SATURDAY NIGHT.

Placing the little hats all in a row
 Ready for church on the morrow, you know;
 Washing wee faces and little black fists,
 Getting them ready and fit to be kissed;
 Putting them into clean garments and white;
 That is what mothers are doing to-night.

Spying out holes in the little, worn hose
 Laying by shoes that are worn through the toes;
 Looking o'er garments so faded and thin
 Who but a mother knows where to begin?
 Changing a button to make it look right
 That is what mothers are doing to-night.

Calling the little ones all around her
 Chair,
 Hearing them lisp forth their evening prayer,
 Telling them stories of Jesus of old,
 Who loved to gather the lambs to His fold;
 Watching they listen with weary delight—
 That is what mothers are doing to-night.

Creeping so softly to take a last peep,
 After the little ones all are asleep;
 Axious to know if the children are warm,
 Tucking the blanket round each little form;
 Kissing each little face rosy and bright—
 That is what mothers are doing to-night.

Kneeling down gently beside the white bed,
 Lowly and meekly she bows down her head,
 Praying as only a mother can pray,
 God guide and keep them from going astray.

LOST AND FOUND.

It is necessary to mention here that the elder brother, John Gordon, was also a widower, and had, moreover, an only son, who although he was not yet a partner in the firm, was shortly about to become so; for he was a clever, attentive young fellow, and his father took no little pride and pleasure in the formation and direction of his boy's talent for business.

It was likewise projected between the two principals of the house that, if possible a marriage should be brought about between their children, and that thus, not only their joint business, but their joint fortunes should continue in the family.

The young folks had never seen each other since they were far too juvenile to entertain any matrimonial ideas until Mabel's return to England; but when they again met, a mutual liking seemed to spring up between them, and thus everything had appeared to bid fair for the realization of their parents' wishes.

But this terrible occurrence had put an end to all ideas of such plans for the present.

The first and only thought of the surviving brother must be how he could be secure and prop up the credit of the great mercantile establishment of John Gordon & Co., which the loss of all these bills, and notes, and securities would so greatly endanger.

For although the friends who had buried the deceased merchant in New Orleans, knew nothing of the vast amount of property which ought to have been found on his person or in his possession; yet the head of the English house was well aware of it, for his unfortunate brother had distinctly mentioned his intention in the very last letter which they had ever received from him.

Our reader must here be reminded that at the period when these circumstances took place there was no telegraphic communication between England and America. Consequently no message could be sent or received in less time than the "line" sailing packets took to cross the ocean.

Of two things, one—Duncan Gordon might possibly have altered his mind at the last moment, and then all their monetary concerns would be safe; but if he had adhered to his original intention and retained the assets about his person, then—what then? Ah! there was no blinding the question—insolvency and ruin stared them in the face.

"Archibald," said the old merchant to his son, as they were closeted together in Mincing Lane a few hours after the letter had been received, "this intelligence so utterly overwhelms me that I don't know how to act; I am completely at a loss to determine what is the best course to take. I almost think you had better start by to-morrow's packet for America, and then, by personal inquiries and the aid of a clever detective, you may succeed in discovering what has become of this vast amount of property which your poor uncle has most assuredly realized, and most probably had about him when he met with his dreadful death."

"But my dear father," replied Archibald, "you know I am not a member of the firm, and, consequently, I should be comparatively powerless to act."

"Not at all powerless, my dear son. You could take out with you a 'power of attorney' from me, the sole surviving partner; and every act of yours done by myself in person."

"Do you think that the property has been lost in the ruins, or that it has been stolen?"

"It may have been lost, and may still remain in the ruins, or it may have been lost, and stolen from them afterwards."

"It may have been lost, and stolen from them afterwards."

"Yes; one of those two things it must have been—that is, if he had the property about his person when the accident happened; but we are not quite certain of that."

"Still, the probabilities all point that way."

"True."

"And we can only reason from probabilities."

"But we must take possibilities into the account, my son."

"Pardon me, father, but I scarcely think that this is a possibility."

"How so?"

"Well, if my poor uncle had altered his mind after writing to you, and had determined to transmit these bills and securities to England through a third party, we should have received them in due course of business by the last mail, or, at all events, we should have been advised of their despatch."

"Ah, yes; you are quite right, my boy. It is a dreadful dilemma."

"It is, indeed."

"The great part of the assets will be required next week, I think?"

"Urgently. At least twenty-three thousand pounds will be absolutely necessary to enable us to meet our engagements on Tuesday, the fourth."

"And in the present ticklish state of the money market it would be impossible to carry them over?"

"Quite impossible, I fear, father. You see, we had absolutely relied on the bills of trading and other securities which my poor uncle was to have brought over, to provide for all our American and West Indian liabilities, which fall due during the next two months."

"Yes, yes! That was the arrangement."

"And, wanting them, what can be done? The whole West India trade is in such a feverish, transitional state, and prices are hourly fluctuating so greatly, that nothing but real security with a large margin, or the very choicest paper, is available in the money market. Then again, S—'s unlooked-for failure only last week has rendered the discounting houses so chary and so suspicious that I question very much if any attempt to tide over our engagements would not result in a disastrous failure.

"But, my boy, our bankers would surely—"

"My dear father, I am most unwilling to cut the last plank from under your feet," interrupted Archibald, with deep feeling; "but I heard only yesterday from a party on whose word I can confidently rely, and who has undoubted means of ascertaining the truth, that our bankers are themselves at this moment in difficulties, and are not unlikely to stop payment in the course of a few days."

"Good Heavens! It is impossible!"

"It is true, believe me!"

"Then Archibald, the great house of Gordon & Son, which was founded by your grandfather in Glasgow more than three quarters of a century ago, is doomed to destruction. And the old merchant was so totally overcome by his feelings that he wept bitterly."

Archibald, who had never before seen his father so greatly agitated, was not only horrified but alarmed, and tried by every soothing argument he could think of, to restore the old merchant's mind to a more tolerable state of calmness.

He had only just succeeded when a clerk entered from the outer office, and announced that a gentleman wished to see Mr. Gordon.

"Who is he?" inquired Archibald.

"I don't know, sir."

"Did you ever see him here before?"

"I don't think I have, sir."

"Did he give no name?"

"No, sir."

"Say that Mr. Gordon is very much engaged just now. Ask him to send in his name and business."

"Allow me, dear father, to attend to this matter, whatever it may be. You are scarcely yet sufficiently calm to receive anyone, especially if it is a stranger. Do you not think you had better retire to your own private room? If it is anything of consequence I can easily consult you, you know?"

"Yes, yes; I will, dear boy.—You're right—you're always right now, I think. Your old father is getting sally fast into the sere and yellow leaf, Archy. He begins to think that you could manage the old house as Gordon & Son a great deal better than he will ever be able to do it again."

"The gentleman is a stranger, sir," said the clerk, as he re-entered the apartment. "He desires me to say that he arrived only yesterday from New York."

"Gracious Providence!" exclaimed Mr. Gordon.

"Hush!" whispered his son—"not a word. He may or may not come on the affair about which we were talking; but, I pray you, permit me to see him alone. You are not sufficiently cool at this moment to meet a stranger on any matter of business. Believe me, I am right."

"Very well, dear boy; so be it."

"In any case, you will hear all that passes; but if it be—as it may be, you understand—I still entreat you to leave the present interview in my hands without interference."

"I will—I will!" replied the still greatly agitated old merchant, as he hurried into the inner room.

"Show the gentleman in, Mr. Nixon," said Archibald to the clerk, who immediately retired, wondering more than ever at the command which "Mr. Archibald" had so completely assumed. "What does this unlooked-for visit portend?" thought the young man. "We have very little business correspondence with New York; but if, as I cannot help suspecting, concerns the loss of our assets, by Jove, I must keep all my wits about me!"

Mr. Nixon now returned, ushering the stranger from New York into the apartment.

HISTORICAL SKETCH

OF EMMITSBURG, And its Vicinity.

This historical sketch of Emmitsburg was written at the suggestion of an honored and venerable friend, one that loves to look back, through the silvery mists of the past and recall the hardships, our ancestors passed through. It seems meet, that we should possess some knowledge of the olden times, we can then be more able to judge of the sterling worth, fervent piety, and honest exertions, of the generations, who have passed to their reward.

LOCATION.

Emmitsburg is situated in a picturesque part of Frederick County, Maryland, on the Eastern side of the Blue Ridge Mountains, one and a half miles from Mason and Dixon's line, and adjoining Adams county, Pennsylvania.

POPULAR FIELDS.

The first foundation of Emmitsburg dates back to the year 1786, and it was then known by the name of Poplar Fields. The original population consisted of seven families: viz: Richard Jennings, merchant; Adam Hoffman, hatter; John Rogers, tavern keeper; Michael Smith, blacksmith; Frederick Baird, carpenter; James and Joseph Hughes, merchants and architects.

THE FIRST BUILDINGS.

The Town at that time consisted of a few buildings in and near the square, and was called "Silver Fancy." William Shields built a house further up, where Peter Hoke's store now stands, and that was the beginning of "Shield's Addition." Capt. Jennings built the first house in the village, it was a one story frame; the first brick house, adjoining the former, was also built by Capt. Jennings. This was taken down a few years since and rebuilt by Isaac S. Annan & Bro. In 1786 James and Joseph Hughes built the two houses on the North-west corner of the Square, at present occupied by their descendants. They also built houses on the lots now owned by Geo. W. Rowe and John O'Donnoghue. They then built the Eagle Hotel (on the site now occupied by the Western Maryland) where many a weary traveler found rest. In after years it became a home of comfort and pleasure, under the auspices of the ever lamented Mrs. Margaret Agnew, who fell a victim to the cholera in 1853. Mr. James Hughes built the second brick house, on the North-east corner of Square, which with many others was burned in 1863, and rebuilt by Dr. Robert L. and J. C. Anran. This venerated mansion was the cradle of the Catholic church in Emmitsburg. It contained a room where the Catholics assembled to assist at the Divine Service. They were visited at this period by Father Sufremont from Conowaga, and later occasionally by Fr. Buboia, from Frederick, who were always gratefully entertained by Mr. James Hughes. The third brick house was built by Mr. Frederick Baird, and is now the Presbyterian Parsonage. Mr. Baird was a first-class mechanic, his carving in wood can vie with the work of to-day. The first tannery was built and owned by Christian Flaut, and sold by him in 1798 to Lewis Motter, of York Co., Pa., father of the present owner. Mr. Motter came to Emmitsburg September 5th, 1798; here he raised a large family; by his industry, good judgment and determination of purpose, he accumulated a considerable amount of property, filling many important positions of trust, he became a safe counsellor and a benefactor in the community. John Ropley was at that time (1786) Justice of the Peace for three Districts, Taneytown, Pipe Creek and Emmitsburg. The first school-master of the village was Mr. Thomas Cochran, whose body now reposes in the Catholic cemetery. The first physician was Dr. Rensch, who is buried in Tom's Creek graveyard. Dr. Brown settled on the banks of Tom's Creek some years before Dr. Rensch came to the village.

NAMED EMMITSBURG.

In the year 1786 the male inhabitants of the village and vicinity assembled at Hockensmith's tavern, one and a half miles from town, now the home place of Mr. David S. Gillilan, to deliberate concerning a change of name. Hon. John McGurgan being called to preside, proposed to change the name from "Poplar Fields" to "Emmitsburg," after Wm. Emmit, Esq., one of the largest land holders in the District. All present threw up their hats, clapped their hands and hurraed for Emmitsburg. The company had quite a merry time; drank the health of the newly baptized town, and returned home full of sanguine expectations of the rapid growth of their infant settlement.

There is scarcely a doubt, that honest John McGurgan, in bestowing the name of Emmitsburg, on this valley town, located beneath the green mountains brow, thought, in his brave heart, of his own native isle of the ocean—where, Ireland's noblest son and Patriot, the immortal Robert Emmet, perished on an ignominious scaffold for the love he bore his country. The name of the post office was also changed from Poplar Fields to Emmitsburg. Mr. William Greenamyer who died 1802 in the 30th year of his age, was the first Postmaster. He was son-in-law to Mr. John Troxel, who built the brick house next the Eagle Hotel. This house was burned in 1863, rebuilt by Joshua Shorb, and is now owned by Isaac Hyder. The second Postmaster was Patrick Reed, at the same time landlord of the Eagle Hotel. The third was a German by the name of Louff; the fourth Joseph Hughes, Sr.; the fifth Joachim Elder; the sixth Dr. Augustine Taney, who was succeeded by Robert Crooks, James Knouff, and then Maj. O. A. Horner and next Sam'l N. McNair.

EARLY SOCIETY.

In the year 1790, society in Emmitsburg was in a very crude state. Playing Long Balls, was the general exercise. The ladies, excelled in spinning the cloth, which served as garments for their families and servants. After the population increased, dancing masters were introduced; the manners grew more refined, sociability became the order, and charity the ruling principle. Saturday afternoons the farmers came to town to transact their business, and after business devoted themselves to pleasure, visiting their friends, &c., making it quite a holiday.

THERE is no use in drugging yourself to death, and buying all the vile medicines for internal use when you can be cured of fever and ague, dumb ague, bilious disorders, jaundice, dyspepsia, as well as all disorders and ailments of the liver, blood and stomach, by wearing one of Prof. Guilmette's French Liver Pads, which is a sure cure every time. If your druggist does not keep the pad, send $1.50 in a letter to French Pad Co., Toledo, O., and it will be sent you by mail. It is the only pad that is guaranteed to cure. Beware of counterfeits.

POVERTY AND SUFFERING.—"I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring, which did them no good. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost—I know it. A WORKINGMAN."

OUR HISTORY.

The Historical Sketch which we have begun to publish this week, we doubt not will prove interesting to all who, in the time past have had associations connected with this neighbourhood.

It will serve to recall throughout its development, the names of those with whom they may have been familiar in the past, their faces and their general course of action, or the traditions concerning them; the record thus will prove of a domestic order, rather than otherwise. It will not deal in romantic scenes, it will not recount deeds of noble daring in the ordinary acceptation of the terms.

Thus flows onward the stream of life, and often the best results arise where the noise is least.

The general integrity of the people of this neighbourhood, the high-toned morality for which it has been well known, and its immunity from crime, as compared with many other places, should make it the pride of the natives, as well as commend it to the favourable regard of persons at a distance.

The celebration we propose should be in keeping with the locality and the occasion. We should aim to do, and to appear in our true light, without an effort at the impossible.

With wise counsels directing tasteful demonstrations, and hospitable invitations generously carried out, we doubt not our town and the community would do themselves abundant credit.

NOW TO WORK.

There is one thing at least on which Democrats as well as Republicans can felicitate themselves, and that is that the anxieties and excitement of the Presidential canvass are ended at last and that the country is once more restored to a settled condition.

The sooner business men generally recognize these facts and get to work again the better for all concerned. Baltimore Gazette.

THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

The following table shows the result of the election for President and Vice President on Tuesday, as indicated by the latest returns, the electoral vote of each State being given. One hundred and eighty-five votes are necessary to elect, the total number of votes in the Electoral College being 369:

Table with 3 columns: State, Hancock, Garfield, Total. Lists states from Alabama to West Virginia.

Total... 156 Total... 218 The House of Representatives as between Republicans and Democrats will consist of 144 Democrats and 147 Republicans, as far as is now ascertained for the 47th Congress; and the next United States Senate will probably stand 38 Democrats to 37 Republicans.

Table with 4 columns: Counties, Times, Solidly, Peter. Lists counties like Allegany, Garrett, Frederick, Washington, Montgomery.

Urn's maj 895. Urner's maj in '78 1,731 The voting on the prohibition of liquor in six counties was: For license Allegheny, maj. 850; Carroll, 577; Charles, —. Montgomery, against license, 953; Cecil, against, 1,648.

THE ELECTION.

The weather of last Tuesday was all that could be desired, the day proved bright and clear all over the country except at a few distant points.

The election passed off in our town, without the least disturbance. The vote polled was the largest ever given here, and yet lacked over fifty of the full number on the registration lists. The Democratic majority was 173 votes.

As everybody knows, by this time, the result in the country at large has been in favour of the Republican candidates, Garfield and Arthur.

To over sanguine politicians, on the Democratic side, this has been as great a surprise, as was the result in 1844 to the old Whigs, when they learned of the election of James K. Polk.

It seems to be a settled point now, that the possession of the offices in our country, by a given party, with due watchfulness and action, is a guaranty of the continuance in power of the party thus in possession.

In certain aspects of the case there may be just cause for apprehension from a long continuance of power thus, in the hands of one party, it was already pointed out in the beginning of the government. Whether or not the fears thus suggested may be realized, must depend upon the patriotic impulses of the officials themselves, on the one hand, or on the loose reins they may give to the suggestions of ambition on the other.

The virtue and the intelligence of the people, must be the reliance of every lover of his country. We entertain an abiding hope, that the restraints of the laws, and the wholesome influence of the minority in shaping governmental policies will prove equal to emergencies as they arise.

THE NEW COLLEGE FOR COLORED YOUTH.—Chrisman Hall, the new college for colored youth at Atlanta, Ga., has just been opened and is already nearly filled with pupils. It has a president and five teachers, who are paid by the Freedman's Aid Society, and the price of tuition is very small. Mrs. Chrisman, of Topeka, gave $10,000 for the establishment of the college, and the rest of the $40,000 which it cost came from the Freedman's Aid Society and from Bishop Haven's efforts to get private subscriptions.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 2nd. The President's proclamation with which our correspondent opens this letter, will be found in full in another column.

I believe every man woman and child in the country is glad the campaign is over. The public ear is weary with the sameness of political speeches, the discordant air of campaign bands, and the ladies I know, of the total oblivion of the male kind to the comforts of home and fireside, or reasonable conversation on topics other than political.

But after all the fuss, the country has passed through the electoral campaign with considerable comfort, in a business point of view, for business has not suffered as it generally does in Presidential years. On the contrary it has improved vastly in volume and in profit. This alone is a good indication of the stability of our business prosperity, and sure proof that the American people are clear headed, sound in judgment and with ability to control themselves in matters vital to our government and its political theories.

Though the campaign has wholly absorbed public attention, it cannot be called a live one. There has been no wide spread popular enthusiasm for either of the candidates. It has been one rather of argument and conviction, than of hurrah and bluster. One circumstance will, however, mark this campaign as different from all others, and that is the large number of political flags raised, and the immense amount of campaign literature poured upon or into the devoted heads of our people.

But this too, is a good indication, it shows us to be a people ready and anxious to learn, people deserving instruction upon the various questions of National welfare, over which our politicians expend so much gab, and squander large amounts of the National revenue.

In fact, the sending out of this political literature is meant, I think, by our political leaders as a high compliment to the intelligence of the people. The compliment, if your readers think it such, is a deserved one, well merited, and one that should have been paid in previous campaigns. Political meetings are partisan affairs, attended mostly by partisans who desire to hear their opponents abused in eloquent strains. Very few changes are made by speeches. Very few men retreat from their political opinions because some one abuses them. Changes are made quietly. Eloquence is pleasant to the ear, but I fear carries no conviction to the mind. I am glad the campaign is over, and as I said before, I think the people will share my joy. Though as yet the result is unknown to me, I believe the country will be as well governed in the future as in the past. I believe the course of this campaign has shown to the people that business prosperity will continue. I have too much faith in the American people to believe they will surrender their interests, desert the principles of liberty implanted in every American bosom, depart from their welfare, at the demand of any political party. MERRILL.

NATIONAL THANKSGIVING.—The following has been issued from the Department of State:

"By the President of the United States of America.—A Proclamation.—At no period in their history since the United States became a nation has this people had so abundant and so universal reasons for joy and gratitude at the favor of Almighty God, or been subject to so profound an obligation to give thanks for His loving kindness, and humbly to implore His continued care and protection. Health, wealth and prosperity throughout all our borders; peace, honor and friendship with all the world; firm and faithful adherence by the great body of our population to the principles of liberty and justice, which have made our greatness as a nation, and the wise institutions and strong frame of government and society which will perpetuate it; for all these let the thanks of a happy and united people as with one voice ascend in devout homage to the Giver of all good. I therefore recommend that on Thursday, the 25th day of November next, the people meet in their respective places of worship to make their acknowledgments to Almighty God for His bounties and His protection, and to offer to Him prayers for their continuance. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. "By the President: R. B. HAYES. WM. M. EVARTS, Secretary of State."

The British committee will meet in November for final action, and the university presses of Oxford and Cambridge are expected to issue the revised New Testament in February, 1881. The old Testament will be published two or three years after. The American revisers have given their time and labor for eight years without compensation. The necessary expenses have been provided for by voluntary subscriptions.

SARA BERNHARDT, the famous French actress, arrived in the steamer America, at New York on the 7th ult. The vessel was boarded down the bay by a numerous and enthusiastic party of friends, who extended the great artiste a brilliant greeting. She suffered much from sea sickness during the entire voyage, but said she would be willing to repeat it, for the pleasure of visiting this beautiful country. She is described as having a slight willow form, a face of classic purity of outline, large deep blue eyes, shaded by long, dark, silken lashes, with the silvery, misty brightness, that Walter Scott likened to the dew of the bosom of a May violet; a fall of wavy, fluffly, light golden hair, just "shading into red," a complexion of transparent brilliancy, and a voice of wonderful sweetness and harmony.

GLANDING'S Patent Trunk Patented September 30, 1879, by Thomas Glanding, Baltimore, Md.

This Trunk is presented to the public, and the special attention of buyers is called to its advantages.

The body and lid of the trunk are made in the usual manner. The trays, which are a special feature, are divided into two sections, the smaller tray or parcel case being attached to the lid, is raised out of the body when the lid is raised.

The larger or main tray is attached to the ends of the body by means of parallel arms, so that the tray may be raised and carried back into the lid in its original horizontal position, and is supported on the arms, thus giving access to the body of the trunk.

The arms are pivoted to plates of suitable metal, on which are knobs or projections to stop their motion and prevent the tray from falling back against the lid. We ask the ladies when in town to call and examine the Trunk at G. O. A. GILBERT'S Hat, Boot & Shoe Store, NO 16 N. MARKET ST., Frederick City, Maryland. Ask for Glanding's Patent Trunk. Use no other. mar 1880

DEATH OF MRS. KNAUFF.—The numerous friends of Mrs. Deborah M. Knauff, relict of the late Jacob Knauff, and mother of Mr. Charles E. Knauff, one of the proprietors of The Examiner, of this city, will learn with sincere regret of her death on last Monday night, at her residence in W. Third street, in the 80th year of her age. Her funeral took place yesterday at the Reformed graveyard. Mrs. Knauff was remarkable for her great kindness of heart and christian deportment through life, and beloved by all who knew her for her many sterling virtues of head and heart.—Maryland Union.

A DONATION.—A correspondent of the Clarion, gives an interesting account of the proceedings at Graceham, Oct. 29th of a donation party to Rev. E. W. Shields, pastor of the Moravian congregation at that place. Mrs. Shields was invited to tea at Mrs. G. W. Late's, when the good people took possession of her house. Mr. Shields was met as he came from the railway train and taken direct to the tea party, then went on the good work of storing the pastor's premises with every good and desirable article, which had been brought by wagon loads, the Graceham Band ended the performances with delightful music.

The custom of making donations to the Pastors is a good and commendable one when properly conducted, and the record of them is agreeable when not run into the ground. Let the good work go on, those who live to benefit their fellow men, deserve proper recognition at the hands of their parishioners.

It is impossible for a woman after a faithful course of treatment, with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, to continue to suffer with a weakness of the uterus. Enclose a stamp to Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, 233 Western Avenue, Lynn, Mass., for her pamphlets.

THE young men of the Republican party in this place, repaired to Poplar Ridge on Wednesday night and made a bon-fire, which in the darkness of the night lit up the heavens over our valley. The elevated grounds are favourable for such a display, and it speaks well for the people there, to see the ordinance of the town against bon-fires and the like, properly observed.

[COMMUNICATED.] THE 1st and 2nd of November, the festivals of All Saints and All Souls days, were duly celebrated with reverence and solemnity in the Catholic Churches of our neighbourhood. Monday, 1st being the festival, celebrating the Communion of Saints, a festival of Joy, transmitted from the apostolic times, by being parts of the Apostolic Creed, bring to us this consoling thought, that those dear spirits, having fought the good fight are now enjoying the delights of the Church triumphant, being in the beatific vision of God. "Ah! in the midst of life's busy turmoil, in the midst of the constant changes, of care and pleasure, of dependency and hope, of ambition and energy, of disappointment and satisfaction, it must be indeed a precious boon to the heart to give a silent, a loving, an earnest thought, to those who have lived amongst us; to dream for an hour of the sure decay destined to all that is earthly; to stand at the graves of dear loved ones, and think, that we, like them, shall one day pass away and find rest at last from life's great strife and all its ills."

Tuesday, November 2nd, A day, consecrated to the memory of the Dead, who now repose under the dewy sod, till angels wake them to meet their God. The cemetery in Emmitsburg was tastefully ornamented by garlands of flowers, formed in crosses, crowns, &c. At St. Joseph's Vale, the cemetery was truly a Virgin's bowser. The hallowed graveyard, crowning St. Mary's Mount, decorated with the symbols of Faith and Charity, woven in flowers and pine, was truly picturesque. The procession through the cemetery was the most imposing and devotional part, the chanting of the grand old Miserere reverberated through the hearts of all, causing tears to flow in memory of departed souls. "A tender sorrow prevailed, which was in sad yet harmonious keeping with the Autumnal sky, with the last drooping foliage of the woods, with the mournful moaning of the wind and rustling of the leaves," all combined to make all Soul's, a day to be ever remembered, a day of heartfelt thankfulness.

WE clip the following from the Gettysburg Star and Sentinel.

John Lister, a Yorkshire farmer, 70 years of age, who arrived in Philadelphia on Monday with three daughters and a son-in-law, was plundered of $700 by a plausible scoundrel whom he encountered.

William R. Howe, of Hanover, a member of the 87th Regiment Penna's Vol unteers, during the war, was received over $1500 arrears of pension, for injuries received in the service, and has also been allowed a pension of $3 a month for the future.

Zachariah Ebaugh, of Poneksville, Carroll county, aged 84 years, was stricken with paralysis on Tuesday and died on Thursday. James Wampler, of the same place, was caught under a falling tree and had his thigh crushed and was otherwise injured.

O Friday J. Engel registered at the Northern Central Hotel, Baltimore, as from York, Pa. He retired at night, blowing out the gas instead of turning it off. Next morning he was found insensible in his room, breathing heavily, and died on Saturday.

Last week, while Jacob Yost, of Green village, Franklin county, was engaged in threshing clover seed at the barn on the farm of Rev. Hesson near Scotland, he had the bones of his right arm fractured between the elbow and wrist by the machinery.

A bear weighing five hundred pounds was recently killed near the Guyon settlement, in Warren county, Pa., that for more than three years has committed depredations upon the farmers' live stock. Three years ago he was caught in a steel trap, but liberated himself by gnawing off his imprisoned foot. He had but three feet, and was evidently the same bear that had caused such loss to the farmers.

Thomas McKean, a fireman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, who lived in Dallas, Pa., left his home on Sunday, with his dinner bucket in his hand. His wife walked with him as far as the station. With a good bye, he attempted to board a passing freight train, missed his footing and in an instant was crushed to death, while his wife stood horrorstruck within a few feet of his mangled remains. He leaves four children.

Last week Dawson Hammond was probating a deed before Justice Francis P. Tchan, Frederick, Md. The Justice charged him forty cents for that duty, when the charges allowed by law is only thirty. Mr. Hammond declined paying the amount asked, when the Justice drew a revolver and fired two shots at him, neither of which took effect, however.

The pugnacious Justice was subsequently arrested and held for trial for assault with intent to kill.

A SWINDLER.—A stranger, has been trying to swindle churches and religious corporations by means of bogus checks. He tried it unsuccessfully on Rev. Mr. Herring, of the Lutheran church, Wrightsville, by presenting a draft for $300, drawn by a Columbia firm, in payment of an alleged bequest to the church of $294, and requesting to be paid the difference in cash. Mr. Herring refused and the stranger left.

The Hanover Herald says that on Wednesday, a man, most likely the same swindler, visited St. Joseph's Academy, McSherrystown, and arranged for the admission of a young lady pupil. He offered to pay the tuition, boarding, &c., in advance, and tendered in payment a draft or check for a sum about fifty dollars more than the amount of the bill. The change being refused, he offered to take only part of the change in ready cash and have the remainder remitted to him. This being also declined, he left. He was more successful at Conowago Chapel, obtaining a loan of $10 from Rev. Father Enders, on false representations. The man is an accomplished and educated scamp, very conversant with the names and history of the leading men in the churches in which he attempts to operate. He possesses forged letters of introduction and forged testimonials by the use of which he aids his schemes.

Agricultural.

Killing Large Weeds.

Some weeds may be effectually exterminated by cutting off the stalks close to the ground with a scythe. The proper time to do this work is soon after they have attained their growth, but before the weeds have matured. The branches of some weeds are close to the ground that they can only be severed from the roots by a hoe, which should be very sharp in order to do the work well and with any degree of ease. Weeds should be cut quite early in the season, in order to prevent the ripening of the seeds that would give trouble another year, if not the same season they grow. The seeds of some weeds are entirely ripe while the petals of the blossoms are still fresh. The appearance of the plant affords no indication of the maturity of the seed, as is the case with grain.

It requires considerable pains to destroy some large weeds, as burdocks, mullens and Canada thistles. The stalks must be cut several inches below the surface of the ground, or they will throw up suckers in the same manner as trees and bushes.— A sharp spade or a narrow steel blade fixed to a handle is the best implement to use for the purpose.— After the stalk is cut and removed it is well to drop a handful of salt on the stump that may remain in the earth. A drop of sulphuric acid applied with the end of a stick is effectual in destroying the life of the roots of weeds. Strong lye, paris green, or London purple may also be employed for the same purposes with most excellent results. It is always best to make sure work with large and troublesome weeds.

A FARMER tells us, says an exchange, that he has tested the value of his corn put into hogs with the following result: He commenced with a lot of hogs weighing 175 pounds each, on the 20th of September. He fed them two weeks and, when weighed, he found at the price of pork then ruling, $3.50 per hundred, his corn so fed had brought him sixty cents per bushel. The two weeks were mild weather. He again weighed and fed them two of the coldest weeks in November, and found that the corn fed at the same price for pork, had brought him only fifty cents per bushel. He says this teaches him that hogs ought to be fattened early, and in warm weather to get the greatest value for the corn fed.

SAVING SEEDS.— While it may be very desirable to save the first seeds of some of our vegetables, such as sweet corn, peas and beans, it is not best to make such a selection from all kinds. The first tomatoes that ripen are generally small and ill-shaped, and it would be undesirable to select seeds from these, as they would soon deteriorate the variety; but the best plan is to wait till large, smooth specimens are produced, and from these select seed for future crops. By doing this for a few years, you will find that you have wonderfully improved the tomato; and to secure improvement of any kind of vegetable it is absolutely necessary to select the best specimens of every kind. Deterioration ought to have no place in the farmer's vocabulary.—Cultivator.

A FARMER of experience says that the feet of a horse require more care than the body. They need ten times as much, for in one respect they are almost the entire horse.— All the grooming that can be done wont avail anything if the horse is forced to stand where his feet will be filthy. In this case the feet will become disordered, and then the legs will get badly out of fix; and with bad feet and bad legs there is not much else of the horse fit for anything.

To fatten geese an experienced practitioner says: Put up two or three in a darkened room and give each bird one pound of oats daily, thrown on a pan of water. In fourteen days they will be found almost too fat. Never shut up a single bird as geese are sociable and will pine away if left alone.

Humorous.

AN experienced sausage maker stuffs all the chopped flannel in the middle so as to make both ends meat.

"DAUGHTER," said an anxious parent to his little one, 'didn't I tell you to eat no more green apples?' 'Yes, papa; but this is a yellow one.'

A LEOPARD never changes his spots. A mosquito does, however. It will settle in a new spot every five seconds, and sing all the time it is changing.

"NOTHING," said an impatient husband, "reminds me so much of Balaam and his ass as two women stopping in church and obstructing the way to indulge in their everlasting talk." "But, you forget, my dear," returned the wife, meekly, "that it was the angel who stopped the way, and Balaam and his ass who complained of it."

"I wish I was a star," he said, smilingly, at his own poetical fancy. "I would rather you were a comet," she said, dreamily. His heart beat tumultuously. "And why?" he asked tenderly. "Oh," she said, with a brooding earnestness that fell upon his soul like a bare foot upon a cold oil cloth, "because then you would come round only once every 1500 years."

A YOUNG lady was speaking to a friend who had called upon her regarding a trait, characteristic of her mother, who had always had a good word to say of every one. "Why," she said, "I believe if Satan were under discussion mother would have a good word to say for him." Just then the mother entered and was informed what the daughter had said, whereupon she quietly said: "Well, my dear, I think we might all imitate Satan's perseverance."

Literary Revolution and Universal Knowledge.

An Encyclopaedia in 20 Vols., over 16,000 pages; 10 per cent more matter than any Encyclopaedia ever before published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution.

THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE is a reprint entire of the last (1879) Edinburgh edition of "Chambers's Encyclopaedia," with about 40 per cent of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readers, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority of those who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest Encyclopaedia in the field.

Specimen Volumes in either style will be sent for examination with privilege of return on receipt of proportionate price per volume. Special Discounts to all early subscribers, and extra discounts to clubs. Full particulars with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, sent free.

Leading principles of the American Book Exchange: I. Publish only books of real value. II. Work upon the basis of present cost of making books, about one half what it was a few years ago. III. Sell to buyers direct, and save them the 50 to 60 per cent. commission commonly allowed to dealers. IV. The cost of books when made 10,000 at a time is but a fraction of the cost when made 500 at a time—adopt the low price and sell the large quantity. V. Use good type, paper, etc., do careful printing and strong, neat binding, but avoid all "padding," fat and heavily-leaded type, spongy paper and gaudy binding, which are so commonly resorted to to make books appear large and fine, and which greatly add to their cost, but do not add to their value. VI. To make $1 and a friend is better than to make $5 and an enemy.
