A HARVEST-HOME.

BY MARY A. BARR.

It is not long since we with happy feet
Stood ankle-deep in grasses fresh and green;
White in the apple blossoms, pink and sweet,
The singing birds, with flashing wings, were seen.

It is not long ago—not long ago—
Since the glad winds ran through the tasselled corn;
This way and that way, swaying to and fro,
The golden wheat waited the harvest morn.

Now, all the silent fields are brown and bare,
And all the singing birds are gone away;
But peaceful calm is in the hazy air,
And we, content, can watch the sweet decay.

For so the hay is saved, the corn, the wheat,
The honey from the thousand scented bowers,
White russet apples, delicately sweet,
Hang where once hung the pink-white apple flowers.

So we in our life's autumn stilly muse
Upon the harvest of our gathered years,
Finding the hopes that once we feared to lose
Grown perfect through our toil and love and tears.

And saying, gratefully, "Although their dower
Was strangely fair and sweet, from cup to root,
'Twas best they changed with us from hour to hour,
For better than the Blossom is—the Fruit."
—Harper's Weekly.

LOST AND FOUND.

In the year 183—, the firm of Gordon & Co., colonial brokers, of Mincing Lane, received by the London liner mail-packet St. James, Captain Ebor, which had arrived at Southampton from New York only the day before, some very startling and disastrous news from New Orleans, where a branch of their house had long been situated.

The sole partner in this firm were two brothers. The elder, John, was at the head of the London house; and the younger, Duncan, had for many years personally managed the branch estate in the capital of Louisiana.

He had, of course, taken his summer trip every year to "White Sulphur Springs," or some other renowned Southern watering place, in order to avoid the dreadful heat, or still more dreadful yellow fever, which drives all who can afford it away from the pestilential banks of the Mississippi during the hot months of that almost tropical climate.

But notwithstanding every precaution, his wife had a year previously to the commencement of our tale, fallen a victim to the deadly visitation of "Yellow Jack;" and this sad circumstance had not merely determined the disconsolate widower to send his only daughter—a lovely girl of eighteen—at once to Europe, but also to relinquish his own personal control of the American establishment, and follow her to England as soon as practicable.

John, the elder brother, was, at first, much averse to this. The business was a speculative one, and required unceasing supervision, not only of a master's hand, but also of a master well gifted with sound judgment and discretion.

The troubles in Texas, and the gloomy prospects in Havana and the Island of Cuba, which even then had begun to cast their dark shadows over the future of that lovely spot, rendered the presence of an astute controller of affairs more than ever necessary; but, on the other hand, these same circumstances combined to lessen the profits of the house. So, after a long correspondence between the brothers, it was determined to wind up this American branch of John Gordon & Co., altogether.

Accounts had to be paid and received; advances still to be made, or gradually withdrawn, or secured on future crops; impecunious debtors had to be sharply looked up, or dishonest ones put under the screw.

In short, it had taken nearly three quarters of a year of hard, unceasing labor to bring the affairs of John Gordon & Co.'s branch establishment into fitting train for closing its doors and bidding a final adieu to its American headquarters in Camp street, New Orleans.

Mabel Gordon, as has already been said, had been sent across the Atlantic to her uncle's care in London almost immediately after her mother's death; for although her father was obliged to remain and superintend the settlement of the business affairs of the firm, he would not keep his fondly loved only child a moment longer than was necessary amid the unhealthy exhalations which at that time made the cotton emporium of Louisiana one of the unhealthiest cities in the United States.

But at last everything was settled and arranged. The clerks were all discharged, the lease of the premises sold, and Duncan was prepared to start northward the very next day to New York, where he had some matters of business to transact, and from thence by one of the fast-sailing "liners" to Liverpool or to London. As money matters and money markets in America—especially in the Southern States—were at that time in what is called a very "shaky" condition, and a crisis was shortly expected, which would prove a severe "shaker" for more than one of even the greatest financial houses, he resolved, after much consideration, to carry all the bills, and securities, and cash which he had collected to New York, at all events, about his person, and afterwards to act as circumstances might dictate.

Having disposed of the small private house which since the death of his wife he had latterly inhabited, in Tehoupitoulas Street, he had taken up his quarters, for the last few days, at the "Planters' Hotel."

But about half-past two o'clock in the morning, when all the inmates had apparently retired to rest, an appalling occurrence took place. The whole of that vast structure, which was five stories in height, suddenly collapsed, and fell in with a tremendous crash!

Hundreds were buried in the ruins—scores were killed on the spot.

And Mr. Duncan Gordon was one of the latter number. His dead body, which had been struck down and awfully crushed by a falling beam, was dragged out of the debris a few hours afterwards.

But when the ruin had been fully explored, and the bodies of the dead victims, together with their effects were taken charge of by the city police, they reported to the authorities that no money, or valuables, or securities of any sort, had been found on the person of Mr. Duncan Gordon.

Some surprise had been expressed by several parties, who thought it strange that scarcely sufficient loose cash was found on the body to defray even the necessary expenses of his passage to the North; but the awful catastrophe had so overshadowed all other subjects of conversation and remark, that the matter was taken little further notice of, but passed away, and was forgotten.

The funeral expenses had been paid by a friend with whom he had been on terms of intimacy, and who now sent the sad tidings home to his relations in England.

And this way the startling and disastrous news for the old house of Gordon & Co., had arrived at Southampton from New York on the previous day by the St. James, and had reached London by that morning's post.

Home and its Queen.

There is probably not an unperverted man or woman living, who does not feel that the sweetest consolations and best rewards of life are found in the loves and delights of home. There are very few who do not feel themselves indebted to the influences that clustered around their cradles for whatever good there may be in their characters and condition. Home, based upon Christian marriage, is so evident an institution of God that a man must become profane to deny it. Wherever it is pure and true to the Christian idea, there lives an institution conservative of all the nobler instincts of society.

Of this realm woman is the queen. It takes the cue and hue from her. If she is in the best sense womanly—if she is true and tender, loving and heroic, patient and self-devoted—she consciously and unconsciously organizes and puts in operation a set of influences that do more to mold the destiny of the nation than any man, uncrowned by power of eloquence, can possibly effect. The men of the nation are what mothers made them as a rule; and the voice that those men speak in the expression of power is the voice of the woman who bore and bred them. There can be no substitute for this. There is no other possible way in which the women of the nation can organize their influence and power that will tell so beneficially upon society and the state.—Scribner's Monthly.

The American Girl.

The defects of the American girl may be done away with by giving less prominence to the purely intellectual, or purely practical side of her education. For, while one class of men is striking to solve the problems of life by educating women intellectually, there is another class which is shouting for education in domestic matters. While the professors at Harvard are rejoicing over some girl who can take in their philosophies or their mathematics, the newspaper editor sings the praises of her who can roast turkey, bake bread, or make her own dresses.—Neither gives the poor girl any chance to exist, but only to work, with either hand or brain. No one says to her: "You are not only yourself, but possibly the future mother of other beings. Do not, therefore, allow yourself to be driven by either school of apostles beyond what you may do easily, comfortably. The healthy balance of your nervous system is far more important to you and your future family relations than all the mathematics or dress-making, or even roasting of turkeys. Occupy yourself steadfastly, but without strain, without hurry, and without emulation. Find out first what you can do best, and, even if it does not come up to somebody else's standard, learn to content yourself with that."

POVERTY AND SUFFERING.—"I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring, which did them no good. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost—I know it. A WORKINGMAN."

Abstinence of Camels.

The watering of camels is of great importance, and is not generally understood. Surgeon C. Steel states "that the store of water the animal is supposed to be capable of carrying is much exaggerated." I am quite of this opinion, for I could not help observing in the recent Afghan campaign how little attention was paid to the watering of camels, because the idea entertained was that camels could go forever without drinking. Such a false impression was fatal to the poor animals. Camels of the Arabian species can take in five or six gallons of water, which is sufficient for their use for about six days. The Bactrian species can only take in about half that quantity. To insure the supply, camel men travelling with their own camels pour water down the camels' throats, which the camels understand by instinct to be a necessary precaution, and take in the water willingly. It is misleading to say that a camel can go without water longer than any other animal, for he requires drink daily, like other beasts, if a supply has not been previously administered.—Camels have, moreover a great dislike to drinking cold running water in cold weather, and should be watered from holes or tanks containing still water.

Extravagance.

The first lesson in economy is to learn to "do without." The second is to use what one has without waste. These two lessons are very hard to be learned by a people which has always been accustomed to have whatever it wanted, and to treat costly things as if they were common, for fear it should not be supposed we are familiar with them.—One thing has much contributed to this: the absence of anything like class styles of expenditure. Abroad a man will not allow his wife and daughters certain modes of dress unless he can have other things in keeping. A camel's hair shawl and diamonds require a carriage and servants in proportion. The habits of life which fit a particular income are well known. No one goes beyond them without censure. In America there is no such rule. People live in hotels where waste is the order of the day, and where children are educated in the want of care and the habit of unlimited ordering.

As the pebbles are whitened by the beating of the waves, so are our souls purified by the flowing of the grace of God.

Sunday Afternoons.

After a Sunday dinner what? Well, it all "depends." A person whose brain is wearied with intellectual work during the week, or whose nervous system is exposed to the strain of business or professional life, ought to sleep, within an hour or two after his Sunday dinner, if he can. It is surprising how much like a seven-day clock the brain will work, if the habit of a "Sunday nap" be once formed. Nature will take advantage of it as regularly and gratefully as she does of the nightly sleep, and do her best to make up lost time. People on the other hand whose week of toil is chiefly physical, may well give their minds activity while their body is resting.—Two sermons and three or four hours of solid reading are a real rest to some on Sunday, while to others such a course amounts to a positive Sabbath-breaking. Sunday is a day of rest, not of work, religious or otherwise. It is a day of repose not for exhaustion. But what the dogmatists on one side and the illiberal liberals on the other are apt to overlook, is the fact that all men do not rest alike any more than they labor alike, and what may help to save one may aid in killing another.

The Toilet of Elegance.

For preserving the complexion—Temperance.
For whitening the hands—Honesty.
For sweetening the breath—Truth.
To remove stains—Repentance.
For improving the sight—Observation.
A beautiful ring—The family circle.
For improving the voice—Civility.
The best companion to the toilet—A wife.

"LOOK HERE, Matilda," said a Galveston lady to the colored cook, "You sleep right close to the chicken-house, and you must have heard those thieves stealing the chickens." "Yes, ma'am, I heard de chickens boiler, and heard de voices ob de men." "Why didn't you go out, then?" "Case, ma'am, [bursting into tears] case, ma'am, I knowed my ole fadder was out dar, and I wouldn't hab him know I se los' confidence in him foah all de chickens in de world."

THE Germantown Telegraph suggests that our agricultural societies, which give so many and high premiums for fast trotting horses, might at least spare a little for the encouragement of the food which the noble animal is to eat. Premiums for well-grown hay, clean hay, hay from improved grasses, and well-managed hay fields, it thinks, would surely be objects worthy the attention of even a State agricultural society.

COUNTERFEITERS are ever on the alert to find fresh fields to work but they never imitate a worthless article. Prof. Guilmette's French Kidney Pad was brought out about ten years ago, and since then a host of chaps without skill or conscience have sought to imitate it by many worthless affairs; but a discriminating public will hold "fast to that which is good," and the Guilmette Pad more than holds its own. It cures all kidney diseases and succeeds where medicine often fails.—Ask your druggist if this is not so.

GALVESTON, TEXAS, Oct. 19.—A News special from El Paso says: "Intelligence reached here to-day that the Indian chief Victorio has been killed, and that most of his band have been killed or captured by the Mexican General Terrespea. On the 14th the troops overtook and surrounded the Indians, the latter being in position upon two hills known as Los Castillo, one of which they were forced to abandon. On the morning of the 15th the fight was renewed, resulting in the almost complete annihilation of the whole party. Chief Victorio, 50 warriors and 18 women and children were killed, 7 women and children were taken prisoners, 250 head of horses and mules recaptured. The Mexican loss was 3 killed and 3 wounded, showing that the Indians were almost entirely destitute of ammunition. Within the past year Victorio and his band have murdered upward of 400 persons.

GLANDING'S Patent Trunk,

Patented September 30, 1879, by Thomas Glanding, Baltimore, Md. This Trunk is presented to the public, and the special attention of buyers is called to its advantages. The body and lid of the trunk are made in the usual manner. The trays, which are a special feature, are divided into two sections, the smaller tray or parcel case being attached to the lid, is raised out of the body when the lid is raised. The larger or main tray is attached to the ends of the body by means of parallel arms, so that the tray may be raised and carried back into the lid in its original horizontal position, and is supported on the arms, thus giving access to the body of the trunk. The arms are pivoted to plates of suitable metal, on which are knobs or projections to stop their motion and prevent the tray from falling back against the lid. We ask the ladies when in town to call and examine the Trunk at G. O. A. GILBERT'S Hat, Boot & Shoe Store, NO 16 N. MARKET ST., Frederick City, Maryland. Ask for Glanding's Patent Trunk. Use no other. mar 1880

UMBRELLAS.—Now is the time to take inventory of the stock on hand, and reckon up the missing pieces. We are short. If the man who goes so jauntily this weather, with one of our's over him, will please return it, we'll just close up the whole thing, otherwise, look out!

We have received a copy of the Daily Commercial, published at Los Angeles, California from which we learn that it is contemplated by the Democracy of Southern California to urge the claims of a former resident of this district, J. DeBarth Shorb, Esq., as a candidate for the United States Senate.

LIGHT OUT OF DARKNESS.—We congratulate our town authorities upon the highly improved brilliancy of the lamps. This has been brought about by shortening the lamp-posts, and affixing new burners to the lamps. Now it will be necessary to exact strict attention to the business, and we will not walk in darkness. Good light favours morality. "Let there be light."

SNOW.—We had a little snow squall Wednesday night, which seemingly served to start the rain, and thus was Thursday introduced. Dismal as is the outdoor aspect, it is yet in view of the needed moisture a matter for thankfulness to behold the downflow. We had hoped to visit Frederick on that day, but were obliged to forego the contemplated pleasure.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Emanuel Thomas, of Hanover, died suddenly on Sunday evening Oct. 17, in his 63d year. He had just begun to eat his supper, when he complained of an oppressive feeling in his breast, and leaving the table, sat down on a chair near by, almost instantly thereafter sinking down a corpse.—The cause of his death was paralysis of the lungs.—Herald.

THERE were rumours in town on Thursday, of a considerable fire having occurred in Gettysburg on Wednesday night, which was discovered by parties returning from a political meeting at midnight. Four stables and a house, (said to be the oldest in the place,) and Codori's butcher shop are said to have been consumed. The scarcity of water made the situation well nigh appalling. Our Gettysburg exchanges say nothing about the matter, we presume they were printed before the occurrence.

The change in the weather on last Sunday, was in violent contrast with any experience in many months, a brisk gale from the north-west prevailed, which even more effectually than the rain, of the Sunday preceding, caused in-door life to be sought for and maintained. Though the storm was violent, we have not heard of any damage having been done in this neighbourhood, there were light snows on that day in various directions. We prognosticate some fine weather for next month, the cold will come in December. These are the indications of our bones.

ST. NICHOLAS for November, is brilliant beyond precedent. The illustrations, of which there is an unusual number, are so striking and effective, that each one tells a story for itself, and we find ourselves bending over the pictures, with as much delight as the veriest child; while the stories, so funny, or pathetic or wonderful, cannot fail to amuse and interest all, who have not travelled so far from childhood, as to have lost faith in Fairies, Giants, Witches, and so forth, to say nothing of the healthy, honest, childlike feeling which responds so readily, to every kind of fun, and is always so eager to sympathize with what is good and noble. For pure, healthy, vigorous moral influence, St. Nicholas is without doubt, the best Juvenile Publication in this country, or any other. Sold by all Booksellers. Scribner & Co., Broadway, N. Y.

SUDDEN DEATH.—On Monday morning Mr. John A. Swope, saddle-tree maker, an estimable citizen of Gettysburg, died very suddenly. On Sunday night he retired apparently in usual health.—About 4 o'clock in the morning he waked up complaining of pain in his breast and a suffocating sensation in the throat, but nothing serious was thought of it.—Mrs. Swope went down stairs to make a fire, and on her return found Mr. Swope in the agonies of death. A physician was sent for, but life was extinct before his arrival. The sudden death we understand, grew out of disease of the heart. Mr. Swope was in the 65th year of his age.

LARGE VEGETABLES.—At this time of the year the monster vegetables come to the front, they occupy conspicuous places at the Fairs, and are made to do boastful work from editorial chairs. To us the whole production is simply disgusting. There is no real nourishment in an overgrown plant of any sort, they deserve recognition only as monstrosities. In the agricultural fairs, giant beets, radishes, potatoes, turnips, cabbages, &c., seem to be all the go. It were certainly more to the credit of all concerned, if premiums were offered and given for only such as are of value for perfection of form, maturity, and esculent qualities.—Here, as in many other things the German idea should prevail, "The middle course is the best."

FEELS YOUNG AGAIN.—"My mother afflicted a long time with Neuralgia and a dull, heavy, inactive condition of the whole system; and headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No Physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters, with such good effect that she seems and feels young again, although over 70 years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family."—A lady, Providence, R. I.

A PLEASANT MEDICINE.—CROFT'S SENNA PILLS, supply the long desired substitute for the nauseous, oils, boluses, pills &c., of the past, for cases of "Constipation," and bilious complaints. Put up in neat boxes of one dozen doses to the box, they are in a very convenient form to take; are to be eaten as figs, and are as pleasant to the taste as the fruit itself.—Are sold for 35 cents a box, to be had of all Druggists, or direct from the proprietor, S. F. Croft, opposite the Court House, Hagerstown, Md. oct 21f

We have received The Weekly Freeman and Irish Agriculturalist, published in Dublin, of October 9th, in which the New York Herald is soundly rebuked for its criticisms and comparisons instituted between its own Relief Fund and that of The Mansion House. The Herald's fund is said to have reached half the amount of the Duches of Marlborough's, and only to about one third of the Mansion House Fund. The contract of the working expenses between the funds, is regarded unfair and egotistic. The Mansion House committee created the machinery and gave the initial information by which the New York Herald Fund was mainly worked, and it is regarded ungracious in view of the facilities accorded, to turn round and attempt exaltation by invidious comparisons when the work is happily complete.

As evidence of the determination of purpose which has made the American Newspaper Directory of Geo. P. Rowell & Co., of New York, one of the most systematic enterprises of the day, the following view of the actual cash outlay required to bring out the twelve annual editions, speaks more forcibly than can otherwise be expressed:

Table with 2 columns: Year, Amount. 1869...$ 2,214 19; 1870...$ 2,248 55; 1871...$ 2,248 55; 1872...$ 2,248 55; 1873...$ 2,248 55; 1874...$ 2,248 55.

Making a total cost of $129,274.77. These figures, which are authentic, prove that its publishers have been thoroughly in earnest in their efforts to make it the standard of American Newspaper Statistics?

HOTEL ARRIVALS.—The arrivals for the week ending Thursday, were as follows:

National Hotel—Mrs Thomas Jarboe, Miss Maggie Jarboe, Miss Delashimon, Frederick city.

ELECTIC MAGAZINE.—The November number of the Electic is embellished with a fine steel engraved portrait of Mr Archibald Forbes, the famous War Correspondent of the London Daily News, who is now on a visit to this country.

The literary contents of the number are unusually varied and attractive.—The initial paper is the first of a series of articles by the Duke of Argyll on the "Unity of Nature," which promises to be one of the most important discussions of vital scientific questions that has lately appeared. Other articles are "English, Rational and Irrational," by Fitzward Hall; "The Bayard of the East," "The Seamy Side of Letters," "At Sea, 1880," by Sir Francis H. Doyle; "Mental Imagery," by Francis Galton, F. R. S.; "An Artist on Art," by Harry Quilter; "Fiction, Fair and Foul—Byron," by John Ruskin; a discussion of "Mr. Ruskin on Wordsworth," "Separation," a poem, from the German of Ruckert; three additional chapters of "White Wings: A Yachting Romance," by William Black; "A Colorado Sketch," by the Earl of Dunraven; "Letters from Constantinople," by an Englishwoman; "Hypnotism," by G. J. Romanes; "The Impending Crisis in Turkey," by an Eastern Statesman; &c. Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond Street, New York. Terms, $5 per year; single copy, 45 cents; Trial subscription for three months, $1.

TWIN BROTHERS REARED APART.—The Singular Manner in Which they Were Reunited in their Old Age.—BRADFORD, Pa., Oct. 17.—John and Daniel Miller, twins, were born in Adams county, Pa., in 1816. When they were 4 years old their mother was left a widow. Being destitute and in ill health, she was unable to support herself and children. She sent Daniel to live with friends in Washington county. John found a home in Westmoreland county, Daniel grew up and became a miller. John learned the blacksmith's trade. They never saw or heard of one another after leaving their mother, and each supposed that the other was dead. Over five years ago John Miller abandoned his trade and became a toll gate keeper on the Butler turnpike, in Allegheny county. He holds the position still. One day last week he went out of his house to collect toll of an old gentleman who was driving through the gate. A neighbor of the toll gate keeper stood by. He made the remark that the traveler and the keeper looked enough alike to be twins. This brought about inquiries on the part of the two old men. The traveler proved to be Daniel Miller, John's twin brother. He had lived for years in Bradford, but a few miles away from the toll gate, in another county. This was the first meeting of the brothers since they were 4 years old—sixty years ago.

PERSONALS.—Mr. L. E. Motter and his sisters, Misses Carrie and Grace, have returned from Baltimore.

Miss Teen Adelsberger has returned from an extended visit in Washington. Dr. J. W. Eichelberger and wife, returned from a prolonged visit in Baltimore.

Mrs. Wingerd and family returned to her home on Greencastle.

Miss Helen Zeck has returned from a lengthy visit in Baltimore county.

Charles D. Smith, Esq., with his wife and daughter, of St. Joseph, Mo., arrived on Tuesday, on a visit to his Mother in this place.

Mr. Bond has just returned from a four month business tour to the south.

Mr. Lloyd Riland of Cumberland, Md., is the guest of Mr. Jno. F. Hopp.

Walter W. White, and John A. Horner, have returned home, from their trip to Virginia.

The Rev. D. N. Dittmar of St. Clairsville, Pa., was the guest of Rev. A. R. Kremer, and preached to the congregation of the latter on Wednesday evening an excellent sermon.

We had a pleasant call on Monday from Mr. Barton H. Knode, Editor of the Hanover Citizen, and Mr. Blair of Hanover, call again gentlemen.

Mr. Harry Lawrence, of this place, left for Dayton, Ohio, recently.

Mrs. W. K. Sutton returned home on Thursday from a visit to friends in Kent County.

Mrs. Henry Stokes has returned from a visit to Frederick Md.

Mrs. Emma Kelly has returned to her home in Union Bridge.

The 25th Annual Fair, being the Silver Exhibition of the Agricultural and Mechanical Association of Washington county, which was held at Hagerstown last week, proved highly successful. We had the pleasure of spending the greater part of Thursday on the grounds. The country around Hagerstown is made up of a succession of ridges, which seem to extend from the North Mountain on the west to the South Mountain on the east. The eastern part of this street known as Potomac street is located on the summit of one of these ridges which gives it a very commanding position. Directly east of this occurs another ridge somewhat lower in the range. On the top of this ridge, the buildings of the Association have been erected, they are of modern designs, and consist of Ladies and Gentlemen's reception rooms, dressing rooms, infirmary, restaurant, exhibition hall, machinery hall, &c., affording every comfort and convenience which experience has suggested as being needful for such occasions. This ridge in front of the building known as the Stand, and admirably fitted up, in extensive proportions for the comfort of visitors, terminates abruptly into a comparatively level plain, on which a fine elliptical 1/2 mile track for the trial of speed of horses has been constructed. The entire course of the track may be viewed from many parts of the hill without obstruction. It would be entirely beyond our limits to attempt even a description of the vast amount of articles, mechanical, agricultural, commercial, domestic, and so on, which were exhibited, let it suffice to say, that every department was well and fully represented, reflecting the highest credit upon the exhibitors, as well as indicating the good taste and enterprise of the people. The facilities for the exhibition of stock were of the completest kind and were improved to the best advantage by an array of horses, cattle, sheep and swine, that could not fail to satisfy the most cultivated taste. The poultry exhibitions were very full, and these had the advantage of being located within the building in elevated positions that made them conspicuous. In the immense concourse of persons there was a universal expression of pleasure and satisfaction. The Association seemed determined all along that this Silver Exhition, should be one, long to be remembered, and surpassing all others preceding it. We think they may surely felicitate themselves, upon the undoubted success.

We take the following from the Baltimorean of the 23d inst.

WESTERN MARYLAND RAILROAD.—The affairs of this road are in a most thriving and gratifying condition. The annual meetings of the stockholders was held at Hilton Station last Wednesday. While President Hood, owing to pressing labors in connection with the new branches of the road, was unable to complete his report for presentation to the meeting, he gave a verbal statement to the effect that the past year's business was more prosperous than any previous, and that the future promised still more substantial results. For Directors the following were elected: Messrs Edward Worthington, of Baltimore county; Hon. John K. Longwell, of Carroll county; Hon. Joshua Biggs, of Frederick county; C. W. Humrichouse and George W. Harris, of Washington county. The directors for the city are elected by the City Council. The rapid growth of the interests of the road is largely due to General Hood, Colonel Griswold and Major Hull, whose indefatigable efforts in their respective positions, are well known to the community. The excursion season to Pen Mar and High Rock closes to-day. During the season over 130,000 persons have visited those renowned localities. The city council has since confirmed the following as City Directors in the W. M. R. R.: Alexander Riegan, Christian Devries, E. G. Hipsley, Daniel J. Foley, George M. Gill, J. Alexander Preston, Nicholas G. Penningman and Samuel H. Adams.

We gather from the Waynesboro Gazette:

A resident of Chambersburg attempted to commit suicide, one day last week, by lying across the railroad track, but the engineer saw him and stopped the train before he was struck by the engine.

After two ladies had retired to bed in the Washington House, in Chambersburg, recently, they heard a noise which led them to believe that some one was in the room. On striking a light they discovered a colored man under the bed.—He immediately attempted to escape, but was captured. On his person was found a razor. He was committed to jail to answer for trial.

Hon. Hugh Stewart, a prominent citizen of Cumberland county, died suddenly on Friday evening, Oct. 15th, while on his way home from Carlisle.—He was accompanied by his wife, and when in sight of his house, he remarked to her that he felt sick, and scarcely had the words fallen from his lips, when he fell in his wife's arms a corpse. Mr. S. was at one time associate judge of the Cumberland county court, and was an able man.

On Wednesday a week, Geo. Deneen, of Union township, Fulton county, sent his two sons to the house for a gun, for the purpose of shooting a pheasant.—On their return with it, the elder of the two, who was carrying the gun, told his brother that he was going to shoot him, at the same time pointing the gun at him. His little brother, whose age is only twelve years, started to run, when the whole load of shot was fired into his body, fatally wounding him. So says the Democrat.

Stacking Corn Fodder.

"J. G. Mullins," of Anderson county, Kentucky, asks me to give my method of stacking corn fodder, with a diagram to illustrate it. I do not think a diagram necessary, as there is no product of the farm so easily stacked as corn fodder. All that is necessary is to keep the middle full, and, as the bundles are long, there is very little danger of their slipping out. Make a stack bottom of rails or poles, so as to keep your fodder from the ground, and begin in the middle by throwing the bundles across each other until they stand at an angle of about thirty degrees, and as you build up the stack keep the centre at least four feet higher than the outer edge. I prefer to put up small stacks, not to exceed one hundred shocks, and these can be moved into the barn one at a time, or fed directly to the stock.

One point must be guarded against, and that is putting the fodder up damp. I lost a stack two years ago that was put up on a drizzly day, it all moulding. It is a good plan to handle the fodder when it is just damp enough to make it tough; but it must not be wet.

The comfort of handling fodder depends so much on the way it is bound that it will pay the farmer to keep a sharp watch of the hands. I have had hands who would put as much in one bundle as there should be in three, and bind it so near the top that the bundle could not be handled with any comfort. The bundles should not be larger than can be bound with a single band of long rye straw, and it should be bound as near the middle as possible. Use large bands. And you will find it an advantage to separate the straw of your band and turn one half of it so as to have butts each way. This makes your band of uniform size and strength, and there is far less danger of its breaking.

There is one point in regard to corn fodder that I did not mention in my former article, and that is its value for hogs in winter. I have found that they eat the blades with great relish, and that they will spread up the stalks and make a better bed of them, and one that will keep clean much longer, than straw.

Where the farmer is short of sheds for his stock, and is not ready to build permanently, he can in a half day, with a few rails and a load of fodder, make a warm and comfortable shed that will protect his cattle all winter. When young pigs are expected in March, and the weather is cold, you can often save a litter by setting a dozen bundles of fodder around the pen so as to break off the wind. The fact is corn fodder has so much value, and can be used in so many ways, that it is imprudent to let it go to waste.

Milk for Chickens.

Sloppy food is unfit for chickens. Their stomachs are formed to grind hard substances and if given soft food he gizzard, a portion of the stomach—which is multiple in fowls as in cattle—is weakened, and does not perform its partial digestive functions. Milk may be given with coarse cornmeal, both being scalded together until it is a stiff mass, or it may be curdled and separated from the whey, and given dry.—But it must not be sour. Sour food is sure to bring on intestinal disorders and prepare such a weakened condition of the system as will offer favorable opportunities for contracting infectious diseases, as poultry cholera.

Lime as a Remedy for the Fly.

O. B. Burkeville, N. C. The plan of using lime as a remedy for fly in wheat is not a new one. Two and a half bushels of lime to the acre, sown broadcast in November, and the same quantity again in April, has proved very effective. If you sow the lime at night you will be examining the wheat plants the next morning, find drops of ley on each blade which is of sufficient strength to prevent the fly from doing further harm.

"ARE you a home ruler?" was asked of one of the candidates at the late election. A voice from the back seats answered, "No but his wife is."

A GALVESTON school teacher had a great deal of trouble making a boy understand his lesson. Finally he succeeded and remarked, "If it wasn't for me you would be the biggest donkey on Galveston Island."

"A KISS," said young Charles, "is a noun, we allow; but tell me, my dear, is it proper or common?"—Lovely Mary blushed deep, and exclaimed: "Why, I vow, I think that a kiss is both proper and common."

THE farmer's lad now gathers the harvest from his own patch of ground, and proceeds to the city for a fancy checked shirt, the largest pair of cuff buttons he can find, and the smallest boots he can wiggle his foot into. The city claps have all gone back from their vacations, and he proposes to try his hand as a "masher" with the girls in the next school district.

"BUB, did you ever think," said a grocer recently, as he measured out a half peck of potatoes, "that these potatoes contain sugar, water and starch?" "Noa, I didn't," replied the boy, "but I heard mother say you put peas and beans in your coffee, and about a pint of water in every quart of milk you sold." The subject of natural philosophy was dropped right there.

HE was a great bore, and was talking to a crowd about the coming local election. Said he:

"Jones is a good man, he is capable, honest, fearless and conscientious. He will make the very kind of an officer we need here in Galveston. He once saved my life from drowning."

"Do you really want to see Jones elected?" said a solemn-faced old man.

"I do indeed. I'd do anything to see him elected."

"Then never let anybody know he saved your life."

Literary Revolution and Universal Knowledge.

An Encyclopædia in 20 Vols., over 16,000 pages; 10 per cent more matter than any Encyclopædia ever before published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution.

THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE is a reprint entire of the last (1879) Edinburgh edition of "Chambers's Encyclopædia," with about 40 per cent of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readers, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority of those who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest Encyclopædia in the field.

Specimen Volumes in either style will be sent for examination with privilege of return on receipt of proportionate price per volume.

Special Discounts to all early subscribers, and extra discounts to clubs. Full particulars with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, sent free.
