I wish you health—life's greatest wealth!
I wish you always near so that I may help to cheer
Fach future day and in some way—help to bring you happiness!

The branches of the huge trees around the parsonage are thickly covered with leaves which means the house next door is not visible from the windows! A city individual might say, "I feel as though I am hemmed in!" There is a certain privacy with these trees which makes one feel you are alone and somehow you like it. Country regardless of the county becomes more wonderful to me each comes more wonderful to me each year with all the changeable seasons. There are four acres of ground with the parsonage plus a very big lawn. The house is about 75 years old with large rooms and that means it is so much nicer to entertain the various groups.

This Sunday, folks, will be Mother's Day and I do hope you are planning something most unusual for that nice lady in your life. Do not hand her money or a check and say, "I don't know what to buy, Mother, so you just please yourself!" That is not the proper touch, for any mother will love the gift just because you bought it which will be with her to the end of her days. It is always the little things that count in life.

I remember a few years back when

I remember a few years back when my precious little boys—we never use that awful word "step"—went into the five and dime when we were living in Baltimore. It was the store on Eastern Avenue and it was the day before Mother's Day. They each had 25 cents which was their weekly day before Mother's Day. They each had 25 cents which was their weekly allowance. There was much whispering going on and I heard this, "We can't buy anything for Mother for a quarter, so let's put the money together and buy something big!" I walked around the store with them, parking the car right outside the door which they suggested but I was not to be too near. Never will I forget those little boys going from counter to counter, hunting something for 75 cents. John, the middle boy, said aloud, 'Oh, I know Mother will love this. Mother, please come over here." I walked over to the counter and there was the most unusual large vase for the price of 50 cents (which one could not buy today for five dollars). As I looked at the vase and examined it, I thought the price was incorrect but it was during the World War II. It was a beautiful blue glass with large looped plain glass handles and at the top of the neck of the vase was curved edged with plain transparent thin glass. It was a shape of a reproduction of many years ago. After the saleslady convinced me that the price was correct, the boys After the saleslady convinced me that the price was correct, the boys said they would take it and with the quarter that was left they bought a lovely card with much wording about love! I still have that vase and many who have some it thought it. who have seen it thought it a very expensive affair. Each year it is truly a picture with the many colorful gladiolas, So, I know, folks, all mothers are just like that, being a mother

They can always boast of wonderful health and are quite handsome. They can endure most anything and have a wonderful physique giving promise of almost lasting youth into the declining years of life. They have a remarkable personality and make friends very quickly and when a friend is made, it means for life. They are most kind and appropriately and layer music more and sympathetic and love music more than anything in life. They make excellent nurses, in fact, Florence Nightingale was also a Taurus. Many of these people are gifted with physic

This sign also has the opposite effect upon the individuals if they are not educated, in other words, the lower-plane, and then they are obstinate and most unreasonable and quite difficult to understand. They dislike contradictions. The uneducated is most difficult to reason with and there is no point in arguing with

Taurus people do not find it difficult to accumulate money but they rarely hoard it, always sharing it with less fortunate people.

The power of memorizing of the Taurus is indeed remarkable and they make excellent students and should always have the best education. Many big statesmen were born under this sign and many bankers. In business they do not need a partner for they can easily go on their own. The ideal mate for this sign is the December person. They have and live a "Happy-Medium" in everything they do. GRASS ROOTS OPINION

RIVERTON, WYO., RANGER: "The states and the local school districts are doing a much better job building schools than the Federal government ever thought they could. We have the wherewithal, the knowledge, the local control over our American schools. Let's keep Washington's finger out of the education pie.

WEST BRANCH, IOWA, TIMES: "From the 'WHAT'S NEW DEPT'. Ready-to-eat meat that you can warm, for serving without a stove or fire; pull a tab on the box and a chemical

LEESBURG, FLA., DAILY COM-MERCIAL: "There's nothing like a horde of ants to break up a picnic. While we had a 'picnic' debating and philosophizing about Juan Peron, deposed Argentine dictator, a less newsworthy character from that country was busy infiltrating the United States from Mobile, Ala., to Wake County, N. C. The Argentine fire ant apparently arrived on a South American ship 24 years ago, by-passed immigration officials and went to work. The ants reportedly have spread over 22 million acres."

BASSET, NEBR., LEADER: "At the present time with the greatest prosperity our nation has ever known nothing is being done to reduce our national debt, but rather the spending is at an accelerated rate. It is said the high rate of taxation is a curb to inflation. Perhaps it is, but for our money we would prefer to see some of that money used to retire the national debt rather than spend on 'programs'.'

ST. JOHN, KANSAS, NEWS: "Divine law does not suggest that the poor tithe and the wealthy pay half their substance. Yet in his nation we are witnessing an accelerating tendency towards taking a larger proportion from those who have more to pay the bill for those who have less."

The budget for running the National government seems to be the center of all conversations these days. Where to cut down seems to be the main problem, but everyone agrees that taxes have gotten to the saturation point. It seems to many that foreign aid has gotten out of hand and should be tapered off. Not many Americans have a clear idea what the money designed for foreign aid has been used for, but n Lurope and Asia which is putting American workers out of work like the textile workers of the New England states. A large portion of for-eign aid is used to hold in power governments that even the common people of those countries don't want. The day of government by Kings been over long ago, but many millions or the American taxpayer's dollars are used to keep several Middle East Kings on their thrones. Our secretary of state seems to be determined to maintain the status-quo in Europe and Asia even if it means bankruptcy of every taxpayer in the United States. When foreign aid was first initiated for Europe it was a necessity and a good idea. But it seems to us that the day has come to end this give-away program before it ends us. We have put Japan back on her feet so well that today she is underselling our textile industry. We have put Germany back on her feet so well that she is in a position to undersell everyone in cars and tools These are the two countries that only a few years ago we spent billions to destroy. Are we spending billions in foreign aid to build them up so that once again in the future they can try to destroy us? This is not a silly question. It is something to think about. Our budget can be cut and should be cut by eliminating foreign aid most of Europe and all of Asia.

In a Bad World

Lesson for May 19, 1957

THIS world we're in may be a bad one, but it never gets so bad we can't pray. The worse it is, the more reason to pray. There is a story in the Bible which shows a good man at prayer in an evil world. There are many such stories in the Bible, to be sure. The one which has been selected for our study is that of Abraham pleading for the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. No man of his time was better than Abraham. No city of those times was worse than Sodom and Gomorrah.

see God if it is true (see John 1:18) that no man has seen God at any time? The point of the story, for us, is the kind of prayer a good man can offer, in and for an evil world.

First of all, Abraham's prayer shows that he had no illusions about Sodom and Gomorrah. They were cities which he preferred to stay away from, cities notorious for wickedness unashamed. We do not know how many thousand persons there may have been in Sodom, but Abraham ventures to think that in the whole city there may perhaps be 50 righteous persons. Abraham's series of prayers in which he begs the Lord to spare the city for the sake of fifty-then 45-40-30-20-10 good people, is often taken as a sign of Abraham's growing faith in God. But it can just as well stand for Abraham's decreasing faith in Sodom. At the end, he would not dare ask God to spare the city for "twenty's sake,"-it is plain that he was very doubtful that there might be even that number of good citizens. Children may pray as if there were no evil in the world; but grown men even in their prayers must realize what kind of world they live in. Our Lord's Prayer mentions temptation and evil as real and dangerous, even for good

Abraham's prayer is not only realistic, it is generous. Readers of the Bible will remember Jesus' story of the Pharisee who in his prayer recalled the publican-no model citizen. But to the Pharisee the publican was not a man to be prayed for, only a man to be despised. Now Abraham was far better than the citizens of Sodom, if they were good at all, which seems doubtful; and he was better too than his relative, Lot, for whose sake he was chiefly praying. But he prays for them all the same. His prayer is of the highest sort-not for himself at all, but for others. The reader can test his religion by the kind of prayer he offers. One can ask oneself: How often do I pray for myself and how often for others? When I do pray for others, is it for good people only? Are my prayers an expression of selfishness, or can I offer generous prayers? How long has it been since I prayed for any one I didn't really Abraham's prayar is humble; but it is also daring. Most of our prayers are safe; Abraham realizes that his is risky. It almost involves throwing a challenge to God: Shall not the judge of all the earth do right? This man realizes that he may actually be praying against God's will. He may be praying for the wrong thing entirely. But that does not stop him. He dares to believe that God was interested in a very small minority of good people. He dares to pray beyond his hopes, beyond his knowledge . . . but not beyond God. The God in whom Abraham believed, the God Abraham knew, was not like men. He did not -and he does not-share man's prejudices, man's pride. A man, even a good man, prides himself on not helping the unworthy; but God's mercy is untainted by conceit. Do we dare believe that God is just? Do we dare believe he will do the fair thing, or do we try to argue him into doing what we want even if it is not quite fair? Do we dare believe that God is merciful? or to pray for those who will not pray for themselves? Do we pray only for sure things, or do we dare go so far as to pray even when we fear that we may be asking too much? Can we stand and take God's No (as Abraham had to) and still hold our faith in Him?

The calls that aren't made mean a lot to us

I suppose if anyone asked my husband and me what we like most about telephone service we'd say it's the calls that aren't made.

Here's what we mean. We have two youngsters, Butch 5 and Joan 3. They're too young to leave alone, of course. So, like thousands of other couples, we get a baby sitter when we go out. She keeps an eye on the children and phones us if anything goes wrong. We feel we're almost as close to the kids as if we were at home.

And it's these phone calls, the ones that aren't made because there's nothing wrong, that mean so much to us. Just that silent phone tells us that Butch and Joan are all right. We can enjoy the evening without worrying about the kids.

Like everyone else, we use our phone a lot, but even if we never made a call all month long our phone would be well worth the cost. We can't think of anything else that adds so much to our peace of mind for a few nickels a day.

This is the era of 'push-button' and 'flick-a-switch' living. Since Edison effectively harnessed electrically for use in the home. Americans havbeen enjoying increasing benefits from this hidden servant.

Today, electricity is a necessity. It supplies power for lighting, refirgeration, cooling, heating, laundrying, ironing, cleaning, and many other household tasks.

Future additional uses of electricity in the home can only be estimated buy many new appliances are now in the development stage and all signs point to tremendously increased home use in the coming years.

But, is your home wiring system able to meet your needs now let alone give you capacity for greater use in years to come? Chances are it is not. Unfortunately, about half the homes in this area are limping along on wiring systems that were installed more than 25 years ago and that are competely inadequate for today's needs. Even many of the new homes in this area are sadly lacking in wiring capable of meeting present needs. And yet, surprisingly few people are fully aware of their wiring problem or know just how their wiring systems operate.

Your home from the main line has got to be big enough to deliver all the electricity thome needs. Inside your home heeds. Inside your home electric appliances the ware of the ware nough to deliver enough electricity to same time. The problem is to get it inside a simple job that costs nothing and in adequate quantities to do a job may eventually save you many dollars for you.
