NATIONAL NEWSPAPER WEEK

This country has something of a mania for "weeks" and "days" celebrating all manner of things and occasions from the sublime to the ridiculous. But some of the observances are far above the common ruck, and deserve the public's interest and attention.

This is certainly the case with National Newspaper Week, Oct. 1-8. Its theme is "Your Newspaper Guards Your Freedoms." And that's more than just a felicitious little slogan. It's a fact. A free press is the most potent weapon against tyranny and persecution that any nation can pos-

Dictators always take over the press as soon as they gain power and pervert it to their own ends. That's only logical. For distatorship can't stand the freedom of expression and debate a free press stands solidly for. —Industrial News Review

HUTZLER'S WESTVIEW BRANCH STORE OPENED MONDAY MORNING CLIMAX OF HUTZ-LER'S CENTENNIAL YEAR

Hutzler Brothers Co. of Baltimore, Maryland's oldest and largest depart-ment store, announced today that its ment store, announced today that its third and largest branch store, Hutzler's Westview, opened to the public for selling on Monday morning at 10 o'clock. The debut of Hutzler's Westview climaxes the Centennial Year of Hutzler's a Maryland Institution since 1858, owned and operated by the Hutzler family since its founding.

The public opening was preceded by a brief ribbon-cutting ceremony at 9:45 a. m., in which the four Hutzler directors and several prominent dignitaries participated.

The new store is located in the multi-million-dollar Westview Shopping Center on a forty-two acre site on the north side of Baltimore National Pike (Route 40), west of Ingleside Avenue and east of Baltimore County Beltway now under county to the county of the county of

FEESERSBURG (A Voice from Carroll)

After next month home properties will take on that cold and bare look of winter. The grass turns brown, trees shed their leaves and a look of utter dejection settles over all homes and gardens. But by careful selection of trees and shrubs this wintry look can disappear into a thing of beauty. Pine trees suitable for the climate are the best investments both for an artistic effect and for saving the amount of fuel used. Evergreens with pine trees takes on new beauty in the cold winter months and when snow falls nothing is more satisfying than to look out of a window and see the pines and the snow caught in a tender embrace.

These cool moonlight nights are the kind poets and songwriters like to sing about. The moon looks so much bigger this time of the year but we are told its purely psychological. It looks larger because the human eye, more accustomed to estimate sizes of objects near the ground than at altitudes, compare the moon with objects This can be demonstrated by holding a piece of cardboard near the eyes to shut out the view of near objects. For the same reason the moon appears larger when it emerges from behind a cloud. The atmosphere too has something to do with it. But the poet and songster isn't interested in technicalities. All they desire to know is that moon rhymes with certain love words and that moon-beams causes even the best people to act a trifle moon struck.

"When in doubt, follow your heart". We can't always agree with this quotation from Bernard Baruch, but when it comes to doing a kindness for someone we can agree perfectly Many times a person has the impulse to visit a friend or call on the phone to inquire of someone's health or write a letter to tell them how much they are missed. But we are held back for fear of being rejected or rebuffed. This is the time to follow the heart instead of the mind.

Is there anyone living that is so strong and self-sufficient that he does not need sentiment or companionship. We think not. Some individuals may put up a front of bluster and contempt for sentiment but that is just a false armor. If one could see beneath the surface this kind of person needs sentiment very badly. Just last week we heard a person say that trouble with people today is that they are lonely and won't admit it. They are starved for someone to say: "I miss you. Won't you come more often?" or "Do write, my day is brighter when I hear from you' So many people wait for the other person to make the first move. This would be a very miserable world if everyone waited until his neighbor "Good morning". Then no one would say it and we would just keep going on our separate miserable ways. The world is certainly busy with busy people making all sorts of things but as yet they haven't anything that comes near substituting for companionship. For a time people thought television would do it, but by now they have found out that this wonderful box is nothing but a need me. Just call me". The campaign to keep Maryland beautiful is paying off. There was one third less trash on the highways this year than last. We notice as we ride over the county less and less litter along the roads and it is nice to know people are taking an interest in their county's natural beauty. On a recent trip into Virginia the one thing that struck our eye was the clean and well-kept road sides and the many picnic areas for the public's use. And another thing we have to wonder about is how Virginia can afford black-top roads everywhere even the little used back roads. Sometime we are going to find out how their roads are financed and let our county commissioners in on the secret.

The notion that when children grow up and get married parents can relax was blasted again last week when a Westminster woman received a phone call, collect from her daughter in Philadelphia asking for a recipe. The mother gave it to her and then asked, "Why don't you buy a cook book"? "Don't be silly", said the daughter. "That costs three dollars".

For the first time in many years we are the proud owner of a fireplace. These chilly days we have it burning and what it doesn't produce in the way of heat it makes up for in cheerfulness. At least the glow of the logs burning gives us the impression that we are warm although we have to don a sweater to be convinced. A fireplace is also good for outdoor exercise because to appease its hungry appetite one must make countless trips to the woodpile and carry in armsfull of logs. While one is busy stuffing the fireplace the work causes an appetite to likewise appear in the wood-toter. So off to the kitchen we go for a snack. We don't know what would happen if we tried to keep all three fireplaces going at one time Just how did our ancestors cook and do all their family living around an open fire?

This year we are determined to be the first to warn that there are just 75 shopping days until Christmas .-Ruth Roelke.

KIWANIS SELECTED TO RECEIVE ONE OF TEN ANNUAL "PUBLIC RELATIONS NEWS ACHIEVE-MENT AWARDS"

Kiwanis International has been selected to receive one of the top ten Public Relations News Annual Acnievement Awards for 1958. This honor has been described as "the highest recognition in the public relations field".

Mr. Ned Musser, President of the Kiwanis Club of Taneytown, described the Award as coming to Kiwanis primarily for "its competently guided public relations campaign through which Kiwanis annually enlists the support of its members throughout North America in honoring the press for the public service it performs in actively advancing the cause of freedom". Gospel Preface

Lesson for October 5, 1958

THE FIRST three books of the I New Testament were not the first to be written. Earlier than, these gospels are the letters of Paul. If it had been left to him, there would have been no gospels, for he seems to have taken very little interest in the personal career of Jesus of Nazareth. But there must have been many early Christians who kept asking: Did Jesus do anything in this If he was a teacher what did

The first three gospels were all written to answer such questions. It is these gospels that will be the source-material for the lessons used by the eighty-plus denominations using the "international" lessons. They will be studying the One in whom we all are one.

The World

The spotlight of interest in the gospels is, of course, Jesus himself. The gospel writers do not include long chapters on nistorical background, as we might wish they did; for the first readers knew the background very well, they were a part of it. Luke, however, piles a lot of proper names into his third chapter, as if it were anchoring the gospel story in the general story of history, the story of mankind. The gospels are about a real person who lived in a real world. You could have followed him around with a movie camera. The time of Christ was not the "once upon a time" of fairy tales. He was a contemporary of certain Roman and Greek officials very well known, when Luke was writing, otherwise there would have been no sense in mentioning them. Those names, if we take the trouble to study them, set before us in one sentence the Roman empire, a great power system, its far-flung provinces controlled by in the pay of Rome. imposing peace on the world, holding even the priesthood of a little obscure people like the Jews as part of their great political sys-

The Hope

In his empire, and so to speak underneath it, subjects but not citizens, lived the Jews. Most of them then, as now, lived outside of Palestine. But all Jews to some extent, and the Jews of Palestine intensely, looked forward to a New Age, a time when God would "redeem his people" as they put it; that is, when God would not only "restore the kingdom" to Israel but would make Jerusalem the center and capital of the whole world, in an age where all the best dreams and hopes of the prophets for an age of righteousness and justice and peace would come true.

Center of this hope was the "Messiah" or "Christ" (two words meaning the same thing), who in some way-they were not clear just how-would start that New Age and be its emperor forever.

The gospels tell the story of the man whose neighbors called him Jesus, and whose most intimate friends, under strict secrecy, called him Messiah. The general public, the Jews at large kept dinging at him to say whether he was, or was not, the Messiah, but he kept public silence on that point almost to the end. You might say that the gospels are the story of the real Messiah came to the very people who were looking for him, but came in a way that shocked them into violent opposition and even hatred. All three "synoptic" gospels, Matthew, Mark and Luke, tell the story in much the same way; John has his own different way. Many characters come on and off the stage, and they are real enough; but the center, as was said, is always Jesus. In these stories he comes alive as a historical Person. Across the centuries the question comes to modern as to ancient man: Here is Jesus: are you for him or against

For A Federal Milk Order

On September 22 the Board of Directors of the Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers, Inc. voted unanimously to ask the U.S. Department of Agriculture for a Federal Milk Marketing Order for the Baltimore milk shed.

The Board consists of dairy farmers, elected by MCMP members in their respective districts. They are as much interested in the size of their milk checks as any other dairyman. These men are:

G. Ross Scarff, Fallston, Md. Ross S. Todd, Bel Air, Md. John W. Bay, Whiteford, Md. J. Best Wheeler, Jr., Upperco, Md. Richard F. Price, Phoenix, Md. Hubert J. Null, Taneytown, Md. Horace S. Brauning Russell L. Royer, Manchester, Md. Daniel B. Smith, Ijamsville, Md. Edgar G. Emrich

(MCMP President) Emmitsburg, Md. Edwin O. Adams, Jr., Clarksville, Md. F. Guy McGrady, Rising Sun, Md. Emory M. Kilgore, Woodbine, Pa. (MCMP Vice-Pres.) Finksburg, Md. Chester G. Ernst, Clear Spring, Md. Frank D. Ziegler, Sr., Denton, Md.

WHAT IS THEIR GOAL?

- They are asking the Department, by the Federal Order method in use throughout the nation generally, to stabilize prices paid to all farmers for their
- The MCMP has constantly sought to bring this stability to the market. However, in the past few years some dealers, seeking the "fast buck" have been able to purchase milk from the so-called "independents". The price they pay is below the Class I price set by the Cooperative and this depresses the market
- If and when the Federal Order is granted, a uniform price will be set for ALL Class I milk for ALL buyers.
- No longer could ANY buyer purchase his Class I supply on the "Cooperative blend plus" plan. Every farmer-member and non-member-would share alike in the Class I sales in the market.
