A BOOK OF POEMS.

To-day I found in a drawer,
Where I had not looked for years,
A volume of little poems,
And my eyes grow blind with tears
As I turned the yellow pages,
And found some daisies dead,
That marked the last sweet poem
My darling ever read.

How well I can remember
That afternoon in May
We saw the white-sailed vessels
Go sailing down the Bay!
And our ships went sailing outward
As far as ships could be,
Bound for the far-off island,
In love's enchanted sea.

She read me this quaint, sweet poem,
Her little hand in mine—
I can hear the throbbing ocean,
And see the blue blue waves shine—
And like some dream of sorrow,
The years have passed away,
And I am by her side again,
This afternoon in May.

I look in her eyes and listen
To her voice so soft and sweet,
As her lips this strange, sweet fancy
Of the poet's brain repeat,
And think that love is a poem,
So old and yet so new—
The sweetest of all sweet poems
To those who make it true.

Ah! but the poem ended!
The beautiful dream is done!
The fairest flowers are the frailest
Of all flowers under the sun.
My book of life has its poems,
And the sweetest poem there
Is the memory of my darling
Safe where the angels are.

CHANGED BY YEARS.

She was a pretty girl, was Jemima—petite—that's what I like—bright eyes, luxuriant locks, a white and pink complexion, plump and compact. She was always in good humor, and we soon became the very best of friends—nay more—for who could help being affectionate toward her? Everybody loved her. When the boatman called her "a sweet little craft," they expressed though vulgarly, the sentiment of my heart. I was in love with Jemima, and Jemima—well, Jemima was not indifferent to me. I had not nerve to ask her, in so many words, would she accept my hand and name? I spoilt a quire of paper in the effort to utter my thoughts in a letter; so at last, on her birthday, the 15th of May, I ventured to present her with an elegantly bound book, and on a little slip of paper inside I wrote: "Dear Jemima:—By the acceptance of this trifling gift let me know you accept the giver! Alfred Barnstable Doughty."

I flatter myself it was rather a plucky thing to do, and it answered admirably.

Next time I saw her she was all of a glow, and when we were alone together, and I was standing rather near her, and said:

"You received my humble offering!" she burst into a flood of tears, put her arms around my neck, and spoilt my shirt front.

Then, when she recovered a little (do you believe in Niobe? I don't) she said:

"Have you asked pa?"

Of course I responded that I had not.

"Then do at once," she said; "for goodness gracious me, if he was to find us out in anything sly, and trying to keep it from him, it would be awful!"

It is good deal worse asking the governor than asking the girl, especially such a peppery old party as Captain Wattleborough; however, I screwed myself up, and when Jemima was down at our place, playing on our piano, and knew he would be making his evening toilet by putting on a pilot coat, I ventured to look in upon him. After a few words on ordinary topics, such as how were we both, and how was the weather, I hemmed and began: "Captain, I am ambitious."

"Right, boy—climb as high as you can."

"Don't encourage me too much, captain; I'm ambitious in your direction."

"Boy, you are not going to sea?"

"No, captain—I—I—I aspire to the honor of being your son-in-law!"

The captain looked me full in the face, then said:

"Have you money?"

Of course I hadn't, and he told me to go and get it before venturing to aspire to the hand of Jemima.

"But, my dear captain—" I ventured to expostulate.

"Get off my door-step!"

"Let me speak for a moment to Jemima."

"Get off my door-step!"

He accompanied this last instruction by a thrust which sent me staggering into the street.

My affair with Jemima was at an end. The captain would not listen to me. All the letters I wrote to Jemima were sent back to me. I grew weary packed up, and packed off, with a letter of introduction to a firm in China. We'll the fortune was not easy to make, but at the expiration of twenty years I began to think it sufficiently large to warrant my return to "the girl I left behind me." I had heard very little from home. Father and mother were still alive, but the captain was dead. They had carried him through the corn-fields one Summer's day to the little churchyard, and there they buried him.

Jemima, I understood, lived in the old house, and was still single. So—full of emotion, all the tenderness for the dear girl I had left behind me rapidly reviving—off I went, carpetbag and everything, just as I was, to have the old vows renewed and sealed in the usual manner.

A maiden with a freckled face, much sun-burnt, opened the door.—"Could I see Miss Wattleborough?" The maiden did not reply, but leaving me where I was, retired to the remote back settlements. Thence I heard the following dialogue:

"Missus!"

"Well, what is it?"

"Somebody wants you."

"Who is it?"

"A fat old man, with a bag."

There was further talk in a smothered whisper and then the girl returned, and motioning me with her finger, said:

"Come in here," and showed me into the parlor.

The old parlor, just as I had left it, neat and trim, the old harpsichord, the old punch bowl; but some new things—a canary in a cage at the window, a black, long-legged cat ensconced upon a chair.

The next minute a lady entered. Could it be? No, impossible—this pale-faced, sober-visaged lady, with stiff curls, and no more figure than a clock-case—could this be my Jemima? Where was the old lustre of the eyes—where the old bloom upon the cheeks—where the lips that were ruddier than the cherry?

She lifted up both hands when she saw me.

"Alfred!"

"Jemima!"

We shook hands; after a moment's hesitation we went further—more in accordance with old times.

My heart sank within me, however, as I sat down opposite to her and thought of what she was. She looked at me very steadily, and I thought I detected disappointment in her glance.

"We are both changed, Jemima."

"You are very much altered," she said.

"You are different," I responded.

"It is not generously observed, but you—"

"Well, my dear?"

"You have grown ridiculously stout, and you are bald-headed."

"You are not stout, my dear but your hair is not quite what it was."

"People say they see no change in me—that I preserve my childish appearance wonderfully."

"Humph!"

Our interview was not altogether agreeable. When we parted we contented ourselves with shaking hands.

That afternoon I wrote a note to her, suggesting that we did not renew our old engagement.

That afternoon she wrote a note, suggesting the very same idea to me. Our cross letters crossed.

We were to be friends nothing more.

But that could not last. I was the first to give in. I called upon her, and said a good deal, and she cried and then we said why not?

And then she put her head upon my breast and spoiled my shirt front as she had done before.

"You are not so very fat," she said, laughing.

"You are not so very lean," I said laughing also.

"You can wear a scalp," she responded.

So we both laughed again, and it was all settled. We were settled, and here we are out of the fog, and very much at your service—the happiest couple in our town.

Put Nobody on Guard.

In the spring of 1865, when Sheridan's cavalry moved up the Shenandoah Valley to have a last wrestle with Early's troopers, a halt was made by a portion of the Union force near Waynesboro. Guards were thrown out to protect property, and among others the house of a lone and aged widow received such protection. Two dismounted cavalrymen were stationed at the front door, and it was half an hour or so before any stir in or around the house gave token that it was inhabited. Then the widow limped to the door on a crutch and called one of the guards to her and asked:

"What are you doing here?"

"We are guards to protect you and your property," was the reply.

"Well, you needn't fool away any time here. Early he come and took our hay. Then Sheridan come and he took our corn. Then Mosby he stole our hams and taters. Then Sheridan took our flour and cider.—Then Early run off all our horses. All I had left this morning was an old sick mule and meal enough for one hoe-cake. The mule he died two hours ago and I've just eaten the last of the cake, and it you can find any thing worth guarding around here you can have it and tote it off."

"But some of the soldiers may disturb you."

"I guess not," she said and she pointed to the spot where a cannonball had torn through the house.—

"The day that hole was shot through there I was rocking and singing the 'Pilgrim's Hope,' and I didn't miss a rock or drop a note. I don't hardly think one brigade of horse sojers can disturb me very much.—You'll oblige me by joggin' along."

"How came these holes in your elbows?" said a widowed mother to her only son.

"Oh, mother, I hid behind the sofa when Colonel Gobler was saying to Maria that he'd take her even if you had to be thrown in; and he didn't know I was there; and so I held my tongue and laughed in my sleeves till I bust 'em."

A YOUNG lady wanted to know if the "crack" of a rifle is where they put the powder in.

Boss For Five Minutes.

HOW A TRAMP'S WISH WAS GRATIFIED AND HOW HE UTILIZED THE TIME.

Soon after the dinner-hour yesterday a specimen tramp appeared at the door of a house on John R. street, and before he could be ordered off the steps he began:

"Sir, I am a tramp."

"Yes, I see you are."

"But I am not here to ask for either food, money or clothing. I have just had a bite, my clothes are good enough, and if I had money I should get drunk and be sent up."

"Well, what do you want?"

"There are four tramps down street and I know they'll call here. It is now five years since I have been traveling around. I suppose I have been called a loafer and a thief and a deadbeat ten thousand times, and I have been shot at, clubbed, broomsticked and scalded times without record. Now I want a change."

"How?"

"Well, all I ask is that you let me represent your house when those tramps come up."

This was agreed to. He sat down on the steps, removed his hat, lighted the stub of a cigar and was reading a circular when the four fellows slouched up and entered the yard.

"What in Arkansas do you fellow want in my yard?" exclaimed the tramp as he rose up.

"Suthin' to eat," was the humble reply.

"Something to eat! Why, you miserable, thick-ribbed cadavers, go and earn it, then! Do you suppose I have nothing to do but keep a free hotel for loafers?"

"Can't get work," mumbled the biggest of the lot.

"Oh! you can't? been looking all around I suppose? Everybody got all the help he wants, eh? Want to be cashier and confidential advisors, don't you?"

"Nobody gives us a show," growled the third man.

"That's it! That's your cue! Nobody will take you in with your old rags and dirt and sore heels and weep over you, and ask you to please be good, and put you in the parlor bedroom and feed you on chicken broth! How awful it is that you can't be put on ice and laid away where you won't melt!"

"Will you give us something?" impudently demanded the fourth.

"Will I? You are just right I will give you five seconds to get outside the gate, and I'll tell you in addition that if I ever see you in this neighborhood again I'll tie you into hard knots and hire a sore-eyed dog to bite you to death? Git up and git! Move on—hurry—out with you!"

They shuffled out as fast as they could, and when they had turned the corner the tramp put on his hat, put out his inch of cigar for another smoke, and said to the gentleman:

"You have done me a great favor and I am grateful; I already feel better for the change, and I solemnly believe that if I could only have got an exense to throw 'em over the fence I should have been ready to reform and start out as a lecturer. Good-by. I shall never forget your kindness."

The fear of infection caused some persons at Memphis to burn all their clothing, and even the prayer-book of a deceased cholera patient was consigned to the flames; but six $10 bills found on his person were religiously preserved.

A Touching Story.

Once I knew a working man, a potter by business, who had one small invalid child at home. He wrought at his trade with exemplary fidelity, being always in the shop with the opening of day. He managed, how ever, to bear each evening to the bedside of the 'wee lad,' as he called him, a flower, or a bit of ribbon, a fragment of crimson glass,—indeed anything that would lie out on the white counterpane, and give a color in the room. He was a quiet, unsentimental Scotchman; but never went home at nightfall without some toy or trinket, showing he had remembered the wan face that lit up so when he came in.—I presume he never said to a living soul that he loved that boy so much. Still he went on patiently loving him. And by and by he moved that whole shop into positively real but unconscious fellowship with him. The workmen made curious little jars and teacups upon their wheels, and painted diminutive pictures down the sides before they stuck them in the corners of the kiln at burning time. One brought some fruit in the bulge of his apron, and another some engravings in a rude, scrap book. Not one of them whispered a word, for this solemn thing was not to be talked about. They put them in the old man's hat, where he found them; so he understood all about it. And I tell you seriously, that entire pottery full of men, of rather coarse fibre by nature, grew quiet as the months drifted, becoming gentle and kind, and some of the ungoverned ones stopped swearing, as the weary look on the patient fellow-worker's face told them beyond any mistake that the inevitable shadow was drawing nearer. Every day now somebody did a piece of his work for him, and put it up on the sandel plank to dry; thus he could come later and go earlier. So, when the bell tolled, and the little coffin came out of the door of the lowly house, right around the corner out of sight, there stood a hundred stalwart working-men from the pottery with their clean clothes on, most of whom gave a half day of time for the privilege of taking off their hats to the simple procession, filing in behind it, and following across the village green to its grave that small burden of a child, which probably not one of them had ever seen with his own eyes.

THERE is no use in drugging yourself to death, and buying all the vile medicines for internal use when you can be cured of fever and ague, dumb ague, bilious disorders, jaundice, dyspepsia, as well as all disorders and ailments of the liver, blood and stomach, by wearing one of Prof. Guilmette's French Liver Pads, which is a sure cure every time. If your druggist does not keep the pad, send $1.50 in a letter to French Pad Co., Toledo, O., and it will be sent you by mail. It is the only pad that is guaranteed to cure. Beware of counterfeits.

A GENTLEMAN walked into a grocery store yesterday morning and meeting a friend made the usual inquiry: "What's the latest news this morning?" "I have just bought a barrel of flour for a poor woman." "Ah, just like you: whom have you made happy by your charity this morning?" "My wife."

BEN ZINE asked O'Shea: "How is it that the most reliable account of the Deluge makes no mention of Irishmen having been taken into the ark?" "Divil the one was," said O'Shea. "How then was the race perpetuated?" queried Ben. "Faith," said O'Shea, "in those days the Irish were wealthy and had a boat of their own."

Dr. TANNER having failed to starve himself to death by a forty days' abstinence, has, since the conclusion of his task at noon last Saturday, been "going as he pleased" in the matter of feeding. He seems equal to as wonderful performances in this line as in that of abstinence, and curiosity seems now to be as much aroused as to what he may withstand in eating as he did in fasting. The public, however, may as well now turn its attention to other subjects of more practical interest.

We clipped the above from the Baltimore Sun of last Monday.

That the period of folly has not passed, has been illustrated in the case of Dr. Tanner. For forty days and more public attention has centered upon the disgusting details of every look, and word, and act of the man who placed himself in conditions to attract its notice, and the Press everywhere has united in keeping concentrated upon the foolhardy and silly course of the man, whose action can result in no possible good, and serves only to prove that under circumstances exceptionally favorable to himself, he has been able to survive a fast of forty days.

There are certain principles of human rights which can in no wise be gainsaid, or controverted. But that a man has any right to subject himself to self-torture, with no possible chance of good to result therefrom, we presume no one would so stultify himself as to assert.

We make laws for the prevention of cruelty to animals, and generally for the well-being of society. There surely ought to be legislation to prevent hereafter, any such exhibitions as have so brutally characterized the one just ended. We may expect now to record death after death of the infatuated ones who, from desire of notoriety or otherwise, will attempt with more or less perfect surroundings, to imitate the examples so strangely applauded in the case of Dr. Dr. Tanner.

A DEFENCE OF OAKES AMES.—The three sons of the late Hon. Oakes Ames, of Massachusetts, have issued an elaborate address to the American people upon the relations which their father did or did not sustain to the Union Pacific railroad, and to the Credit Mobilier and to members of Congress. In the beginning of the address Mr. Ames's sons inquire: "When even Gen. Garfield, in what purports to be an extract from his forthcoming biography, has totally failed to comprehend the facts, how can the public at large be expected to understand them?" They give a history of the inception and progress of the enterprise, and maintain that their father was entirely innocent of any purpose to corrupt members of Congress, and that he was a martyr to popular clamor.—Sun.

MR. VENNOR'S WEATHER FOR AUGUST.—Mr. Henry G. Vennor's weather prediction for August is as follows: "Heat will in all probability extend through the first half of the month of August, and equal if not exceed the heated terms of July.—August will likewise be characterized by severe storms and heavy showers of rain, or in places hail; but on the whole the month will be comparatively a dry and hot one in Canada and bordering United States. A cool to cold term with frosts may occur between the 15th and 20th days, after which heat may again be expected up to Sept. 1. The month will resemble that of the year 1876. I already foresee very early and severe cold, with snowfalls in October, but of this more again.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 10th.

American products are growing rapidly into popular favor abroad, the Department of State is constantly in receipt of information from our consular officers in all parts of the world, showing that this gratifying exhibit is not confined by any means to Europe, but extends to every part of the globe. Their personal testimony not only bears witness to it, but the newspaper clippings from foreign Journals which are from time to time forwarded to the Department of State by them are conclusive evidence of the fact. The public at large have no adequate conception of the extent to which our manufactures and products are entering and monopolizing foreign markets.

The ultra prohibitionists of Maine are endeavoring to rally support enough to nominate a State ticket, with Joshua Nye, of Augusta for governor. In New Hampshire there is a movement on foot to put a prohibition State ticket in the field headed by W. H. Dodge, of Dover. Many of the prohibitionists in both states think that more can be accomplished for the cause by supporting the regular Republican Candidates, and it is doubtful if a sufficient number to warrant the nomination of separate tickets can be got together.

In speaking of Maine politics, it is conceded on all hands that Senator Blaine has all the work he can well perform to keep the State in the Republican ranks, if he can do it at all. He has entered the canvass with his accustomed vigor, and which ever side wins it will only be after a hard fight. The Democrats and Greenbackers are most thoroughly organized there, and it is not believed that their infamous attempt to steal the State last winter will lose them many votes.

Within the past few days many persons have received appointments for the Census office, and as soon as the annex building is completed more will be appointed. The pressure upon General Walker for place has been tremendous, although government clerks are generally better paid than any other, few of the more recent appointed receive more than $600, per year. The demand for office is so great that competent clerks can be had at $720, $680 and even for $400, per year. The work of the Census progresses finely, and it will be, as General Walker promised it should, the best and most complete Census ever taken. After the first review of the computation is made, it is subjected to two revisions, and until such revisions are made, the data is not considered accurate. It is estimated that it will take three years, at least, to complete the entire computation of the Census.

Secretary Evarts has called the attention of Governor Hoyt, of Pennsylvania to the sale of bogus Medical Diplomas by the American University of Philadelphia. One has been granted a Spanish subject who swears that he never was in the United States. This traffic in fraudulent diplomas, suppressed a few years ago, has lately assumed alarming proportions, and it is hoped that the authorities will take immediate and effectual steps to suppress it for ever.

ATTENTION is called to the advertisement of the Baltimore Gazette in another column of this issue. It stands in the front rank of the Democratic papers of our State, and commends itself to the members of that party in particular. It abounds in terse and high-toned criticism of its opponents, gives the latest news from every quarter. It is wide awake, a spicy and always interesting journal.

A CURIOSITY.—Mr. John F. Adelsberger brought to our office a very singular development of corn growth, it is rather a matter of beauty. Instead of an ear shooting upward in the usual manner, from the main stalk, this grew out horizontally and then downward, there is just a curved ear as the body, imperfectly formed, and all over this is a succession of diminutive ears, varying in length from an inch to three inches, and these cover over the enclosed nucleus on all sides. The whole is soft and very flexible.

A HIGHLY COMMENDABLE ACT.—Our venerable friend, Mr. Abraham Sheets after making provision for his family, in the matter of marble monuments, is about to erect one, to the memory of the Rev. John Grob, long deceased, in the Taneytown cemetery, to take the place of the dilapidated one that has stood there nearly half a century. Father Grob was an esteemed clergyman of the Lutheran church, who long ministered here and at Taneytown, and is yet affectionately remembered by our older citizens. Mr. U. A. Lough has the contract for the work.

ABOUT 4 o'clock a. m., on last Tuesday a week, a fire broke out in the office of the York Republican, (Hiram McNair, Esq., editor) which destroyed the furniture, books and paper in the editorial room, and badly damaged Mr. McNair's law and miscellaneous books. The damage to the printing office did not exceed $100, but the loss in the editorial room was total. Mr. McNair was absent from York at the time, but takes the matter philosophically, remarking: "Since our return we have not had any time in which to ascertain our actual loss; the public, however, are not interested in that inasmuch as we had no insurance, and hence must bear our own loss as best we can."—Star.

(COMMUNICATED.) A VETERAN SOLDIER DEAD.—Mr. Elijah Currens, Died Aug. 5th 1880, at the residence of his son-in-law, Joseph Baker, aged 95 years, 9 months and 12 days. He was a member of Piney Creek Presbyterian Church, held the position of "Doorkeeper" in said Church, from 1823 to 1837. He resided in Carroll Co., Md., until within two or three years, when he went to live with his daughter, Mrs. Baker. He continued to attend the services of the church up to the age of 92, although unable to bear during the last few years of his attendance.—Born in 1783, he lived under all the Presidents, from George Washington down. During his life the 13 original States increased to 38, and the population from 3 or 4 millions, to nearly 45,000,000. He was a soldier in the war of 1812-15, and at the time of his death was receiving a pension from the U. S., for his services. In person he was tall, of fine figure and commanding presence, he had a strong constitution, with great powers of endurance and was noted for his rapid walking; when in his prime few men could cope with him in this respect, he walked frequently from his home to Baltimore in a day. He is said never to have owned a horse, or an overcoat, or to have used a light in going to bed. A man of decided religious convictions, and firmly persuaded of his personal interest in the Redeemer of mankind, his long career came to a peaceful close. He retained his faculties to the last, passing away in the midst of children and grandchildren, and in hope of a blessed immortality. His remains were laid to rest in the Piney Creek graveyard.

We transfer to our columns from "The New York Tablet," the following portrait of the venerable President of Mt. St. Mary's College, in which all who know him will recognize the picture as drawn to life: Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md.

THE RIGHT MAN AGAIN IN THE RIGHT PLACE. Parents, guardians, and the many friends of this time-honored institution will be glad to learn through the columns of The Tablet that the venerable Dr. McCloskey has once more assumed the presidency of the "Old Mountain." This devoted and venerable pioneer of education has already given to the interest and welfare of his Alma Mater more than forty years of arduous and indefatigable labor. He at a tender age came from Brooklyn in 1831, and after finishing a brilliant collegiate course, entered the theological seminary, and taught most successfully the various collegiate classes.

During his seminary course he was much beloved and esteemed by all, and among his intimate friends and companions were Messrs. William H. Elder, the present Coadjutor Archbishop of Cincinnati; John Loughlin, now Bishop of Brooklyn; Edward Sourin, at present Father Sourin, S. J., of Loyola College, Baltimore; and A. Lar que, one of the most distinguished citizens of Montreal. His superiors, seeing in him more than ordinary governing qualities, appointed him first prefect, and, though this is an annual office, he was kept in that position for six years. He was ordained in 1840 by Bishop Hughes, late Archbishop of New York, who, at the request of the authorities of the college, allowed the young Father McCloskey the privilege of associating himself to the faculty of the college. In 1841 he was, by the unanimous voice of the council, elected treasurer and vice-president, offices which he held ever since, excepting during the seven years he was president. His services were always looked upon as indispensable to the prosperity of the college, and on a certain occasion when Dr. McCaffrey renounced with Bishop Hughes for calling away some of his seminarians to St. John's College, Fordham, N. Y., the good bishop replied, "Keep quiet, doctor, or I'll take away Father John McCloskey, the pillar of the Mountain." And, in fact, Bishop Hughes offered him the best position in his diocese. But Father John, as he is familiarly known, was too much attached to the "Old Mountain," and no personal interest, not even the glittering honors of the mitre, was ever able to withdraw him from his Alma Mater, whose interest he has ever held so much at heart, and if his humility would permit us, we would here say that he can hardly be succeeded as president of Mount St. Mary's. He may indeed have more ambitious and self-seeking successors, for these are qualities altogether unknown to his nature, but we venture to say that no man, no matter how high-sounding in tone, worth, or merit he may be, will gain the confidence of parents and guardians, the respect of students and seminarians, and the veneration and esteem of the clergy at large as the self-sacrificing and unostentatious Dr. McCloskey, who has labored so zealously all his lifetime for the well-being of the college that he has not taken a vacation for the past thirty years. His only ambition is to make everybody happy and to provide for the comfort of all entrusted to his care. All find in him a kind friend and a tender-hearted father, and it may be truly said of him that he knows him to love him. Having, as we have learned, at his command this year upwards of forty seminarians, together with his numerous corps of professors, he can give rare facilities to students whose early education has been neglected or interrupted. And as long as Mount St. Mary's has at her head such a president as Dr. McCloskey she will have the patronage of every true lover of superior education, maintain her high standing and well-merited reputation. We, as an old mountaineer, congratulate our Alma Mater, and bespeak for her a prosperous future under his presidency. SACERDOS VIATOR.

Agricultural.

Provide for the Chickens.

Wonder if there is not a good deal of truth embodied in this somewhat elongated sentence: The farmer builds expensive houses for his horses, hogs, cattle and sheep, and feeds them upon the richest produce of his broad acres without stint; but if his wife, son or daughter has the enterprise to keep a few fowls, they are grudgingly given some old shed or the boughs of some tree, and they go without food or drink except that which their own industry provides and if hunger drives them to the garden in search of food they are met with a tornado of sticks, stones and clubs; and yet these same fowls are expected to supply the farmer's table with eggs, and if they fail to do it, it is claimed that fowls are not profitable, and no matter when the hen dies she owes her owner a quarter.

AFTER potatoes are taken from the ground care should be taken that they do not get too much sun, light or air. They should be dried as quickly as is convenient after taken from the ground. Then let them be taken to a dark cellar without delay. Be careful not to have too many in one bin. Do not allow the receptacle to sit on the floor of the cellar if it is at all damp.

VALUABLE RECIPES.

BREAD PUDDING.—To one quart of boiling sweet milk add same quantity of cold bread crumbs, light bread or biscuit; mix and beat three eggs and one cup of sugar together; then one cup of cold milk and one-half cup of butter. Pour this into the boiling milk, season with nutmeg and set in the oven to brown. Serve warm, with cream.

BLACK RENOVATE SILK.—Your old black silk can be made new by following these directions: First rub off all dust with a woolen rag. Then mix equal quantities of vinegar and strong tea, with which wash the silk, by thoroughly rubbing with a flannel rag. Fold well, let it remain a short time, then iron on the wrong side with a hot iron.

BEEF SOUP.—This is for invalids. Take one and a half pounds of lean beef, one ounce of rice or barley, pepper and salt, and one and a half pints of cold water; divide the meat into small pieces; put this in a stone jar, covering it tightly; then place the jar in a vessel with hot water, and let it remain in the oven for four hours. By uncovering the jar at the end of the cooking you can, of course, very much increase the strength of the soup.

ICE CREAM CAKE.—Whites of eight eggs, one cup sweet milk, one cup butter, two cups sugar, two cups flour, one cup corn starch, two teaspoonfuls baking-powder, mix with the flour; cream and butter and sugar, add the milk, then the flour and corn starch, add the whites beaten very light; bake in cakes about an inch thick. Ining for between cakes: Whites of four eggs beaten very light; four cups sugar, pour one-half pint boiling water over the sugar and boil until clear and will candy in cold water; pour the boiling syrup over the beaten eggs, and beat hard until the mixture is cold and to a stiff cream; and, before it is quite cold, one teaspoonful pulverized citric acid, two teaspoonfuls extract vanilla; when cold, spread between the cakes as thick as the cakes.

QUAKER OMELET.—A Quaker omelet is a handsome and sure dish when care is taken in the preparation. Three eggs, half a cup of milk, one and a half tablespoonfuls of corn starch, one teaspoonful of butter. Put the omelet pan and a cover that will fit close on to heat; beat the yolks of the eggs, the corn starch and the salt very well together; beat the whites to a stiff froth, add to the well-beaten yolks and corn starch; stir all together very thoroughly, then add the milk; now put the butter in the hot pan, and when melted pour in the mixture, cover and place on the stove where it will brown but not burn; cook about seven minutes, fold, turn on a hot dish, and serve with the cream sauce poured around it. If the yolks and corn starch are thoroughly beaten, and when the stiff whites are added they are well mixed, and the pan and cover are very hot, there can be no failure.

Humorous.

"Dr. Tanner's Fast." That is right; keep him fast. It is having such idiots loose that makes the mischief.

"JOHN, did you find any eggs in the nest this morning?" "No, sir; if the old hen laid any she has mislaid them."

THE following unique couplet appears in the obituary column of a Philadelphia newspaper:

Our American baby with wings did fly
To meet his Saviour in the sky.

"MOTHER this book tells about the angry waves of the ocean.—What makes the ocean get angry?" "Because it has been crossed so often, my son," said the mother.

"MR. SMITH," said a lady at a fair, "won't you please buy this bouquet to present to the lady you love?" "That could not be," said Mr. Smith; "I am a married man."

DURING a hailstorm in Troy a boy heaved a twenty-pound cake of ice into the street, and over fifty persons made oath that it was a hail-stone and that they heard it strike a roof and bound off.

A NUMBER of nice little boys on Erie street filled a pop bottle with powder and "set 'er afire to see 'er spout." She spouted, and the boys now resemble the diamond-shaped window of a modern church.

"I'd have you to know," exclaimed Mrs. Upkrust, haughtily, tossing her head, "that my family always moved in the upper circles." "Yes," whispered Mrs. Blunt to her friend Sarah Jones, "I've heard that the scum allus rises to the top."

A LITTLE Oil City girl observed her mother measuring cloths by holding it up to her nose with one hand and reaching out to arm's length with the other. She assumed a thoughtful aspect, and after cogitating a few moments, asked, "How can you measure cloth that way? Can you smell a yard?"

HE opened the door cautiously and poking his head in a suggestive sort of way as if there was more to follow, inquired: "Is this the editorial rinktum?"

"The what? my friend."

"Is this the rinktum—sinktum—sanctum or some such place where the editors live?"

"This is the editorial room, yes, sir. Come in."

"No, I guess I won't come in. I wanted to see what a rinktum was like, that's all. Looks like our garret, only wuss. Good day."

In a town not a thousand miles from the "Hub" a gentleman invited home to dinner one day one of the deacons of the church which he attended. Being seated at the table the guest was asked to offer a blessing, which he did. This proceeding greatly excited the curiosity of the gentleman's five-year-old son, who sat behind the deacon and interviewed him on the subject.—"What was that you said?" he began. "It was a blessing on the food we are about to eat," replied the deacon. "A what?" "Why, a blessing at the table?" "Oh, yes, but he don't say in that way." "How does he say it?" "Why he sits down and looks at the table and says, "Oh, the d—! is this all you've got for dinner?"

A STARTLING surprise, after the fashion of the story of Ginevra, was experienced not long ago by a party of Styrian wood cutters in the forest of Drommling; They began to fell a venerable oak, which they soon discovered to be quite hollow. Being half decayed it speedily came to the ground with a crash, disclosing a skeleton in excellent preservation. Even the boots, which came above the knee, were almost perfect. By its side was a powder horn, a porcelain pipe-bowl, and a silver watch on which was engraved the name, "H. von Krackowitz, 1812." The teeth were perfect. It would seem to be the skeleton of man between thirty and forty years of age. It is conjectured that, while engaged in hunting, he climbed the tree for some purpose, and slipped incautiously into the hollow trunk, from which there was no release, and he probably died of starvation.

GLANDING'S
Patent Trunk,
Patented September 30, 1879, by

Thomas Glanding,
Baltimore, Md.

This Trunk is presented to the public, and the special attention of buyers is called to its advantages.

The body and lid of the trunk are made in the usual manner.
The trays, which are a special feature, are divided into two sections, the smaller tray or parol case being attached to the lid, is raised out of the body when the lid is raised.

The larger or main tray is attached to the ends of the body by means of parallel arms, so that the tray may be raised and carried back into the lid in its original horizontal position, and is supported on the arms, thus giving access to the body of the trunk.

The arms are pivoted to plates of suitable metal, on which are knobs or projections to stop their motion and prevent the tray from falling back against the lid.

We ask the ladies when in town to call and examine the Trunk at Literary Revolution and Universal Knowledge.

An Encyclopaedia in 20 Vols., over 16,000 pages; 10 per cent more matter than any Encyclopaedia ever before published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution.
THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE is a reprint entire of the last (1879) Edinburgh edition of "Chambers's Encyclopaedia," with about 40 per cent of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readers, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority of those who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest Encyclopaedia in the field.
Specimen Volumes in either style will be sent for examination with privilege of return on receipt of proportionate price per volume.
Special Discounts to all early subscribers, and extra discounts to clubs. Full particulars with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, sent free.
Leading principles of the American Book Exchange:
I. Publish only books of real value.
II. Work upon the basis of present cost of making books, about one half what it was a few years ago.
III. Sell to buyers direct, and save them the 50 to 60 per cent. commission commonly allowed to dealers.
IV. The cost of books when made 10,000 at a time is but a fraction of the cost when made 500 at a time—adopt the low price and sell the large quantity.
V. Use good type, paper, etc., do careful printing, and strong, neat binding, but avoid all "padding," fat and heavily-leaded type, spongy paper and gaudy binding, which are so commonly resorted to make books appear large and fine, and which greatly add to their cost, but do not add to their value.
VI. To make $1 and a friend is better than to make $5 and an enemy.
