THE SONG OF THE PICNIC. BY O. P, BILDOCK.

With boots dust-covered and gray, With face all sweaty and red, The man of the picnic hurries away, As he helps the table to spread. With baskets and buckets and bag, With teakettle minus the spout, With his collar as limp as a rag,

He hustles himself about. And, it's oh ! to be a slave; A heathen or a Turk, Or anything else that would but save

He scratches around for twigs and bark, I'o kindle therewith a fire; He climbs a sapling, the faithful spark. To fix up a swing for his Ann Mariar; He tears his trousers as down he slides, And fastens them up with a pin,

A fellow from picnic work

While the women folks hold their sides, To keep the wild laughter in-It's work, work, work, Tug and swelter and sweat. But a fellow never can shirk The picnic business, you bet.

He frolics and dances around with his girl, Till his head is dizzy and thick,

And round her waist, mid the waltzing whirl. Dirty prints of his fingers stick. He sets him down at last to rest,

On the grass so cool and green, And on the base of his trousers best Prints of a custard pie is seen. But it's eat, eat, eat,

And guzzle and drink and swill, Ginger pop and lemonade With a little sarsaparill.

Still he sits with a smiling face, Singing sweet Sunday-school tunes, While the little red ants are having a race Up the legs of his pantaloons; That fills his girl's eyes with wonder,

And asks her if she'll take a walk, She replies, "Ned, wasn't that thunder ?" They grap their basket and pail,

Hustle together those things, The while they slap without avail sings. Big drops of rain begin to fall

His girl then makes a dash; With her skirts spread over her head, She breaks into a hasty trot, every other Sunday morning at 10 And leaves him alone, her darling Ned, Alone in that pienic lot.

So tired that he's nearly dead.

Literary Revolution and Universal Knowledge.

An Encyclopædia in 20 Vols., over 16,000 pages; 10 per cent more matter th ... any Encyclopædia ever before published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution.

THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE is a reprint entire of the last (1879). Edinburgh edition of "Chambers's Encyclopedia," with about 40 per cent of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readers, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority of these who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest.
