LIFE'S LONGINGS.

A child ran laughing on the beach,
The sun shone warm and bright Upon her wavy golden hair, Her tiny form so slight.
"I wonder why the world's so fair; So full of sun and song, I wonder why big folks don't laugh And play the whole day long."
A maid was walking on the strand, She gazed far out to sea; Where, o'er the sunlit waters rode A bark so gallantly,
"Ah, love is coming o'er the waves;
Is coming soon to me,
I wonder how, in this sweet world:
Old folks such shadows see."
A woman stood upon the shore, Her eyes with weeping red, Looked sadly on the cruel sea That ne'er gave up its dead.
"I wonder why this world was made So dark and full of care, No wonder that life's burden seems Too great for one to bear."
Near by the window's ledge there sat A granddame, old and gray—The window looking out to sea.
Where ships and anchor lay.
"I wonder when mine eyes shall see Life's ship at anchor lie, Within God's harbor peacefully For all eternity."

NOT A MINUTE TOO SOON.

You see, I was sheriff of — county, Arkansas, for a number of years, and we had some of the hardest kind of characters to deal with. Horse thieves, renegades, outlaws and highwayman roamed over the State, and when they struck into my county we tried to make it hot for them. I had a number of deputies, who were bound to enforce the law at any cost, and when we wanted help there were a score of citizens who could be had at a moment's warning.

I hadn't served out my first term before our county had the name of being one of the safest and most orderly counties in the State. Desperadoes at length passed us by, and there were weeks at a time when not even an arrest was made.

I was jailor, of course. The county being poor, we had a wretched apology for a jail; in fact, any man who did not choose to remain could easily work his way out of it. It was for this reason that very few of the known desperadoes found their way into the jail. When run down they would be taken into the woods and left there, and no one ever heard of them again.

One day, while I was serving on my last six months, an outlaw called "Bloody Tom" murdered a farmer within a mile of town, robbed the body, and then took to a swamp and sent me word by a negro that I couldn't raise men enough in — county to take him.

I summoned a posse, surrounded the swamps and within four hours after the murder, the outlaw was hanged to a limb.

He made a hard fight, killing two men and wounding a third, and the affair stirred up a good deal of excitement. "Bloody Tom" had a brother, who went by the name of "Red Jack." He was a wicked, cruel rascal, on whose head there were a dozen county rewards, and he lived mostly in the swamps and forest. People said that he would be revenged on me for the death of Tom, and I was advised to lookout for him.

When they said "lookout" in those days, it meant business, and for a whole month I kept both eyes watching for Jack. One day when I was out of town he rode into the village, shot two men, tried to set fire to the jail and rode out again, no one daring to follow him. He even hitched his horse at the tavern and took a drink of whiskey, while the excitement was greatest, and he left word with the landlord that he might be expected back within the next month.

Upon returning home I scoured the country for miles around with a force of men, but Jack had made good his escape. I think the rewards for his capture, dead or alive, footed up fifteen hundred dollars.— He was outlawed, and his death would be a public blessing. We therefore planned to effect it. There were four roads leading into town, and for the next three weeks two men were stationed in the bushes along each road, prepared to shoot Jack on sight.

The fellow did not appear. He might have received warning, or he might not have been ready; at any rate, the watching all went for nothing, and after the fourth week it was the general idea that he had fled from that part of the State, and I began to relax my vigilance and to grow careless.

About this time a young white boy, some twelve years of age, wandered into the village. His name was Daniel Smith, but everybody called him Dan. He worked at odd jobs for a few days. I then employed him to assist in keeping the jail in order, take care of my horses, and render other useful aid. He was a very sedate lad, having little to say to any one, and the most that I ever got out of him, in relation to his family history, was that he was an orphan and had lived in Vicksburg all his life. He was prompt and obedient, and when not engaged at his work was sure to shoulder my shot gun and take a turn in the woods. He never came back with out some sort of game, and finally he became a fixture in the family.

I think it was three months after "Red Jack's" raid on the village that I one morning received a letter asking my presence at Thornbush, a village six miles away. But when I told Dan to saddle my horse it was discovered that the horse had jumped the fence and taken to the woods. Dan shouldered the gun and went out to search, while I got ready for the journey.

The morning passed and he did not return, and at noon I went down across a vacant field to the edge of the woods, hoping to hear from him.
It was in August, very warm weather, and I had no coat on. I did not intend to go far but getting down to the edge of the woods, I found that the horse had passed that way, discovered Dan's tracks in the mud, and I kept on. There was an old road through the woods, running to what was called "French clearing," two miles from town, and as grass was abundant there, it was pretty plain that the horse had taken that direction.

I grew indignant as I walked along, believing that Dan had wandered from his errand in search of game, and I had neither eyes nor ears for anything about me until I suddenly heard a voice cry, "Halt!" I jumped to one side and looked up, and there stood Red Jack. I had never seen him before, but had often heard him described, and I recognized him almost instantly. He stood beside a tree, a cocked revolver in either hand, and as I halted he called out:

"Come here! If you try to run away I will shoot you!"

I had no weapons, and it did not take long for me to understand that I was in the power of the man who had made such terrible threats against my life. He was not fifteen feet away, and if I had attempted to run he could easily have killed me.
There was no other way but to obey his order, and I walked forward.

"Go into the woods," he said, as I approached him.

He motioned with his hand for me to leave trail. I never saw a more ugly face in my life. I knew he meant to murder me, and I stood for an instant and hesitated whether I should suddenly assault him or obey.

The revolvers were held steadily at my breast, his fingers on the triggers, and I left the road.

He followed close behind me chuckling to himself, and as we walked through the woods, he said:
"You remember I said I would come for you. You got the advantage of brother Tom, but I don't think you'll get much ahead of me.
Go more to the left."

After a walk of about twenty minutes he said:

"Stop, now, and back up against that tree and put your hands behind you."

What was the use of asking him if he meant to murder me! Of course he did! I could read it in his looks and actions, and wondered that he did not shoot me as we walked through the woods. I backed up to the tree, put my hands behind me, and he came around and drew them behind the tree and made them fast. I was sorry then that I had not made an effort to save my life, though any struggle of mine must have resulted in my receiving a bullet.

"There! Now!" he said, as he finished tying, and came in front of me. "Now I'm going to have my fun. You've — among the boys, hanging and shooting, but you won't bother us any more! I'm going to scalp you the first thing, and then we'll do something else!"

"You can't be such an inhuman fiend as that!" I exclaimed, twisting on my bonds.

"I can't eh?" he laughed, producing a bowie knife and stropping it on his boot leg.

"If you want to kill me, why don't you shoot me?" I asked.

"Because that wouldn't hurt you enough!" he replied, rising up. "I shall twist your scalp off as neatly as an Indian could do it, and then I'll slice off your ears!"

I drew in my breath to shout, but he seized my throat and choked me until sparks of fire danced before my eyes.

"None o' that he growled, as he let go; "just give one yell and I'll open your throat from ear to ear!"

He threw off my hat, seized a handful of hair, and said: "Here goes to revenge poor Tom!"

The last words were on his lips when he staggered back, raised his arm, and I felt a pain in my shoulder. After what seemed a whole minute I heard the report of a shotgun, and Red Jack sank down.— There was a boyish yell, and little Dan bounded past me, waving the clubbed gun, and he struck the dying outlaw over the head until the stock was broken and the barrel bent, though the man was dead when the first blow fell.

In searching for the horse, Dan had discovered Red Jack prowling through the woods. The boy found the pony, made a long circuit home, and reached there soon after I left.
He knew Jack was waiting for me, and without saying a word to any one, he shouldered the gun and took my trail, and came upon us just at the right moment. In firing the shot he buried a few of them in my shoulder, and the rest in the out-law's jugular, but the wound I got was of no account.

When the villagers went out for the body, and heard the story, they made up a purse of $200 for Dan, and I aided him to get the county rewards. I was made his guardian, and to-day he is one of the most successful business men along the Southern sea-board, all the credit for which belongs to himself.

It is wonderful how silent a man can be when he knows his cause is just, and how boisterous he becomes when he knows he is in the wrong.

No man ever looked on the dark side of life without finding it.

The Meanest Trick.

THE SAD STORY OF A NEW HAT AND AN OLD CHEESE.—Probably the meanest trick that was ever played on a white man was played last week in Cincinnati and the fact that there is no vigilance committee here is the only reason the perpetrators of the trick are alive. A business man had just purchased a new stiff hat, and he went into a saloon with a half dozen friends to fit the hat on his head. They all took beer, and passed the hat around, so all could see it. One of the meanest men that ever held a county office went to the bar-tender and had a thin slice of Limburger cheese cut off, and when the party were looking at the frescoed ceiling through beer-glasses, this wicked person slipped the cheese under the sweat-leather of the hat, and the man put it on and walked out. The man who owned the hat is one of your nervous people who is always complaining of being sick and who feels as though some dreadful disease was going to take possession of him and carry him off. He went back to his place of business, took off his hat and laid it on the table, and proceeded to answer some letters. He thought he detected a smell, and when his partner asked him if he didn't feel sick, he said he believed he did. The man turned pale and said he guessed he would go home.
He met a man on the sidewalk who said the air was full of miasma, and in the street car a man who sat next to him moved away to the end of the car, and asked him if he had just come from Chicago. The man with the hat said he had not, when the stranger said they were having a great deal of small pox there, and he guessed he would get out and walk; and he pulled the bell and jumped off. The cold perspiration broke out on the forehead of the man with the new hat, and he took it off to wipe his forehead when the whole piece of cheese seemed to roll over and breathe, and the man got the full benefit of it, and he came near fainting away. He got home; his wife met him and asked him what was the matter. He said he believed mortification had set in, and she took off his hat, and said she should think it had. "Where did you get into it?" said she.
"Get into it?" said the man. "I have not got into anything, but some deadly disease has got hold of me, and I shall not live." She told him if any disease that smelled like that had got hold of him and was going to be chronic, she felt as though he would be a burden to himself if he lived very long. She got his clothes off, soaked his feet in mustard water, and he slept. The man slept and dreamed that a small-pox flag was hung in the front of his house and that he was riding in a butcher wagon to the pest-house.— The wife sent for a doctor, and when the man of pills arrived she told him all about the case. The doctor picked up the patient's new hat, tried it on and got a sniff. He said the hat was picked before it was ripe. The doctor and the wife held a post-mortem examination of the hat, and found the slice of Limburger. "Few and short were the prayers they said." They woke the patient; and to prepare his mind for the revelation that was about to be made, the doctor asked him if his worldly affairs were in a satisfactory condition. He gasped and said they were. The doctor asked him if he had made his will. He said he had not, but wanted a lawyer sent for at once. The doctor asked him if he felt as though he was prepared to shuffle off. The man said he had always tried to lead a different life, and had tried to be done by the same as he would do it himself, but that he might have made a misdeal some way, and he would like to have a minister sent for to take an account of stock.

Then the doctor brought to the bedside the hat, opened the sweat leather and showed the dying man what it was that smelled so and told him he was as well as any man in the city. The patient pinched himself to see if he was alive, and jumped out of bed and called for his revolver; and the doctor couldn't keep up with him on the way down town. The last we saw of the obor-iferous citizen he was trying to bribe the bar tender to tell him which one of those pelicans it was that put that slice of cheese in his hat lining.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

A blithe heart makes a blooming visage.

He that pryeth into every cloud may be stricken with a thunderbolt.
Events are not in our power; but always is to make a good use of even the worst.

There are none that fall so unpit-ied, as those that have raised themselves upon the spoils of the public.

When a man owns himself to be in an error, he does but tell you in other words that he is wiser than he was.

Four things belong to a judge—to hear cautiously, to answer wisely, to consider soberly and to decide impartially.

They who have an honest and engaging look, ought to suffer a double punishment if they belie it in their actions.

The treasure house of a man's life is his heart, and he who has nothing there is poverty-stricken, though he roll in gold; while he who has a good deal there is rich, whether he has a roof over his head or not.

Hand-Shaking.

How did people get in the habit of shaking hands? The answer is not far to seek. In early and barbarous times, when every savage, or semi-savage was his own lawgiver, judge, soldier and policeman, and had to watch over his own safety, in default of all other protection, two friends and acquaintances, or two strangers desiring to be friends or acquaintances, when they chanced to meet, offered each other the right hand—the hand alike of offense and defense, the hand that wields the sword, the dagger, the club, the tomahawk, or other weapons of war.
Each did this to show that the hand was empty, and neither war nor treachery was intended. The custom of hand-shaking prevails, more or less, among all civilized nations.

Judgment of Men.

Don't judge a man by the clothes he wears. God made one and the tailor the other.

Don't judge him by his family connections, for Cain belonged to a very good family.

Don't judge a man by his failure in life, for many a man fails because he is too honest to succeed.

Don't judge a man by his speech, for a parrot talks, but the tongue is but an instrument of sound.

Don't judge a man by the house he lives in, for the lizard and the rat often inhabit the grandest structures.

Six things, says Hamilton, are requisite to create a happy home. Integrity must be the architect, and tid-iness the upholsterer. It must be warmed by affection, and lighted up with cheerfulness, and industry must be the ventilator, renewing the atmosphere and bringing in salubrity every day; while over all, a protecting canopy of glory, and nothing will suffice except the blessing of God.

The standard of a good cow should be 8,000 pounds of milk a year.

AN INNER VIEW OF LOCAL OPTION.

The true "inwardness" of the popular agitation of late, if it means anything at all, means a desire for the removal of the dire consequences of intemperance in the use of intoxicating drinks. Temptation is the inciting cause of evil, under all circumstances; remove the temptation and the tendency to obliquity of conduct is removed. This necessarily is the sum and substance of the movement, which now claims public attention. The experiments of societies, with their pledges and general moral aims, have long been tried and found wanting.

There are those who think it derogatory to their manhood, to pledge themselves to a course, which the instincts of manly character, and a sense of self-respect, should effect without other aid, while a pledge once broken, opens the way for an easy descent to utter ruin; and to be pledged to refrain, whilst surrounded by temptation in every alluring form, puts weak human nature to a test beyond the power of resistance; hence the wonder is, not that so many pledges are broken but that any are kept.

Thus, then, as we have said, the effort now is to remove temptation. When a man gets into a losing business, he puts forth his strength and tries to escape from the surrounding difficulty. Even so in the matter before us, no dalliance, no half way measures, it has been found, can bring relief, and thus the cry goes forth—"escape to the mountains."

Our attention is claimed to a law laid before us, for our approval or rejection. We have nothing at all to do with the laws of Maine, Connecticut, Pennsylvania or elsewhere; we have not time even to examine their import. Whatever may be their defects, will necessarily be shown in the course of their execution. All analogy would lead us to anticipate that there may be defects in some of the prohibition laws; when these are discovered they can be corrected at home; with them we have nothing to do, our law is before us; will it likely accomplish its intended ends? Is it so framed as to meet our needs? We take for granted that every good citizen desires to promote his own good, and that of his neighbors, hence the consideration of the objects aimed at, and the mode of reaching them under the proposed law, are what claims our thoughts and our action.

The United States and England are known as the two countries in which drunkenness most prevails, they are the countries in which ardent spirits most abound. From what we have learned of travellers, intoxication is rarely found in the interior countries of Europe; and notably in Germany, it is most found in the seaport city of Hamburg, whose commerce brings it into such direct connexion with England and the United States.

There is every reason to believe that under the "local option" law, we may attain to a like state of exemption from the vice, for its provisions are wisely framed to being about the same conditions. Under the law no one can give away, any of the forbidden drinks at his place of business, otherwise the monopoly of business would be in the hands of those whose ingenuity could most concentrate trade irrespective of merit. Then the laws rightly exercise supervision, over business pursuits generally. Its mandate is, thus far and no farther, but at the same time it recognizes the citizen's home, as his castle and defends him therein. Cases of emergency are also provided for to meet every requirement.

In the light then, of measures intended to secure the greatest good to the greatest number, have we considered these questions. We have in no wise contemplated the subject in the spirit of glorification over the downfall of any man's business or prospects, but rather that of the up-lifting of the people to the plane of enlightened purpose and of increased domestic happiness and prosperity.

Those who mean to act intelligently in the premises, will keep their eyes fixed upon the law in itself, which can readily be inspected, they will not be misled by false representations or designing pervasions of its plain provisions.

THE SETTLEMENT OF THIS NEIGHBORHOOD, AND THE FOUNDING OF EMMITSBURG.—Through the kindness of an elderly citizen, we have been furnished with a collection of notes, historical and general, which go back to the founding of "Poplar Fields," afterwards changed to Emmitsburg, and the settlement of the neighborhood. As soon as we can find time to put them in proper form we shall print them in our paper.

These notes are authentic having descended in the family of one of the founders of the village. Our readers may expect a treat in their perusal, and the record will be in a form for preservation. It will admit of additions hereafter, as circumstances may favour. We can only add now, be patient until our arranging can be completed.

THE papers of last Monday contained accounts of a horrible outrage, committed by a negro named John Diggs, alias John Dorsey, on Saturday night, upon the person of Mrs. James Tschiffely, living near Darnestown, in Montgomery county, a lady of cultivation and refinement, and whose husband is a prominent and wealthy gentleman of that place. Indignation was aroused to the highest pitch, and the villain was captured on Monday and that night was hanged to a cherry tree near Rockville. So goes lynch law. It is in order now, we believe, to protest against leaving families, in isolated places, without provision for their protection.

MADRID, July 23.—An official dispatch, dated at Manila, July 21, says there was another shock of earthquake at that place, which lasted 55 seconds. Not a single public edifice was spared. The Convent of Guadalupe, which had lasted three centuries, was destroyed. Nobody was killed. The inhabitants are encamped outside the town.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July, 27th. More than a full month has elapsed since the nomination of Hancock and English and no letters of acceptance from them.

Republican speakers are waiting impatiently to commence their onslaught upon Democracy, and the Democratic orators are as anxiously waiting the word from their leaders to start upon their mission of converting voters into the belief that their is the only party under which the nation can reach the highest pinnacle of prosperity and wealth.—To one who impartially observes the situation, at present it is plain to see that the Democratic party starts out under advantages that handled properly will go a long way toward success, but that they lack the perfect organization of the Republicans, and are failing to secure that preliminary advantage of National organization now being earnestly carried on by the dominant party. There is no changing the fact that Republicans are active and confident and that the Democrats, who should be confident in view of their success in wresting the control of the two Houses out of the hands of their opponents, are very slow in getting into line for the support of their "superb" candidate. Each party is haredicapped in this way. The Democrats of the North have enthusiasm enough, but they lack at least at this time, the spirit to begin even the preliminary work of a National Campaign, and the liberality to contribute money for a campaign fund.

The Republicans on the other hand, have no proper organization in the South, though in a number of States in that section, the Democratic party is eaten up with dissensions. These are drawbacks, and the victory turns almost upon the success in overcoming them.

Weaver is the sanguine candidate for this campaign. Even if he is doomed to overwhelming defeat, he can enjoy several months of such mental elevation as no other sane man, perhaps in the world is capable of. He writes that his tour through the South has been 'one grand ovation,' and that men travel 'forty miles by wagon' to hear him speak.

Weaver's utterances and predictions since his nomination, compell the opinion that what he regards as a "grand ovation" would be a very disappointing turn out to a man less hopeful than he. The truth is that the Weaver ticket will not be heard of in the South on election day, and the head now being developed between the two great parties, will fuse into themselves every element of strength now claimed for the "party of the centre."

Hon. Horace Maynard, the new postmaster General, is expected to arrive here and assume the duties of the office early next week.

The six vacancies of second lieutenants in the army have been agreed upon. The States receiving these appointments, are Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Maryland, South Carolina, Missouri and Delaware. The names of the appointees are as yet withheld. MERRILL.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The late Father Farrell, of St. Joseph's Church, died comparatively poor, as he was very liberal in his benefactions during his life. By his will, which has been offered for probate, he bequeaths $5,000 in Alabama state bonds to the Church of St. Joseph, "to be used for the relief of the sober and honest poor of the distinction of race or religion," and $5,000 in the same bonds "for the purpose of aiding in the erection or purchase of a Catholic church in this city for the colored Catholics of African descent." And he wishes whatever may be left to be used "in support of destitute children belonging to the parish of the Church of St. Joseph."

Pictorial History

THE WORLD!

The work embraces full and authentic accounts of every nation of ancient and modern times, and includes a History of the rise and fall of the Greek and Roman Empires, the growth of the Nations of Modern Europe, the Middle Ages, the Crusades, the Pandal System, the Reformation, the discovery and settlement of the New World, &c., by James D. McCabe, a well known historical writer.

The want of a more elaborate History of the World, covering the whole period from the creation to the present day, and presenting in a succinct and entertaining form, the history of the various nations of the world has long been felt.—This want is met in this work, which is destined to take rank as a Standard History. The history of each country is related separately, and in the clearest and most comprehensive manner, and the deeds of all the great actors in the events of ancient and modern history are brought before the reader in the most vivid style. The book is a complete treasury of history, and constitutes a library of historical information, such as has never before been offered to the public. It contains 1200 large double column pages, and is magnificently embellished with engravings and portraits which are genuine works of art. There is not a dry page in the book. Mr. McCabe has a happy faculty of condensing history, and saving the reader from wading through an immensity of dry details and bringing him at once to the event.—Every one who desires a careful and accurate knowledge of history will do well to examine this work.

If Dr. Tanner succeeds in his forty days' fast, doubtless the keepers of boarding-houses and hotels will profit thereby, as ambitious persons will follow the Doctor's example.

It is said we are to have another coloured Band in town, which will make four Cornet Bands in the place. We don't think any of our sister towns with 900 inhabitants can beat this.

MR. JOHN DONOHUE is repairing the footway in front of his residence, on the square. His plan seems to embrace the idea of fencing out, loafers on the one side, and fencing them in on the other.—The improvement will prove a public benefit.

Mrs. FRANCIS E. HARPER and Dr. P. Seaton, the distinguished colored speakers, will speak in Lincoln Hall, this (Friday) evening. Benton Dully, Esq., of Gettysburg, will speak Sunday afternoon and night and in the square Monday night.

MONDAY evening the heavens grew suddenly dark, the great black clouds lung overhead in most threatening forms, the wind blew, and great clouds of dust were hurled hither and thither, people betook themselves within doors and got ready for a glorious rain—and that was all of it—presently the quiet stars shone forth and erewhile the silvery moon beamed smilingly through the light mist of one of the pleasantest nights of the summer.

AN old lady on Shakespeare street remarked the other day, "It's queer what a lot of remedy for snake bites the men take with 'em when they go a fishing now-a-days. The snakes never trouble 'em, but they never bring home any of the remedy."

THE Emmitt House at this time is taxed to its capacity, besides a full house, they have to secure rooms away from the hotel building. The Western Maryland Hotel we are pleased to see, is also rapidly filling up with boarders. The result is increased business and life to the village.

AN ARREST OF JUDGMENT.—Before proceeding to execute the mandate of Lynch's court on the fiend John Diggs, at Rockville, last Monday night, the lynchers paused long enough for a very short prayer, which they offered. This is certainly a new departure. The world moves.

A NUMBER of boys were playing in a Lancaster saw mill lately, when William Fetter, aged 13, son of the proprietor, was pushed against a circular saw, which entered his right side, cutting a gash seven or eight inches deep and penetrating the lobe of the lung to a distance of three inches. The right arm was also badly cut.

OUR town was visited by a party from Mechanicstown, consisting of six couples mounted on horse-back, on Tuesday evening; after riding through the streets they repaired to the Emmitt House, where the Landlord, Mr. W. K. Burton, served them with ice cream, lemonade, and cakes; at 10 o'clock p. m., they left for their homes.

ATTENTION is called to the account of "The Pictorial History of the World," which appears in another column of this issue of our paper. The agent is in town, persons desiring the work will do well to consult him, and to examine the book itself, and secure a copy whilst the opportunity is at hand. We think the book fully sustains its claims for consideration.

SOME of the political papers state that matters are at a sort of a stand still in Washington city, by reason of a want of material for the "outrage mill." Why can't some one send on the account of the disturbance of the "Local Option" meeting at Urbana last Saturday? The District surely is sufficiently South for the purpose.

WEEKLY NEWS is the title of a small paper issued weekly at Mechanicstown, by Mr. Emory M. Groff, Editor and Proprietor, of which we have received the 2d and 3d numbers. It presents a neat appearance and gives a well selected amount of reading for its size. We think the heading would be improved by a definite article at its beginning. We trust the young Editor may realize success in his energetic experiment.

LIST OF LETTERS.—The following letters remain in the Post Office, Emmitsburg, Md., July 26th, 1880. Persons calling will please say advertised, otherwise they may not receive them: Boughton, Jonah Long, Mr. J. K. Brown, John Riley, Miss Mary C. Cornillon, Chas. Riley, Miss L. C. Davis, Sarah C. Riley, Miss Mamie C. Eck, Barbara Stuller, Miss Elizabeth Hoffman, Elizabeth Wirell, Miss Tilly COLLEGE NEWS.—Among the distinguished persons who visited Mt. St. Mary's College during the week were: Rt. Rev. Robert Seton, a member of the Household of the Holy Father; Sisters, Amoretia and Baptista of Chestnut Hill, Phila.; Sister Mary of Flushing, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mr. Rice, daughter and lady friends of Baltimore. The venerable President, the Very Rev. Dr. McCloskey, gave them a cordial reception.

FOR the benefit of persons disposed to act on the idea that the Fish Law of Frederick and Carroll counties has expired, we again publish the new law of April 10th, 1880:

Chapter 425. An Act for the better protection of Fish in the waters of Frederick and Carroll Counties.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to take, catch or destroy, any fish in the waters of Frederick or Carroll counties, except with hook or line, or by use of the dip net, provided that the Potomac river shall be exempted from the provisions of this Act.

Sec. 2. Fixes the penalty at not less than five dollars nor more than ten dollars, with imprisonment in the county jail in case of non-payment.

OBITUARY.—It is with the deepest regret we have to announce the death of Mrs. Jane Gardner, beloved wife of William Gardner, Esq., and daughter of Robert Fleming (deceased). This estimable lady was born, September, 1813, and trained to the practice of virtue by an exemplary mother. Her gentle disposition and sweetness of manner endeared her to a host of friends, her charity and hospitality were proverbial.—She leaves a devoted husband, and a large circle of friends to mourn her loss. We will conclude this short notice of her whom we loved in life, and mourn in death, by quoting the text of Rev. Wm. Simonton's funeral Sermon. "Blessed are the dead, who die in the Lord." The remains were interred in Tom's Creek cemetery, where so many of her ancestors are resting in Peace.

ST. NICHOLAS for August opens with a fancy picture of "Hop o' my Thumb," followed by the story of the "Fox and the Stork," by Susan Coolidge; "The Darning-needle," "Pussy and her Elephant," a continuation of Miss Alcott's story of "Jack and Jill," "The Coral Castle," "Placer and Gulch mining," "A Happy thought for Street Children," "Why the Black Cat winked," a continuation of "The Fairport Nine," "Marjorie's Peril," and a great deal for very little readers, with the usual amount of happy illustrations. Price $3.00 a year, Scribner & Co., New York.

DEATH OF A MINISTER.—We perform a sad duty in announcing the death of Rev. John Ault, which took place at his residence, in Littlestown, on Monday afternoon about 4 o'clock, of typhoid fever. Deceased graduated at Franklin and Marshall College in 1857, in the class with Wm. A. Duncan, Esq., of this place; studied for the ministry of the Reformed church, and soon became one of its most active and efficient pastors.—His death, at probably 45 years, in the midst of usefulness, will bow many a heart in sorrow. Peace to his ashes.—Compiler.

OUR streets are in fine order, they are smooth and level. They become dry in twenty four hours after a rain, and get very dusty. The temptation to drive over them rapidly is great. But we earnestly think there should be reasonable consideration on the part of persons thus using them, for the rights and comfort of others; Outside of town the roads are all good, there is the place for the fun to come in. We make the suggestion in the interest of persons, whose enjoyment is limited to their homes.—Be not in a hurry until out of town; instead of hurrying through it, and then loitering on the outskirts, as the case often happens, reverse the order. On Sunday too, some persons drive like forty through town, and then walk their horses home.

[COMMUNICATED.] MR. EDITOR:—Permit one who loves the light to inquire through your columns, why our street lamps are kept in such a condition, that they benefit no one but the man who is paid for attending to them and the merchant who sells the oil? Surely lamps were placed in the streets for the purpose of lighting them, but the citizens groping their way through our streets at night, find the clouded rays from the lamps, just sufficient to make "darkness visible," and can but wonder why it is necessary to purchase oil, and pay a man, to meek us with the dim excuse for light which we have had to endure for months. If there is light at the top of the lamp-posts, we ask that the surrounding be so improved, that it may be seen. INQUIRER.

AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—About a week ago we received from the Post Office, an envelope duly stamped and postage paid, which we opened in the expectation of receiving a communication—when lo! and behold it contained a circular, which on inspection proved to be only a reprint of the Editorial of the Maryland Union, of the 22nd inst., with the new heading, "Why Local Option should be defeated." Of course we felt somewhat flattered to be thus deemed worthy of consideration in the generosity and disinterested benevolence, which has scattered the said document over the county. Its disjointed logic, its bold inferences, its tearful interest on behalf of the poor, and public spirited concern about justice to the tax-payers generally, with all the verbiage, perversion of facts and misrepresentation betimes, we doubt not has been gladly hailed in the ranks of the opponents of "Local Option." It is not in our nature to overlook what we believe to be well meant intentions, hence our acknowledgments. Accompanying the document was a ticket, "against Local Option," all ready for the voter's use, indicating the "worldly wisdom," which governs the projectors of the plan of operations. The committee can have the ticket on application. We have no use for it.

[COMMUNICATED.] EMMITSBURG, July 26th, 1880.

MR. EDITOR:—The Rev. E. S. Johnston delivered an excellent sermon on Sunday morning last, in his usual earnest and forcible manner, on the all absorbing subject of intemperance. His remarks were based upon the words found in the 97th Psalm and part of the 10th verse—"Ye that love the Lord hate evil," in which he set forth clearly the fact that there is a distinct line of demarcation between evil and good; that the course adopted and pursued by the christian admitted of no hesitation, in eschewing the one and following the other. That it is only necessary for the christian to inform himself as to the character of the question presented for his consideration to determine his action in reference to it. The question now before this community, is, shall we encourage the fearful evil of intemperance or use our influence to repress it? We knew that it is the fruitful source of disease and crime, that poverty and wretchedness necessarily follow in its wake, and that the evils it produces, are transmitted from one generation to another, and that it is in our power, at least, to lend a hand at the work of its destruction, or to help to perpetuate it. Those who love the Lord should see to that they hate evil and use their efforts for its destruction. D.

AMONG the wise sayings of Sancho Panza, it may well be doubted whether there is any which touches a tenderer chord in the human heart, than that which reads, "Blessed is the man who invented sleep!" In the delightful nights, since the intermission of the "heated term," most persons, we trust have had a pleasant realization of the sentiment. To sleep well and healthfully is to enjoy one of the greatest delights incident to life; After the fatigue of daily work, to commend oneself to slumber with the words of the trusty squire, seems like laying aside care, whilst the sense of rest possesses the body, leaving care and work and trouble waiting in the shadowy background. We always feel like uncovering our head, before a person asleep, and the concession of stepping lightly, about reposing mortality, whether its subject be an infant, a youth or an aged person, is but a tribute due, to one of the best gifts which kind heaven bestows on all whose living earns its sweetness, and its calm, quiet composure and renovation.

THE next four paragraphs are taken from the Frederick Times:

At a meeting of the Agricultural Society held at the court-house on Saturday last, President Schley, presiding, Mr. John T. Best, a well-known and prosperous farmer, residing near this city, was elected chief marshal for the next annual exhibition. President Schley stated that he had been in communication with a number of prominent gentlemen of the county in relation to their attending the next fair and that Hon. Daniel Vorhees, Gen. Wade Hampton and Gov. Hoyt, of Pennsylvania, had signified their intention to be present.—Mr. Vorhees will no doubt deliver the address. Gov. Hoyt will probably be accompanied on his visit by several companies of military and the State Capital Band, of Harrisburg.

The printers of the city contemplate holding a picnic at Black Rock on the 7th prox. The committee of arrangements is composed of the following gentlemen: J. Edward Doll, of the Examiner; J. William Ebert, of the Times, Marcellus Shuffler, of the Citizen; Henry T. Mahler, of the Union.

The contract for repairing and erecting the wrecked bridge at the Church Hill Ford has been given by the county commissioners to the King Iron Bridge Company, of Cleveland, O., at a bid of $275. The stone-work will be done by Isaiah Moser for $295.

The county commissioners have closed a contract with the King Iron Bridge Company, of Cleveland, O., for a new iron bridge, 176 feet span, 14 feet roadway, over Catocin Creek, near the Dunker church, Catocin district, for $1,025. The contract for the stone work on this bridge, was given to Chas. A. Weaver and Geo. W. Cramer. The stone work will cost $224.

Agricultural.

Clover as a Renovator.

A Minnesota farmer says the best farmers of Minnesota are beginning to renovate their land by plowing in clover. They sow the seed in Spring with spring wheat; the next Spring it makes a heavy growth that is plowed in when in blossom; the land is followed the rest of the season and wheat sown the next Spring. Practice has shown that one crop of clover manures for three crops of wheat; thus, by growing and ploughing in clover one year in every four, the land can be kept in good condition for growing wheat. He also states that it is the custom of market gardeners in the vicinity of Western cities to use large quantities of manure, as it can be had for the carting, but as it is very strawy—straw being so abundant at the West—they draw it home, pile it, and let it rot for a season, before using it; but one enterprising gardener said that he had proved by experience that he could keep his vegetable land in good condition by growing clover and plowing it in cheaper than he could by drawing and handling manure, which cost nothing at the stable. A crop of clover one year in three, followed by fallow for the rest of the season, which helps to clear the land from weeds, is the most economical way he has found to fertilize for and cultivate market garden vegetables.

To keep cucumber vines in bearing, it is extremely important that the fruit should be gathered early and often. The smaller the cucumbers are when gathered, the more productive the vines will be. If not allowed to grow more than three inches long, I think fully as great a bulk will be produced as if left longer, and being small the pickles will be more valuable. This is well understood by market gardeners, and the enormous yield sometimes reported are more due to careful attention in picking than to variety or other differences in treatment.

SPINACH for summer use should be sowed early in spring, in drills eight inches to one foot apart, covering the seed one inch deep. Select rich soil, and manure liberally. A succession may be obtained by sowing at intervals of two weeks through the season. For very early spring use sow in August.

VALUABLE RECIPES.

To SLICE HOT BREAD.—Simply heat the carving knife. This will prevent the bread from being clammy when sliced.

To CLEAR MUDDY WATER.—Fasten a lump of alum as large as an egg to a string and let it down slowly into the water two or three times; then take it out. In two or three hours all the mud will settle to the bottom of the pitcher and leave the water clear.

To CLEAN DECANTERS.—When making cake or omelette, take your discarded egg shells, crush them into small bits, put them into your decanters, three parts filled with cold water, and thoroughly shake them. The glass will look new, and all kinds of glass washed in the same water will look equally as well.

It is claimed that if a couple of handfuls of the common black walnut leaves are put in a vessel of water all night and next morning boiled for fifteen to twenty minutes, then, when cold, take a sponge or rag and moisten the eyes, neck, legs, &c., of a horse, the flies will give those places a wide berth. In some cases this application may be valuable.

PUDDING WITHOUT MILK OR EGGS.—Make a dough as for biscuits, or to every pint of flour one teaspoon of baking powder, half tablespoon of melted suet or butter, saltspoon of salt, water or sweet milk to make a soft dough; roll half-inch thick, cover with fruit of any kind, sprinkle white sugar and roll, pressing the edge down and ends together; lay a cloth in a steamer, place the dough on it and steam an hour. If dried fruits are used, they should first be stewed. Serve with sauce. This may be warmed over by steaming. Excellent, and may be made with chopped suet and steamed three hours.

Humorous.

ADVERTISEMENT—"two sisters want washing." Doubtless a few thousand brothers are in the same predicament.

This is the way a country doctor, according to a foreign exchange, consoled a widow: "I cannot tell how pained I was to hear that your husband had gone to heaven. We were bosom friends, but now we shall never meet again."

TOM BROWN tells of a roguish boy who said to a traveler warming his feet at the fire: "Take care sir, or you'll burn your spurs!" "My boots, you mean," quoth the traveler. "No, Sir; I mean your spurs; your boots are burned already."

A SUNDAY-SCHOOL visitor, who was interrogating the children, asked the question: Why was Lot's wife turned into a pillar of salt? There was a pause, and then a small boy, with a preternatural growth of head, piped out, "I s'pose it was because she was too fresh."

An old fellow whose daughter had failed to secure a position as teacher, in consequence of not passing an examination said: "They asked her about lots of things she didn't know. Look at the history questions! They asked her about things that happened before she was born! How was she to know them? Why they asked her about old George Washington and other men she never knew. That was a pretty sort of examination."

THE most original verdict was that of an Irish jury before whom a prisoner pleaded 'Guilty,' throwing himself on the mercy of the court.—The verdict was 'Not guilty.' The judge, in surprise, exclaimed, 'Why, he has confessed his crime!'

The foreman responded: 'Oh, my lord, you do not know that fellow but we do. He is the most notorious liar in the whole country, and no twelve men who knew his character can believe a word he says.'

So the prisoner escaped, as the jury adhered to their verdict.

In India each elephant is attended by a keeper, who has to give it its food. A gentleman suspected that one of his elephants did not get his due quantity of rice, and one day he charged a keeper with stealing the rice which he should have given to the elephant. The man began to deny the charge, and was declaring his innocence in the most solemn way, when the animal, which was standing by, raised its trunk, lifted the man's turban from his head, and shook it, when out fell a quantity of rice! The thief, thus convicted at once fell down and confessed his crime.

"I HAVE been sendin' my darter Nancy to skool, and last Friday I went over to the skool to see how she was gettin' along, and I seed things I didn't like by no means.—The skool-master was larnin' her things entirely out of the line of edycation, and as I think improper. I set awhile in the skool house and heard one class say their lesson.—The lesson that Nancy said was nuthin but the foolish kind of talk; the rediculist words she said was 'I love.' I looked at her for bein' so improper, but she went right on and sed, 'thou loves' and 'he loves.'—And I reckon you never heard such a rignmarole in your life—love, love, love and nothin' but love. She said one time, 'I did love.' Sez I, 'who did you love?' The skolars laffed, but I wasn't to be put off, and said, 'Who did you love, Nancy?' The skoolmaster said he would explain when Nancy had finished the lesson. This sorter pacified me, and Nancy went on with her awful love talk.—It got wus and wus every word. She sed, 'I might or would love.' I stopped her again and sed I reckon I would see about that, and told her to walk out of that house. The skoolmaster tried to interfere, but I would not let him say a word. He said I was a fool, and I knocked him down, and I made him holler in short order. I talked the strate thing to him. I told him I'd show him to learn my darter grammar. I got the nabers together, and we sent him off in a hurry, and I reckon thar'd be no more grammar teachin' in these parts soon."

Literary Revolution and Universal Knowledge.

An Encyclopedia in 20 Vols., over 16,000 pages; 10 per cent more matter than any Encyclopedia ever before published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution.

THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE is a reprint entire of the last (1879) Edinburgh edition of "Chambers's Encyclopedia," with about 40 per cent of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readers, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority of those who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest Encyclopedia in the field.

Specimen Volumes in either style will be sent for examination with privilege of return on receipt of proportionate price per volume.

Special Discounts to all early subscribers, and extra discounts to clubs. Full particulars with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, sent free.

Leading principles of the American Book Exchange:

I. Publish only books of real value.
II. Work upon the basis of present cost of making books, about one half what it was a few years ago.
III. Sell to buyers direct, and save them the 50 to 60 per cent. commission commonly allowed to dealers.
IV. The cost of books when made 10,000 at a time is but a fraction of the cost when made 500 at a time—adopt the low price and sell the large quantity.
V. Use good type, paper, etc., do careful printing, and strong, neat binding, but avoid all "padding," fat and heavily-leaded type, spongy paper and gaudy binding, which are so commonly resorted-to to make books appear large and fine, and which greatly add to their cost, but do not add to their value.
VI. To make $1 and a friend is better than to make $5 and an enemy.

GLANDING'S
Patent Trunk, Patented September 30, 1879, by Thomas Glanding,
Baltimore, Md.

This Trunk is presented to the public, and the special attention of buyers is called to its advantages.

The body and lid of the trunk are made in the usual manner.

The trays, which are a special feature, are divided into two sections, the smaller tray or parol case being attached to the lid, is raised out of the body when the lid is raised.

The larger or main tray is attached to the ends of the body by means of parallel arms, so that the tray may be raised and carried back into the lid in its original horizontal position, and is supported on the arms, thus giving access to the body of the trunk.

The arms are pivoted to plates of suitable metal, on which are knobs or projections to stop their motion and prevent the tray from falling back against the lid.

We ask the ladies when in town to call and examine the Trunk at GEO. A. GILBERT'S
Hat, Boot & Shoe Store,
NO 16 N. MARKET ST., Frederick City, Maryland.

Ask for Glanding's Patent Trunk.
Use no other. mar 1880
