A BACHELOR'S SOLILOQUY.

BY EDWARD S. HOFFMAN.

[Kindly furnished for The Baltimorean.] (Written expressly for Col. George R. Appleby, the eminent elocutionist and distinguished delineator of Shakspeare.)
To wed, or not to wed—that is the question: Whether 'tis nobler in a man to suffer The hardship of a married life, and all its woes, Or to stand out against the charms of women, And by resolve escape them? To fume—to fret—Poor fool!—and, fretting, say we rid ourselves Of—habits, and the thousand spells of coic That they are heirs to—'tis a consummation Devoutly to be wished. To fume—to fret—To fret—perchance to feel the force of some convenient poker, Or else the dreaded curtain lecture—aye, there's the rub;
For in that lecture what bitter words may come,
When we have shuffled off our pantaloons, Must give us pause. There's the consideration That makes calamity of the married life; For who would bear the whips and scorns of an irate wife;
The pangs of buttons not sewed on, the cook's delay,
The yelling of a baby, and the weak and muddy coffee
When a bachelor can his own rations cook In a bare skillet? Who would be a married man, To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something in old age—
That time when no man love's to live alone—Is in the distant future—puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear the ills of married life Than take the risk of lonely, sad old age?
Thus policy doth make husbands of us all;
And thus the humbuggery of bachelorhood Is sickled o'er with the fair face of woman, And boasted independence of old bachelors,
With this regard, its current turns away;
And—so they fall in love.

THE MILL CHIMNEY.

THE STORY OF A BRICKLAYER.

'Twas when I was courting Katie that the accident I'm going to tell you about happened. But for that same accident I don't think Katie an' I would be man an' wife this day, for you see my father was set again' the match, Katie being only a labourer's daughter, while he himself was foreman in the mill, getting good wages, and thought a great deal of by his employers.— An' if it wasn't for Katie, I don't think I'd be here now to tell you about it, for 'twas she that saved my life, through hitting on a plan that never once came into the heads of me or my comrades—aye, or those you'd have thought would know better than any of us.

I was not brought up to my father's trade, having been taken, when young, by a brother of my mother's, a master bricklayer living in the town. When my uncle died I came home to Lisgarven for a bit, just to see my father, and finding that they were at work on the new buildings at the mills, I looked for employment there, an' got it at once. Lisgarven mill is a flour mill, an' a pretty place it was in those days, with the river running just by the old redbrick buildings, an' the big waterwheel always going round an' round. The river falls into a large one a little lower down, an'
the tide comes up as far as the mill, so 'tis in boats that most of the corn is brought in an' the flour carried away. 'Tisn't half so pretty a place now; there are big whitewashed buildings alongside of the old brick ones, the big wheel is stopped, an' you hear the whirl of the engine instead of the sound of the water, but they makes a power of money there, an' gives a deal of employment.

As I was saying, I got taken on as a bricklayer. Katie's father was working there, too, and I used to see her bringing him his dinner, and, after a bit, I began to think that I'd like to have her bringing me mine, too. She was as pretty a girl then as you'd see anywhere—she's good-looking to this day—an' I soon become that fond of her that I'd have done anything a'most to get her. She herself was willing enough; 'twas my father that made the difficulty. He was a proud man; as proud in his way as any gentleman, an' he was right down mad at the notion of my marrying a laborer's daughter. To be sure, I was earning good wages, an' I might have married without asking any one's leave if I'd been so minded, but I didn't like to go again' the old man that had always been good to me. Beside, Katie was just as proud as himself, an' would have nothing to say to me unless he was satisfied. I got the owner to speak to him, but sure 'twasn't a bit of use.

"How would you like, sir," he says to the owner, "if I had a daughter, to have Master Philip take up with her, an' wouldn't that be the same thing?"

I believe that the owner didn't think it would be at all the same thing; but my father wouldn't hear the reason from him any more than from me; so Katie an' I had just nothing for it but to wait in the hope of his comin' round an' very little hope we had of that same.

As we were putting up a steam engine in the mill, we had of course to have a big chimney, an' we got a man down from town to build it—one of them chaps that builds chimneys an' nothing else, and thinks nobody knows anything about it but theirselves. I was working along with him, and, indeed, 'twas I that built the most of it, and a right good job it was. 'Twas finished by Christmas—ten year ago this Chris-mas coming on—all but the lightning conductor, and that was not put up owing to the owner's wanting to make inquires when he'd go to town'an' to see for himself what would be the best kind to use.— The proprietor was a scientific sort of a gentleman, an' had ideas of his own—sometimes they'd be better than other people's sometimes maybe not so good.

At any rate, there was a delay about the conductor, an' in the meantime the engines were at work, an'
the big chimney was smoking away like blazes. Mr. Brown, the strange workman, had gone away, saying, very condescending like, that he was sure Jim Forde (that was me) would be able to fasten the rod to the chimney as well as he could do it himself. He took all his scaffolding with him, but, before he went away, he fixed a beam with a pulley in it into the top of the chimney, an' left a long rope hanging through it, so that a man could be hoisted up at any time; an' there the rope hung dangling, week after week, until the owner came home, bringing the rod along with him.

Once it had come there was no good losing any more time in fixing it, so one Saturday afternoon in January, up I went on a plank, slung securely at the end of the rope, my tools along with me, an' settled myself astride on the stone coping.— 'Twas rather late in the day, but the morning had been too wet an' stormy to work, an' the owner was as impatient to get the job done as if it hadn't been himself that was hindering it all this time. I was as much at home atop of the chimney as I was on the ground, an' I worked on without once looking down, until my job was finished, an' I was putting up my tools. Then, all of a sudden, I heard a rattling noise, an' looking over, I saw the plank going down very fast. I called out:
"Hullo, there! send that up again will you?" but the only answer I got was a loud laugh, for all the world like silly Jerry the natural's; and sure enough there he was, standing by the windlass, jumping an' clapping his hands.

I looked about for the man whose business it was to manage the windlass, but not a sign of him was there, an' in a minute I heard the rattle of the pulley again, an' saw that the rope was running through it in the wrong direction. I made a grab at it, but 'twas jerked out of my hand, an' before I could catch it again the end had slipped through, an' there

I was, more than a hundred feet from the ground, not knowing how in the world I was to get down, and Jerry dancing and capering below, calling out:

"Come down an' thrash me now, Mr. Forde, won't you?"

Then I remembered that a few days before I had found this boy annoying Katie, an' had given him a cut with a switch I had in my hand.
He had slunk away without a word at the time, but it seems he remembered the blow, an' took this way of being revenged.

Well, at first I was scarcely frightened, expecting somehow that once the people below knew of the fix I was in, they'd find some way or other of getting me out of it.

But, when I came to think of it, deuce a bit of a way could I hit on myself, an' sure I knew more about chimneys than any one else in the place. 'Twas getting late, too; there wouldn't be much more than another half hour of daylight, an' the wind was rising—I could hear it whistling through the trees.

By this time people knew what had happened, and a crowd was collecting; I could see them coming from all parts, for of course I had a view all about. I saw a boy go up to the door of the counting-house, an' presently young Squire Philip came running out—running as if for his life. When he came, he took the command like, an' began giving directions, an' the people, who had only stared at first now ran here an' there as he sent them. First they brought out a long ladder, an' fixed it on the roof below the chimney.— I could have told them that 'twas too short knowing as I did the length of every ladder in the place; but somehow, though I heard their shouts plainly, I could not make them hear mine; it seemed as if the voices went up, like smoke.

Then there was a great delay while they went for a longer ladder, and this, too, didn't reach half way.
A man climbed up it, however, an' called out to know had I a bit of string in my pocket that I could let down. Not a bit could I find. I had had a big ball only the day before, but I had taken it out of my pocket an' put it on a shelf at home.
I took off my braces, and fastened them an' my pocket handkerchief together; but they didn't near reach the top of the ladder, so that plan had to be given up.

All this time the wind was rising, and I was getting numb with the cold, an' stiff and cramped from being so long in the one position.— There was a big clock right over the gateway just opposite, an' I saw that it only wanted twenty minutes of five, an' once the darkness set in, what little hope I had—would be gone.

The young squire seemed to have gone away by this time, but there was my father, among the crowd; an' who should I see, standing next him an' holding on his arm, but Katie!
They had forgotten everything but the fright about me, and he seemed to be talking to her, an' comforting her. After a bit I saw the young squire again; he had a big thing in his hand looking like pocket-handkerchiefs stretched over a frame, an' I saw that it was a kite, an' that they meant to send a string up to me in that way. But you never in all your life saw such an unmanageable kite. First 'twas too heavy, an' then 'twas too light, and then the time they seemed to lose making a tail to steady it! I heard after, that part of that same tail was made of bank-notes Squire Philip took out of his pocket when he could get nothing else quick enough. He got them all back later, for not a man, woman or child in the place would have touched one of them when they saw him using them in that way.

When the kite did go up at last the wind was so high that they could not manage it properly. It came very near me once, an' I made a snatch at the string, nearly overreaching myself in doing so; but I missed it, an' just then there came a terrible gust of wind, the string broke, an' the kite was carried away an' stuck fast in the branches of a big tree behind the proprietor's house. I looked over at the clock to see how much time was left me, an' I found that I could not see the hands any longer; the darkness had come on in the last few minutes.— Then I gave up all hope, for I knew I could never hold on till morning.

I tried to think of death, an' to make myself ready for it, but I couldn't—not a prayer nor a good word could I call to mind, only going over an' over again in my head the way 'twould all happen—how the people would go away one by one, how I'd be left alone in the darkness and the howling wind, an' how at last I'd not be able to hold on longer, an' fall, an' be found in the morning all crushed out of shape. The people below seemed to have given up all thought of helping me now, an' were standing quite quiet.

'Twas so dark by this time that I could not distinguish the faces at all; I could just make out Squire Philip in his dark suit among the white mill-men, an' poor Katie.— She was crouching down on the ground now, her apron over her head. All of a sudden I saw her leap up with a great cry, an' clap her hands, an' call out something.
Then there was a confused sort of shout as if every one in the crowd was saying the same thing at the same time, an' then Squire Philip, making a sign to silence them, put his two hands up to his mouth, an' sang out in a voice that came up to me above the noise of the wind:

"Take off your stockings, an' ravel it; the thread will reach the ground."

At first I didn't understand him, being a little dazed like, but then the meaning came on me like a message from heaven. I got off one of my socks with much trouble—nice new ones they were, too, of Katie's own knitting, that she had given me for a Christmas box—an' with the help of my teeth I loosened one end of the thread. It gave readily enough after that, an' when I had a good piece of it ripped I tied my knife to the end of it to make it heavy, an' let it drop, ripping more an' more of the sock as it went down.
Then I felt it stop, an' presently there came a shout telling me to wind it up again. Very slowly an' carefully I did it, fearing the string would break, an' when the last bit of it came up, there was a piece of strong twine tied to the end of it.— The twine in its turn brought the rope I had gone up by, an' then I felt that I was safe.

I managed somehow to put it through the pulley, an' to haul up the plank, and as soon as they had fastened the other end to the windlass below, they gave me the word to come down.

I was so numb an' stiff that I could not fix myself on the plank, but I managed somehow to cling to the ropes with my hands. Down, down I came, every turn of the windlass making the voices below seem nearer an' nearer, an' when I was within a few feet of the ground there were a dozen pairs of arms ready to catch me, an' a score of hands held out to me, an' a hundred voices to welcome me. An' there was my father waiting for me, an' Philip saying:

"But for the girl he'd have been up there still. Not one of us would have thought of the stocking; 'twas the brightest idea I've come across this many a day. She has saved his life. Forde, and you can't refuse your consent any longer."

But when I looked round for Katie, she was nowhere to be seen.
She must have slipped off as soon as she saw I was safe.

The young squire hurried my father an' me away, I didn't quite know where, I was so dazed, but in a minute or two I found myself in a warm lighted dining-room at the master's house, an' Master Philip shaking hands with my father. As soon as I could, I made my escape, an' went down to Katie's cottage.— I hadn't been there five minutes when there was a knock at the door, and in walks my father. He went straight to Katie, holding out his hand.

"Katie, my girl," he said, "I've come to ask your pardon for anything I've ever said or done against you, an' if you an' Jim are still of the same mind I won't hinder you from marrying. 'Tis you have the best right to him, for you've saved his life."

"And 'tis proud an' glad I am that I was able to do that same, Mr.
Forde," said Katie.

"And you'll marry him, won't you, my dear?"

"If you're satisfied, sir."

"I am, my dear, quite satisfied." And with that he kissed her; and from that day to this, he and Katie have been the best of friends. He lives with us for the last year or so, for he was getting a little past his work, an' the proprietor pensioned him off. He is very happy with us, an' he is never tired of telling the children the story of the way that their mother's cleverness saved my life.

THOUSANDS have been cured of dumb ague, bilious disorders, jaundice, dyspepsia and all diseases of the liver, blood and stomach, when all other remedies have failed, by using Prof. Guilmette's French Liver Pad, which is a quick and permanent cure for those disorders.
Ask your druggist for the great remedy, and take no other, and if he does not keep it send $1.50 in a letter to the French Pad Co., and receive one by mail post-paid.

Two Galveston ladies met one day recently, and the following conversation ensued: "Why, do you know what I heard about you?" "I've no idea." "I heard that when your husband was sick, and not expected to live, you went to a picnic." "It's a vile slander; it was only an excursion."

"SLEEP ON, my loved one, sleep" —this is the language of the first four months. After that, "Get up, Sally Ann, and get breakfast; I'm hungrier nor a bear," seems to answer the purpose.

"JENNIE, did you divide that chocolate with your little brother?"
—"Yes'm; I took the chocolate and gave him the label; you know how fond he is of spelling his letters."

"How shall we get the young men to go to church?" is the title of an article in a religious weekly. Get the girls to go, sainted brother, get the girls to go!

A WRITER says, "A plain girl, so long as she is young, wealthy and nicely dressed, can never look ugly."

Hot weather takes all the romance out of youth. Perspiration doesn't rhyme with love by a great deal.

INDUSTRY, brains and cheek—these three—but the greatest of these is cheek.

SEPTEMBER.

"The sultry summer past, September comes, Soft twilight of the slow declining year, More sober than the luxon, blooming May, And therefore less the favorite of the world; But dearest month of all to pensive minds."

The first half of September is always the favorite time of the year with us. The heat of summer has been subdued to that calm dreaminess, which fills both the daytime and the night with quiet, restful enjoyment, uninterrupted by overpowering warmth, or the rude blasts of later Autumn.

In the perfectly ordained economy of nature, we cannot but admire the wisdom, which has provided such nice checks and balances for the changing seasons, by which they come and go in regular gradations, the changes being beautifully adapted to our creature wants.

The summer proper with its fervent temperature is just adapted to ripen the fruits of the earth, and promote the well-being of its inhabitants. The heat too long continued, would destroy vegetation, and blast the hopes of the people. Its gradual subsidence, ripens every product in the due course of its nature, and hence the succession of our necessary supplies in beautiful order.

In summer time, we seek recreation, in early morning, or in dewy evening, when the sun has retired behind the western hills, but in this month we may go forth at all hours, and find that instead of oppression, the sun's rays, serve as a tonic and an invigorator to our bodies. Now the clustering grapes, take on their purple hues, and invite us to partake of their luscious juices, now the golden apples offer their sweets to our willing tastes, the pears, and the peaches, and rich melons still tempt us with their fully matured richness.

Soon the equinoctial position of the sun will give us equal duration of day and night, in the diminished length of day. We have increased coolness, but observation proves that storms are not necessarily greater than at other seasons. So then the traditional equinoctial storms are silenced in the onward march of enlightened thought.

We wish you all dear readers the fullest and heartiest enjoyment of the season, not overlooking the dear delight of the morning nap, prolonged into the bright glare of daylight, more pleasant than in all the year beside.

THE census enumerators should have waited a little longer to gather up the statistics of crimes; for although the increase in this line is stated to be correspondingly as great as any other, the record of the last two or three days would have considerably enlarged the figures. Within the last three days twenty-one cases of killing which may be termed murders have occurred, and an unusually large number of highway and other robberies and cases of malpractice have appeared on the police record in various parts of the country.—Baltimore American.

A GLOOMY PICTURE.—A committee from Kansas is now at St. Louis soliciting aid for the starving and destitute in the northern part of that State. The lowest estimate places the number of people who are suffering at 25,000, and the cause of the affliction is a drought, which, with a visitation from the green worm and chintz bug, has ruined the wheat, corn and potato crops in a half dozen counties. Gov. St. John has advised all the people in the drought visited district to leave Kansas, if possible.

Two months ago a valuable horse belonging to Charles E. Smith, of Stony Brook, Ky., had his leg broken at Port Jefferson. The broken bone was set and the leg was imbedded in Plaster of Paris. In two weeks the horse could walk around the stable; in three weeks the owner drove him home, a distance of five miles, and on Saturday the horse was driven to a road wagon a mile in four minutes. It is usual to shoot horses that break their legs.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 31st. The emigration to this country from Europe, during the past season has been greater than for many years. Various causes are assigned, the most prominent being the known prosperity of this country, the inducements it offers to emigrants who wish to secure homes on our rich western prairies, and the present unsettled condition of affairs in Europe. Rents for land are high there, the soil generally poor, and the outlook for the peasant is slim indeed. Here we have no large army, military service is not enforced, the lands are rich, and the people are their own rulers. So it is not surprising that immense numbers of Europeans are flocking to our shores, to enjoy the advantages offered so freely to all. Ireland has sent more this year than ever before. The liberality with which our people responded to their appeal for aid, and the welcome given to Parbell, while here, has much to do with this. Germany too, has furnished a large number. The condition of the German Empire, is not such as encourages her people to remain at home, hence they come to America. All the Steam-ships arriving at the different American ports this summer, have brought unusually large numbers. Let them come, we can accommodate the entire population of Europe, if they see fit to try the experiment.

It is becoming a potent fact that the Census Office has in it a large number of incompetent clerks. This is not the fault of the efficient Superintendent of Census, General Walker, but rather the fault of scores of voracious applicants backed by Congressional influence. General Walker is fast getting the office in a state of discipline, and after he is well satisfied of the merits and demerits of the force there will be promotions for the worthy, and a lopping off of the excrescences.

The speech of General Butler, delivered on Saturday night in Faneuil Hall, wherein he burns all bridges behind him and jumps into the Democratic fold, provokes but little talk in the Departments.—This because for some years Butler has been considered a hybrid in politics, voting with each party as he saw fit. He is not looked upon as a new convert to Democracy, but merely as the return of the prodigal expecting the fatted calf.

It is now said that the debt reduction for August will be more than ten and less than twelve millions. The receipts are larger than ever before, but over eight millions of dollars have been forwarded to the several Pension agents for the payments of Pensions for the quarter ending September 4th.

THE DEATH OF OURAY, (or AROUO) the famous chief of the Tabeguache band of Ute Indians, and at one time head of the Ute Nation, is announced. Little was popularly known of Ouray prior to the massacre at the White River Agency, Colorado, in September last, when Agent Meeker and several other men were slaughtered. At that time Ouray and his band had left his agency at Los Pinos on a two months' hunt, but as soon as he heard of the massacre he returned and sent an order to the chief at the White River Agency to cease hostilities against the white people.—He also entered heartily into the proposed plan for punishing the guilty Indians, and was of much service to the government in checking the disturbance. His services were highly appreciated by the government, and in his report for 1879 the commissioner of Indian affairs said: "The services thus rendered by Ouray have been of inestimable value, and while the White River Utes have shown the very worst aspect of savage life, Ouray has shown courage and humanity and virtues of the better type, which should somewhat relieve the name of Ute from the odium cast upon it by the northern bands, for whose brutal and barbarous acts, whatever the provocation, on justification can be found."—Sun.

RETURN OF JUDGE BLACK.—Hon. Jeremiah S. Black and wife, and their granddaughter, Miss Shunk, arrived at York, Pa., Wednesday 25th ult., after an absence of several months in Europe. Judge Black is looking exceedingly well, and expresses himself delighted on returning to the land of his nativity.

FIVE young men at Lowell, Mass., attended a picnic at Andover on Saturday, and either because they had no money to pay their fare, or wanted to have "sport," they climbed on top of a passenger car in the train which left Lawrence at 7:03 P. M. At Sprague's Bridge, two miles from Lowell, all five were swept off the car by the bridge and killed.

Dr. Charles T. Jackson died at Somerville, Mass., Sunday after an illness of seven years, aged 74 years. He was in early life engaged in geological surveys, and his long controversy with Prof. Morse relating to the electric telegraph excited much interest in the early history of telegraphy. The use of anaesthesia to destroy pain he regarded as the great discovery of his life, but this claim was disputed, which was a bitter disappointment to him.

NEW YORK, August 31.—A cable dispatch from Rome, special to the New York Freeman's Journal, announces the following disposals of the Holy Father on the recommendation of the Sacred Congregation De Propaganda Fide: First, The Right Rev. P. A. Feesar, now bishop of Nashville, is promoted to be first archbishop of Chicago, Chicago having been raised to the dignity of a metropolitan see, with Alton and Peoria as its suffragan sees. Second, The Right Rev. Dr. Duggan, formerly bishop of Chicago, having been permanently disabled to officiate by an afflictive disease, is retired on a pension of $2,000 a year. Kansas City, hitherto in the archdiocese of St. Louis, is made an episcopal see, and the Right Rev. Dr. Hogan, now bishop of St. Joseph, Missouri, is named its first bishop, and remains administrator of the bereaved diocese of St. Joseph.

FASTER TANNER "EXPOSED."—A Paris special to the New York Herald says: To-night's La France contains a long article denouncing Dr. Tanner as an impostor and rallying Americans on their credulity. It professes to have received letters from America and England explaining the means by which Dr. Tanner was able to take the public in so long. According to La France, the supposed water that was administered to Lim was really liquid mate or matis, a South American beverage well known for its force-giving properties, which has been fully described by Drs. Gubler and Marmand and the French chemist Pyrsan. The information appears to have been communicated, directly or indirectly, to La France by the divorced Mrs. Tanner. "Consciousness or unconsciously, however," says La France, "the American faster deserved well of biological sciences. May he be remembered in both hemispheres."

GLANDING'S Patent Trunk, Patented September 30, 1879, by Thomas Glanding, Baltimore, Md.

This Trunk is presented to the public, and the special attention of buyers is called to its advantages. The body and lid of the trunk are made in the usual manner. The trays, which are a special feature, are divided into two sections, the smaller tray or parcel case being attached to the lid, is raised out of the body when the lid is raised.

The larger or main tray is attached to the ends of the body by means of parallel arms, so that the tray may be raised and carried back into the lid in its original horizontal position, and is supported on the arms, thus giving access to the body of the trunk.

The arms are pivoted to plates of suitable metal, on which are knobs or projections to stop their motion and prevent the tray from falling back against the lid. We ask the ladies when in town to call and examine the Trunk at GEO. A. GILBERT'S Hat, Boot & Shoe Store, NO 16 N. MARKET ST., Frederick City, Maryland. Ask for Glanding's Patent Trunk. Use no other. mar1 1880

A SEVERE storm occurred in the neighbourhood of Bridgeport on last Sunday, four trees were struck by lightning, one belonging to Mr. Wm. B. Morrison took fire; being near the barn, it became necessary to cut it down, to prevent the flames from reaching that structure, it was an old sycamore, and hollow, the flames roared up the cavity like fire in a flue, and it became necessary to haul a barrel of water to extinguish it.

JUSTUS GARLOCK, aged about 70 years, residing near Hagerstown, was, about noon on the 28th ult., struck by the pilot-beam of a locomotive on the Western Maryland R. Each day of the Fair, excursion trains will be run over all railroads.—The President and Secretary will please accept our thanks for a complimentary ticket.

QUITE a number of our readers will be pleased to see the following record in memory of a devout christian woman, whose gentleness and meekness, and self sacrificing disposition, adorned a life in which sorrow and distress were not seldom present.

OBITUARY.—Mrs. Jane Keagy, mother of James Keagy of this place and Mrs. S. W. Knapp of Andover, died at the residence of her son, last Friday evening, Aug. 13, after an illness of one week, aged 81 years. She was born at Emmitsburg, Md., and married John Keagy in 1818. She resided for many years at Chambersburg, Pa., where she was living, a widow, when that town was raided by a body of cavalry under the rebel Gen. McCausland, July 30, 1863, on which occasion she distinguished herself and saved her property by her courage and coolness. The rebel officer had left the town under a tribute of $200,000 in gold, or half a million in currency, which not being complied with, the destruction of the town was ordered, and the invaders were passing through the streets firing the buildings. Coming to Mrs. Keagy's house, they were about to apply the torch to it, when she advanced to McCausland and said, "You cannot burn this house—you dare not do it." "Why not?" he asked. "Because, sir, I am a poor woman and a widow; and I have never done harm to you." He recognized her courage, and the force of her words spared her house and protected it with a guard, while two thirds of the place was destroyed, and 2500 people deprived of their homes.—After this event she came to live with her son here, where she resided until her death.

Mrs. Keagy was a devoted Christian woman, a member of the Methodist Church for fifty eight years; to be family a most affectionate and self-sacrificing mother, and to all about her a true friend and kind neighbor. The funeral was attended at the Methodist church, Sunday morning, the Rev. Mr. Sanders preaching the sermon, and all of the other congregations uniting.—Cambridge (Ill.) Chronicle.

PERSONALS.—We had the pleasure of a short call on last Saturday evening from our friend Oscar S. At the Democratic County Convention held in Frederick on last Monday Capt. H. I. Deaver presided, with Columbus O'Donnell and Charles Cole secretaries. The following were elected delegates to the congressional nominating convention, to assemble at Hagerstown on the 15th of September: Capt. James McSherry, Edward Nichols, Horatio Zittle, John T. Worthington, John Jones and Hamilton Lindsey, alternates, James A. Elder, L. O. Fox, O. P. Crampton, C. C. Craner, Abraham Hemp and T. S. Benton.

MR. DAVID HORNER, whose death is recorded in another column of this issue, was a young man well known and highly esteemed in this neighborhood. He died in Washington City on Thursday of last week of typhoid pneumonia, at the early age of 23 years and 16 days. He was but recently appointed to a clerkship in the pension bureau. His remains were interred in Evergreen Cemetery at Gettysburg. He was a son of Dr. Chas. Horner, and gave promise of much usefulness. The members of the Adams County bar paid a tribute to his memory in most earnest and fitting terms on last Friday.

A STARTLING EVENT! DEPLORABLE SUICIDE.—Our village and the community surrounding was started on Wednesday morning, September 1st by the announcement that William Gillean, a highly respected citizen aged 71 years, was found at an early hour on that day hanging lifeless by a small cord not more than one eighth of an inch in diameter, passed through a common clothes hook just inside the doorway of his bed room, at the residence of his son David S. Gillean, with whom he has resided for some time. The deceased was a successful farmer, well known in Frederick and Carroll counties. He has long been subject to seasons of mental aberration. He leaves a family of three sons and two daughters, all of whom are grown up and settled in life. His wife died about six years ago, he also leaves a considerable estate.

The act was undoubtedly committed with determined premeditation, he left a note, written just before arranging for his death, with date of September 1st, 1880, alluding to his troubles and directing the burial of his body "in the Pines," on his lands whereon he has worked somewhat of late. His funeral took place on Thursday, the Rev. E. S. Johnson of the Lutheran church, conducted the services, the funeral was largely attended.

On hearing of the sad event, Justice Henry Stokes summoned the following persons as a Jury of Inquest, Eugene L. Rowe, U. A. Lugh, Daniel Sheets, Samuel G. Ohler, Elias Hollenberry, Albert H. Maxell, James Munshouer, J. Hamilton Ohler, Benjamin Gearhart, Joseph N. Smith, H. B. Grothey and Thomas E. Fraley, who being duly sworn, investigated the case and rendered the following verdict: "That William Gillean committed suicide by hanging himself voluntarily."

ORDINATIONS AT MT. ST. MARY'S COLLEGE.—On the 26th inst., the Rt. Rev. John A. Waterson, D. D., Bishop of Columbus, Ohio, gave the clerical tonsure to Messrs. Edward J. Healy, of the Diocese of Covington, Ky.; to Christopher B. O'Reilly, William H. Toie, and to Patrick Morris of the Archdiocese of New York; to Wm. A. Cunningham of Pittsburg, and to Thomas L. Kelly, of the Diocese of Providence. On the same day he conferred the four Minor Orders on Messrs. Edward J. Healy, Christopher B. O'Reilly, Edward P. Allen, Wm. H. Toie, Michael J. Murray, and Patrick Morris. On the 27th and 28th, Messrs. Healy and O'Reilly were promoted to the sacred orders of subdeacon and deaconship, and on Sunday the 29th inst., the Rev. Edward J. Healy was raised to the dignity of the priesthood. The occasion was a solemn and an imposing one. At half past 8 o'clock a. m., the seminarians in cassocks and surplices, and the priests in cassocks, surplices and stoles, at the signal of Messrs. Kumerant and Hill, masters of ceremonies, formed a line of procession. After them and immediately preceding the Archdeacon and Bishop, came the Rev. Edward J. Healy bearing on his left arm his chasuble and in his right hand a lighted taper. The procession presented a solemn and an impressive spectacle as it moved from the College up the winding mountain side to the Church on the Hill, where the young Levity was to offer himself irrevocably to God, and consecrate his life to the service of his Divine Lord and Master.—The church was crowded to excess on the occasion, as all the members of the congregation, and many strangers had collected to witness the imposing ceremony and to listen to Bishop Waterson, who preached for an hour and ten minutes on the dignity of, and the respect due to the Episcopacy and to the ministers of the church.

In the sanctuary were to be noticed Rev. Fathers, David B. Walker, S. J., of New York, Augustus Langlake, S. J., who conducted the preparatory Retreat, Thomas J. Fitzgerald, Vice President, A. J. McMullin and Thomas S. Keelan, also of the College. The venerable President, the very Rev. J. McCloskey, in whose self-sacrificing life, the young levites of the seminary find a model of all the virtues that constitute the true priest, acted as Archdeacon during the ordinations.—The newly ordained priest was one of the most popular seminarians who has left the Mountain for many years. He will say his first Mass on next Sunday, at Corland, N. Y., in the Church of St. Mary's, of the Vale of which his uncle, the Rev. B. F. McLaughlin is pastor.—The people of Covington will find in the person of Father Healy, a kindhearted pastor and a zealous and devoted laborer in the discharge of his sacred duties.—We wish him a long life and every success in his missionary labors.

On Monday following the ordination, the affable and generous Dr. McCloskey, gave a sumptuous dinner, in honor of Bishop Waterson, the Jesuit Fathers and the newly ordained priest, at which Dr. McCloskey, Bishop Waterson, Father Langlake, Dr. McCaffrey, Father Walker and Father Healy, made short speeches and gave congratulatory toasts to the Mountain. This was Father Walker's first visit to his Alma Mater in twenty-four years. In his speech he paid a well merited compliment to Dr. McCloskey, whom he called the pillar and main stay of the Mountain. Bishop Waterson expressed his delight at seeing so many members in the seminary and at the prospect of having a full college during the coming year.

NEAR EMMITSBURG, Aug. 20th, 1880. Mr. EDITOR.—The 28th day of August, 1880, will long be held in remembrance by the "Improved Order of Red-men," both of Pennsylvania and Maryland. The morning of that glorious day was ushered in with a cloudless sky, the sun rose red in the eastern horizon, as the various tribes were preparing to leave their wigwams, to enjoy a day of mirth and jollity and of social intercourse in the woodland. The chiefs of the several tribes, after searching for suitable hunting grounds for the occasion, finally found them in the grove of Mr. Wm. Rudiscl, about 1 1/2 miles south of Taneytown, with an excellent spring of water near by, to which place the different tribes, from Maryland and Pennsylvania, repaired.

I have known old Taneytown from boyhood, and many days have I spent within its limits, but never did I behold it in such a state of excitement, nor in such a joyful mood, as on the morning above mentioned. When the Emmitsburg Band entered the town, playing in its fascinating manner, headed by the Marshal of Massasoit, Geo. L. Gillean, and followed by the tribe in full regalia, with its banner waving in the breeze, with the Cayugas tribe of Gettysburg, with its music and banners and immense train of buggies, hacks, &c. following in the rear, presented a spectacle that the inhabitants of that little town were unfamiliar with. When the tribes above mentioned arrived at the public square, they were met by Wyoming of Uniontown, in full bloom, having with it also a splendid band of music from the same place. Here in the centre of this little town was formed, I suppose for the first time, a procession of Red-men. The van of this immense procession was composed of the Uniontown band, and Wyoming tribe, followed by the Emmitsburg band, and Massasoit tribe, the rear being brought up by the Drum Corps of Gettysburg, and Cayugas tribe, making in all a goodly number and a splendid display. The procession marched and counter marched through the principal streets, and thence to the grove, where an immense concourse of people had assembled awaiting its approach, to say nothing of the vast train following after.

The exercises of the morning began by singing the "Opening Ode," in which the Red-men heartily joined, after which a very affecting and appropriate prayer was offered by Isaac Hyder, of Massasoit tribe, followed by eloquent addresses from the G. J. S., Wm. J. McClure, of Pa., G. C. or R., Chas. C. Conley, of Pa., and G. S. W. L. Schley, of Md., in which they set forth the origin of the Red-man, showed the beneficiary effects of the order, and in conclusion assured all young, and unmarried ladies who wished to enter the state of matrimony, that they would do well to look around and make a desperate effort to secure for their future companion a member of the improved order of Red-men, as they were harmless, and would make excellent husbands. When the speaking was over whilst the bands played a piece of music, you could see couple after couple taking their positions on the large dancing floor erected for the occasion, which amusement was indulged in until a late hour in the evening. The Marshals of the several tribes, and especially the chief Marshal, the G. S. S., Joseph Byers of Massasoit tribe, certainly deserve honor and credit for the manner in which they conducted the affairs of the day, making it a brilliant success, and a day long to be remembered by those who had there assembled. It certainly was a day of much pleasure to the Red-men.—The tribes of Pa. and Md. uniting, formed as it were one grand common brotherhood, known under the title of Red-men, and all recognizing the same Grand Spirit as the ruler and controller of all their councils. Such a meeting, at such a time, and under such favorable circumstances, is certainly an inducement to us to become more devoted to our cause, and more earnest and active in our labors.

Agricultural.

Salt Growing Cabbage.

A New Jersey gardener considers salt necessary to the development of cabbage, especially in places far from the coast. He finds them more crisp, of better flavor, and to keep better when salt is used than without. He used it as follows: "A few days after setting out the plants, and when they are damp, either after a rain or when the dew is on, I take a small dish of fine salt and walking among the rows, sprinkle a little salt on the centre of each plant when the leaves begin to grow. I repeat the salting, and when the centre of the leaves begin to form the heads I apply salt again, scattering it over the leaves, after this I look them over occasionally, and if I find plants that do not head well and appear diseased, I sprinkle the salt over freely, this will save all such plants. A quart of salt is sufficient for five hundred plants in a season, although more can be safely used."

WATERING HORSES.—Never water a horse directly after feeding him, especially if he is fed on corn. Thirst should be allayed before the feed is given, and any water if allowed after it should be merely a mouthful, until the lapse of two or three hours time has been had for gastric digestion. Many valuable animals have been lost by allowing them to drink freely directly after eating.

MILKING COWS.—A French paper relates the following experiment: A cow was milked three times a day, for eleven days, and yielded 170 quarts of milk. With two milkings daily she gave only 146 quarts in the same number of days. Analysis moreover showed that the milk in the first case was richer in butter globules by more than one-seventh than in the second case.

COMPOSTS.—There are many waste matters about a farm, and they should be gathered into a heap and there rotted into a valuable fertilizer. Weeds of all kinds that do not contain ripe seeds, and refuse of crops, should go into the compost heap.

A New York farmer kills the cabbage worm by sprinkling the plants with common black pepper from an ordinary tin box—a pound to 150 plants—sometimes previously sprinkling with soap suds from the week's washing.

There is nothing that makes a prettier and fresher colored garden walk than fresh tanbark. It is death to grass and weeds, and can be renewed with a very thin coating.—Coal ashes also make a very firm and pretty walk.

SHADE is death to gardeners. If the trees that cut off the sun are too valuable to be removed then have them topped. It improves their healthfulness and renders their shade more dense.

It is generally conceded that sweet corn makes the most and best relished fodder for cows. The first seed cost more, but nothing in proportion to the benefit to the dairy.

If you are troubled about the grain chest with mice, watch for their holes and scatter a little coperas in them. A few grains will drive them away.

VALUABLE RECIPES.

CORN FRITTERS.—Grate one dozen ears of corn, add two well-beaten eggs and three tablespoonfuls flour; salt to taste. Fry in boiling lard and serve very hot.

HAM BALLS.—Chop fine cold cooked ham; add an egg for each pound; a little flour; beat together; make into balls, and fry brown in butter.

ROLLS.—One cup of warm milk, one teacup yeast, one and a half quarts flour, when this sponge is light, work in a well-beaten egg, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one teaspoonful of salt, half a teacupful of soda dissolved in hot water, one tablespoonful of white sugar, flour to make a soft dough; let it rise four or five hours before putting on the baking pan.

TRULY conscientious: "Are you asleep, dearest?" "Yes, mamma, and the doctor particularly said that I needn't be waked to take my medicine."

AN Irishman being asked what he came to America for, said:

"Is't what I came here for you mean? Arrah by the powers! you may be sure it wasn't for want, for I had plenty of that at home."

"MAJOR, how did you iver lose that leg?" "Why, Pat, one of my ancestors was an Irishman; and all my blood that came from him settled in that leg, so I had it cut off." "By the powers," said Pat, "it's a pity it hadn't settled in your head."

WHEN a man wants to make his enemy unhappy he poisons his enemy's dog, but a woman chooses a very different way to make her enemy unhappy. She buys some new clothes that her enemy can't afford, and sits in front of her enemy at church.

A DUTCHMAN who married his second wife soon after the funeral of the first was visited with a two-hours' serenade in token of disapproval. He expostulated thus: "I say, poys, you ought to be ashamed of yourself to be making all dish noise ven dere was a funeral here so soon."

"HELLO! when did you return?" asked Snopson of his friend Binns, whom he met on the street. "Why—I haven't been away," replied the latter. "You haven't incredibly asked Snopson. "Why, you look so worn out and near dead that I positively thought you had been away to one of the watering places for a few weeks for the benefit of your health."

THE president of the Concord School of Philosophy forwarded a letter to the Lime Kiln Club, asking Brother Gardener if his experience with wasps had demonstrated the alleged fact that only female wasps use their stingers and soliciting an early reply. "My 'perience wid wasps runs back over half a century," replied the old man, as he passed along the letter, "an' yit the only fact ever demonstrated am dat when attacked by wasps I break fur de bushes on de gallop, an' neber once stop to ask which sex dey belongs to."

WHAT SETTLED HIM.—A genuine Yankee in San Francisco, having bored a new comer with every conceivable question relative to his object in visiting the gold country, his means, his prospects, etc., at length asked if he had a family.

"Yes, sir; I have a wife and six children, and I never saw one of them."

After this reply the couple sat a few minutes in silence, then the interrogator again commenced:

"Was you ever blind, sir?"

"No, sir."

"Did you marry a widow, sir?"

"No, sir."

Another interval of silence.

"Did I understand you to say, sir, that you had a wife and six children living in New York, and had never seen one of them?"

"Yes, sir; I so stated it."

Another and a longer pause.—Then the interrogator again inquired:

"How can it be, sir, that you never saw one of them?"

"Why, one of them was born after I left." Now laugh.

Literary Revolution and Universal Knowledge.

An Encyclopaedia in 20 Vols., over 16,000 pages; 10 per cent more matter than any Encyclopaedia ever before published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution. THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE is a reprint entire of the last (1879) Edinburgh edition of "Chambers's Encyclopaedia," with about 40 per cent of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readers, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority of those who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest Encyclopaedia in the field. Specimen Volumes in either style will be sent for examination with privilege of return on receipt of proportionate price per volume. Special Discounts to all early subscribers, and extra discounts to clubs. Full particulars with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, sent free. Leading principles of the American Book Exchange: I. Publish only books of real value. II. Work upon the basis of present cost of making books, about one half what it was a few years ago. III. Sell to buyers direct, and save them the 50 to 60 per cent. commission commonly allowed to dealers. IV. The cost of books when made 10,000 at a time is but a fraction of the cost when made 500 at a time—adopt the low price and sell the large quantity. V. Use good type, paper, etc., do careful printing, and strong, neat binding, that avoid all "padding," fat and heavily-leaded type, spongy paper and gaudy binding, which are so commonly resorted to to make books appear large and fine, and which greatly add to their cost, but do not add to their value. VI. To make $1 and a friend is better than to make $5 and an enemy.
