautiful!

Saint Gideon
CAN A SOLDIER be a saint? If you mean by "saint" the ideal of what a Christian should be, most would say No. General Lee said at the end of his life that if he had it to live over again he would not be a soldier.

And still, the writer of the letter to the Hebrews in the New Testament does not hesitate to list Gideon, and even that half-hero Barak, right along with the rest in his list of high saints, the men and women of Faith.

For fundamentally it is faith that makes the saint. And Gideon was a man of sturdy faith. To paraphrase Tennyson, his strength was as the strength of ten, because his faith was pure. So there have been countless men whose profession is arms who have also been men of faith.

Lowly Cottonseed Booms To $500 Million Industry

Margarine, celluloid, shoe heels and gauze are just a few products that now come from a by-product of cotton—the $500,000,000-a-year cottonseed industry.

Today, products ranging from salad oils to gun powder are made from cottonseed. But, prior to the Civil War, cottonseed were thought to be of little value and largely thrown away, except for a planting reserve and limited amounts for fertilizers and cattle feed. In some states, laws prohibited gins from allowing cottonseed to accumulate because of the nuisance of having it around.

Now, linters, hulls and oil are all used. Only the sand and dirt clinging to the seed are discarded.

Cottonseed oil provides the basic ingredient of the popular, economical and nutritious margarine table spread. Large quantities of cottonseed oil also go into vegetable shortening, salad cooking oils, emulsions, lards and oils for setting olives and packing sardines. Crude oil is used in washing powder, soaps, candlepitch, waterproofing, paint bases, linoleums, roofing tar and even artificial leather making.

The pulp left after the oil has been extracted is known as cottonseed meal. A rich source of protein elements, cottonseed meal is used by farmers as a nourishing livestock feed. It is also suited to fertilizing tobacco plants and lawns.

Bank Uses TV to Match Signatures at a Distance

A private television link enabling a London bank in the shadow of Nelson's Column to compare signatures on checks instantaneously with authenticated specimens in its archives twelve miles out in the countryside had its first public demonstration recently. The bank moved its records from London during the war.

The television device gave a clear image of checks, contracts and deeds on a screen about three by five inches. Its receiver took up only a small space on a bank clerk's desk. From time to time the image was enlarged to show details. The archivist was informed by telephone of the documents wanted. The British postal authorities who control wave lengths authorized a narrow beam for the bank. The manufacturer said it would be virtually impossible for anyone else to poach on any secrets during transmission.

Ultracentrifuge

A force half a billion times as great as the earth's gravity has been created in an ultracentrifuge used for research in physics. Used primarily for the delicate job of weighing molecules, some laboratory centrifuges regularly operate at speeds up to 70,000 revolutions per minute. In one case a steel ball one sixteenth of an inch in diameter has been spun at a staggering 48,000,000 r.p.m. The little gadgets are important tools to physicists doing research work on virus diseases, cancer, arteriosclerosis and other afflictions. In industry, they are yielding valuable data on metals and plastics. Ultracentrifuge rotors hold small samples of materials being studied. Elaborate optical devices shine light through the samples as they spin, and analyze the light to provide data upon the molecular nature of the substances being tested.

Record Litter

A new world's record—an eight-week-old litter weighing 840 pounds—has been established by a second cross Farmers Hybrid sow owned by Larry Meyer of Spring Grove, Minn. Meyer's sow farrowed a litter of eighteen pigs and all eighteen of them were alive and frisky at the fifty-six-day weighing-in that cinched the new record. The sow got an assist from science in keeping the little pigs alive, however, because all were raised on a new formula sow's milk fortified with a growth-promoting antibiotic. Average weight for the pigs was 46.66 pounds, fifth the heaviest topping the scales at 56 pounds. Previous world's record was set by a Chester White sow owned by Wayne Hotson of Austin, Minn., which farrowed a twelve-pig litter that weighed 812 pounds at fifty-six days.

They're In the Money

If you like to think about money, you will be interested in the fact that 27 companies in the United States reported gross volume of a billion dollars or more last year. This is the greatest number ever to reach the select circle, and reflects higher prices paid for various products. General Motors, with a gross of almost $7.5 billion was easily the leader, outdistancing Standard Oil of N.J., which had $3.7 billion. American Telephone, U.S. Steel, A&P, and Sears, Roebuck followed in that order.

Rare Mineral

The first discovery in the west of nasonite, a rare mineral, was reported recently by Dr. Joseph Murdoch of the University of California. It was in the 910-foot level of the commercial quarry at Crestmore, California. The only other occurrence of this mineral in the United States is in zinc deposits at Franklin, New Jersey. Nasonite is such a rare mineral that it has no commercial value.

Crouse Commenting . . .

It has been 14 years since I have graduated from the Lincoln School in Gettysburg, Pa. On graduation night, I was very proud to be announced as the winner of the McPherson Memorial Prize for Scholarship. I was one of a large farm family and it did my heart good, that night as I was given the award, to show others that farm folk could be just as good, if not better than non-farm folk.

All during my Naval Career my shipmates had great fun in teasing me about being a FARMER. I had just come off the farm in Maryland when I went into the Navy. I always have kept back in my mind the goal of helping out folks in Agriculture, and possibly, some day would own a farm of my own.

When I returned from the Navy, I looked around for a college to go to for training in Agriculture and also in Engineering. I had known many people at the University of Maryland through my 4-H Club work while living on the farm in Carroll County, Maryland. I then started in training to be an Agricultural Engineer, and finally completed the five years work in 1951.

I learned that the University of Delaware was in need of an Agricultural Engineer for teaching and extension work. I accepted the appointment because it involved working with rural folk and helping them with their problems.

Now I have started in the farm machinery business, having bought the business of Walter F. Crouse, R. D. No. 1 Littlestown, Pa. (the farm machinery business only). I feel that with my training and experience, I can help farmers learn to take better care of their machinery as well as sell and service a good line of farm equipment, the JOHN DEERE line. Our GRAND OPENING will be Saturday, July 19, 1952, and we will also have on display one of the NEW MODEL JOHN DEERE TRACTORS that are being displayed on that date by the JOHN DEERE Dealers all over the United States.

If any of you are acquainted with the Naval Aircraft that did so much to help win the war in the Pacific, you will know that the fighter pilots had asked for a fighter plane with certain qualities which they felt a fighter plane should have. It took several years before the plane with just these qualities was designed and finally put into production and delivered to the pilots. Well, this new line of JOHN DEERE tractors fits into a similar category; you farmers have been asking for a tractor with this and that, and now you can get just such a tractor with many improvements. I have driven this new tractor, and it is a "honey" of a tractor.

Now that the rainy spell is over for awhile, (I hope) it looks as though you will be able to come in to see the new model tractor and meet your new JOHN DEERE Dealer. We will be open until 10:00 p. m. Saturday night, July 19. Free coffee and doughnuts will be served all day, and door prizes will be given away each hour.

I'll be looking for you!
