NEVER SAY FAIL.

Keep pushing—'tis wiser
Than sitting aside,
And dreaming and sighing
And waiting the tide.
In life's earnest battle
They only prevail
Who daily march onward
And never say fail!

With an eye ever open
A tongue that's not dumb,
And a heart that will never
To sorrow succumb—
You'll battle and conquer
Though thousands assail,
How strong and how mighty!
Who never say fail!

The spirit of angels
Is active I know,
As higher and higher
In glory they go:
Methinks on bright pinions
From Heaven they sail,
To cheer and encourage
Who never say fail!

Ahead then keep pushing,
And elbow your way,
Unheeding the envious,
And asses that bray:
All obstacles vanish,
All enemies quail,
In the night of their wisdom
Who never say fail!

In life's rosy morning,
In manhood's firm pride,
Let this be the motto
Your footsteps to guide:
In storm and in sunshine,
Whatever assail,
We'll onward and conquer,
And never say fail!

A DAY IN WINTER.

BY MRS. S. C. WHITTON.
Through the crimson fires of morning,
Streaming upward in the east,
Leaps the sun with sudden dawning,
Like a captive king released,
And December skies reflected
In the azure blue below.
Seem like summer recollected
In the dreaming of the snow.
It is winter, little children, let the summer,
Singing, go!

There are crisp winds gaily blowing
From the north and from the west;
Have the rivers strongly flowing
Lies the river's frozen breast.
O'er its shining surface crashing
Skim the skaters to and fro;
And the noontide splendours flashing
In the rainbow colors show.

It is winter, little children, let the summer,
Singing, go!
When the gorgeous day is dying
There is swept a cloud of rose
O'er the hilltops softly lying
In the blush of sweet repose.
And the nests, all white with snowing,
In the twilight breezes blow;
And the untired moon is showing
Her lone heart to the snow.

It is winter, little children, let the summer,
Singing, go!
—Wide Awake, Feb., 1881.

A BRAVE ACT.

HOW A U. S. ARMY OFFICER PREVENTED A THREATENED MASSACRE.
Among the many frontier army posts is one known as Camp McDermitt, in Nevada, located upon the stage road from Winnemucca to Boise City, and distant some eighty miles from the line of the Central Pacific Railroad. It is near the mouth of a little ravine in the very heart of the Winnemucca hunting-grounds, and the Indians of that tribe, governed by a chieftain of the same name, made their headquarters at the time of this occurrence within a mile of camp upon a small stream. Peace reigned, and the red men, with their squaws and paposes, were accustomed to make tri-weekly visits to the camp for the purpose of receiving from the quartermaster the rations allowed them by Uncle Sam of bread and meat.
The usual force at the post was about sixty men, and in 1869, a single company of cavalry, commanded by one Capt. Wagner, was in occupation of McDermitt. The other officers of the company were Lieut. Nemo, a young man, and the surgeon.
Winnemucca, Chief of the Indians was the father of a daughter who possessed wonderful beauty and a fine mind. Desiring to fit her for a position in civilized rather than savage life, the sachem had sent her to San Francisco, where she had received a thorough education. Returning to her father, he had obtained for her, through the assistance of his many friends among the whites, the position of interpreter at McDermitt. In 1869 she was stationed at that post in quarters of her own, a well dressed, handsome woman of about twenty-two years of age, receiving a monthly salary of forty dollars in gold.

With all the arts of her wily nature the girl sought to win the affections of the only bachelor in office in camp, whom we will call Lieutenant Nemo, and within two months the young fellow openly avowed his intention of making Sarah Winemucca his wife. His captain, as became him, argued against this strange mesalliance, but finding Nemo thoroughly in earnest, and waiting only for some passing minister to tie the nuptial knot, he dropped the matter, and would have given it no further thought, had not his attention been shortly thereafter called to it in a new and startling way. While the lovers yet awaited the coming of a minister, the wife of the sutler, whose store was just without limits of camp, informed Captain Wagner that she had discovered a plot among the Winnemuccas to murder the garrison, sack the post, announce Sarah Winemucca as their queen, and begin a war of extermination against the whites throughout the whole plain country—and Lieutenant Nemo, carried away by his infatuation for the Indian girl, had agreed to join the savages. So monstrous was the story that at first the captain refused to believe it, but in hurried, frightened whispers the sutler's wife told him that she had overheard the plan discussed by the lieutenant with some warriors beneath the store window the evening before, and at last the officer was forced to admit that the danger actually existed.

"When will this plan be put into execution?" asked Wagner.
"To-night, at moonrise!" returned the sutler. "I dared not go to your quarters, sir, to tell you of it, but had to wait until you came here. The lieutenant is on duty, you know. He will call in the sentinel, house the guard, spike the howitzer, and then the Indians will come!"
To-night—and it was already dusk.
The commander's voice was steady as he remarked, "Very well. We will be ready for them. Show no signs of fear, but keep within doors after dark, and be ready to fly if necessary. Speak to no one of what you have told me." Then, unconcernedly smoking, he left the store and proceeded towards camp.
Supper was over, and some of the men were lounging about the parade-ground as the captain entered. Quietly calling a trusty corporal to his side, he said:
"After guard is placed, and just before moonrise, which is at eleven, take four men with their arms, and go to the stables. Close the doors, and remain until morning. Open to none but myself. Do not communicate your duty to any except those whom you take with you."
The man touched his hat and moved away. This was to prevent the false lieutenant from stealing the horses, should he choose to attempt it, instead of capturing them. Then the captain passed on to his own quarters.
The hours fled,—nine, ten, eleven. In fifteen minutes the moon would rise.
The sutler's wife was right. The sentinel was off duty, and the guard all within doors. Not a living creature was to be seen, and the cold starlight fell upon as solitary a group of abode buildings as if the post had been deserted for years. Suddenly, however, a single figure appeared. In full uniform, with sword and pistol-holster at his waist, Capt. Wagner emerged from his door, and silently crossing the parade-ground, turned, with rapid tread, down the stage-road towards the Winnemucca camp.

The distance was short, and just as the first rays of the rising moon tinged with spectral white the dark carpet of sage-brush that covered all the plain, the officer found himself upon a slight eminence overlooking the teepee huts of the Indians.—This was the sight which met his eyes.
Around a council-fire were gathered the chieftain and warriors of the tribe, all arrayed in war-paint,

A Live Volcano.

THE Honolulu (Sandwich Islands) Advertiser has the following graphic description of the appearance of the great lakes of lava recently formed by the volcano of Kilauea:
Tourists to the volcano for many years past all remember certain active pools of lava, the North and South lakes, which ordinarily bubbled and tossed a fiery flood at a depth of about 120 feet below the floor of the great crater. Now these lakes have all been filled up, and there have arisen peaks and cones of hard lava that rise over 100 feet above the south bank of the great craters, which is about 1,000 feet high. But there has burst forth a new opening in the great crater floor not far distant from the old lakes, and a new lake, almost round in form, about 500 feet across and some seventy feet in depth, in ordinary stages, below the surrounding brink.
Here the great Hawaiian volcano presents the most varied fantastic play of liquid lava. Here are some of the phases of the play of a fire lake, as recently observed in the great crater of Kilauea. Sometimes it almost seems to sleep, and the disappointed visitor looks down into a black valley and observes a smoking pit giving no more evidence of combustion than a tar kiln. But the observer stands on the brink of the pit, or great pool or lake, as now appears, about 600 feet across, and whose surface is about seventy feet below him. And what is this surface below him. And what is this surface? It presents a dark silvery-gray hue, with a satiny shine. This is a crust of quiescent lava, and the observer who has expected to have his sense of wonder strained to speechlessness, says: "Is this all?" No! look! the brazen, glassy lake is alive.
What a heave in the center—some mighty beast lifting up that floor! Now a wave of undulation runs round the incrustated margin. And there is an outburst, a blood-red fount, gushing and bubbling from one of earth's arteries. The broad disk of the lake heaves and trembles. Fitful gaseous flashes fit across, and now the moving floor cracks and a serrated fissure like the suture of a skull runs from margin to margin, and quick, darting streaks, sudden cracks of the crust, shoot across in all directions. These serrated streaks are at first rosy lines on the gray surface, then they widen like crimson ribbons, broadening to the view. They undulate with the billowy motion of the whole upheaving surface. Another crimson fount springs up along the now fretting and roaring rim of the lake; and another of now wildly upleaping fountains of fire toss high their gory crests, even eating gouts and clots of the red spray that fall and harden near the observer's feet.—By this time the spirit of our inference is aroused. The whole fierce red lake is all boil and leap and roar. It is more than the of loud sea surfs beating bold bluffs. The surging tide of the molten earth sounds a deeper, bellowing bass than any note of the sounding sea. And now the heaved-up crust, broken into fragments, is churned up and dissolved in the boiling flood. The roaring gulf is now, indeed, a vortex of indescribable glories and terrors.—Caves open on the sides of the surrounding wall, and a man sees more of a hell than he ever imagined.—A thousand demons are now holding high carnival in this bottomless pit—and the leap and play of a fiery flood—the dance and swell of a red, surging tide, and the roar and shriek of the dread forces issuing from the red hot pulsating heart of the planet, make a thoughtful observer hold his hand to his own heart and say, "This is enough; the Almighty is here."

Economy of Time.

The old adage, "Take care of the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves," may be thus parodied: "Take care of the minutes and the days will take care of themselves." If the minutes were counted that are daily wasted in idle reverie or still idler talk, in thinking of setting about a task that is not relished and in looking for things that should not have been missed, they would soon amount to hours, and prove sufficient for the acquisition of some elegant art, or the study of some useful science. Almost all young persons have something in view of which they would like to do, if they had time for it; and, by scrutinizing their appropriations of every hour in the day, they will generally find as much time wasted as would suffice for the desired end, if resolutely redeemed from idleness. A professional gentleman of rare attainment, and one who added to the laborious duties of his calling a great variety of learning, much scientific research and many elegant accomplishments, was asked by a young lady how he found time for all that he did. He replied: "There is one rule which I have found of great use, and therefore recommend it to you, and that is, always do small things, such as writing a letter, copying out some short piece, making a sketch, reading a review, etc., in small portions of time, and reserve a whole day of leisure for some long and important affair. Never use up a rainy morning doing a variety of little jobs, and think, because you dispatch a great many, that you have well bestowed time; leave small affairs for odd half hours, and use your uninterrupted morning for something that cannot be done in half hours. You have sometimes wondered at my having time to correspond with so many absent friends; but all my letters of friendship are written in odd minutes, while I am waiting for people who are not so punctual to their appointments as I am. You would think it poor economy to cut into a whole yard of cloth when you want a little piece to mend with; you would take a scrap from your remnants. Just such poor economy of time is it to use up a whole day in little unconnected affairs; let your remnants of time suffice for these."
On Washing Babies,
Mothers and nurses cannot be too careful about the soap they use on the little ones. Few but physicians know how many of the so called skin diseases among children are caused by the use of adulterated, poisonous soap. An analysis of several cakes of the pretty and perfumed toilet soaps that are sold on the streets showed the presence of ground glass, soluble glass, silex, pipeclay, rotten stone, borax, plaster of Paris tin crystal, magnesia, pumice stone, oatmeal and other substances, which are added to give the soap weight, hardness, toughness or clearness.—The common colorings are vermilion Venetian red and carmine, ultramarine green, pot pigment green, copperas, Spanish brown, ultramarine blues, yellow and scarlet anilines, and burnt umber. Many of the perfuming ingredients, though harmless in themselves, become chemically poisonous by admixture. Adding the dangers from all these to the rancid, diseased, putrid qualities of grease used, and mothers may well be appalled at the permanent evils these neat-looking, delicately-scented blocks toilet soap contain, ready to be released whenever moistened and applied to the baby's body.
Hurrah! For Our Side.
Many people have lost their interest in politics and in amusement because they are so out of sorts and run down that they cannot enjoy anything. If such persons would only be wise enough to try that celebrated remedy Kidney-Wort and experience its tonic and renovating effects they would soon be hurrahing with the loudest. In either dry or liquid form it is a perfect remedy for torpid liver, kidneys or bowels.—Exchange.

Quaint Epitaphs.

In Edinburgh a lawyer lies buried, who bore the euphonious name of William Quick, and his epitaph reads:
Here lies the Quick and dead.
Honest Stephen Runbold, of Oxford, is thus briefly remembered:
He lived one hundred and five,
Sanguine and strong;
An hundred to five,
You live not so long.
In Peter church, Hertfordshire, some one had the courage to perpetuate the meanness of a man by writing on a headstone:
At rest beneath this churchyard stone
Lies stinging Jenny Wyatt.
He died one morning just at ten,
To save a dinner by it.
The poet Gray, asked that an epitaph which he himself had written should be placed on his tomb. The poet lies buried in Westminster Abbey, and his request has been carried out. The epitaph reads:
Life is a jest, and all things show it;
I thought so once, and now I know it.
We wish the people of Manchester had as little malice in their mirth as the people of Newcastle.—Who would wish to live in that region of yarn windles and spinning jennies, and go down to the grave with an epitaph such as they cut on the tombstone of honest John Hill:
Here lies John Hill, a man of skill,
His age was five times ten,
He never did good, nor never would,
Had he lived as long again.
This witty epitaph is to be found in Grantham and is on the tombstone over the grave of one James Peck:
Peck lies a Peck, which some men say
Was first of all a Peck of clay;
This, wrought with skill divine, while fresh,
Became a curious Peck of flesh;
Through various forms its Maker ran,
Then, adding breath, made Peck a man.
Fully sixty years Peck felt life's bubbles,
Till death relieved a Peck of troubles.
Thus fell poor Peck, as all things must,
And here he lies—a Peck of dust.
A Straight Answer Wanted.
One of the east-bound trains coming into Detroit the other day was heavily loaded, and a passenger who got on at Ypsilanti walked through two cars and then halted at a seat occupied by a small and a grab-bag and inquired:
"Is this seat occupied?"
"Of course this seat is occupied, was the reply.
"Are both halves of this seat occupied?" was the next query.
"Of course both halves are occupied."
"Well, my friend," said the new arrival, as he let go of his satchel, "I want to bother you with one more query. Had you rather I would toss that grab-bag out of the window and sit down with you, or chuck you our and ride into Detroit with the grab-bag?"
The grab bag man got mad at that and wouldn't ride anywhere else except on the wood box.—Detroit Free Press.
"FATHER, did you ever have another wife besides mother?"—"No, my boy; what possessed you to ask such a question?" Because I saw in the old family Bible where you married Anno Domini in 1835, and that isn't mother, for her name was Sally Smith.—Glasgow Evening Times.
"Lies! Big Lies!"
Not so fast my friend; for if you would see the strong, healthy, blooming men women and children that have been raised from beds of sickness, suffering and almost death, by the use of Hop Bitters, you would say, "Truth, glorious truth." See "Truths," in another column.
Young Keoptup says his mother-in-law is like a torpedo: she goes off when he isn't touching her. "Bless your soul," said his neighbor, Ofuldri, "my mother-in-law is like a Quaker gun; she's been with us since last May, and you can't make her go off."
I am slaying my thousands, as the hero of Gaza did, said a fellow who was devouring a piece of old cheese. Yes, said a companion and with the same weapon.
"I AM a man of few words," said Pendergast. "True enough," replied Fogg, "true enough; but you're never tired of repeating them."

THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

The new Board of County Commissioners meets on next Monday.—They go into office under the most favorable auspices. To them, under the regulations of law, are committed the most momentous interests of the County, and with a legalized first lien, as it were, upon all the property of the County, in so far as the right of taxation is involved, the responsibilities are such, as must demand the utmost circumspection, in the discharge of their duties, and in regard to which they are held to the strictest accountability, not only in law, but by the ever-watchful eyes of the people. To be just and generous to the many wants of the people, and yet so economical in expenditure, that the burden of expense may fall the least oppressively upon the tax-payers, no doubt must make no small demands upon the discernment, good judgment and decision of the Commissioners. A rigid economy should characterize everything, which may relate to the outlay of money.

We infer in a general way, that this may be best accomplished in the direction of cutting off unnecessary occasions of outlay. Offices and privileges, which yield no just returns, should be dispensed with, and a rigid supervision of those who are employed in the service in any way, will produce most favorable results. The action of the late Board, as far as we have learned, was generally acceptable to the people, and was certainly endorsed by them, as such endorsement is usually accounted at the late election.

Acting on our individual responsibility, we wish here to say a few words on behalf of the country Press. Whilst there has been a degree of liberality displayed towards it, there has yet been an evident disposition to centralize the work of the County in the City of Frederick, or at least the practical working of things has been in that direction. Whether this tendency comes of the monopolizing character generally ascribed to large towns, whether it be a matter of convenience, or whencesoever it may proceed, it is not just.

There are many persons interested in the public business, in various ways, who do not subscribe for, or read the Frederick papers: Is the object to compel them to such a course? The affairs of the County should be well known by the people, as a matter of economy, facilitating the business, they should therefore be made known in every reasonable and accessible form.

We have but eight newspaper establishments in the county, four of them are located in Frederick.—It will be seen that the country papers represent in the main, local districts, which have a right to a hearing at home. These all aid in the general advancement of intelligence, and reflectively in promotion of order, and of morality: mighty factors towards the curtailment of the taxation which ignorance and crime entail. An economy therefore, which works against the progress of an intelligent press is a false economy, defeating its own aims.

We have no desire in any wise to depreciate the usefulness and the fidelity of the work of the fraternity at Frederick; we thank them rather for courtesies extended to us. Our plea would be, let the public business be fully made known without needless exclusion to the country press, in every part of the county, the comparatively small outlay in its gross sum, can be readily repaid by economic considerations in other directions.

THE TRIAL AT WASHINGTON Since the elections our exchanges have found a most convenient resource of writing in a more or less personal form about the wretched assassin on trial there. The city papers in particular have had column after column every day, giving the details of the evidence, and the disgusting acts of the culprit. In proportion to the damning ignominy of the awful crime has been the notoriety given to its perpetrator. In our unpretending line of duty, we have avoided the use of the infamous name to the utmost, and believe it had been well could a like course have been observed generally. The comments on the trial throughout are as sickening as the trial itself, and we shall need to be at a great loss for ideas when we resort to them.

SHADED ROAD-SIDES.—BEAUTIFUL HOMES.

In France, it has been decided that fruit trees be planted along road-sides and by-ways, instead of ornamental, or shade trees, and thus, the traveller can find not only beauty and comfort during his journey over the dusty highway, but refreshment also.

Let our farmers do, in the interest of beauty and humanity, what the country people of Europe are compelled by law to do, plant trees along every road and lane, and let them be fruit trees. It will cost little beyond the labour of planting, whilst the benefit will be incalculable.

Plant trees about the homestead, too, clear away the sticks and stones and other rubbish from the front of the house, and let the place be covered with grass. Keep the wood in a shed, at the rear of the house, and cut it there, instead of having the unsightly wood-pile, with its chips and litter at your doorstep; you will gain by keeping the fuel dry, and having the convenience of cutting the wood in stormy weather without exposure, whilst your whole family will gain a hundred fold, in the elevation and refinement of feeling, self-respect and intellectual advancement.

No matter how poor or small the home may be, it can be made attractive without expense, by using a little extra labour, and having such adornments as are with the reach of all.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 29th, '81. There is life enough about Washington now.—The clams have been gathering rapidly for some days and buzzings are heard which indicate the renewal of hostilities on Capitol hill. The chaotic condition to which vacation, neglect, dust and abandonment reduced even the grandeur under the Capitol dome, has suddenly disappeared and new life has taken possession of the corridors so long deserted save by the looker-on. During the past week employees have been dusting and brushing, and new Congressmen strolling here and there familiarizing themselves with the various ways and by-ways of the building which they expect to make tremble with the thunders of their eloquence. The attendant retinue of clerks and assistants are in their places and strangers, office-seekers and loungers are everywhere.—Everything has been put in apperpetuo order. The Senate chamber is as complete and tidy as a lady's parlor—warm, nice, dry, cheery, comfortable.—The Hall of Representatives is scarcely anything behind; all is as elegant as for a bridal party.

The renewal of activity is not confined to the abodes of Congress. It is everywhere about the city—the hotels, the boarding houses and all places of resort. Congress makes Washington. For several months, except at the time of President Garfield's funeral, the hotel corridors have been deserted and lonesome places; now they are thronged day and night and one only has to visit the different headquarters to meet hundreds of familiar faces that do not belong here, and to see groups of office seekers, Congressman and lobbyists button-holing each other for dear life. One evening while the speakership contest was at its zenith of uncertainty I saw, in the lobby of a prominent hotel at one time three candidates for Speaker, two for Clerk of the House, one for Sergeant-at-Arms and about twenty-five aspirants for lesser positions.—There were also two ex-governors and several ex-congressmen, aiding the candidates in their attacks on the poor unsuspecting members elect, of whom a godly number were in the crowd. The Congressman is an important personage at such a time, and when it is all over and everything settled he must feel lonesome—as though he had lost his best friend.

President Arthur has at last gone into the White House to live.—Everything is as neat and bright as a new pin since the old house has been fixed up. The President will occupy for a sleeping-chamber a room that has rarely been used for that purpose by his predecessors, though Gen. Grant occupied it for a short time. It is very spacious, measuring about thirty by twenty feet, and is over the private dining room. It is fully as large as the Red Parlor down stairs. During Gen. Grant's two terms this room was known as "Miss Nellie's room," being that usually occupied by his only daughter. The chamber is on the north side of the house and with the smaller room adjoining occupies the northwest corner. The sun never shines on the large room.—The small one will be so to speak, the President's boudoir and communicates with the larger one by a mahogany door. The question that has lately agitated our society circles is, "what lady will 'preside' at the White House, and assist at receptions, etc.?" But it has been settled by the President, who says that the wife of a member of his Cabinet—whose name is not yet made public—will assist him in dispensing the hospitalities of the Executive Mansion. In fact he expects all ladies of his Cabinet to come to the rescue in doing the honors. His married sister has cares enough of her own and the unmarried one is not physically able to perform the duties. There will be none but formal entertainments given at the mansion this winter—that is to say dinner parties and public evening receptions. No one will be there on whom the ladies can call socially as they have been in the habit of doing heretofore. DOM PEDRO.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE, in spite of her 61 years and her long confinement to an invalid's sofa, looks young and even handsome. Her fair face is unwrinkled, her large brown eyes are full of kindness, and she is still deeply and actively interested in various practical works for the relief of the sick and poor.

THE orange and lemon crop of Sicily has been a failure, owing to the long-continued hot winds from Africa. No rain has fallen since last April.

Order of Publication. N. O. 4781 EQUITY. In the Circuit Court for Frederick County, sitting as a Court of Equity. Lawrence L. Dielman and Mary C. Dielman his wife, et al, vs. James P. Cretin et al. SEPTEMBER TERM, 1881. The object of this suit is to procure a Decree for the sale of the Real Estate, situated in Frederick county, Maryland, of which James Cretin died seized and possessed, and for the distribution of the proceeds of said sale among his heirs at law, and those entitled thereto according to their just proportions.

The Bill of Complaint States, that in the month of February, in the year eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, a certain James Cretin, of Frederick county, Maryland, died, seized and possessed of certain Real Estate, situated in Frederick county, Maryland, described in Exhibits 1 and 2, to said Bill of Complaint, and eleven acres, two rods and four perches of Mountain Land, purchased of William Boller, the deed for which has never been recorded as required by law, but has been owned and occupied by the said deceased and his devisees for more than thirty years.

The Bill further states that the said James Cretin died testate, leaving a last will and testament duly probated and recorded in the Office of the Register of Wills of Frederick county, and in which last will and testament, his widow, Mary Ann Cretin was named Executrix thereof, and certified copy of which last will and testament is filed as Exhibit No. 3 to said Bill.

The Bill further states that the said James Cretin left surviving him, his above named widow, Mary Ann Cretin, who is now dead, and the following named children and grand children, as his heirs at Law. 1st. The Complainant, Mary C. Dielman, a daughter, at present the wife of Lawrence L. Dielman. 2d. The Complainant John T. Cretin, a son, at present married to Emily E. Cretin. 3d. The Complainants Mary F. Deery and Agnes R. Deery, the children and heirs at law of Ann E. Deery, a deceased daughter of the said James Cretin, who died since the death of her father intestate, leaving a husband, William Francis P. Deery, who yet survives her. 4th. James P. Cretin, a son. 5th. Joseph A. Cretin, a son. 6th. Agnes C. Cretin, a daughter, who died intestate in 1860, without any children.

7th. Simon G. Cretin, a son, who died intestate a short time after his father in 1837, without children, that all the above named parties are adults and live in Frederick county, Maryland, with the exception of Francis P. Deery, Mary F. Deery and Agnes R. Deery, who live in Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, and James P. Cretin, who is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and when last heard from resided in the State of Michigan. The Bill further states and charges, that by said last will and testament the said James Cretin, deceased, devised and bequeathed to his said widow, Mary Ann Cretin, for and during her natural life, all his estate, real, personal and mixed, and after her death to be equally divided among his above mentioned children; that the said Mary Ann Cretin was authorized and empowered as executrix thereof, by said last will and testament, to sell said estate if she should see proper, and to enjoy the interest of the proceeds of such sale during her natural life, and that after her death the proceeds of such sale should be divided equally among his children, share and share alike; that by said last will and testament the said Mary Ann Cretin was authorized and empowered to advance to any of his said children, their portion devised and bequeathed to them, that the said Mary Ann Cretin neither sold any of said estate, nor made any advancement to any of said children.

The Bill further states and charges that the said Mary Ann Cretin is now dead, and that the real estate of which the said James Cretin, died, seized and possessed, has vested in and descended to the above named surviving children and grand children of the said James Cretin, as tenants in common, and as such they are now seized of the same.

The Bill further states and charges that the said real estate cannot be divided among said tenants in common, with out loss and injury, and that it would be to the interest and advantage of all parties, that the same be sold under a decree of the Circuit Court for Frederick county, sitting as a Court of Equity, and the proceeds of said sale be divided among those entitled according to their respective interests.

The Bill then prays for a sale of said Real Estate, under a decree of said Circuit Court, for Subpoenas against the resident defendants, and an order of Publication against the non resident defendants, Francis P. Deery and James P. Cretin. It is thereupon the 10th day of November, A. D. 1881, adjudged and ordered that the Complainants, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Frederick county, once a week for four successive weeks, before the 17th day of December, A. D. 1881, give notice to the non-resident defendants, Francis P. Deery and James P. Cretin, of the object and substance of this Bill of Complaint, and warn them, and each of them, to be and appear in this Court either in person or by solicitor, on or before the 20th day of March, A. D. 1882, to answer the premises and to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to pass, as prayed for. ADOLPHUS FEARHAKE, Jr., Clerk of the Circuit Court for Frederick Co. Endorsed, Filed November 16, 1881. True Copy—Test: ADOLPHUS FEARHAKE, JR., nov 19-51

Reaction. Since the election of the Diphtheria at Frederick seems to have disappeared, as rapidly as its rise was mysterious. It was a time of bad blood, evidently. The circulation and temperature of the Examiner were preternaturally high, but the pass proved healthy.

Death of a Prominent Citizen. JOHN P. WALLACE, Esq., of Green township, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of the county, was seized with disease of the heart on last Saturday evening and on the following morning joined the silent majority.—Waynesboro Gazette.

Appointments. Mr. Robert Barlick Sheriff elect; it is reported, has made his appointments.—Mr. H. Frank Steiner, who has been the efficient Clerk to the County Commissioners for the last four years, is his office deputy.—Alonzo Bonner, riding deputy, and Mr. Charles Danner, the present turnkey at the jail he retains.—The appointment of the above gentleman no doubt will give general satisfaction.—Examiner.

Found Dead in Bed. On Saturday morning last, says the Banner of Liberty, Mr. Dennis Clemson, residing between this place and McKinstry's Mills, on rising from his bed and finding his wife not yet up, attempted to rouse her, when to his horror, he found that she was dead. The evening previous she was in her usual good health, assisting in some arduous work at the house. We have not learned the cause of her death.

Death of Mr. Clabaugh. MR. E. A. CLABAUGH, of Middleburg, Carroll Co., father of Upsler Clabaugh, and well known in this city, died in Hagerstown at five o'clock Tuesday morning, after a short illness. He was engaged in business in Baltimore and was prominently identified with the turf interest of the country, owning a splendid stud of racers and breeders at his country residence at Middleburg. He was aged about 68 years. The announcement of his death will be read with regret.—Examiner.

Safe Blown Open by Thieves. YORK, Pa., Nov. 30.—Thieves last night effected an entrance into the store of Wm. Herbst & Son, at Glen Rock, on the Northern Central Railroad, about 13 miles south of York, and after drilling the safe blew it to pieces while a train was passing, the safe having been enveloped with heavy blankets in order to lessen the noise. About $30 in money and papers of value to the firm, but no use to the thieves, and a number of small articles were stolen. The robbery was evidently made by the gang who successfully worked upon the safe at Littlestown on Monday night, and have been committing many similar depredations throughout this section of the State lately. They have always worked successfully. There is no clue to their identity.—Sun.

The formal opening of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, to Frederick, was celebrated in that place just fifty years from last Thursday, (Dec. 1st, 1831). The event was celebrated with most joyous demonstrations. Five cars came up from Baltimore, their arrival was announced by the ringing of bells and the firing of cannon. The railroad then was sixty miles long, the longest in the world. Now and Then!

Fearful Mortality. Last Sunday afternoon, Rev. Edward Smith, pastor of the M. E. Church of Smithsburg, preached the funeral of six children, of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Smith, who live near Mt. Bethel Church, Frederick county, in the mountain district. They all died of diphtheria within one month. Rev. Mr. Lovell buried one; the others were interred without the services of a minister.—Boonsboro Times.

The Fire Engine. Why don't the Burgess and Commissioners look up the Fire Engine, and make sure that it is in good condition? If a fire should occur and the levers and valves, the nozzle and chambers don't work, their's will be the blame. Should the people of Mechanicstown wish to hire it for some Saturday afternoon diversion, it will bring double rent if in good order. At all events, it should be always ready to work, on demand, like a good promissory note.

Exhumed. At the suggestion of a number of persons, who entertained a strong belief that a confession of his crime was somewhere concealed about his clothing, the body of the lately executed murderer, Felix Munshour, was exhumed on Monday and searched, but nothing to incriminate either guilt or innocence was found. The corpse was very much decomposed and very black in color.—Examiner.

What next? Munshour was incapable of writing a confession, had he so desired. Some persons would be wiser than the Courts of Justice.—Ed.

Stolen Children. The Rockville (Md.) Advocate says: "On Tuesday Mr. Joseph Cropsey was in Rockville looking for two little girls, aged nine and thirteen years, who were stolen from him in Washington some weeks since. He has tracked them to Rockville, and from the description given of the man who stole the children they were seen here on last Saturday. The children were taken by one Bob Sanford, who is a man of about forty years, five feet ten inches high, black mustache and chin whiskers. He travels with his wife who is deaf and dumb, in a white-covered wagon. The children are made to beg."

The official vote of Maryland on the constitutional amendment (with the exception of Harford county, no returns on the amendment having been received from that county) is as follows: For the amendment, 84,890, against the amendment, 9,239; majority, 84,654.

There now, that shows some popularity worth speaking of! and it reminds us of the incident which occurred years ago, when the vote was taken in this place, for or against the constitutional amendment. The judges of the Election desired to know of an old German citizen whether he voted for or against the amendment. Citizen: asked "is he a good Democrat?" some one called out and nodded to him. Yes. And thereupon he said, "Den I votes for him?"

THE Christmas Number of St. Nicholas is already at hand, with a picture of the jolly old Saint and his Reindeer, on the cover; a glance at which will of course make the children's mouths water. The Gnomes and Fairies are unusually lively in this number, and, like the pictures, some so funny and all so beautiful, that the young folks from the least to the greatest must wail with delight, in looking at them. Of course the stories, poems, puzzles, &c., are just what they ought to be, for the occasion, and the family of little ones, that has not got this charming number of St. Nicholas to brighten the dreary December days, is to be pitied. Get it by all means, single numbers, 25 cents; subscription price, $3.00 a year. The Century Co., Union Square, N. Y.

A Narrow Escape. Mr. Marshall Hyder, of Odebolt Iowa, has given account of an experience from coal gas, which came well nigh proving fatal. It seems he occupied a small room with his employer, Mr. Bowman, in which there was a coal stove, the gas from which escaped during the night.—Mr. Hyder, being by some means awakened, had barely strength enough left to crawl to the door and call for help, which being speedily obtained, he was duly relieved, but it was about five hours before Mr. B. fully recovered from the suffocating effects of the gas.

Since writing the above, we have seen the Odebolt Recorder, which gives the facts in the case substantially as they appear above.

A Maryland Student Killed. NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Last evening, two young men giving the names of Forest Winemiller, of Poughkeepsie, and John L. High, of Reading, Pa., hired a room at the St. Omar Hotel, this city, to which they retired at a late hour. This morning the report of a pistol was heard in the room. The hotel officials hurried to the spot and found Winemiller suffering from a shot wound in the abdomen. He was removed to the New York Hospital, where his wound was pronounced dangerous and probably fatal. Winemiller said that he had shot himself; but he did not know how he did it. He stated that his home is in New Windsor, Md. He is about 20 years old and High 17. The latter was arrested and held to await the result of Winemiller's injuries. He denied having fired the shot. Both young men were students at Eastman's Business College in Poughkeepsie. The police regard the shooting as accidental and say that both boys were in such a state of intoxication as to be unable to tell which one held the revolver when it was discharged. A dispatch from Poughkeepsie says Winemiller is from Martinsburg, W. Va., and that he and High were close friends.—America.

A Beautiful Monument.

Passing along the street some days ago, our attention was attracted to a White Bronze Monument in Mr. U. A. Lough's yard, and we found it to be placed in Mt. St. Mary's Cemetery, in memory of Mrs. Emily Dielman, wife of Dr. H. Dielman, who died August, 1879. The structure consists of a heavy base of red sandstone, about two feet square, on which rest the receding bases of Bronze symmetrically going upward, and terminating in a neatly ornamental cross, with appropriate symbols and inscriptions on the four sides of the lower base. The entire structure, we are told, is five feet five inches high. It is most beautiful and simple in style, whilst the peculiar color of the bronze, adds a sombre completeness to the general appearance.

Nearly Cut His Leg Off. Mr. Josiah Green, living about 2 miles west of Wolfsville, Frederick Co., says the Hagerstown Globe, while cutting timber alone in the mountain, near his house, on Thursday last, accidentally cut himself in the left leg below the knee.—Both bones of the leg were severed and one of the arteries. After the accident occurred, he dragged himself a considerable distance upon the ground, crying murder at the top of his voice. The attention of some persons in the neighborhood was finally attracted to the locality and he was taken to his home. Drs. J. M. Gains and Harry Wade, of Boonsboro, were summoned, and rendered the necessary surgical treatment. Mr. Green strongly protests against amputation, but the physicians think that, to save his life, this will be necessary.

A Terrible Landslide. A very heavy landslide occurred at the iron ore mine near Oak Orchard, this county, on Tuesday night of last week. The embankment that became dislodged measured upon its surface twenty-five feet in width and from sixty to seventy in length. The slide must have come with terrific force, for it covered the entire bottom of the large and main excavation with a depth of earth from twenty to thirty feet, so much, indeed, that one of the employees informed your correspondent that it will take at least two months with all their force to remove it.—It buried beneath it about fifteen tons of ore already selected and piled up, one car and a lot of miners' tools, besides covering all the available ore yet to dig. Nothing can be done, says my informant, until all the dirt is removed. The impression of the miners is that it occurred just before their arrival in the morning to work. Had it occurred just a ter, all would have inevitably been buried alive.—Banner of Liberty.

Serious Attraction at Hagerstown. HAGERSTOWN, Nov. 30.—A shooting affair took place there this morning in Jacob Mene's barber-shop, between Jos. E. Owen, a prominent shoe merchant, and A. K. Appleman, president of the Hagerstown Agricultural Implement Manufacturing Company. It seems that whilst Owen was in the chair, under the barber's hands, Appleman came in and took a seat to await his turn. Owen, apparently becoming suddenly agitated, sprang from the barber's chair and assaulted Appleman, throwing him on the floor and striking and kicking him. Appleman called for help, and managing to get on his feet retreated toward the rear door of the shop and drew a pistol, which he failed to fire. Owen then drew a pistol and fired at Appleman, but missed him, the ball burying itself in the door jamb in the rear. A crowd being attracted by the noise and the shots rushed in and the difficulty then ended. Mr. Appleman went immediately before the grand jury, and after hearing his testimony and that of the other witnesses a true bill for "assault with intent to murder" was found and a bench warrant issued for the arrest of Mr. Owen.

A Plucky Sportsman. A remarkable instance of perseverance under difficulties, was developed in the experience of our genial and energetic fellow-townsmen, Mr. John T. Gelwick, some days ago. Having business to transact in the country, he concluded to take his dog and gun with him. Soon seeing two squirrels he shot one of them. Intent on getting the other, he was suddenly out of sorts on finding his stock of shot entirely exhausted, and thereupon tied the dog to the tree, in the hope that his yelping would keep the squirrel from leaving, and went towards a store nearby, gladdened by the sound of the dog's barking, which seemed to signify the successful working of his strategy. But, lo! that dog, having gnawed through the strap which bound him, was soon at his side. Having obtained some shot, he returned to the tree, shot at, and wounded another squirrel, and traced its course by the trickling of its blood, until it found refuge in a dead tree. In the dilemma, he gathered some corn-stalks near-by, set fire to them, and soon the raging element set up a fearful roar. John now became alarmed, lest the woods should take fire, so he went to a house, got a couple of buckets and carried water from the Moccasin, and put the fire out as far as he could reach. But then the top of the tree blazed up and the fire again roared terrifically, increasing his alarm lest the tree should fall among the accumulated leaves; so he carried more water, and damped them for a wide space around the burning trunk. The next thing was to get an axe to fell the tree. Approaching the house for that purpose, the dogs led off with such a hideous demonstration, that the women of the house coming to the rescue, alone enabled him to approach, with, to say the least, his clothing flying. An axe was obtained, but too dull to cut; the kind woman however, aided him to grind it, when returning to the tree, he found the fire had gone out, and strange to tell, the squirrel was thoroughly roasted, and thus he secured it at last.

From the Baltimore Sun.

WAYNESBORO, Pa., Nov. 28.—This morning Rev. W. H. S. Lecon, a recent graduate of Ursinus College, Pa., died of typhoid fever at the home of his brother-in-law, near Waynesboro. Deceased was a young man of extraordinary talent, and his death has cast a gloom over the entire community.

CUMBERLAND, MD., Nov. 29.—To-day Frank Hopewell, of Washington, D. C., employed by Humbird & Co., contractors for the construction of a portion of the extension of the West Virginia and Pittsburgh Central Railroad, was killed by the falling of a tree. His remains were sent to Washington.

HANOVER, PA., Nov. 28.—Burglars last night entered the warehouse of Fink & Shorb, produce and commission merchants, at Littlestown, seven miles from here, and blew open their iron safe. About $400 of the firm's money, and $30 belonging to Wm. Kuhns were carried away. None of their valuable papers were disturbed. The burglars drilled a half-inch hole in the door of the safe about four inches from the knob. The charge dislodged the outer door and threw the inner door from its hinges.—No clue to the perpetrators.

PERSONALS. Miss Minnie Harbaugh left on Tuesday morning for Kansas City. Miss Ella Eichelberger of Frederick, is visiting at Mrs. Harriet Motter's. Rev. Father White returned home on Friday last after a weeks visit to Baltimore City.

Dr. J. Thos. Bussey, was visiting in Baltimore. Rev. G. W. Aughinbaugh, D. D., President of Mercersburg College, and who for ten years was Pastor of the Reformed Church in this place, passed part of Monday in town, his presence was greeted by most of his friends and former parishioners. Time has made but little inroad upon his appearance, and he seems to have the promise of long years of usefulness before him.

Mrs. J. H. Bruce of Cumberland, is visiting at Dr. Andrew Ann's. Miss Eliza Sibbet of Pittsburg, visits her niece, Mrs. Samuel Motter.

Miss Leila Taney returned home on Tuesday, from an extended visit in Watheba, Kansas. Miss Mamie McConaughy of Gettysburg, made a visit to Miss Mabel Motter. Miss Heloise Fillion, of Monroe, La., Miss Katie A. Ryan, Mr. J. J. Ryan and Mr. B. Welby, of Baltimore, are the guests of John O'Donoghue, Esq.

Perils of the Deep. The world-renowned swimmer, Capt. Paul Boyton, in an interview with a newspaper correspondent at the seashore, related the following incidents in his experience: Reporter—"Captain Boyton, you must have seen a large part of the world?"

Capt. Boyton—"Yes, indeed, I have seen a large part of the world. I have traveled over 10,000 miles on the rivers of America and Europe; have also been presented to the crowned heads of England, France, Germany, Austria, Belgium, Italy, Holland, Spain and Portugal, and have in my possession forty-two medals and decorations; I have three times received the order of knighthood, and been elected honorary member of committees, clubs, orders and societies."

Reporter—"Were your various trips accompanied by much danger?"

Capt. Boyton—"That depends upon what you may call dangerous. During my trip down the river Tago in Spain, I had to 'shoot' one hundred and two waterfalls, the highest being about eighty-five feet, and innumerable rapids. Crossing the straits of Messina, I had three times broken in a fight with the pirates, and coming down the Somme, a river in France, I received a charge of shot from an excited and startled huntsman. Although all this was not very pleasant, and might be termed dangerous, I fear nothing more on my trip than intense cold; for, as long as my limbs are free and easy, and not cramped or benumbed, I am all right. Of late I carry stock of St. Jacobs Oil in my little boat,—(the Captain calls it "Baby Mine," and has stored therein signal rockets, thermometers, compass, provisions, etc.)—and I have had but little trouble. Before starting out I rub myself thoroughly with the article, and its action on the muscles is wonderful. From constant exposure I am somewhat subject to rheumatic pains, and nothing would ever benefit me until I got hold of this Great German Remedy. Why, on my travels I have met people who had been suffering with Rheumatism for years; by my advice they tried the Oil, and it cured them. I would sooner do without food for days than without this remedy for one hour. In fact I would not attempt a trip without it."

The Captain became very enthusiastic on the subject of St. Jacobs Oil, and he left him citing instances of the curative qualities of the Great German Remedy to a party around him.

The "Pink-eye" Disease. The Baltimore Sun, in reply to a correspondent who propounds some questions about the "pink-eye" disease, says:—The disease has two forms, the typhus and rheumatic. The typhus—the first symptom dullness with loss of appetite, watery discharge from the eyes, the mucous membrane lining the eye very much inflamed and of a yellowish cast. Pulse weak, from 50 to 60. Temperature 105 to 106. At first the bowels are constipated. From 24 to 48 hours purging takes place, the pulse becomes stronger and the temperature falls gradually to the normal point.

Treatment.—Nitrate potash in one-ounce doses night and morning until the fever has subsided. The horses will rarely eat any grain; feed them hay well moistened, apples, carrots, grass, or in fact anything they will eat. The after treatment consists of liberal food and tonics.

The rheumatic form of the disease, the first symptom varies. Sometimes the horse is lame in one or two legs for twenty-four hours before he stops eating. Again he becomes stiff during the night, all the legs swell up, and it is with difficulty he moves about; loss of appetite, very thirsty, pulse very weak, from 60 to 80; temperature from 106 to 108.

Treatment.—Nitrate potash in one-ounce doses night and morning in water. Half-ounce doses three times per day of Fowler's solution of arsenic. Walking exercises as soon as able. The potash should be discontinued as soon as the fever subsides. The legs may be rubbed with some stimulating embrocation.

Again you have a mixture of the two types combined. This is the form that general proves fatal. The symptoms you have in this not spoken of in the others: Partial or total blindness, pulse imperceptible, the brain is affected, horses will brace themselves with their heads against the wall, they stand with great difficulty, the least excitement will throw them in a spasm. Turn them loose in a box stall and do not excite them in any way. Treatment the same as the others. The solution of arsenic being a dangerous poison, care should be exercised by having it properly marked and kept under lock and key.

NOTICE TO FARMERS AND OWNERS OF PRIVATE RESIDENCES.—The safest and best company in which Farmers and owners of Private Residences can insure their Property, is the Time-Tried and Fire-Tested Agricultural Insurance Company. It insures nothing but private Residences and Farm Property. In the last 27 years it has not had a loss of over $5,000, in one Fire, and it cannot be affected by sweeping conflagrations, as its risks are all detached. It insures against damage by Lightning, whether fire ensues or not, and insures Live Stock against being killed by Lightning anywhere on the farm. The Agricultural Insurance Co., is a stock company, and the strongest and largest company, doing an exclusive Dwelling Business in the United States, if not in the world, and is now issuing 50000 Policies a year. For further particulars, apply to W. G. HORNER, Agent, Emmitsburg, Md.

Baltimore Herald's Would-be Murderer. The Taneytown murder, as published last week, turns out to have been a purely sensational matter, as will appear in the following, from the Democratic Advocate of last Saturday, published at Westminster: On the morning of October 3d, 1873, Henry Hiner, of Taneytown district, was found in a dying condition in front of the hearth of Union Hotel, in this place, where there was a woodfire. Mr. Hiner was so much burned that he was but a few days after being found. The alleged confession of Patrick Tully, that he and David Linnah had robbed Hiner, and then poured coal oil on his clothes and set fire to him, published in the Baltimore Herald, is not true. Your correspondent lived here at the time Hiner was burned and has lived here ever since. He was personally acquainted with Messrs. Hiner, Linnah and Tully, and will give some facts regarding this disgraceful charge against our community.

After reading the Herald's article your correspondent called on Dr. C. Birnie, who attended Mr. Hiner after he was burned on the date above given, and learned that Mr. Hiner had told the Doctor that he (Hiner) could not tell how he got burned; that Hiner's clothes were not saturated with coal oil, and that he was burned in the usual manner in which he is burned either he or Hinal had anything to do with Hiner's burning, and believes the whole story to be a fabrication.

Your correspondent then called on Rev. P. A. Long, the reverend gentleman to whom, the Herald asserted, Mr. Tully made the confession. Mr. Long said that he called on Mr. Tully when he heard that he was ill, and read to him and prayed for him. He did "this several times during Tully's illness, and he believed that Mr. Tully is in a better world, almost his last words being, he had nothing on his mind and was at peace with his God, and any contrary statement was untrue.

Mrs. David Linnah, who resides here, and the wife of David Linnah, whom the Herald alleged was Mr. Tully's partner in the falsely reported crime was next called on, and she stated that her husband was at home on the night that Hiner got burned, but that he waited on Hiner after the burning until he died.

In regard to the false personal allusions to Tully and Linnah, your correspondent will simply state that all the harm they did was to themselves.
