BULWER'S LAST POEM.

There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairy shore,
And bright in Heaven's jeweled crown
They shine forevermore.

There is no death! The dust we tread
Shall change beneath the summer shower,
To golden grain, or mellow fruit,
Or rainbow, tinted flower.

The granite rocks disorganize
To feed the hanging moss they bear;
The forest trees drink daily life
From out the viewless air.

There is no death! The leaves may fall,
The flowers may fade and pass away—
They only wait through wintry hours
For coming of the May.

There is no death! An angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
He bears our best loved things away,
And then—we call them dead.

He leaves our hearts all desolate,
He plucks our fairest, sweetest flowers;
Transplanted into bliss, they now
Adorn immortal bowers.

The bird-like voice, whose joyous notes
Made glad these scenes of sin and strife,
Sings now an everlasting song
Amidst the trees of life.

And when he finds a smile too bright,
Or heart too pure for taint or vice,
He bears it to that world of light
To dwell in Paradise.

Born into that undying life,
They leave us but to come again;
With joy we welcome them the same,
Except in sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread,
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there are no dead!

WALLY, THE WRECK-BOY.

A STORY OF THE NORTHERN COAST.

His real name is Wallace, but his mates always called him "Wally," and although he is now a big, broad-shouldered young mariner, he is still pointed out as the "wreck-boy." One summer not long ago Wally sailed with me for a week out upon the blue waters across the bar after blue-fish, or among the winding tide-water creeks for sheep-head, and it was then, by means of many questions, that I heard the following story.

Wally's father was a light-house keeper. The great brick tower stood aloft among the sand-hills, making the little house which nestled at its base look dwarfish and cramped.

Wally was about twelve years old and seldom had the good fortune to find a playmate. Two miles down the beach, at Three Pine Point, stood a handsome cottage that was occupied by Mr. Burton, a city gentleman and a great ship-owner, during the summer, and sometimes his daughter Elsie, a bright-eyed little girl, would come riding along the sands from the cottage behind a small donkey, and ask Wally to show her his "museum."

It was a matter of great pride with the boy to exhibit the many curious shells, bits of sea-weed, sharks' teeth, fish bones, and the full-rigged ship he had whittled out and completed on winter nights, and Elsie was an earnest listener to all his explanations; showing him in return the pictures she had made in her sketch-book.

Not far from the light-house stood a life-saving station—a strong, two-story building, shingled upon its sides to make it warmer. Here through the winter months, lived a crew of brave fishermen, who were always ready to launch the life-boat, and go out through the stormy waters to help shipwrecked sailors.

Wally was a favorite here and spent much of his time listening to the tales they told of ocean dangers and escapes; but he liked best of all to trudge along the sands with the guard on dark nights, with lantern in hand, watching for ships in distress. The Captain of the crew, who was an old seaman, taught him the use of the compass and quadrant and other matters of navigation, while the rest showed him how to pull an oar, steer and swim, until he could manage a boat as well as any of them.

Just before sunset each day Wally's father climbed the iron steps of the light tower and started the lamp which slowly revolved within the great crystal lens, flashing out four times each minute its beam of warning across the stormy waters. Every few hours it was the watcher's duty to pump oil into a holder above the light, from which it flowed in a steady stream to the round wicks below. If this was neglected the lamp would cease to burn.

Wally, who was an ingenious boy, had placed a small bit of mirror in his little bedroom in the attic so that as he lay in bed he could see the reflection of the flash across the waters. One wild October evening he had watched it until he fell asleep, and in the night was awakened by the roaring gusts of the gale which swept over the lonely sands, and he missed the faithful dash upon his mirror, The light had gone out!

Many ships out upon the sea were sailing to and fro, and there was no light to guide them or warn them of dangerous shoals. Nearer and nearer some of them were drifting to their fate, and still the beacon gave no warning of danger.

The light-keeper, hours before, had gone out upon the narrow gallery about the top of the tower to look at the storm, just as a large wild fowl, bewildered by the glare, had flown with great speed toward it, and striking the keeper's head had lain him senseless upon the iron grating.

I have seen fractures in the lenses, or glass reflectors, of light houses as large as your two fists, such as it would require a heavy sledge hammer to break by human force, caused by the fierce flight of wild fowl; and a netting of iron wire is usually spread upon three sides of the lens as a protection to the light. Sometimes a large number of dead birds will be found at the foot of the light-house in the morning after a stormy autumn night, when wild-geese are flying southward.

Wally sprang from his bed, full of dread lest his father had fallen to the ground; for he knew he would never sleep at his post of duty. But first in his thoughts was the need of starting the lamp again. Calling to his mother, he sped up the spiral stairway, which never seemed so long before, and began to pump the oil. Then he lighted the wick from a small lantern burning in the watch-room and pumped again until the oil tank was quite full. His mother in the meantime had found the form of the keeper and partially restored him. Wally stepped out upon the gallery to find his father's hat, and looking seaward, saw something which for a moment made him sick with terror. In the midst of the breakers lay a large square-rigged vessel, helplessly pounding to pieces upon the outer bar. In the intervals of the wind's moaning Wally could hear the despairing cries of those on board, who seemed to call to him to save them.

The life-saving station was not yet opened for the season. The Captain and his men lived upon the mainland, across a wide and swift-flowing channel in the marsh, called the "Thoroughfare." To reach them was of the most vital importance, for their hands only could drag out and man the heavy surf-boat, or fire the mortar and rig the life car.

All this passed through Wally's mind in a few seconds, and knowing that his helpless father could do nothing, and that an alarm might make him worse, he sped silently down the stairway and setting fire to a "Coston torch," such as are used by the coast-guard in cases of wreck, he rushed from the house, swinging the torch, that burned with a bright red flame, above his head as he ran.

Half a mile across the sands there was a small boat landing, where a skiff usually lay moored.

Toward this Wally sped with all his strength; but, alas! the waves had lifted it, the winds had broken it from its moorings and it was floating miles away down the "Thoroughfare," and now Wally stood up, on the landing, in the blackness of the night, full of despair. He might swim, but he had never tried half the width of the channel before. He looked into the blackness beyond and hesitated; then at the light-house, where his mother still sat in the little watchroom ministering to his injured father; then he thought of the poor men out in the breakers, whose lives depended upon his reaching the crew.

But a moment longer he stood, and then throwing off his coat, he tied a sleeve securely about a post so it would be known, in case he should fail, how he lost his life. And now he was in the icy waters. The wind helped him along, but the incoming tide swept him far out of his course. As he gained the middle of the channel he thought how bitter the consequences might be to his father if the crew of the ship were lost, for who would believe the story of the wild fowl's blow? This nerved his tired arms, but the effort was too much for his strength. He paused, and threw up his arms. As his form sank beneath the waves, his toes touched the muddy bottom, and his hand swept among some weeds. One more effort as he came to the surface, and now he could stand with his mouth out of water. A moment's rest, and he was tearing aside the dense flags that bordered the channel.

The Captain, a good mile from the Thoroughfare, had left his warm bed to fasten a loose window-shutter, when he saw a small form tottering toward him, and Wally fell, weak and voiceless at his feet. Restoratives were brought and the boy told his story.

Ten minutes later half a dozen of the crew were on their way to the landing, Wally, now fully recovered, foremost among them. He seemed to possess wonderful strength. They crossed the channel, and dragged out the great life-boat from its house. It hardly appeared possible to launch it in such a sea, but each man, in his excitement, had the strength of two, and without waiting to be bid, Wally leaped into the stern and grasped the helm.

"Well done, boy!" cried the Captain. "I'll take an oar; we need all help to-night."

Through the night the faithful crew pulled, bringing load after load of men, woman and children from the wreck of the Argonaut to the shore, until all were saved. The little house under the light was well filled, and the sailors were crowded into the life-saving station.

"Where is my father?" asked Wally; and as a man came forward with his head bandaged, in reply, the boy sank down, and a blackness came over his eyes.

When he recovered he was in a beautiful room, into which the sun shone, lighting up the bright walls, pictures and carpets. He was on a pretty bedstead, and a strange lady sat by the window talking to his mother. He thought it all a dream. The door opened, and Mr. Burton came in, dressed in a fisherman's suit. How queer he looked in such a garb! and Wally laughed at the sight, and thought that when he awoke he would tell his mother about it.

It happened that the ship which had come ashore was one belonging to Mr. Burton, who was on board, returning from a trip to the Mediterranean. So he had opened the cottage at Three Pine Point, and as the little house under the light was full, had insisted upon having Wally, with some others, brought to his summer home, where he could care for them.

Everybody had learned of the boy's brave swim, all had seen him in the life-boat, and they were anxious to have him recover soon.

Wally, too, learned that the ship had become helpless long before she had struck the shore, and that her loss was not caused by his father's mishap.

When Wally had recovered, Mr. Burton and some of the other passengers insisted upon taking him to the city, where they had a full suit of wrecker's clothes made for him—cork jacket, sou'wester and all. He was also presented with a silver watch and a medal for his bravery.

When he was dressed in his new suit Miss Elsie made a sketch of him, whereupon Wally blushed more than he had done during all the praises lavished upon him.

At the close of the next summer Mr. Burton arranged with the light-keeper to let him send Wally to a city school, and for the next four years the boy lived away from the little house on the sands, making only occasional visits to his home.

Then Mr. Burton took him into his office, where he worked faithfully for two years; but his old life by the sea caused a longing for a sailor's career, and his employer wisely allowed him to go upon a cruise in one of his ships. Upon the following voyage he was made a mate and this year he is to command a new ship now being built. Captain Wally was asked the other day to suggest a name for the new craft, and promptly gave as his choice the Elsie.

And Elsie Burton, who is now an artist, has painted two pictures for the Captain's cabin. One is called "The Loss of the Argonaut," and the other, "Wally, the Wreck-Boy."

A Boy Again.

Sometimes an old man becomes a boy again, though too smart to drop into his second childhood. An illustration of this pleasant tendency was given not many months since by an old man with several millions.

He was in the habit of prowling around the office of the insurance company in which he was a director. One morning as he was thus investigating, he happened to come across the dinner pail of the office boy. His curiosity led him to take off the cover. A slice of home-made bread, two doughnuts and a slice of apple pie, tempted the millionaire's appetite. He became a boy again, and the dinner pail seemed the one he had carried sixty years ago.

Just then the office boy came in and surprised the old man eating the pie—he had finished the bread and doughnuts.

"That's my dinner you're eating!" exclaimed the boy, indignantly.

"Yes, sonny, I suspected it may be; but it's a first-rate one for all that. I've not eaten so good a one for sixty years."

"There," he added as he finished the pie, "take that and go out and buy yourself a dinner, but you won't get as good a one, and he handed the boy a five dollar bill.

For days after the old man kept referring to the first-class dinner he had eaten from the boy's pail.

EVERY human being is intended to have a character of his own, to be what no other is, to do what no other can do.

Live Up to the Mottoes.

There is no use in putting up the motto "God bless our home," if the father is a rough old bear, and the spirit of discourtesy and rudeness is taught by parents to children, and by the older to the younger. There is no use in putting up the motto, "The Lord will provide," while the father is shiftless, the mother is shiftless, the boys refuse to work, and the girls busy themselves over gewgaws and finery. There is no use in putting up the motto "The greatest of these is charity," while the tongue of the backbiter wages in the family, and silly gossip is dispensed at the tea-table. There is no use in placing up conspicuously the motto, "The liberal man deviseth liberal things," while the money chinks in the pockets of the "head of the household," groaning to get out and see the light of day, and there are dollars and dimes for wine, tobacco and other luxuries, but positively not one cent for the church. In how many homes are these mottoes standing—let us say, hanging—sarcasms, which serve only to point a jest and adorn a satire!

The beauty of quiet lives, of trustful, hopeful and free-handed, free-hearted, charitable lives, is one of surpassing loveliness, and those lives shed their own incomparable fragrance, and the world knows where to find them. And they still remain fresh and fadeless when the colors of the pigment and the floss have faded, and the very frames have rotted away in their joints.

Never speak much of your own performances. Faithfulness and sincerity are the highest things. He who blackens others does not whiten himself. The vices we scoff at in others laugh at us within ourselves. The fullest and best ears of corn hang lowest toward the ground. The greatest truths are the simplest; and so are the greatest men.

THE GREATEST BLESSING.—A simple, pure, harmless remedy, that cures every time, and prevents disease by keeping the blood pure, stomach regular, kidneys and liver active, is the greatest blessing ever conferred upon man. Hop Bitters is that remedy, and its proprietors are being blessed by thousands who have been saved and cured by it.—Will you try it. See other column.

ARE you low-spirited, "down-in-the-mouth," and weak in the back? Does walking, lifting, or standing cause pain in the small of the back? If so you have kidney disease, and Prof. Guilmette's French Kidney Pad is the only remedy which will cure you rapidly and permanently and without filling your stomach with nauseating medicine.

MILESIAN MASTER: "Pat! Pat! I say! O, there ye are, ye blag-gard! And why, thin, didn't ye answer me before, ye spalpeen—and me a-calling ye this half hour?" Pat: "Sure, sor, ah, I niver heard ya callin' me, at all, at all, M.M. 'Niver heard me! Then why the devil didn't ye call back at first, an' say so, ye thefe o' the world?"

BE not affronted at a jest. If one throw ever so much salt at thee thou wilt receive no harm unless thou art raw and ulcerous.

THE good things that belong to prosperity may be wished, but the good things that belong to adversity are to be admired.

ELECTIONS!

As the time for the Presidential election draws nigh, party feeling very naturally, more and more intensifies itself.

As the right to vote is the cornerstone in the structure of our government, the duty of exercising it should be inculcated in every direction and upon all occasions.

The judgment of men by their peers is a fundamental principle of the law, its enforcement in this direction would tend mightily to do away with much of the disgusting machinery of elections.

We know well this idea may seem to conflict with the general course of human nature, as exhibited in the days of Ancient Rome, and down through the ages, but we believe its realization is among the possibilities of the future.

How to see Jupiter's Moons.—The Pittsburg Telegraph, speaking of the four moons of Jupiter, says that to witness them it is not even necessary to buy or borrow a field-glass.

A WESTERN BLIZZARD.—They had a wind storm in Wisconsin on last Sunday, which drove things at a rate between sixty and seventy miles an hour.

ARCHBISHOP PURCELL, of Cincinnati, is very feeble physically, while his mind appears to be as active as ever.

PROGRESS.

To meet the demands upon our office, we have purchased direct from the patentees and manufacturers, J. W. Daughaday & Co., of Philadelphia, a new No. 4 improved Model Rotary Job Press, which for beauty of finish, compactness of construction, and facility is, as its name imparts—a "Model" Press.

Our means of accommodation having been thus increased, we are prepared to execute all manner of work in our line of business, quickly and satisfactorily, and at such low prices, as cannot fail to prove acceptable to all who appreciate good work.

We started our enterprise in this, our native place, in the hope and with the intention that it should be successful, and we intend to go forward on that line.

To benefit our patrons and to build up the material interests of the community, is the object ever before us. In giving us the encouragement we need, they cannot fail to realize individual benefit from the general advancement which must grow out of our efforts.

We confidently trust, therefore, that they will use every laudable means to promote these desirable ends. Materials of all kinds will be constantly on hand, or can be obtained in a few hours.

It is well known that the original programme for the late celebration called for a grand musical celebration. In consequence of the shortness of the time for the preparation, this idea was abandoned.

In like manner, also, the Baltimore American gave public concerts from its balcony on Monday and Tuesday afternoon and evenings, by the famous band of the Fifth Maryland Regiment, consisting of fifty pieces, and led by Prof. Adam Itzel.

ACCORDING to the last issue of Rowell's Directory the number of newspapers now published in the United States exceeds 9,000—the actual figures being 9,723.

THE Postoffice Department now issues money orders payable to the party purchasing, thus enabling any one going on a journey to a strange city to carry surplus money, and to collect at the desired point without identification other than the order itself furnishes.

THE coroner's jury which held, inquest on the recent railroad disaster at Pittsburg yesterday rendered a verdict, censuring the Pennsylvania Railroad for allowing its trains to be overloaded and for not providing suitable rules for preventing a catastrophe of this kind.

A GRAND FINALE.

We have not room for a description of the closing scenes of Baltimore's grand celebration, but extract the following account of the illumination from the American:

"E carnavali est mortuo." The carnival is dead, but it died gallantly—with the blaze of trumpets, in the glitter of gorgeous pageants, and amid the cheers of thousands of people.

LAST Sunday was truly a day of rest, the rain settled the dust effectually, and people were glad to remain within doors. We cannot escape a feeling of sadness in beholding the leaves quiver in the air and then fall to the earth, once bright and beautiful and so gaily fluttering in the breezes, now withered and dead, and ready to moulder away. Even thus go the generations of mankind!

FALL FROM A TREE.—On Wednesday of last week, Charles, a ten-year-old son and only child of Mr. Hanson Hersh, of Straban township, fell a distance of about 30 feet from a tree in the woods near the Picking school-house in the same township. He came down head foremost, and, landing on his hands, both wrists were broken, the bones of the forearms cutting through the flesh and tearing the ligatures, causing very ugly and painful wounds. The boy is now in a critical condition. Dr. J. E. Gilbert is the attending physician.

HOTEL ARRIVALS.—The arrivals for the week ending Thursday, were as follows: Emmit House—Thimas McDaniel, L. Barranger, P. Cribbs, Baltimore city; G. H. Buehler, John Fahnestock, Gettysburg, Pa.; H. Mand, S. Cloud, Pa.; Daniel Sheely, Reuben Sheely, Littlestown, Pa.; J. Livingston, Jr., Carlisle, Pa.; H. Galt, Taneytown; W. E. Walsh, Cumberland.

FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT.—Intelligence of a frightful accident reaches us from the South Mountain. On Saturday morning the fine six-horse team of Hon. Wm. A. Martin, of Menallen township, was started with a load of charcoal to Pinegrove Furnace, Mr. George Swope being the driver. About noon a gentleman going up the mountain met four of Mr. Martin's horses with the front carriage of the wagon, but without a driver. After waiting some time for the driver to appear, he started after him. He had gone but a short distance up the old Slate Quarry road, when he found the coal wagon upset and the two wheel horses near by and under the debris, dead. Further up the hill he discovered the driver, Mr. Swope, also dead. Subsequent examination showed a leg crushed and a hip dislocated, and the lower part of the body mutilated.—Gettysburg Compiler.

THE Weekly Sun is a double number of eight pages, sixty-four columns, and contains all the essential details and descriptions of the great celebration of Baltimore's one hundred and fiftieth birthday. The account is made to run on in a continuous and connected narrative from the beginning of the pageant, compacted in closer space than the regular reports made from day to day. It will be found a most valuable compendium of the splendid events of spectacle week—useful for preservation or for mailing to friends at a distance who may wish to learn all that Baltimore did and all that was seen in the course of this memorable week. Other contents include a continuation of the story, "Major Frank," translated for The Sun by Mr. Edward Spencer; returns of Tuesday's elections, editorials on leading topics, fashion notes domestic and foreign news, local happenings, full market reports, original and selected articles on agricultural topics, poetry, humorous, etc.

LIST OF LETTERS.—The following letters remain in the Post Office, Emmitsburg, Md., Oct. 18th, 1880. Persons calling will please say advertised, otherwise they may not receive them: Scarle Robert C.; Sheely Balser; Smith Miss Sallie J.; Shortridge Mrs.; Wright Miss Rachel A.; Bowie Mrs. Mary.

THE grand total of visitors to the Sesqui-centennial last week is put at 331,223, of which 137,000 came by Baltimore and Ohio, 109,600 by the Northern Central Railway and Baltimore and Potomac, 27,000 by the Western Maryland, 30,000 by the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore, 30,000 by steamer from various points. It is reliably estimated that the visitors spent a round million of dollars in the city during their stay.

THE Epizootic.—This disease, which runs its course a few years ago among the horses, has again made its appearance in this State, and the owners of horses have their hands full in ministering to their wants. The disease seems to be spreading and it is not at all unlikely that it will find its way throughout this county. It is prevailing in a mild form in this city, but we have not heard of any really dangerous cases.—Examiner.

SCARCITY OF WATER.—The scarcity of water in many parts of this county (owing to the long continued draught) is becoming very alarming. The Monocacy river is lower than it has been for years, numerous smaller streams and springs have gone completely dry, and in various places farmers are obliged to drive their stock for a considerable distance in order to obtain water. On some farms, it is said, there is not even a sufficient quantity for household purposes.—Examiner.

ABOUT ADVERTISING.—It is wonderful what an amount of advertising is done in our town; it is more wonderful how it is done, and how far it falls short of realizing its objects! Go where you may, enter any shop, or place of business, and there you see the invitation to purchase the things which are offered for sale. They consist of nicely arranged windows, shelves, counters, finely framed pictures, and devices gorgeously arrayed, card boards with notices, plain, fancy and otherwise, notifying you of the excellences of the goods they represent.—All this is meant for advertising; the persons who happen in where they are displayed, may or may not have their attention arrested by them. A little reflection will prove that however effective the mode may be, it is yet an imperfect, a slow mode. Make known your business in your local paper and the items come under the eyes of every reader. Seeing where they can obtain what they need, they forthwith go there and get it. It saves time to the buyer, it promotes trade, and is every way beneficial. Try it, and we know you will be satisfied.

SENNER for November, begins its eleventh year and twenty-first volume, and celebrates the event, by donning a new dress, so unlike that in which it was wont to appear, that we scarcely recognized it. Whether the change is an improvement or not is a matter of taste; but there can be no question as to the superiority of the contents, which, for interest, variety and beauty, stand pre-eminent. The artistic features are remarkably fine, while the literary collection, challenges competition. The second part of the Life of Peter the Great is begun, also a new story by a new writer, "Tiger Lily" by Mrs. Julia Schayer; an article on the "Life of Gladstone" and a paper on "Borden-town and the Bonapartes" will both be read with interest; there is an interesting chapter on "Tableaux," by Miss Oakley, and the "Secret of Second-Sight," by an ex-conjuror cannot fail to attract attention. On the whole, this number is larger, fuller and richer than any of its predecessors, and we know of no magazine so well deserving a place in every family. Scribner & Co., 743 Broadway, N. Y.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE Agricultural Society

People of Frederick County!

At a special meeting of the Board of Managers of the Frederick County Agricultural Society held September 27th, 1880, the action of the Board of the Saturday previous was unanimously reversed by the substitution of the following:

Resolved, That the Annual Exhibition of this Society as advertised to commence on Tuesday, October 12th, be postponed to Tuesday, October 26th, and terminating on Friday, October 29th, 1880, subject to the same rules and regulations as prescribed in the regular premium list.

With the announcement of the above, the undersigned Committee was unanimously instructed by the Board to present succinctly and briefly the reasons which induced their actions.

With a just appreciation of their responsibilities as the custodians of the welfare and prosperity of the Society the Board felt assured that the Exhibition, as previously announced; in view of the obstacles opposed, would prove a lamentable failure.

To summarize briefly: The overshadowing influence of the grand Sesqui-Centennial (Baltimore's one hundred and fiftieth anniversary) progressing the same week as our proposed Fair, whilst attracting thousands of our citizens and farmers, the main stay and support of our institution, at the same time would draw from our country, many, very many of the fair wives and daughters whose encouraging smiles and presence redound so largely to our success, and whose skillful handiwork has rendered our Household Department the centre of attraction and an object of admiration and pride. The Board deem it unnecessary to enlarge on the subject as its influence extends to every family, and is patent to all. Besides the development and prosperity of Baltimore should elicit the pride of every Marylander, and we should rejoice in the opportunity which presents to evince our interest in the great commercial city with which we are connected by all the ties natural to man.

Also, the "Great Fair" at Washington under national auspices, with its $25,000 in premiums and but an hour or two distant by rail, in progress at the same time, would further tend to deplete our population and leave, we sincerely believe, a meagre representation for us.

Also, by this action of the Board our Society avoids conflicting with her Sister Societies, Washington county, Gettysburg, and Winchester, all commencing October 19th, and those persons whose feelings point to "Pimlico" can indulge the bent of their inclinations without expatriating themselves from their own Society.

The Railroad fares so low, the attractions so many, the opportunities so great, what could we then present to stem the outward torrent. While a few tried and faithful friends would remain true to their first love, by far the largest number who seek excitement and pleasure and at little, if any additional expense, would be conspicuously absent.

Actuated by a sincere desire for the permanent success of our institution, the Board express the hope that their action will receive the approbation of every member and friend of the Society. [Signed on behalf of the Board.] JAMES H. GAMBILL, C. K. THOMAS, GEO. WM. SMITH, J. W. BAUGHMAN, FAIRFAX SCHLEY, FREDERICK, Sept. 27, 1880. Committee. oct 2-1/2

Agricultural.

Farm and Garden Notes.

A pinch of cayenne, or red pepper sprinkled over the exposed parts of cabbage plants is sure death to the cabbage worms.

A successful sheep raiser says that if a bell be put on one of the stoutest of the flock it will protect the sheep from dogs.

An English grape-grower stopped the profuse bleeding of a thrifty young vine, by forming a sort of hard cement over the cut ends by repeated dusting at short intervals with Portland cement.

An Indiana farmer gathered old bones and reduced them by placing them in alternate layers with ashes, and the next year used the mixture on a melon hill, and raised the largest crop of melons he ever saw.

Hogs are sometimes troubled by disordered stomach. The best antidote is charcoal. Aside from charcoal, charred corn cobs, or charred corn have a good effect.

There is nothing easier than to remove warts from a cow's teat. Pull a hair out of the cow's tail, tie it around the neck of the wart as close to the teat as you can get it. In a few days the wart will drop off.

BOTS IN HORSES.—This trouble is due to the maggots or grubs of a fly which fasten themselves upon the lining of the stomach and sometimes that of the intestines of the horse. The female fly deposits her eggs singly upon the hair of the lower jaw, neck and forward legs of the horse. They hatch in a short time, and the tickling sensation produced by the young grub causes the horse to lick the place, and thus the grub passes into the horse's mouth and from thence into the stomach, where they soon fasten themselves by numerous minute hooks in rows upon their white wrinkled bodies. After about two months the bots pass from horse and bury themselves in the dung and remain in the dormant pupa state until the next season, when the fly begins the round of trouble again. The maggots irritate the coat of the stomach and cause the formation of puss upon which they feed. There is no remedy for this troublesome parasite. A dose of physic may help to dislodge them, or hasten the time of their removal from the animal.

VALUABLE RECIPES.

TO POLISH LEAVES.—Press them and dry; then sprinkle a little rosin on each leaf, and iron quickly; turn and iron on the other side. Much more quickly and cheaply done than by varnish.

BREADED EGG-PLANT.—Slice nearly an inch thick; pare each slice, and lay in salt and water one hour. Wipe dry, dip in beaten egg, then rolled crackers, and fry to a fine brown in salted lard or drippings.

RAW CABBAGE.—A nice way to prepare raw cabbage is as follows: Select a fine good head; chop finely in a bowl what you think will be needed, and to every quarter add, one-half teaspoonful of thick, sweet cream; two tablespoonfuls of strong vinegar or lemon juice; one cupful of white sugar, and mix thoroughly.

MENDING CHINAWARE.—A very ready and efficient means of mending broken china is to take a very thick solution of gum-arabic and stir into it as much plaster of paris as will bring it to the proper consistency. Apply it with a brush to the edges of the fractured parts and stick them together, holding them in place for a few moments until they adhere. In a few days it will be impossible to break them in the same place.

CHARLOTTE RUSSE.—One pint milk, three-quarters pound sugar, one-half box gelatin. Put these together, and set over a kettle of boiling water; after the gelatin has dissolved, beat four eggs and stir in. Leave over the fire until it looks clear, then let it cool. Beat to a stiff froth one pint cream, then add vanilla to taste. Stir all well together, and set in a cool place with ice or snow around it. When you add the eggs stir thoroughly all the time, and when it is cool give it a hard beat. Put cake in a mould stuck together with white of egg, and put the liquid inside, or serve the cake and liquid separately.

Humorous.

WHEN a pickpocket pulls at your watch tell him plainly that you have no time to spare.

WHAT the milkman said when he found a fish in the milk: "Good heavens! that brindle cow has been in swimming again."

A NEW definition of politeness: "Politeness is like an air-cushion; there may be nothing solid in it, but it eases the jolts of the world wonderfully."

AT the close of the sermon the minister became impressive. Raising his voice he said: "Judgment!" and a small boy near the vestibule shouted: "Out on the first!"

A COUPLE of reporters spent the night in a cell with a man who was doomed to be hanged in Connecticut recently, and in the morning the prisoner was perfectly willing to die.

AFTER the choir of one of the churches in Ithaca had performed a rather heavy selection, the minister opened the Bible and began reading in Acts xx, "And after the uproar had ceased."

A YOUNG man in Sprague, Conn., who carries pistol cartridges in his pocket with his tobacco, happened to get one in his pipe the other day, and he did not know it until a piece of his nose was blown off.

THERE is a boy in Boston whose parents are American, and who has always lived among people who speak English, yet he can understand French and can't speak a word of English. He is dumb, but not deaf.

PEDESTRIAN, who has dropped half a crown in front of "the blind," "Why, you confounded humbug, you are not blind." Beggar: "Not I, sir! If the card says I am they must have given me the wrong one. I'm deaf and dumb."

A MERCHANT tells us that he set a hen on an old tomato can, recently, and she has hatched five bottles of catsup, with lithographed labels, and a dozen fine tomato plants. The gentleman is an alderman, and can not lie, and would not if he could.

THE Rev. John Brown, of Had-dington, was in the habit of proposing on festive occasions a certain young lady as his toast. Having abandoned the practice, he was asked for a reason. "Because," said he, "I have toasted her for sixteen years, without being able to make her brown, and I've resolved to toast her no longer."

ONE of the best things to resist fatigue with is music. Girls who "could not walk a mile to save their lives," will dance in company with a knock-kneed clarinet and super-annuated fiddle from tea time till sunrise; while a soldier grown weary with quietness will no sooner hear a bugle give a flourish than he will give one himself.

"MAMMA, said a little philosopher, 'is our old hen going to be sent away for the summer?' "I guess not, my son," was the reply; "but why do you ask such a question?" "Because I heard Pa tell our new hired girl that they would have such a sweet time when he sent the old hen away for the summer." We reckon the old hen "laid for him."

"WHY, Bridget," said her mistress, who wished to rally the girl, for the amusement of her company, upon the fantastic ornamenting of a plate of butter. "Why, Bridget did you do this? You're quite an artist; how did you do it?" "Indade, mum, it was myself that did it," replied Bridget. "Isn't it pritty, mum? I did it with your fine-tooth comb, mum."

LITTLE Jeanne has a sister, a year married. Last week this sister became the mother of a pretty babe.—"Look, mademoiselle," said the nurse, showing the new born to its little aunt. "Isn't it the prettiest dolly you ever saw?" Jeanne danced with delight. Then she approached to take it from the nurse's arms. A cry of disgust arose.—"Pooh!" screamed Jeanne, "it's nothing but a meat baby!"

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED
STOMACH

The accumulated evidence of nearly thirty years show that the Bitters is a certain remedy for malarial disease, as well as its surest preventive; that it eradicates dyspepsia, constipation, liver complaint and nervousness, counteracts a tendency to gout, rheumatism, urinary and uterine disorders, that it imparts vigor to the feeble, and cheers the mind while it invigorates the body.

Literary Revolution and Universal Knowledge.

An Encyclopedia in 20 Vols., over 16,000 pages; 10 per cent more matter than any Encyclopedia ever before published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution.

Specimen Volumes in either style will be sent for examination with privilege of return on receipt of proportionate price per volume.
Special Discounts to all early subscribers, and extra discounts to clubs. Full particulars with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, sent free.
Leading principles of the American Book Exchange:
I. Publish only books of real value.
II. Work upon the basis of present cost of making books, about one half what it was a few years ago.
III. Sell to buyers direct, and save them the 50 to 60 per cent. commission commonly allowed to dealers.
IV. The cost of books when made 10,000 at a time is but a fraction of the cost when made 500 at a time—adopt the low price and sell the large quantity.
V. Use good type, paper, etc., do careful printing, and strong, neat binding, but avoid all "padding," fat and heavily-leaded type, spongy paper and gaudy binding, which are so commonly resorted to to make books appear large and fine, and which greatly add to their cost, but do not add to their value.
VI. To make $1 and a friend is better than to make $5 and an enemy.
