P NEW YEAR! Y To all my dear readers and many, many more first in health which means happiness and what more could you wish for, This past week I was pleasantly surprised with a telegram from the president of the B & O (the way M. Shriver, Chinquapin Hill, Union Mills.The members assembled early to enjoy a Christmas dessert of plum pudding preceeding the meeting. This and the gala basket of Christmas gifts brought by the members and guests added a festive note to the afternoon. The gifts will be sent to Crossmore Approved School in Cross-more. N. C., for their Christmas parpresident of the B & O (the way Your Observer always tells you to travel) inviting me to the Baltimore and Ohio's famous "Holly Tree By The Tracks" lighting. Although we are not so far from Jackson, Md., nevertheless I was glad to go with the crowd on the B & O train leav-ing from Baltimore (that grand Mt. Roval station). I was seated in the Royal station). I was seated in the train with the president and other executives of the B & O and truly, it was just like a big happy family. The vice-president came to me, pre-senting me with a sprig of that fam-ous tree which others were wearing. The magnificent tree is 55 feet tall and it is truly loaded with berries. It is one of the largest holly trees in the world. It stands on the main line between Washington and New York on the land owned by the railroad. The tree is beautifully decorated and it was just like a big happy family. Flag. Minutes of the November meet-ing and the treasurer's report were read by the secretary. Mrs. Frank T. Parish. Mrs. Frank B. Hurt present-ed an article for National Defense en-titled, "Where are Our Wise Men"? Mr. Seymour Howard of Baltimore has presented to the chapter, four pieces of furniture, a sofa and three chairs. They were originally owned by the late William Winchester, de-ceased 1923, who was a descendant of The tree is beautifully decorated and by the late William Winchester, de-ceased 1923, who was a descendant of William Winchester the founder of Westminster. The members voted to loan these pieces to the Carroll Coun-ty Historical Society to be placed in the society headquarters on East Main Street if the loan is approved this was the ninth year for the pres-ident of the B & O to pull the switch which lights up the tree. On the train, there were two little boys who were unusually interested as to the train and the young par-ents said to me, "This is the first time our boys have ever ridden in a train!" Such enthusiasm! Betcha those kids won't want to go on any vacation in the family car any more from all I witnessed.

Everyone was so full of fun and laughter and most friendly that one would have thought it really was a big 'family affair'. The crowd they say was larger than other years desay was larger than other years de-spite the rain. No one seemed to mind the wet weather at all as all came well prepared with umbrellas, warm extra clothing and galoshes and some blankets over shoulders.

Annually, the members of the Balti-more and Ohio Women's Music Club and Glee Club with thousands of visitors gather at the tree two weeks before Christmas to sing carols, marking the first lighting of the tree for the season. It is truly something to remember especially for the trav-eling individuals as they gaze upon this tree from the windows of the B & O at which time the train slows down to get a full view. Returning to the trains, there was

THE NEW YEAR 1957

Firecrackers once chased the old year away, But now we celebrate in a different way, Just so things have been since the year of 1; But, a new era, they tell us, has begun.

That is how they all did in days of old To welcome the New Year and get rid of the old; But, some of the years in the past they say Brought the people more peace in every way.

War clouds now darken both sea and land; But, America has a Leader, men don't understand, The same voice which said to the waves, Be still Shall speak; and we all shall obey His will.

The Bible calls Jesus the "Prince of Peace"; He even had power to make the elements cease, God made Him Ruler over land and sea; So, He watches closely the "Land of the Free."

All who dwell here are lovers of peace; And, destructive weapons, are slow to release; But our soldiers are trained; and, know what to do, When arbitration fails to go through.

Our wonderful people, all over the land, Now extend to Hungary a welcome hand; God has seen to it that they shall be fed, For, by Him, to this country they are being led.

On no other spot do you see the faces Of people of so many different races; A modern "Tower of Babble" she seems to be; For, unto her all peoples, yearly flee.

Some come here to get rich and be free; But, that is not the only reason they flee; In this great El Dorado they are taught to know How to serve God, and the right way to go.

Long before America was settled God made her fair To attract the disconsolate everywhere; He made her rich; and, from famine free, So that all who come here contented may be.

To America, people came from all over the earth.

They come here to live and to get rebirth; So, on no other spot do you see the faces Of the people of so many different races.

God sends them all here to learn of His plan; Here they are taught the brotherhood of man, Only last week we saw how things shall be At the time of the end in Eternity.

God never picks a weakling to do His work, they say, That is why our country grows stronger each day, The Light of the world God intends it shall be Both now and through all eternity.

So, in the New Year to come, let us all take a hand In making our country a fairy land; For that is what God intends it shall be At the time of the end; and through all eternity.

America is a land of opportunity, they say Because God intends it shall be that way; So, let us cease wondering; and know that He Made her just what she is a Land of the Free.

REYNOLDSVILLE, PA., STAR: "There will always be the need for lobor organizations. And more so, there will be the need for the assumption of economic responsibilities by the heads of labor.'

GAS CITY, IND., MARION OB-SERVER: "The wages of American workers are at an all-time highmeasured both by the total national American workers get more of the good things of life, in return for less labor, than do the workers of any other country. Never in history and nowhere else on earth have the financial fruits of enterprise been so widely or so fairly shared as in this country. And the capitalist system has done it."

BROOKNEAL, VA., UNION STAR: "President William Pollock of the Textile Workers Union complained just the other day that his union 'can't organize the South without government help. Under the Wagner Act we got it. Now we don't" . . That explains pretty clearly why the unions don't like the Taft-Hartley law or the labor policies of the present Administration. They don't want a neutral Government. They are satisfied with nothing but having the full power of Government to compel people to do what the unions want them to do."

A N ELEGANT DESSERT FOR A HOLIDAY BUFFET is this Date Cream Roll—a delectable concoction made with whipped cream, marshmallows, honey, dates, nutmeats and crisp oven-toasted rice cereal. But for all of its elegance, this dessert has a practical appeal for the busy hostess since it can be made ahead of time and chilled in the refrigerator until needed. When ready to serve, slice and top with whipped cream.

DATE CREAM ROLL

1½ cups whipping cream 8 marshmallows ¹/₄ cup honey

1/2 cup chopped dates 1/4 cup chopped nutmeats 3½ cups Rice Krispies

Whip 1 cup of cream until stiff. Cut marshmallows into small pieces. Fold marshmallows, honey, dates and nutmeats into whipped cream. Crush Rice Krispies into fine crumbs. Add 1 cup crumbs to cream mixture; blend well. Spread remaining crumbs evenly on a piece of waxed paper and place cream mixture on top. Mold into roll, coating with crumbs. Wrap in wax paper; chill for several hours. Slice and serve garnished with remaining cream, whipped. This recipe makes 10 servings. This is a special cipe from the kitchens of the Kellogg Co. of Battle Creek, Mich.

We dared brave a man's barber shop with our husband the day before Christmas and heard some interesting conversation. You know how men are supposed to talk about things unrelated to education under the influence of the soothing effect of the barber's clippers and scissors. Surprisingly enough the talk was about religion, Christmas, the Hungarians and how too much hard work without a vacation makes a man dull and despondent. Also a ten year old boy confided to me that he had never believed in Santa Claus. Said he "I was too smart." What kind of magazines did I find in the shop? You guessed it right—Time, Life and a Lutheran church paper. Calendars? Yes, naughty but cute.

Christmas cards get more lovely each year and we wonder how the artists and poets get the inspiration since the cards are made up in July, a month as unrelated to the Christmas season as an apple is to an orange.

Three groups of people who impressed us very much this holiday season for their friendliness, courtesy and service were the clerks in the stores, all the post-office personnel and the drivers of delivery trucks. Never can we remember when these people were ever more kind and considerate as they were this year. It was indeed a pleasure to shop in Carroll and we are glad we didn't step outside the county to do our buying.

The best Christmas present people received in Carroll was the beautiful sunny day after two weeks of dreary soggy weather when even the birds got tired of rain and fog.

One decoration that never loses its charm and fascination among the young is the mistletoe. The story and tradition about the plant is very old yet always new to each generation. Television as usual has over-done the theme of the holiday and furthermore we do not care for the Madison Avenue touch. One of the most repulsive advertisements of TV was combining the sales pitch for a poplearn that there are some things no salesman has a right to use? But there were two rewarding programs. One was Robert Frost, four times

Sometimes I wonder if the after-glow of Christmas is not more wonderful than the day itself, just as the afterglow holds the real beauty of the sunset. We should strive to see that the Christmas afterglow will linger in our hearts throughout the year, and that each dav we become heloful friends and bringers of happiness to those about us.

FEESERSBURG (A Voice from Carroll)

The 1956 Christmas is over and now it must take its place among the other Christmas days that have gone before. For many it was a happy holiday, filled with family traditions, beloved friends, wonderful gifts, and beautiful surroundings. For many others it was a day of sadness for one reason or another, and for millions and millions it was just another day, void of any mean-ing except the business of earning an existence. But the truth is, Christmas Day was what each individual made of it for Christmas is made within one's self . . . external forces had little to do with the kind of day we had. We noticed on our drive to enjoy the day with my mother that the decorations this year were more colorful than ever. This was even more true in the small villages than on the wealthy streets of the city. The people did not seem as interested in gifts this year but eemed more eager to have old Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Harrison and friends drop in to say hello. It may the that this Christmas will mark the beginning of the end to the aw-in Baltimore visiting friends. Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Clabaugh ful commercialism that has all but and daughter, Janet, Bristol, Ill., and choked the spirit of real Christmas Mr. and Mrs. Horace Clabaugh, of to death. We hope so for if this Pulitzer-prize winning poet meeting The Press and The Christmas Carol set to music. Both were outstanding and we would have liked the visit with Mr. Frost to have lasted another hour.

No matter how far we wander from home throughout the year when Christmas draws near we want to turn our footsteps in the direction of family and home. For some unknown reason family ties are strongest at the holiday season. This is the reason 40 million cars were on the roads this week . . . each carrying people anxious to return to the scenes of their childhood, or the place their folks live. This urge to belong to a family group is so strong that many braved snow, sleet, high water and fog to make the trip. And the saddest part is over 700 didn't make it. The tragedy of the highways continues to mar every holiday and there seems little one can do to put an end to the 'useless loss of life.

Here is some advice to all teenage girls: Be satisfied with the hair, nature gave you. We know one teenager who thought she would improve on her blonde hair by giving herself one of those much advertised rinses. She didn't follow directions and ended up with orange hair. Now she is looking for a wig or a one way ticket to South Africa.

A rich man is only a poor man with money. Neither one can inherit Christmas. Both must find it for himself. -Ruth Roelke.

Holiday Magic:

Come the holidays, come left-overs! Usually, they're from that Come the holidays, come left-overs! Usually, they're from that festive bird, the turkey; and, just as usually, the family isn't over-joyed at the idea of eating them. Here's a happy new way to stage a "welcome back" to the dining table for those remaining tid-bits —pleasing the family palate with tasty new "Hi Ho Turkey Drum-sticks". Left-over turkey combined with seasonings and finely crushed crumbs from rich buttery crackers does the trick. Here's how, the quick and easy way: how, the quick and easy way:

Hi Ho Turkey Drumsticks

1/8 teaspoon salt 1/8 teaspoon pepper 11/2 eups finely crushed Hi Ho 1 cup thick turkey gravy or thick white sauce 1 teaspoon minced parsley Cracker crumbs 1 teaspoon grated onion Shortening or salad oil 2 cups finely minced cooked turkey 1 egg, beaten 18 canape picks (toothpicks trimmed with paper frills on end)

Combine gravy, parsley, onion, turkey, salt, pepper and 1 cup of the cracker crumbs. Chill for at least 2 hours. Divide chilled mixture into 6 portions. Roll each into the shape of a plump drum-stick. Heat enough shortening in a skillet to cover the bottom to a depth of 1½ inches. Dip "drumsticks" in beaten egg, then coat with remaining helf cup of crumbs. For until golden turning one to brown both sides. Remove to platter. Press 3 of the frilled picks, close together, into one end of each to resemble bone of drumstick. Makes 6 "drumsticks"

Mimi shot him a venemous glance as she grabbed it from him. "It's empty." Her wail of disappointment echoed through the room. "What did you expect? The Crown jewels?" Bill's sarcasm did not help Mimi's disposition.

"It rattles though, shake it you'll see." Mimi handed the bag back. He shook the bag and feeling along the lining edge withdrew an envelope. Bill and Mimi read the enclosed letter.

Darling Sam:

It is no use. Father won't let us marry. I want you to know that I love you. I will hide this until I can mail it.

All my Love, Elizabeth. "Bill, who do we know named Sam here in town?"

"Judge Turner's name is Sam. He's a bachelor and I heard he had an unhappy love affair."

"The envelope is addressed to a Sam Turner. Let's take it to him." "It might make him unhappy, maybe we should just forget about it.'

Mimi was out the door and seated in Judge Turner's office before Bill knew she was gone. She watched as the old man fondled the letter and his eyes were alight with fond memories.

"Yes, I am the Turner. Elizabeth was killed before she had a chance to mail this or marry anyone. I never knew till this day that she cared. You have made an old man very happy."

Mimi left the office feeling happy and sad. How different his life might have been. Bill and her were very lucky. Returning to her home she found Bill seated with his teakwood box on his lap. He turned and asked her how she made out.

"Bill I wish you had gone along. I feel more than repaid for what I bid on that suitcase. It was Judge Turner and Elizabeth was his girl.

"Bill are you listening to me?" Bill twirled his box in hand and spoke slowly. "I heard you and of course I am glad for the old boy but I have a surprise for you." With all the showmanship of a magician he pressed lightly on the box. A section of it opened revealing an oriental jade ring. Mimi slipped it on her finger. This was all too good to be true.

"Okay Mabel," he said, "this is our row.

JOSEY hoped her sister would choose the vinegar jug. All her selfish young life Ethel had somehow managed to get the best of everything. Perhaps it was because she was younger that she had seemed the favorite. Not that Josey didn't love and spoil her, too.

Of course it didn't matter so much about clothes. In one way or another Ethel coats, and hats. It didn't matter, either, about rooms. When the Roths moved to their new home Josey was thirteen and Ethel was twelve.

The instant Ethel spied the room with the alcove, next to Mother and Dad's at the top of the stairs, she had exclaimed, "It's mine. I want it. You told us we might each have a room of our own now. Oh please!"

"Well," Mother's face clouded, "The other one's small and stuffy. Couldn't you share this with Josey?'

Naturally it ended with Josey taking the small, stuffy room at the back of the house.

Still none of these things were important matters. The really big item was the course in costume designing that she wanted to take,

She tried to keep the wistful brightness out of her eyes as she looked at the blue teapot.

the course that would cost five hundred dollars.

Five hundred was more than Mother and Dad could pay right now, what with the last of the mortgage to pay off, and Ethel's tuition at Art School coming up. Even now that Josey was graduated from high, and Ethel would be graduated next June, Ethel still rated first.

Yet Josey had to admit that Ethel could make a piece of canvas come to life. As Dad said if Ethel painted a fire people could warm their hands by the flames. Yes, she deserved to go to art school. As for the course in dress designing, it could wait till next semester, or next year. Josey sighed. She tried to keep the wistful brightness out of her eyes as she looked at the blue teapot. The china piece was so perfect, such a gracious little jewel. It would lend itself to any tea table, any china closet. It had belonged to their great great grandmother, Aunt Susan had told them, it and the glass vinegar 'jug. But what would anyone want with a vinegar jug? Although it was attractive, too, Josey conceeded. Its concave sides with the small upraised bunches of grapes, glowed with irridescent, rainbow hues. She looked again at the lovely turquoise blue of the teapot. She had to sigh, knowing it would be Ethel's choice. The vinegar jug would be her bitter lot.

Gaining Ability Said Heritable

Performance Testing Pays for Beef Cattle

Bull calves that gain well in the feedlot will sire calves that make fast gains too.

D. E. Walker, extension livestock specialist at the University of Illinois College of Agriculture, says that animal breeding studies show that ability to put on feedlot gains is highly heritable.

Fast-gaining cattle put on more economical gains too, Walker says. That means that selecting your breeding stock on the basis of feedlot gains will pay off in higher net profits.

To get more information, a few breeders put their calves on feedlot test for 140-160 days. One such test fed grass silage and legume hay free choice plus four pounds of ground ear corn and four pounds of oats a head daily. The fastest gaining bull calf on this test gained an average of 2.61 pounds a day compared with only .79 pound a day for the slowest gainer.

You can use the same system to select replacement heifers, the livestock specialist says. You can performance-test on any feeding program as long as the calves are fed and managed the same way. See your county farm adviser for full information about the performance-testing program.

Aunt Susan had said that the sisters might have their choice of the precious old things that had belonged to their great great grandmother.

"Aunt Susan," Ethel finally spoke in her girlish voice, "I've always loved the teapot, but I know Josey has, too. If she really wants it-'

"No, no," Josey cried. She was surprised, pleased too, at the considerate note.

She caught a sly glint in Aunt Susan's eyes, as the old lady darted a quick glance at their faces

"As you like," the old lady said, lifting the teapot down to Ethel.

Just as Ethel hurried from the room to show her new treasure to her parents, Aunt Susan's wrinkled face expanded into a broad grin.

"I held my breath for a minute, Josey girl. You got the best of the bargain. You can still buy teapots like that anywhere in Canada for five dollars. But there was an antique dealer here yesterday, who wanted that vinegar jug pretty bad. Must be some rare kind of glass. He offered me five hundred dollars for it! How much did you say that course in designing would cost?'

Variety of Flies Around Farm Barns

In the annual battle against farm flies, it helps to know the odds you're up against.

For instance, did you know that there can be as many as 40 different species of flies around the barns? Entomologist Gordon Guyer and his associates found that many around the various barns at Michigan State University campus last summer.

And with so many species, there are many different habits, so you can't expect to knock them all out with the same spray or bait.

As far as the common housefly is concerned, malathion or diazinon will give control for three or four weeks if it's sprayed on the walls of the barn. Baits of the insecticide and corn syrup will work, too, if the barn has level spots where baits can be scattered.

Stable flies are another problem. Although they look exactly like houseflies to the person not trained in identification, wall sprays or baits don't phase them.

The best bet, the researchers found, was space sprays—used in the milking parlor just before milking time. Sprays of the synergized pyrethrin or synregized allethrin type are generally used in space sprayers. A combination of methoxychlor and Crag Fly Repellent works well, too.

Flat-topped sunshade for hogs is easy to build and may be conveniently moved about from range to range. Runners are made from 4 by 4-inch stock and are fastened to vertical posts by pieces of flat iron bolted in place. Roof is covered with roll roofing or aluminum.

Will watched the chubby director light his cigar for the second time. If only he could explain how much his work meant to him, or how much his wife and kids loved the town. "I'll hate to leave," he said sadly. "We are quite settled. We've bought a home, but I guess . . . "That's right, Will. Sorry.' No kick at your work, however. You're speaking at seminar today aren't you? How's the work coming?"

Will said, and at the same time excused himself, "You'll find out this afternoon, and at the same time have my resignation."

At four o'clock that afternoon, Seminar began as usual. The staff sat on one side of the auditorium, and the trainee assistants sat on the other. Will entered the speaker platform, amidst some ribbing jokes from the staff and several rounds of laughter.

"How are you and the nema-todes, Will?" Bill Hendry yelled out, and the room had another free laugh. This called for more so Wally Beard said, "You and your worms ok, Will?"

Will pulled at his tweed suit uncomfortably. He cleaned his glasses. "My topic today," he said, "is titled, 'The End of Terrible Terry, A Destructive Nematode.'

A sudden hush came over the auditorium. Then someone said, "Do you mean, Will, that you've found a chemical that will destroy the nematode and not harm the tree?" 10

"That is correct," said Will. "The chemical not only works, but is economical. It has been tested under field conditions and proven out."

After Will finished his talk, a cheer of applause came over the chapel. Everybody ran up to shake his hand. He became the most popular at the station.

"Do you realize, Will," said the director, "that this will make you the most popular man in the state? Or that you have licked a problem that had threatened to wipe out the citrus industry in Florida?"

Others ran up to Will. "Say, Will," one said, "what about poker Wednesday night?" Will backed away and looked at his admirers. Only a moment ago I was the source of their amusements, he thought. Will smiled. "About that poker, or those drinks that I heard some-one mention—" He stopped to clean his glasses. "I'm busy boys, sorry.

THE BIBRE SPEAKS BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN Background Scripture: Revelation 21. Devotional Reading: Revelation 7:9-17.

All Things New Lesson for December 30, 1956

ON THE verge of New Year's U Eve, our thoughts go forward to the New Year. But what will be new about it? We shall mostly have to "make do" with what we have, rather than find much that is brand-new. We shall be the same people. Sleeping between Dec. 31 and Jan. 1 is not going to change us a great deal. We shall live in the same house, have the same neighbors, the same problems, temptations, brains, bodies, bank account (if any), tax bills, diseases and prospects. What we can have that is Dr. Foreman new, is a new attitude to some of these things. But that is another story. What we have to think about here is another of the great chapters of the Bible, the one in which come the thrilling words, "Behold, I make all things new." What will life be like in that "new heaven and new earth" which is described here in shining pictures in the very last chapter of the Bible?

Death Behind Us

In that life wherein all things are made new, not by clumsy man but by the power of God, what will be especially new-if you like, shockingly new, so new we shall not perhaps easily become used to it? First we can see a complete contrast with this present life, in that death will be always in the past, never in the future. The one thing that is certain about life on earth is that we shall all die. Death is the one certain prediction that can be made about every one who reads these lines. (Or, if Christ should come in your lifetime, you would unde go a radical change, just as radical as death itself, in any case.) But in that world where all is made new, death is behind every one, not in front; a memory, not a hope or a fea . The one experience which unites all men in this world is one which they have not yet had. But in that world of the redeemed, the experience of death is one they all shall have had. We cannot even imagine this, just how it will be. But think how much activity in this world is de-voted to one object alone-to stave off death. All that will vanish with death itself.

Borrowing Money Can Pay Dividends Production Items

Can Increase Profit

Borrowing money to buy fertilizer and other profit-building production items can be good business in some cases in the present costprice squeeze, according to Michigan State University agricultural economists.

John Doneth, of the Michigan State University farm economics staff, cites the case of one farmer who has greatly increased his profits in the past several years by going into debt to buy fertilizer.

Borrowing money can pay dividends if the money is used to purchase materials or equipment that will insure greater operational profits.

Three years ago, says Doneth, this farmer spent only $500 for fertilizer on 250 acres of crop land. Soil tests showed this was not enough.

The farmer doubled his use of plant food the following year.

Then last year, he spent $2,000 of borrowed money for fertilizer. This investment not only paid for itself but gave extra returns per acre

Doneth says that some farmers are too conservative about the use of credit. Some farmers are using makeshift operations when they are actually in position to get a loan and go on to bigger or more efficient operations, he says.

The Michigan farm economists suggest these precautions, however: 1—Don't over-estimate your fuever ture income; 2-Don't under-esti-mate your expenses; 3-Make sure you allow enough leeway for poor crop years and low prices.

Weeds Expensive Pests, Tests Show

plete riddance of all forms of evil, especially suffering and sin. (Ignorance and ugliness too no doubt will be done away with, but they do not weigh upon us here quite so painfully as the other two). No matter what your idea may be about sin and suffering, what they are and where they came from, you have to admit that human life is woven of these threads. At this very moment every reader's life would be radically different if he himself had never signed, and as for our neighbors' sins, and the sins of our ancestors, the world we have inherited is a world fashioned and controlled by sinners. It is only by the mercy of God that it is not worse than it is. Try to think what life would be if there were no form of evil affecting it whatever. You can't really think it; but that goes to show what an amazingly new state of things the "new heavens and earth" must be.

At Home With God

Most wonderful, and least imaginable, of all the new features of that life to come, is the presence of God. It is true, God is everywhere. But it is also true that God is in some places and situations and occasions more than others. What is said in Revelation about God's coming to dwell with men leads us to think of God's presence in the truly New World as being far more direct and less veiled than for us at our present stage of existence

Indeed, as God is real to us in prayer far more (as a rule) than when we are feeding the hogs or getting a haircut, so the presence of God in the all-new World may be as far beyond our highest aware ness of him here, as the prayer is more spiritual than the haircut or the hogs. All we know is that in this world we seldom do feel quite at ease in God's presence, and may, even be seldom certain that he is near. But "over yonder," we shall be at home with God as we never been in this life. Foretastes of the New Life we may enjoy here: in freedom from fear of death, in a life growing more purified by the Spirit, in the "practice of the Presence of God"; but the fullness of glory we cannot imagine, only se things shall trust God that Something seemed to be lacking that he had subconsciously noted in the painting, but he couldn't discover it at the moment. He was vaguely disturbed as he returned to the house.

He took the picture down from the wall, stared at it for a while, and then carried it back to the crooked dogwood.

The painting, when compared with the real tree, was exact in every detail. Each branch and twig had been faithfully portrayed. The background had not been painted in so meticulously, but was easily recognized.

He walked up to the tree and studied the ground around it carefully, inch by inch. Grass had grown thickly around, but he noted one small space that was bare. He returned to the house a little later with shining eyes, but his face held a dubious expression

"Come and go with me, Grace," he told his wife. "I think I've found something, but I'm not sure.

"Is it something about the money?" she asked.

"Yes, but don't build your hopes too high.'

They stopped at the tool shed and took a pickax and spade. He began digging in the bare spot when they reached the dogwood tree. He discovered at once that the ground had been recently disturbed, and a few minutes later the pickax struck a metal object.

He worked carefully and uncovered a small locked metal box. He lifted it from the hole and broke the fastenings with the pickax and opened the lid.

Grace began to cry after the surprise had somewhat worn off. They gathered the money up and replaced it in the box and returned to the house.

"But Carl," Grace asked later, "how did you manage to find the place where all that money was buried?"

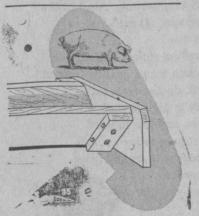

"Very simply. When I compared the picture with the original landscape I noticed a small mound of earth at the roots of the tree in it. But there wasn't any such mound in the real scene. I examined the earth closely and saw it had been disturbed some time recently. That gave me the idea that the money might be there."

cooperative research since 1951 by Iowa State College and the USDA. This work has demonstrated that in-the-row growth can reduce bean yields in soybeans by about 10 per cent.

The experiments involved such typical plants as yellow foxtail, a grassy weed; velvet leaf and Pennsylvania smartweed, both broadleaved weeds; and the Hawkeye variety of soybeans. The weeds were planted singly and in combination in the row with soybeans, and then were thinned to strands of 3.6, and 12 weeds per foot of row. Weeds were removed at a halfdozen specific intervals during the growth of the soybeans.

In general, the research program demonstrated that soybean yield reductions are proportional to the amount of weed growth, and that the combined above-ground growth of soybeans and weeds is approximately the same as the above-ground growth of weed-free soybeans. The tests showed also that the presence of weeds delayed maturity of beans about one day, decreased the height of soybean plants about 2 inches, and increased lodging of soybean plants about 2 to 6 per cent.

MEETING OF EXECUTIVE COM-MITTEE OF CARROLL COUNTY COUNCIL P.-T. A.

The Executive Committee of the Carroll County Council of Parents and Teachers met on Thursday, Nov. 29, 1956.

Following routine reports from the various committees, the first item of business stemmed from motion made at the October meeting stating that the Council recommended to the Board of Education that the sale of maga-zines, seeds and pictures be discon-tinued in the sale of

Mr. Evan Bowers, speaking for the principals of the Carroll County schools, stated that they would like schools, stated that they would like to go on record as supporting that motion. A committee of three prin-cipals have made a study of the fund raising activities—how much is need-ed to buy things not provided by the School Board, how it is raised and what it is used for. They had facts and figures at hand to show that the extra money needed amounted to ap-proximately four dollars per high school and two dollars, per elementary student. The money is spent for such items as playground equipment re-pairs, audio-visual aids, athletic ex-penses such as referees, bus trans-portation to games, towels, uniforms, etc., ditto and mimeograph machines including ink, stencils and paper. electronic equipment repairs, first aid supplies, music, stands and instru-ments, magazines and maps, waste paper cans, garbage cans, pencil paper cans, garbage cans, pencil sharpeners, projectors, screens and tape recorders; also office equipment such as postage, stationery, part of the secretary's salary, and part of the telephone bill.

On a county wide basis, $30,000.00 added to the school budget would make it possible to eliminate the varmake it possible to eliminate the var-ious sales campaigns. It would also make for more efficiency in manage-ment and instruction because schools knowing what they would have to use during the year, could set themselves up a budget. One member noted that not only did fund raising activities take time out

For example - the gross gains from the magazine cam-paign from only two schools in the county amounted to $13,000.00 that not only went out of the county, but out of the state as well. The committee voted unanimously to approach the County Commission-ers with the recommendation that

Along the same line, the President noted that a copy of the school budget had not been sent to her as was re-quested at the October meeting. After much discussion, the committee quested at the October meeting. After much discussion, the committee reached the conclusion that they could not support a budget when they did not know what it contained, so the group voted to ask the County Commissioners for a copy and re-quest time for the Council to study the budget before its final adoption.
