CHILD DROWNS

Boy Loses Life in Dam at Bruceville

Ralph Eugene Wilson, 7 years old, son of Raymond K. and Ruth (Eckard) Wilson drowned Wednesday while swimming near the Fred Mehring dam, close to his home at Bruceville.

His body was recovered from Little Pipe Creek at 7:30 o'clock after a search had located his clothing lying on the bank at the dam. The search was started when the boy failed to return home for the evening meal.

Residents who live near the dam reported that about eight or ten boys had been swimming at the dam where the water is said to be very deep at places.

The victim's body was recovered by his uncle Roland R. Wilson, in four and one-half feet of water below the dam's breast.

It was explained that the dam wall is being undermined and that the boy could have drowned in the dam pond and washed through the dam into Little Pipe Creek.

When the boy failed to return home, his father conducted a search throughout the town. At about 4 o'clock, the victim's clothing was found on the bank.

Union Bridge firemen and state police were alerted and soon arrived on the scene. The water at the dam was dragged unsuccessfully before a search of the creek below produced the body.

Dr. James T. Marsh, Carroll county medical examiner, issued the death certificate stating that death was due to accidental drowning.

The child is survived by his parents, his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Eckard, Union Bridge and three brothers and a sister, Roy, Roger, Russell and Reba Wilson, all at home.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday at 1:30 p. m. at the Raymond K. Wright funeral home, Union Bridge, followed by rites in the Union Bridge Church of the Brethren with the pastor, the Rev. Samuel A. Harley, and the Rev. Paul Freeman, pastor of the Keymar Holiness Christian church, officiating. Cousins of the drowning victim will act as pallbearers. Interment will be at Keyville cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home between 7 and 9 p. m. Friday (today).

TRINITY LUTHERAN SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC HELD

The program included explanations, a preview of the preparation of Dr. Heartburn's Golden Medical Discovery, demonstrations of its effectiveness, and testimonials. Dr. Heartburn also presented various talented acts to give his program more variety.

These acts included: Gorgeous Gussie and his funnel crew (Clarence Harner, Wilmer Nail, Nevin Ohler, Robert Harner and David Wilhite); The Nightingales of Greenville (Mrs. Betty Naylor and Mrs. Maxine Bowers); a reading by Mrs. William Schwaber, of Union Bridge. MEET WITH HAMPSTEAD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Mr. Stephen Lerda, acting as spokesman for a group of teacher representatives composed of Alan Waganam and Jesse Starkey, officers of CCTA, and Grayson Shank and Fred Engel, discussed the salary situation with the Hampstead Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday, July 23.

Mr. Lerda indicated that their purpose in being there was in the interests of the children of Carroll County. He went on to give reasons for the necessity of a salary increase. Cited were the increased costs of living, increased income taxes, the fact that salaried workers are always behind in wages in prosperous times, teacher turnover, and the difficulty in securing replacements.

Further action on behalf of the teachers was recommended by the Chamber of Commerce to its Education Committee.

These teacher representatives were authorized to accept invitations to speak before civic groups by the Advisory Council of the CCTA before the closing of school in June.

DEMOCRATS NOMINATE IN CHICAGO

Stevenson of Illinois and Sparkman of Alabama Selected

Early Friday morning on the third ballot Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, of Illinois was nominated as the candidate for President of the United States by the Democratic party at the convention held in Chicago last week.

Senator John Sparkman was named by acclamation on motion of James A. Farley, Saturday afternoon after Stevenson had designated him as his choice for the nomination for Vice-President.

Stevenson spoke briefly in introducing Sparkman to the delegates just before the convention ended.

The first woman ever placed in nomination for the vice-presidency withdrew immediately after the speech-making ended and urged the delegates to back Sparkman. Mrs. India Edwards was placed in nomination first. Next was Judge Sarah F. Hughes, of Dallas, Texas.

Rep. Lansdale G. Sasser of Md. was described as one of "the real heroes" of the Democratic National Convention, by George P. Mahoney, Democratic candidate for the United States Senate, upon his return from Chicago.

Mr. Mahoney, a member of the Maryland delegation to the convention, that was headed by Mr. Sasser, said: "The fat was in the fire, and the Democratic party seemed to be heading straight for a disastrous north-south break, when Mr. Sasser stepped into the breach, and launched the fight that paved the way for seating the Virginia delegation, and the other Southern States."

"His prompt move, his statesman-like approach to the problem, coupled with the magnificent support he was given by the rest of the Maryland delegation, saved the convention from a serious split, that might have had possible bad effects in November."

"It was a pleasure to work with Mr. Sasser at the convention. No hours were too long for him, no effort too great. As a result of his leadership, the work of the Maryland delegation will be long remembered by those who attended the convention. His motion that saved Virginia its place in the convention, helped make Democratic History."

Mr. Mahoney said that in a conference with Governor Adlai Stevenson, the Presidential candidate had indicated that he will include Maryland in his campaign tour.

Hear musical numbers from each county. Sing with "Herb" Wilson and Ivan Lawson with his portable organ. Bring a crowd from your church. The public is invited. Let's give the Governor a warm welcome.

TEACHERS SALARIES

Stand for Demand on Increase Clarified

During the last session of the Maryland legislature, a bill to settle the teacher salary issue by raising the state minimum was vetoed by Governor McKeldin. The same measure met the opposition of the Carroll county delegation, who supported the Governor's position that this was a problem to be settled on the county level.

Their action on this measure denied the county $117,000 which represents about 1/6% on the tax rate. The teachers of Carroll county worked for the passage of this bill. When it failed to become law, they were faced with no other alternative but to abide by the decision of the Governor and his supporters and to work for a salary settlement on the local level.

The CCTA holds the position that a final solution to the teacher problem should be made by the state. It is seeking aid from the county as a temporary measure until such time as this can be done.

The Association believes that the county can afford to meet its request for a salary increase. Following are some figures about the financial status of the county. Although Carroll county is frequently said to be the richest county in the state, it is among the lowest in the amount spent on schools.

The tax rate for the fiscal year 1950 was $1.25. This amount .33 was spent on schools. This figure puts Carroll county in 18th place among the counties of Maryland according to the amount spent on schools. The tax rate has gone up since that time but the Association was unable to find the rates for the other counties and thus couldn't make a more recent comparison. Taxes have gone up in many of the other counties since the same date.

By determining the assessable wealth per child, an indication can be given of the county's ability to provide for schools. The assessed valuation per pupil in Carroll county was $9539. This represents a position in tenth place in Maryland. Thus, Carroll county ranks tenth in the state in what it could afford for schools, but has a place in 18th position according to what it does spend.

The criticism has been made that the teachers of the county are not taxpayers. In a survey of all teachers in the schools conducted by the CCTA last June, it was found that 119 own property in the county and are taxpayers. Some own property outside the county and a number young teachers whose families are property owners.

CARROLL COUNTY FARM QUEEN CHOSEN

Miss Diane Thomas, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Thomas, Taneytown Route One, has been chosen farm queen at the Carroll county 4-H fair and Farm Bureau rally held at the Taneytown fair grounds. Miss Kathleen Booher, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Booher, Union Bridge, was named alternate.

The judging of the farm queen from among five contestants was the highlight of the show. This contest was sponsored by the Associated Women of the Carroll County Farm Bureau. The contest and the style revue, which followed, took place in the auditorium of the Taneytown High School since the grandstand on the fair grounds was burned to the ground several months ago.

Urban Bowman, Westminster, acted as master of ceremonies while the judges were State Senator Stanford I. Hoff, Sherman E. Flanagan and Samuel Conover, all of Westminster. Gifts were presented to each of the judges, the presentation being made by Mrs. Paul Wimer on behalf of the fair.

The style revue centered around the theme "What You Wear." One hundred and twenty girls participated, modeling clothing made by themselves. Ellen Hull served as the narrator.

COMMENTS ON HISTORICAL EVENT

Washington's Trip to Taneytown Provides the Subject

Having just returned (by walking across the front hall) from television attendance at one political convention and being about to commit the indiscretion again next week, and feeling need for a reborn faith in something, I picked up from where it had been lying for some time a small—40-page—souvenir pamphlet sent to me by the editor of the Carroll Record, a newspaper for which I hold admiration for reasons set forth in one of these columns some months ago.

The Carroll Record is published in Taneytown, Md. The Record published this pamphlet in 1932 in the county's celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington through Taneytown.

That pamphlet refreshed me—when needed it after the cheapness, trivialities and quarreling in Chicago. George Washington was not cheap nor trivial nor quarrelsome. To meet him even in this slight way this week was worth while.

There is not much that is new to be said or written or read about Washington. I liked this little souvenir from Taneytown because it is so very human. It does not undertake to add any mighty facts to our knowledge of the man, but it does draw us a little closer to him. Some of its paragraphs stand out now against the background of current programs of political denunciation.

As for Taneytown, it is to this extent like Carcassone in that I shall in all probability never see it, but it seems as though I know it, because it is typical of much that is best in our country—small places where folks live close together, and which have a perspective often lacking in the larger cities. To wit, this 40-page souvenir concerns itself (which is its purpose) largely with local memories of Washington, but among the assorted notes thereon one finds many a bit of illumination of the man and the days of his activity which you are not likely to find in more ambitious Washingtoniana. Sandwiched in between the fury of one political convention and the frenzy of another, they are, to me at least refreshing.

Our presidential candidates make a great business of gallivanting about the country, by train and airplane, making whistle stops and mounting glorified soap boxes, with hordes of reporters and publicity engines; but consider that our first President, in the conduct of his office and before, "was one of the greatest travelers of his time, though this fact is scarcely known among the many others that contribute to the lustre of his career". Much in Maryland, but covering "territory from Kittery in Maine to Ohio and as far as south as Atlanta, Ga., he went by horseback, by coach"—and much on foot.

There was not much pomp in his journeys. "He was not at any time given to personal or official display on his travels, and the means he used were always much as best provided for the ends aimed at. He 'roughed it' when necessary, and was always careful and economical in his expense accounts."

Here was one of Time's great men, who didn't understand the art of advertising himself like a new brand of soap or a three-ringed circus. And he was "economical". Queer kind of a politician!

A curiously unostentatious man. Well, not as we know it today. To be sure, there was this when he visited the Taneytown region, in 1791, as that town's chronicler takes it from Washington's diary:

"In this tour I was accompanied by Major Jackson—my equipment and attendance consisted of a Chariott and four horses drove in hand—"

I was driving through the country with an old gentleman to inspect a farm and we were discussing that inevitable topic, taxes. As we passed a school bus, he exclaimed, "See! That's what I mean. When I was a boy we walked three miles to school. Now we spend $5000 for a bus to pick up the children so they don't have to walk. Then we spend $30,000 for a gymnasium so they can get proper exercise!"

THIS 'N' THAT (Your Chatty Column)

With all my heart, I wish you every morning a smile that shall last until the next day's dawning. I wish you health—life's greatest wealth!

I wish you always near so that I may help to cheer. Each future day and in some way—help to bring you happiness!

The intense heat of the day is actually stifling and yet as I type this column, the farmer and his three young helpers are baling the newly gathered hay! The color is a beautiful shade of green in the huge bunks as they load it on the truck.

The beautiful Gladioli which I picked this morning are the centre of attraction on the dining room table in a deep blue vase and their array of colors of reds and deep reds, white, orange, yellows and orchid need adjectives to describe their stylish beauty.

Did you hear Arthur Godfrey on Monday night on the Talent Scout program sell that Frosted? No other could say, "If you like ice cream, folks, you will love Frosted but I don't quite understand if you like ice cream—why you would want to buy this stuff?"

Then on Wednesday night imitating the Convention in Chicago—all singing—"WE WANT GODFREY" and he singing that cute song, "If I'm elected" and ending with, "Then there will be lots of fun in The White House!" There isn't just any other individual like him—that's all! Eh?

To really hear the most wonderful woman in the world (and that she is) at the Convention on T.V. Here is one Columnist who would vote for her for President and what a capable one she would be! MRS. FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT!

Ladies if you are too plump and can't stand going through the paces of real severe exercise and diet just cut off a piece of your wash line and start jumping rope as you did when you were a little girl. If you have just a walk around your house go out and jump on that. Start 25 times for three days and jump it to fifty times for the next month but jump each day at the same time and out doors if possible. Wear little clothing that is nothing tight and eventually you will be jumping to one hundred without feeling any affects and you will be amazed how much you have lost. If you are a big sweet eater try to omit anything sweet for one month.

Now, here's a cute one and all about a taxi-driver in the big city. Your Observer always leaves the car parked way up town and taxis down to the shopping district and then taxis back again. Upon my return, the driver—an unusual type of man driving a taxi started conversation about the weather and that day it was 95 in the shade! We were heading North on St. Paul Street when he said, "I want you to meet the sweetest girl in the world!" I looked at him quickly and saw the most beautiful expression in his face and followed his gaze up the street. He swerved the taxi suddenly and then stopped and sure enough, folks there was one of the sweetest girls, I have ever seen coming toward us.

She was one her way to work and he said, "Hop in, Sweetie and I promise to get you there in time after I deliver my fare, I promise!" After a little persuasion and a smile from me, she got in the taxi and then a real conversation started. I learned right then that this young man had proposed many times to the lovely girl, she always refusing. She—a dancing teacher teaching the Latin America Dances at a very swanky place. The art and grace was right there!

"Stepping out of the cab," I said, "This young man is not always going to be a Taxi driver and I can see he loves you deeply! When he proposes again you had best think twice before you say, "No"! To my amazement—that young man was so grateful that he grabbed my hand as I was getting out of the cab saying so sincerely, "Thank you, Madame!" See what I mean, folks? People are interested in every direction!

Now if you are having trouble with the Red Water, Corrosion, and Lime Scale in the water heater ask your plumber about "MICROMET" for then you will save money!

Betcha in years to come that every house that is newly built will have Air-Conditioning installed just as the heating system is placed in the houses.

Whatever you do, folks. Don't miss "SCARAMOUCHE"—the exquisitely beautiful Technicolor production of Rafael Sabatini's famed story. It is the story of the famous sword that flashed through a hundred duels, that slashed into perfumed and silken-draped bouidors of the most beautiful women in France that plunged a man into the most fabulous exploits of a tumultuous era. In the title role Stewart Granger has the prize assignment of the year and he does play it handsomely with flair and gusto. With red-haired Eleanor Parker and radiant Janet Leigh revealing in the court gowns of the period. Scaramouche was truly the greatest swordsman in France and when you see it, you will never forget Stewart Granger as he swings on a certain rope of a Parisian theatre to an upper Box with sword in hand to fight a breath taking duel! It is simply laced with splendor and one picture Your Observer could see again and again. You really haven't seen anything until you've seen "SCARAMOUCHE"!

So long, folks until after Vacation Days when Your Observer will be writing, just like that song, "In a Cottage Small—by A Water Fall!" I am,

Faithfully,

YOUR OBSERVER.

CARROLL COUNTY PLANS A COMMUNITY CENTER

A report comes to us that Carroll County, a. e. Westminster is considering a Community Center for Carroll County. Instead of spending all the money for acquiring the land, erecting building, etc. We recommend the Taneytown Fair Grounds.

We understand that it is for sale. The buildings are already there excepting the grandstand which was destroyed by fire recently. The location is ideal. The Baltimore Sun says:

"Community centers usually are associated with cities. But it seems that the country folk now have embraced the idea. Carroll county at the moment is engaged in a heated discussion as to where one should be located.

Hitherto in the counties the fair grounds have served as a traditional point of assemblage. Their drawback is that they are built on rather an elaborate scale and are open for use only for a few days in the fall. For lesser assemblages of farm people at other seasons high schools and armories have been made to function.

In the very nature of the case when exhibits depend entirely on the county fairs they have to be confined to those crops which mature in the fall when the fairs take place. Actually there are many important crops that reach their peak in the spring or early summer.

Recent years too have seen a stepping up of organized activities among farm people. There are the 4-H clubs for the boys and girls, and organizations for both the farmers and their wives. Programs are carried on throughout the year.

The community center contemplated for Carroll county includes a main building with a large auditorium for public meetings. Nearby will be sheds for the housing of cattle, pigs, sheep, poultry and like exhibits. The design calls also for a playground for the younger children, picnic grounds and a farm pond stocked with fish.

According to present plans the center would be made available to organizations of veterans and volunteer firemen. It would provide facilities for carnivals and other recreations as well as for business meetings. Several other counties have centers of a somewhat comparable nature.

Those who are promoting the center express the opinion that its establishment should be the work of the people of the county themselves. Certainly there is no better guarantee of the success of such a project than the knowledge that it is through their efforts that the community center has been created."

GRASS ROOTS OPINION

WASHINGTON, IOWA, EVENING JOURNAL: "Concern over the tax problem lies largely in the fact that the law of diminishing returns has set in. Put Federal taxes up another notch and the increase probably won't produce any more revenue.... Business can be taxed out of business. And that is precisely what is beginning to happen. The process can kill the goose that lays the golden eggs, and the tax goose is beginning to look pale around its eyes. 'Moderation in all things,' saith the sages. This applies to taxes, as well as cayenne pepper or chocolate candy."

WILMINGTON, N. C., STAR NEWS: "In Great Britain.... the government will offer to sell the trucks back to the private investors, undoubtedly at a loss because the good will value of the former private companies lapsed. Investors likely will not be eager to buy. Principal reason is that a Labor spokesman announced in Parliament that if his party returns to power in the next election it will return long-distance trucking to public ownership.... Government ownership usually slips in quietly. But once in the door, it is practically impossible to dislodge it. Its sponsors craftily perpetuate it."

GREENVILLE, TEXAS, EVENING BANNER: "It is not our purpose to rush to the defense of the private power companies, or to plead the cause of public power operations. But we think the people are intelligent enough to decide what they want and what they do not want. And we are convinced that private enterprise has made this country as great as it is."

MARYSVILLE, WASH., GLOBE: "If we are to remain a sovereign state, with sufficient taxable area to support and develop our state as an entity, we must oppose the encroachment of Federal reservations, directly and indirectly. Our great resources can all be developed wisely and well without setting aside areas in the state as Federal reservation, which is the ultimate aim of the proposed CVA, and now CBA."

GRESHAM, ORE., OUTLOOK: "It is common knowledge that the amount taken by the Federal government from corporations in taxes today is far greater than the amount the corporations are permitted to retain for the distribution as dividends and for the maintenance and expansion of plants. How long can industry go on furnishing jobs, absorbing wage increases, and still meet such rapidly rising tax obligations?"

SCOTTSVILLE, KY., NEWS: "Somewhere there must be a limit fixed to both taxes and to foreign aid expenditures. We cannot indefinitely continue raising Federal taxes and giving away money at a constantly increasing rate. For the sake of everyone in this nation, Congress must select limitations and pass laws that will prevent reckless administrations from exceeding those limitations."

ANAHEIM, CALIF., BULLETIN: "Long ago, America rejected the cartel system of Europe, and set about vigilantly to stop the growth of business monopoly wherever it threatened. It is apparent that the monopoly power of labor unions is no less a danger to our national security."

Spectroscope

When the light of a star is analyzed through a spectroscope a spectrum is obtained, crossed by dark lines. If the star is approaching the Earth, these lines are shifted from their usual position toward the violet end of the spectrum. If it is receding, they are shifted toward the red.

Found In Compounds

Boron, first isolated as an element in France and England in the early years of the last century, is never found in nature in its pure state, a brown powder. Instead it occurs in the form of acids, borates, as an essential constituent of many silicates, and in such natural compounds as crude borax and rasorite.

Racing Cane

The race of ocean-going skippers for Montreal's gold-headed cane is headline news in Canada's largest city, Canadian and foreign captains vie for the cane, awarded annually by the city to the man who brings his ship in first each April.

Whimsical Guy

In Old Hickory, Tenn., a motorist stopped at a red light in the middle of the night, could not go forward because of icy roads when it turned green, left his car, walked home, got his pistol, returned and shot out the signal light.

Rights and Responsibilities

"In a democracy, society must recognize that the individual has rights which are guaranteed, and the individual must recognize that he has responsibilities which are not to be evaded."—Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase.

Viet Nam Rugged

Aside from the Red and Mekong river deltas, and narrow strips of plain along the central, or Annam, coast, Viet Nam is ruggedly mountainous, with some of the hills exceeding 8,000 feet.

High Waisted Girdle

The season's dresses call for a small waist, very much nipped in. The proper foundation, even though you're slender, calls for a high-waisted girdle, one which extends above the natural waist-line.

Gentlemen Prefer Blue

According to statisticians, surveys show that men have a preference for cool colors over warm ones. Blue is first choice in about 45 percent of all instances, with red and purple following—about equal in preference. Green, yellow and orange are next in line.

Nickel Entertains

Essential elements of tubes of radio and television sets are made from nickel. Technicolor movies are dependent to a large extent upon this metal since nickel alloys are essential in the special machinery used in developing and transferring the film.

Once Ornamental

The beautiful foxglove found growing in the forests and along the roadsides throughout the Douglas fir region was originally brought to America as an ornamental flower and has since escaped from cultivation and thrived in the wilds.

Half and Half

In a peak new-building year, the average lumber and building material dealer's sales volume usually divides equally 50% from new construction and 50% from remodeling, maintenance and over-the-counter sales.

Cotton Is New Money Crop in California

Cotton, a comparative newcomer to west coast agriculture, has become California's biggest money crop, surpassing even grapes and citrus fruits.

A recent survey, says the National Geographic Society, estimates the value of California's 1951 yield of 1,770,000 bales of cotton at $425,000,000.

The California crop was second only to Texas production of some 4,100,000 bales last year. But it was produced on 1,290,000 acres, as compared to 11,800,000 acres devoted to cotton in the Lone Star state. Even with this high yield, averaging 657 pounds per acre, California was second to Arizona in production per acre, Arizona averaging 740 pounds.

The large crops per acre in Arizona and California are achieved by irrigation, which supplies the right amount of water to rich cotton lands at just the right time, plus careful cultivation and scientific farming generally.

Mississippi, a traditional cotton state, produced 1,620,000 bales last year, ranking third, behind Texas and California. Close behind was Arkansas, with 1,255,000 bales.

'Watermelon Bank' Set Up To Aid Leukemia Victims

Two Little Rock business executives operate a "Watermelon Bank" for sufferers of two rare diseases. Watermelon juice is supplied free of charge for victims of leukemia (cancer of the blood) and nephritis (a kidney ailment).

It is not for sale. The bank keeps a stock of frozen watermelon juice on hand—just like a blood bank stores away blood plasma for emergencies.

The Watermelon Bank was conceived in 1949. Watermelon was sought for a Knoxville, Tenn., girl who had nephritis.

American Airlines at Knoxville messaged its offices at San Antonio in hopes of finding a melon. The airline office in Little Rock intercepted the message and found some frozen watermelon balls in the home freezer of one of its employees. They were flown to Knoxville.

From that experience the two business executives got the idea of the Watermelon Bank. The first year 150 quarts were gone before they got started good. Last year they put up 400 quarts.

Atomic Skeleton Keys

Skeleton keys of science made to order by America's atomic locksmiths are opening doors to new knowledge in many parts of the free world. These new keys are so-called isotopes, eccentric cousins of the ordinary elements of the earth. Some are radioactive, spitting energy as powerful radiation. Others are stable variants of the natural elements, important tools in nuclear research. Isotopes constitute the first major peacetime payoff of the ten-year-old atomic energy program. From Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Tennessee, center of U.S. isotope preparation and distribution, lead-lined containers and cotton-padded bottles carry these magic research tools to steaming jungles in Africa, to roaring mills in Pittsburgh and Detroit, and to quiet laboratories in scores of universities near and abroad. Since August, 1946, more than 22,000 shipments have been made.

Flatiron Still Popular

One of the oldest ironworks in the country still is turning out flatirons for faraway places. A Pennsylvania firm, it was founded in the early 1700s and the blacksmith shop that is still used as one of the original buildings. Until 1929 its principal product was the old-fashioned iron that is heated on top of the stove. But orders still abound for irons from women who live in parts of the country where there is no electrical supply, and from many foreign countries. A boon to the flat-iron business has been a recent fad to use the irons for doorstops, bookends, and desk ornaments. One warehouse was emptied recently to fill orders from gift shops in New York and other cities. There the irons are painted black and decorated with Pennsylvania-Dutch symbols.

Pipes Betray 'Em

A Canadian chaplain asserts that he can tell a man's character by the kind of pipe he chooses. He said he made these observations while distributing 200 pipes to a battalion of Canadian troops: The aggressive and the quiet soldier prefer the "bulldog" or short and stubby pipe. The humorous character seems to favor the curly-stemmed pipe. The serious, bookish type picks the long, thin stem with small bowl. The shrewd infantryman chooses a large-bowl pipe because it will make a fine borrowing pipe.

Conventions

Chicago is far ahead as host to political conventions. Of the 50 whoop-it-up gatherings, 21 have convened in centrally situated Chicago. That is as many as were welcomed by the next six cities combined. Philadelphia had seven, St. Louis five, Cincinnati three, Baltimore, Cleveland, New York, and Kansas City have each staged two. Six other cities have had a single turn with a convention.

THOUGHTS FROM THE PEN OF OTHERS

"The proper study of mankind is man." —Alexander Pope

"There are chords in the hearts of the most reckless which cannot be touched without emotion." —Edgar Allan Poe.

"And the night shall be filled with music,"

And the cares that infest the day,
Shall fold their tents, like the Arabs,
And as silently steal away." —Henry W. Longfellow

"Tis as easy now for the heart to be true

As for grass to be green or skies to be blue,"

"Tis the natural way of living." —James Russell Lowell

"For of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these: 'It might have been.'" —John Greenleaf Whittier

"But you don't find feelings in written words unless there were feelings in the man who used them." —Charles Anderson Dana

"I'm Nobody! Who are you?
Are you nobody, too?
Then there's a pair of us—don't tell!
They'd banish us, you know."

How dreary to be somebody!
How public, like a frog
To tell your name the livelong day
To an admiring bog!" —Emily Dickinson

Nobility of character manifests itself at loopholes when it is not provided with large doors." —Mary E. Wilkins Freeman

NEW TELEPHONE DIRECTORY

The new 1952 telephone directory for Carroll County is being delivered week of Aug. 4 according to an announcement by C. L. Stem, local manager for The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company.

According to Stem, 11,272 copies of the directory were printed with the familiar cover showing the spirit of communication on a green background. There have been about 3,500 changes in the listings since the previous issue, he said, and about 600 additions. For the first time there is a yellow band on the cover calling attention to the yellow pages of the directory.

Referring to the continued expansion in the county telephone system, Stem said, "Telephones in Maryland have now reached 731,000 and growth is still going ahead at a rapid pace with demand for service in Maryland continuing at a high level."

The number of telephones served by the new Carroll County directory has increased over 530 in the past year, it was said. How this increases the value of the service to each customer was explained by citing growth figures for the Taneytown exchange where the number of telephones has nearly doubled since 1945. "This means", Stem said, "that each Taneytown customer has twice as many telephones in his exchange which he may call or receive calls from."

Stem emphasized that since there have been so many changes in telephone listings since the last issue of the directory, it would be wise for customers to verify all numbers before calling and recommend that personal telephone number lists be checked against the new directory. Calling by number helps to get faster service, he said.

EESERSBURG

There is a term used by teen-agers today that has its counterpart in the language of teen-agers twenty-five years ago. The term used today is: "You are chicken", twenty-five years ago it was: "You are yellow." Both phrases have the same meaning, although, the emphasis was somewhat different twenty-five years ago. Today, the term, "You are chicken" is eggging teenagers on to commit horrible crimes, while the term 25 years ago of "You are yellow" was used in the extreme to urge one to try a drink of bath tub gin or to become a recruit in the army of free love. A person using "You are chicken" to encourage another to do something against the law to prove his courage, is himself a coward of the worst stripe. And the person falling for this body trap is also a coward but for a different reason. Every person is vulnerable to this sort of bait through his ego. Each of us want to feel important in the eyes of others, but for different reasons. Each of us crave attention to one degree or another. Some satisfy this craving through natural and desirable means, while others resort to the spectacular and often to the criminal. To allow one's self to be persuaded by the term "chicken" to do something one knows is morally wrong is being a moral coward while trying to prove one is physically brave. Think a long time before you place yourself in a dangerous position by falling for the bait "you are chicken." The bravest person in the world is one that stands upon his moral principles, for he generally must stand alone. Driving one's car at 90 miles an hour, shooting a stranger in the back, or robbing a house for fun isn't courage in any form—it is just playing the role of fool. The opinion of one's friends may be important but the opinion of oneself is far more important. One must live with one's self 24 hours of each day. Psychiatrists know that most of the neurotics today are the people who have a very low rating of themselves. Be "chicken" to the crowd if you must but be a moral hero to yourself. That takes real courage.

For the past three weeks there were two things one couldn't escape. They were heat and politics. The heat is still with us, but with the ending of the Democratic convention, we will get a small respite from politics until the campaign for elections in November begin in earnest. If what we heard at the Republican and Democratic conventions is any sample of what is in store for us then we are indeed in for a long series of moth eaten, warmed over and time killing speeches from both political parties. Fifty million Americans watched the convention over T.V. and by now there are 50 million wires, though sadder Americans. For the first time many Americans understand how presidents are nominated and just how small a voice the voter has in helping select the nominees. Sometimes the spectacle known as the convention was colorful, interesting and some time even dignified, but generally it was a picture of supposedly mature men & women acting like children at a carnival. Somehow in spite of all the confusion, double dealing and horse-trading, two able dealing and horse-trading, two outstanding men were selected for the presidency. In both conventions, the south was still fighting the Civil War and the North still didn't have sense enough to let the south secede. Both conventions lacked humor and it must be taken as a sign that these are serious times, although I can remember 20 years ago when F. D. R. was elected for the first time that those were serious times too; but he could always laugh, which in this reporters opinion was a very good thing for the American people. Laughter is often the cure for many a neurotic tendency. Another thing T. V. showed the American voter was that to be a good and bright politician one must descend from a family of sharp horse-traders. Since the horse is practically extinct, the next generation of politicians will have to cut its teeth on a flying saucer.

The Bay bridge was formally opened to traffic on Wednesday. This will link the Eastern and Western parts of Maryland and open a new route to the South. Contrary to many people's idea the bridge was not built with money from the sales tax. It was financed by State bonds and is a self-liquidating project. By toll charges the state bonds will be paid off in a certain number of years. It is important that the people of Maryland understand this.

Dominion Over Circumstances

NO one need be the victim of circumstances. Circumstances are our servants. They provide us with opportunities — opportunities for expressing God, for manifesting, as His reflection, wisdom, faithfulness, love, understanding, dominion.

Christ Jesus had neither wealth, backing, nor influence, but he had complete self-dominion over whatever circumstances confronted him. He lived his life under the law of God, the law of spiritual peace, life, and love. His understanding of divine law and obedience to it annulled for him all illusory material laws.

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes in its textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 14): "Entirely separate from the belief and dream of material living, is the Life divine, revealing spiritual understanding and the consciousness of man's dominion over the whole earth. This understanding casts out error and heals the sick, and with it you can speak 'as one having authority.'"

It is not necessary to withdraw from humanity in order to gain spiritual understanding. In fact, the crucial test of our spiritual understanding lies in how we apply it in our day to day dealings with our fellow men. Many accounts in the Bible illustrate this.

Joseph, for example, appeared to have very little control over the events in his life. Hated by his brothers, sold into slavery, cast unjustly into prison, forgotten by those whom he had aided, he yet assumed dominion over his circumstances and turned them to spiritual advantage. He lived his life according to "the Life divine" and not according to "the belief and dream of material living."

Material circumstances would have told Joseph that his state as a slave in Egypt was one of inferiority and helplessness, but his spiritual integrity told him that he was under God's rule, and that obedience to God prevails against the injustices of mortal decrees. Conscious of God's presence, he reflected the spiritual qualities of friendliness, faithfulness, and brotherliness. These brought him favor and dominion. When a slave, he was made overseer of his master's household; when a prisoner, he had committed to him the welfare of the other prisoners; and, as time went on, his spiritual vision so impressed Pharaoh that he made him second only to himself in all Egypt.

Resentment, self-pity, a helpless magnifying of misfortune — these are all part of "the belief and dream of material living." Joseph had no time for them. His faithfulness to God kept him under the protection and governance of divine law, so that he was able truthfully to tell his brothers (Genesis 45:8): "It was not you that sent me hither, but God; and he hath made me a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house, and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt."

Under the law of God, Jesus had been able to pass safely through crowds seeking his destruction and go on his way, but for humanity's sake he allowed himself to be crucified. On the threshold of this experience he prayed (John 17:1): "Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee." He stressed not the terror but the opportunity, not the gloom but the glory. He was not the victim of crucifixion; he was the victor over death for all time.

We can go forth daily not to fight circumstances, but to meet angels. We can place ourselves, our families, our careers, under the law of God. Humbly and confidently we can assume the mastery over circumstances, search for and find their blessing, and progressively demonstrate the liberty of the children of God. —The Christian Science Monitor.

Birds Are Gluttons During their period of maximum growth young birds consume more than their own weight in food each day. If a young boy ate like that, he could put away two or three lambs or a whole calf in a day.

Constantine, The Great Although the great emperor, Constantine, professed to be a Christian and supported the Christian movement, pagan beliefs apparently had a strong hold on him until the day he died.

One Can Live "Equipped with the antitoxin of laughter, one can live even in a standardized society without being too impressed by its standards."—Irwin Edman.

Only Man Can Smile "Nothing on earth can smile but man. It is a light in the window of the face, by which the heart signifies it is at home."—Henry Ward Beecher.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Proverbs 3:1-12

Consecrated Genius

Lesson for August 3, 1952

ONCE IN A WHILE men are born who have more careers than one. Thomas Jefferson was architect, educator, lawyer, writer, executive; Samuel F. B. Morse was a painter and also the inventor of the telegraph; Theodore Roosevelt was a man so many-sided that some one has written an amusing article showing that several thousands of years from now, scholars might easily conclude that T. Roosevelt was not one man but several different men with the same name.

Dr. Foreman

Many-Sided Man

SAMUEL WAS ONE of the these many-sided men. We call him Samuel the prophet, but we could just as well call him judge, priest, preacher, general writer and king-maker.

He was a prophet, for the people who knew him turned to him when they wanted to know what God thought. We can call him a preacher, for we know of one very successful revival which he conducted (I Sam. 7). He was also what we call a circuit judge, going from town to town to hold court. He was a successful general, for we know he not only advised military leaders but took the lead in raising an army himself and directing it in a successful campaign.

He was a priest, not only in a formal way, offering sacrifices at various places; but he also once said a memorable thing which marks him as a priest in the truest sense: "Ye have done all this wickedness, yet... God forbid that I should sin against you in ceasing to pray for you." (Chap. 12.)

He was a writer, for though he could not have written both books that bear his name, he did write "the manner of the Kingdom"—perhaps a kind of constitution. And next week's study will show him as a king-maker.

No Dictator

THE MANY-SIDED MAN, the man of many talents, always has one great temptation: to be a dictator. It isn't bad people who become dictators; it isn't the weak; it is the strong and able.

A very able president, for instance, will take it on himself to run the State department and any other departments that specially interest him; in a small town a many-sided man may be superintendent of the mill, chairman of the school board, chief deacon in the church, superintendent of the Sunday school, major and postmaster besides.

It is not alone in public that the dictator flourishes. Sometimes in a home the father, or the mother, will be so energetic and brainy that he (or she) finds it much easier to do things than to wait for the children to do them, or to teach the children how it is done.

Now the prophet Samuel, who towered high above the average man of his country, must have been tempted to be a dictator.

Samuel perhaps could have done it all, but he knew when to retire from the foreground.

Public Spirit

SAMUEL himself is a model for all the many-gifted men who reach and deserve positions of power. He never milked the people for his own benefit; he never used public office for private gain. (With one sad exception; he kept his worthless sons on the public payroll.) He was a man of true public spirit.

This means two things, and Samuel had them both. One is a wide vision; being able to see all sides of a question, and to see not only his own advantage, but how decisions and policies affect all kinds of persons.

Most politicians will have at heart the interests of their own little bailiwick; how many have the interests of the nation at heart?

Public spirit means wide vision, it means a wide concern, not only seeing but caring. In an election year, when politicians are clamoring at us from all sides, we may well inquire about every candidate: Does this man have any resemblance to God's man Samuel? Does he have a sense of responsibility to God? Does he have a wide vision, a wide concern? Whose side is he on? Is he out for himself, or for God and the whole people?

Some Species of Birds Have Baby-Sitters Care for Young

Humans are not the only ones that use baby-sitters so the parents of the young may go gallivanting on other activities. Certain species of birds do the same things.

One of the most elaborate systems for caring for the young has been evolved by the Adeline penguins which nest in various islands of the Antarctic.

These birds make their nests in scoops in the soil, lining them with stones, and there lay and incubate their two eggs per hen. The sexes alternate in their care of the eggs and of the young in their early stages.

But when the young are partly grown the family unit breaks up for a communistic type of social organization. The young are then grouped into bands of 20 or more and are left under the care of a few old birds while the rest of the adults go to the water, which may be some distance away.

Periodically they return with food for the young. Apparently an individual is not recognized. The parent goes to the particular group of which its young make a part and there may feed any one of the 'child group.'

Mysterious Forces Raise Great Lakes Water Level

America's five inland seas are brimming over.

Born of the melting Ice Age, the Great Lakes contain half the fresh water on earth. Behind the hard-rock sills of Niagara Falls and the "Soo", lying in huge stair-stepped basins, is enough water to cover the continental United States 10 to 18 feet deep.

Levels of the Great Lakes fluctuate from year to year, month to month, day to day. In the last year, the lakes have risen to more than four feet above normal.

Yet experts say that all the works of man on the Great Lakes—dams and canals, dikes and dredging—have affected water levels only a matter of a few inches over the last century.

One of the strange things of the Great Lakes area is that around the deep-cradled water the earth's surface is gradually tilting. Over long centuries, north and east of the lakes, the land is lifting, recovering very slowly from a massive dimple pressed into the earth by the crushing weight of the great ice cap. South and west of the lakes, the earth is sinking. Shorelines of all the lakes are slowly changing.

New Heat Pump

A heat pump has been designed that will keep homes comfortable throughout the year—warm in winter and cool in summer—without burning any fuel but the electricity required to run its fan and compressor drives. It operates on the principle that even on cold winter days there is always some heat in the air. The pump extracts heat from the air by means of a refrigerant. The refrigerant is run through a compressor that raises its temperature until it is hot to touch. Then the hot refrigerant is run through coils over which a stream of air is circulated, heating the house. In the summertime the heat cycle is reversed to pick up indoor heat and disperse it outside. There has been no indication of how soon the system will be perfected to the stage where it can be applied on a mass production scale.

Diamine Penicillin

Diamine penicillin, the new penicillin developed specifically for poultry, produced the highest growth gains in a series of comparative tests conducted at Washington State College. Scientists reported that broad-breasted turkey poult fed diamine penicillin showed weight increases ranging from 25 to 46 per cent over birds in the control group. Birds used in the experiment were divided into equal groups, with each group fed a drug-fortified diet matched by another group fed an identical ration, but without any drug. Second to diamine penicillin came procaine penicillin, which produced increases of from 13 to 37 per cent. Third was bacitracin, with gains varying from 19 to 22 per cent over the controls.

Pension Plans

More than 3,250,000 workers are now covered by the 12,260 insured pension plans in force in the United States, largely the product of the years since 1940. Eventual retirement income to be provided by these plans is at least $1,125,000,000 annually, with large additions being made each year. In 1940, insured pension plans numbered only 1,530 workers. The number of plans had grown to 6,700 by 1945 and the persons covered to 1,515,000.

New Hormone

A new sex hormone which makes possible doubling the annual lamb crop in the United States and has proven highly successful in treating sterility in cattle, swine and other domestic animals has been developed by chemists. Dr. J. L. Davidson identified the hormone as ECP. It is known technically as estradiol cyclopentylpropionate. He added that the hormone has been tested at 33 agricultural colleges, state experiment stations, and by 36 veterinary practitioners.

SHORT STORY

Old Love

By R. H. WILKINSON

"If you are losing affection of the man you love, pretend indifference," confidently wrote one authority.

Helen laughed bitterly. That looked well in print. But how about a woman who had been married to a man for 10 years and loved him now even more than the day of their wedding? How about it when you try and try to make yourself interesting to your husband, knowing all the time that you're playing a losing game because grey streaks are showing in your hair and inevitable lines are appearing in your face?

From her bedroom window Helen could see beneath the trees that surrounded the lodge, down as far as the lake. And suddenly she stiffened! Roger was coming up the path, carrying a canoe paddle and laughing down at a slim girl by his side.

The lines about Helen's mouth hardened. The girl, she knew, was Sally Burton. She was staying at the lodge with her folks.

Watching the carefree progress of the couple coming up the path, she said aloud: "How can I stop it, before it's too late. How can I combat youth?" There wasn't any answer even in the story books to that one.

Five minutes later Roger came into the room. At 34 he had lost none of his good looks, nor his boyishness and eagerness of manner.

"Hi there, kiddo! Say, look! We're planning a picnic up at Birch Island tonight. Two canoes of us are going. There'll be a moon and we'll cook steaks. How about it?"

"I'm sorry, Roger," she said, "I've a dreadful headache."

Helen's blood froze. He acted almost as if he hoped she'd refuse, yet was resigned to having her with him.

"I'm sorry, Roger. I've a dreadful headache. You run along with the others and let me stay here and rest."

"Do you mind if I do go?" he said. "It's the sort of thing I like doing, you know."

"Of course not, darling. Now if you don't mind—I'd like to go to bed."

NOT until the sound of picnickers had died away around a bend in the lake did Helen give way to her emotions.

"He wasn't even concerned about my headache... He was thinking only of the chance to be alone with Sally Burton... Oh, what's the use? What's the use of trying to cling to something you know you've lost?"

How long Helen lay there she had no way of knowing. She must have slept, for when she opened her eyes it was to have them blinded by lightning. Sharp, deafening thunder followed. Rain lashed against the building.

Terror seized her. Ever since she had been a child she had been afraid in electric storms. By now, even greater than this instinctive fear, was fear for Roger.

She slipped from bed and ran to the window. A flash of lightning showed her the lake in a wild turmoil. She thought of the two frail canoes that had left earlier in the evening. She thought of Roger and Sally Burton...

A sound at the door brought her head around sharply. The room was suddenly flooded with light.

"Roger!"

He stood just inside the door, dripping wet.

"Hi, kiddo."

"Roger—you didn't—not in this storm—?"

He nodded. "The others are safe—at Bailey's camp. They decided not to risk the storm." He came toward her, placed a hand on either of her shoulders. "I—knew you were always afraid of thunder storms, and—and it was the first time you'd ever refused to go any place with me. It made me wonder."

Helen knew she was trembling. Even though she wanted she could not have stopped herself from asking the next question.

"And—what of Sally?"

He stared at her blankly, surprised, puzzled. How should I know? She wasn't with our bunch."

"Not with—?" Helen broke off abruptly, feeling suddenly very foolish. Then Roger's arms slipped about her, and the old familiar sense of security swept over her as he held her close.

"There's no answer to this," she whispered half to herself. "No answer at all—except real love."

First Submarine Wooden Barrel, Coopers Declare

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A wooden barrel nearly changed the course of the American Revolution.

Researchers at a distillery company coopeage plant here, who have gathered one of the world's largest libraries on the subject of coopeage, tell of an incident on September 7, 1776. George Washington and his troops had just suffered a decisive defeat in the Battle of Long Island and had withdrawn from Brooklyn to Manhattan. New York harbor was jammed with British shipping.

First Submarine

At this point David Bushnell, a cooper, came forward with an ingenious device. It was the world's first submarine, and it was fashioned from nothing more than a coopered wooden barrel. Aply named the "Turtle," it had rounded ends and oak staves bound together with iron hoops. Two water-ballast tanks were provided to allow the submarine to submerge and two detachable weights on the hull permitted surfacing. Three hand-cranked propellers were used for vertical and horizontal movement.

Bushnell was many years ahead of his time in inventive genius, and he had incorporated many important firsts in his submarine: first depth gauge, first screw propulsion, first luminous dial, first water-ballast tanks, first delayed-action bomb, and the first underwater firing device.

Attached to the outside of the barrel was a smaller keg containing 130 pounds of gunpowder and a flintlock worked by a timer. A crank inside the submarine operated a large screw projecting from the lid of this smaller barrel.

In theory the "Turtle" would work its way under a British warship and the screw on the powder keg would be thrust into the ship's bottom. Once the keg had been securely attached to the target, the submarine would cast off and make its escape. The timing device exploded the bomb 30 minutes later.

Plan Failed

The "Turtle" made its combat debut on the night of September 7, 1776, with a one-man crew—Sgt. Ezra Lee. Guiding himself by compass and cranking away with patriotic fervor, Lee headed for the British fleet. He failed to reckon with the strong tides, however, and when he finally surfaced for a quick look around, he found himself many miles down New York bay.

Patiently Lee cranked his way back to the target. Then he made a second mistake. The British ship he chose to sink had a metal bottom! After several attempts to screw the magazine into the metal, he gave up and headed for home.

A month later, a second attempt was made. Not trusting Lee's navigation, the Americans loaded the "Turtle" aboard the sloop "Nancy" to carry it in close to the British ships. Disaster again struck. The tides carried the "Nancy" too close to the alert British guns and a lucky shot sank her. She carried the world's first submarine with her to the bottom of New York harbor.

Bees Need Not Sing 'Show Me Way Home'

What is polarized light and how do bees use it to find their way home? Ordinary light consists of vibrations from side to side, up and down, and in other directions as well. By passing it through a polarizing screen (such as a polaroid filter) only the vibrations in one particular direction pass through. Such light is said to be polarized.

As sunlight passes through the atmosphere high overhead air molecules scatter some of its rays, particularly those of blue light, thus giving the sky its blue color. Such scattered light is partly polarized, principally in a line at right angles to the direction of the sun.

Experiments made by an Austrian scientist named von Frisch indicate that bees can detect polarized light. By observing patches of blue sky, they may thus be able to tell the sun's direction, and so orient themselves.

The national bureau of standards has developed a compass, for aircraft use, which determines the polarization of sky light, and so gives the direction of the sun, even though it may be below the horizon.

Pup Eats Poisoned Rat, Glass; Bathed in Washer

HOUSTON, Texas—Tony, three-month-old bulldog rat terrier, leads a charmed life.

First he ate half of a poisoned rat before his owner, Mrs. Roy Willette, spotted him and took him to have his stomach pumped out.

The next day he ate some glass while licking milk out of a broken milk bottle. Back he went to the veterinary again.

The next day, when his three-year-old master, Roy, jr., decided to give Tony a bath, the family's automatic washer was the youngster's first thought.

By the time Mrs. Willette rescued him from the washer, Tony was clean but limp. It took artificial respiration to revive him.

WITH OUR MEN IN THE ARMED FORCES

Cpl. Frank A. Sealover, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sealover, Route 1, Westminster, Md., recently returned to the 7th Infantry Division in Korea after a five-day rest and recuperation leave in Japan.

The leave is part of the Army's policy of giving combat soldiers a rest from the rigors of front line duty periodically. While in Japan, he stayed in one of the best Japanese hotels and enjoyed many luxuries unobtainable in Korea.

Sealover is serving in Company F of the 21st Infantry Regiment.

In civilian life he was employed by the Brook Transportation Co.

DON'T QUIT

By Nola Burr

When things go wrong, as they sometimes will; When the road you are trudging seems all up-hill; When the funds are low and the debts are high; And you want to smile but you have to sigh; When care is pressing you down a bit, Rest, if you must—but DON'T YOU QUIT.

GLIMPSE OF GEORGE WASHINGTON PROVIDES REFRESHING INTERLUDE

(Continued from First Page) light baggage wagon and two horses—four saddle horses and besides a led one for myself—and five, to-wit: my Valet de Chambre, two footmen, coachman and postillion.

It is related of his visit to Taneytown: "Washington and Martha were guests of the Inn. As illustrating the simplicity of their habits, their unaffected manners, or freedom from ostentation, it is related of the former that on being asked what he would have for his supper, he replied 'mush and milk'; and of the latter that, finding some leisure time on her hands during her stay at the tavern, she drew from her pocket, or reticule, an unfinished stocking, and began to knit."

Even as we have had many kinds of President, so we have had a variety of "first Ladies"; and Martha Washington set a pleasant example: "She loved home life and was a natural entertainer. While she always dressed well, as became her station, she always readily adapted herself to her. She had, however, a strong dislike to public life, ostentatious official and social functions and the display often attaching to authority."

It is related that when, at Morris-town, N. J., in 1777 some of the ladies "donned their 'best bibs and bands' to call on her," they "found her knitting, with a check apron on."

Rather modest folks, George and Martha. Yet there was "baby-kissing" for candidates and Presidents even in those days. It was a Taneytown boy, Abram Thompson, who has handed down the story of "thirteen young girls, dressed in white, representing the thirteen original states of the Union," who called on him "and were kissed each in the General's arms and taken each in the General's arms and children thus honored, the maternal aunt of the writer" (Mr. Thompson) "was proud to felicitate herself during her life."

I like that local Taneytown story of the first President.

Many a text has been drawn from his career and character; this could offer one: "Washington's early education was very meager, comprising largely only an elementary knowledge of reading, writing, geography and a somewhat general knowledge of arithmetic. He made a special study of surveying, and was tutored to some extent by an English clergyman. Later he entered the school of Rev. James Maryl, at Fredericksburg, and early became a reading man who reflected on his reading, thereby growing intellectually as in every other way."

The text is in the last sentence: He "became a reading man." He not only read, but he "reflected on" his reading. It is a reasonable idea that children should be taught "how to read" early. Not just gable words, but get all the nourishment that reading can offer.

The career of Washington shows that he knew "how to read." English courses in college train young men and young women in reading—but it could be begun in grammar school. It was likely enough his reading which gave him his breadth of religious understanding. Says by Taneytown primer: "Washington was christened according to the rites of the English church (Episcopal) though he did not confine his religion to any one denomination.—Whiting's Column in the Boston Sunday Herald.

PLANNING AGENCIES PUBLISH GUIDE TO ZONING

The Southern Association of State Planning and Development Agencies has published "A Guide to Zoning for small towns" specifically designed to aid towns which wish to plan orderly future growth. The publication discusses the part zoning plays in sound city development, and suggests a short form of zoning ordinance adapted to the needs of most southern cities with a population of 10,000 or less. It points out the advantages of carefully planned zoning, lists the important parts of a zoning ordinance, and explains the procedure for enacting and administering zoning ordinances. The guide was prepared by the Committee of Uniform Manuals, which consists of Margaret Carroll of the Tennessee State Planning Commission, Charles P. Clayton of the Federal Housing Administration, Kennon Francis of the Alabama State Planning Board and Aelred J. Gray, Chairman, Tennessee Valley Authority. The Maryland State Planning Commission has a limited number of copies of the Guide available for distribution.
