With this issue the EMMITSBURG CHRONICLE enters upon its fourth volume. We point with, we trust, a just pride to the success, which has crowned its efforts to establish in this community, a newspaper that should commend itself to intelligent readers, and be a welcome visitor in the family circles; a medium for the advancement of the general business interests, and serve as a means through which its life might blend with the general moving forces of the outside world.

We are not disposed to indulge in the language of self-laudation. Our work has been performed with an earnest desire to be useful in our native community, and to this end our efforts have been directed with the unpretending ability at command.

The measure of success is best evidenced, in the unflinching approval of our work by our patrons, and their steady encouragement for its continuation. The beginning of the past year witnessed the enlargement of the paper to about one-third its former size, this involving of course, increase of labour and expenditure, whilst the improved and enlarged publication was given to the public at the same price as the smaller one, with which our work began.

We enter upon a new year, with renewed hope, that the kind favor heretofore shown, will not only be continued, but largely increased in the time to come. Whilst on the one hand, our office is a matter of individual enterprise personal to ourselves; on the other hand, as the press is the organ of the community, it should command the active cooperation of all interested in its business and prosperity, as well as its individual and family requirements, for the reactive influence must involve the common good of all.

We have not by any means reached the goal of our aims; and whilst indisposed to indulge in bright promises for the future, we may yet say, that we shall exert our best efforts to keep this journal up to the standard of a good paper for the family circle, furnishing the latest news of the day, with reliable accounts of such items of local interest as may reach us, whilst those of private gossip, without interest to the public, will always be discarded.

The correspondence of the paper, so excellent in character, as well as style, will be continued as heretofore, and we hope to make improvements generally, as circumstances may call them forth. We extend hearty thanks to our patrons for their kind confidence in the past, and trust that by their promptness in fulfilling their part, in the implied agreement with us, we may be enabled to meet regularly, the outlay which is requisite in cash, in the conduct of the business. In proceeding on a cash basis, our labour is cheered, care is removed, and the result is, better work more easily performed.

We trust our friends will renew their subscriptions, without awaiting solicitation in any respect.

A Reduction of Rates of Postage Proposed.

Senator Davis, of West Virginia, exhibits his usual fine comprehension of the postal needs of the country and the modification of postage demanded by our progressive civilization in the resolution offered by him yesterday requiring the committee on postoffices to report upon the expediency of reducing the rate of postage on letters to two cents, and on newspapers to half the present rate. His resolution embraced also the suggestion that rates upon merchandise sent through the mails might be increased with advantage. The Senator's resolution was adopted, and favorable action upon it is among the possibilities.—Balt. Sun.

The strikers have reached a scale of magnitude that is very remarkable, and altogether unaccounted with the prices of provisions. The strikers think they discern signs of weakening on the part of the manufacturers. Thus far there has been no resort to riotous measures. It is estimated that about 100,000 men are out of employment, the consequent daily loss to trade can readily be inferred from this fact.

TUESDAY night a freight train was wrecked on the Pa. railroad between Lancaster and Harrisburg by some scoundrel blocking the track with rails. Eleven cars were demolished and a brakeman fatally injured.

The Pond Liquor Law in Ohio. The Pond law cases, which were argued on Monday and Tuesday of last week, were decided by the Supreme Court of Ohio on Decoration Day. The statute known as the Pond law was designed for the regulation of the liquor traffic, and contains provisions for the taxation of all persons engaged in the business after a given date. A stringent bond is required, and a specific excise imposed upon liquor selling establishments, which are classified for the purpose.

The Constitution of Ohio provides that "no license to traffic in intoxicating liquors shall hereafter be granted in this State, but the General Assembly may by law provide against evils resulting therefrom."

The objection made to the Pond law was that the tax to which it sought to subject the liquor dealers was really a license, and therefore forbidden by the Constitution.

This objection has been sustained by the Supreme Court, by a decision in which all the Judges but one concur. The argument in favor of the validity of the law which was made by Mr. West, the distinguished blind lawyer, is very highly spoken of in Ohio, but did not prevail against the attack upon the statute by his opponent, Mr. Hoadley, who represented two prominent beer sellers of Cincinnati. He argued that the Pond law sought to accomplish without amending the Constitution, what could only be done by amending it; and such is the conclusion of the Supreme Court.

There is one lesson in law making which has to be taught over and over again in the various States of the Union to those who desire to restrain or limit the traffic in intoxicating liquors, and that is that the Constitution is the paramount, and cannot be disregarded, however estimable or meritorious may be the purpose for which men would infringe its provisions. To make war upon intemperance is desirable, but to maintain the Constitution is essential.—New York Sun.

The following appeared as an editorial in the Morning Herald of the 1st inst. It is a just and conclusive presentation of a subject on which we have remarked somewhat on past occasions:

"No doubt a great deal of harm is done to society by making jails reception rooms in which notorious criminals pose before admiring visitors and have their sayings published or broadcast by obsequious reporters, who pander to morbid curiosity. The scoundrel who is awaiting the penalty of the law, but has levers of female worshippers of note, who send him bouquets and dainties, and sympathizing notes, comes to think that his conduct has been really quite commendable or even heroic, and the honors and attentions paid to him blight the consciences of many persons to the enormity of his crimes. Crime should be a disgrace, and when it is honored with attentions and testimonials of esteem there is an inducement held out to morbid natures to become the same sort of heroes. The harmful effect of orations to scoundrelism is so evident that many persons are urging such legislation as will prevent them hereafter. The criminal under arrest for a crime that may deprive him of liberty or life should still be treated humanely, but should be so restrained that he cannot be lionized. From the time he enters a prison he should be a prisoner, having as little intercourse with the outside world as is compatible with humanity. At no time should he be allowed to receive the visits of promiscuous strangers. The only visitors admitted to see him until he is sent to State prison or hanged should be his attorney, a physician, a spiritual advisor and a very limited number of near relatives, who pledge themselves not to give any information to reporters for publication. With these exceptions the criminal should be kept in solitary confinement. If sentenced to State prison he should be sent there without parade, and if hanged it should be in the presence of only a limited number of officers, and no facilities should be given for sensational accounts in papers of the death scene.

Alexander III. Between Two Fires.

No ruler, probably, has been beset by such difficulties in his desire to grant legislative reforms as Alexander III. of Russia. Not only has he to fear that such reforms inaugurated at this time may be interpreted by the revolutionary party as inspired by his dread of personal violence, but he has to contend against the bitter and determined opposition of the clergy and the ultra-conservative aristocracy, who are bent upon upholding autocracy and are averse to making any concessions whatever to the people. A very interesting account of the proceedings of the Ministerial Council of March 20, furnished to the London Times by a high official at St. Petersburg, throws considerable light upon this matter. At this sitting of the council three propositions were discussed, to wit: Count Melikoff's proposal for a commission to consider his propositions approved by the late Czar, an imperial ukase on that subject signed by Alexander II. only a few hours before his assassination, and the same ukase submitted to the present Czar for his signature on the next day.—The procurator of the Holy Synod, former tutor of Alexander III., opposed Count Melikoff's plans on the ground that society should not be allowed to discuss matters which had hitherto been forbidden it, and that the people could only be led into the right path by the clergy, who alone taught loyalty and devotion to, Czar and fatherland. He added the subtle threat that if the imperial authority existed in certain undefined and incomprehensible institutions, the clergy would cease to speak to the people of the Czar, and the people would forget him. The procurator was followed by the minister of post and telegraphs, who said haughtily that his oath of allegiance to the autocratic Czar, taken but a week before, would not allow him to participate in the debate, for that he should feel himself guilty of perjury were he to take part in the discussion of a measure which aimed at the limitation of the autocratic power.

Count Melikoff replied in substance that there was nothing in the propositions under consideration subversive of autocratic power; that it was only desired that these questions should be discussed in the light of day, not by salaried officials, but by representatives of the people. In reply to an insinuation that the political press was exciting the people to the overthrow of the present form of government, he said that the press had lately done the state good service by disclosing the fraudulent waste of public money, and thereby bringing about senatorial revisions.

M. Abaza, minister of finance, earnestly supported the proposed reforms, saying that if the late Emperor had signed the ukase on the 3d of March the horrible event of the 13th would not have occurred. Count Milutine, former minister of war, also favored the measure, relating that Alexander II. had often expressed to him the opinion that such reforms were the only guarantee of order in the empire. Count Valneff gave it as his opinion that Russia must not retrograde, but follow in the path traced out by history for all nations. If civilization was really to be inculcated into Russia, she must take as a model the institutions of modern Europe and not the despotism of the East. The pretense that the Russian people are not yet ready for self-government was idle talk, because England was no more civilized when 500 years ago she first began to enjoy free institutions.

Thus ran this memorable discussion, and the measure was finally carried by a vote of nine against five. The question now arising is: will the Czar be able to carry out these reforms in the face of the tremendous opposition of the clergy and the large portion of the aristocracy? Will they permit him to do so, or, rather than see him succeed, have recourse to means which are not novel in Russia, and which the Nihilists used with terrible success to destroy the present Czar's father and predecessor?—The Day.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 8th '82. The question of compulsory retirement of army officers still occupies the time of the Senate. A Southern Senator—Butler, of South Carolina—gracefully proposed the other day to amend the bill so that General Sherman, Lieutenant General Sheridan, and two or three Major Generals, who have received the thanks of Congress, should not be subject to retirement until the age of seventy. This was not agreed to, but later an amendment was adopted making the age at which officers shall be retired sixty-four instead of sixty-two. Among the prominent officers to be retired under this bill is General Hancock, and in view of its probable passage considerable speculation has been indulged here as to whether he would accept the nomination for Governor of Pennsylvania, said to be contemplated by the Democratic managers of that State. The drift of opinion is that he would not, and according to the latest gossip Sam Randall is the stated candidate of the Keystone Democrats. New York and Pennsylvania politics attract a large share of attention here now, and all the indications point to hard struggles in those States this fall. In Pennsylvania, especially, it is understood that the whole power of the Administration and of the National Republican party will be brought to bear in behalf of the Cameron ticket, and that large sums of money will be raised. The contest for these two States and for the control of the next House of Representatives will be one of the hardest ever known outside of Presidential struggles.—The Republicans have strong hopes of making gains in the South sufficient to offset their probable losses in the North, and thereby maintain their majority. This explains in part the bitterness of the late contest and the desire of both parties to strengthen themselves in Southern districts. The Democrats say that a new crop of carpet-baggers will now spring up down South and that the old experience will to some extent be gone over again—at least so far as Congress is concerned.

Any one might suppose from the current of speeches made in the House on the recent contested election cases that the first, highest and most important duty devolved upon that body by the Constitution was the review of every election in every Congressional district in the Union. The Constitution does say that each House shall be the judge of the election and qualifications of its members, but that provision by no means excludes the idea that, at least as to the election and returns, the official certificate of a Governor or Secretary of State should be taken as final and conclusive. There may be, and of course always will be, political trickery and unjust partisanship at the polls and in the executive office; but the courts are always open to the candidate who may consider himself defrauded or aggrieved, and surely it is not to be supposed that the courts of the country are to do injustice. When the great National question of the Presidential election in 1876 was brought before the Electoral Commission that high court ruled invariably that it could not go behind the action and returns of the State authorities, but was bound to give them the fullest credence and authority, and that every matter of detail in the election itself, every allegation of fraud or irregularity was alimunde. That Latin word was very much used at that time, in derision by Democrats and in commendation by Republicans; but it was expressive and did good service to the Republic. It should be the motto for the two Houses and for their election committees. Everything outside and beyond the official certificate of the State authorities as to the person duly elected to a seat in Congress should be declared alimunde and beyond the competency of either House to go into. The contrary rule is an insult to the State, a cause of reproach and trouble to the House, and is more than likely to be the foundation of injustice to the district involved and to its chosen Representative. The political hostility engendered by the late proceedings in the House should be a warning of the impolicy and evil of entertaining and encouraging contested election cases. Mr. Kasson has brought forward a proposition to refer election cases to the Court of Claims were evidence could be taken and a report made in the interim between the election and the assembling of Congress, this report going no further than a determination of the prima facie right, for which the Governor's certificate is now accepted. The plan has so many objectionable features that it is not likely to be adopted.

DR. JOHN FRANKLIN GREY, a widely-known homeopathic physician, died at his residence in New York Monday evening, of senile gangrene, aged 78 years.

THE cremation of Garibaldi's body has been abandoned, for the present at least, on account of the want of proper appliances. His funeral took place on Thursday.

LANSING, MICH., June 2.—Yesterday when one of the employees of Forepaugh's circus went into the lion's cage he was attacked by the animal, which fastened its jaws in his arm. The beast was shot and its jaws pried open to release the unfortunate man.

An Interesting Fact. In France, all patent medicines must be endorsed by a official board of physicians before they can be sold. In lieu of such a law in America, the people have resolved themselves into a National committee which has endorsed Swayne's Ointment for allaying the itching accompanying the Piles, as the only reliable remedy in the market. Its a poor rule that won't work both ways.

THE DEERING TWINE SELF-BINDING HARVESTER. AN IMMENSE SUCCESS! 10,000 SOLD THIS SEASON!

BENJAMIN F. STEWART THE SOLE AGENT. Call and see the Greatest Machine of the day.

Perfectly simple in its construction; no mechanic need to run it; any farmer can work it. The Deering will bind grain not for a day, but for an entire harvest.

It is light draught and no weight on the horse's neck. IT IS EASY OF OPERATION —AND— MADE OF THE BEST MATERIAL

It cuts and binds entire crops without missing a solitary sheaf. It separates every sheaf and never chokes.

Other machines require three and four horses, and the tangle grain requires extra help with them. The sheafs do not come open in hauling in.

The Deering does its work so easy as to relieve both man and horse. Every satisfaction guaranteed or no sale, and every purchaser his own judge and jury.

THE FAMOUS ADRIANCE REAPER. This machine has been in active work in Pennsylvania for the past six years, and to-day stands at the head of its class. Be careful to examine its superior points. No gearing in the water wheel—a point which no other reaper can claim. Three speeds for the rake arms independent of the knife—running fast in light grain, medium in standing grain and slow in down grain. No other reaper has it—Reke head is placed far away from table and no grain can wind in it. Only four cog wheels, with long bearings and solid boxes. Platform can be folded for transportation on the road in five minutes—Sent folds instantly. Rake can be adjusted for either rake to sweep the table form every one to every sixth and all turned into rakes instantly without stopping. Angle Iron Finger Bar which can be adjusted to vary the length of cut from one to eighteen inches. I challenge any agent to produce a machine its equal in ease of handling, Lightness of Draft, Simplicity, Durability and Construction. Width of cut five to six feet, with extra down grain sails, rods, etc., furnished free of charge.

THE CELEBRATED ADRIANCE MOWER. This mower is now entering upon its Twenty-seventh year and old age improves it. It is manufactured at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., by Adriance, Platt & Co., who also build the world renowned Centric Reapers, Reapers and Mowers, combined and single. The manufacturers have not been compelled (as some of its competitors) to change its principles from year to year and as an expected result give the farmer an experimental machine. No "travle" in repairing with "glimble" joints, which talk well but works poorly, but in its place we give you a mower with the old reliable gear, using long shafts, procuring our first or slow motion from the bevel pinion, and the second or fast motion from the straight spur gear, equalling the wear and strengthening its cutting capacity—exactly the reverse from all other mowers. Also perfect Tilting Lever, with astonishing simplicity for raising and lowering points of guards, and when folded the bar lays flat across the frame, which every one will admit is the only safe way. Front cut which allows the operator to switch both machine and horse and no danger of being thrown in front of the knife.

AT BENJAMIN F. STEWART'S AGRICULTURAL HALL, AT THE OLD CENTRAL HOTEL BUILDING, The farmer can buy everything needed on the farm.

STEAM ENGINES, THRESHING MACHINES, SELF-BINDERS, PLOWS, all kinds of Farming Implements and every description of hardware; also OILS AND READY-MIXED PAINTS.

MT. ST. MARY'S COLLEGE.

A well merited Tribute to the Memory of the Very Rev. John McCloskey, D. D., late President of Mt. St. Mary's College. Emmitsburg, Md., June 10, 1882. [Communicated.]

On the 9th inst., Messrs. Mullin & Son of Baltimore erected a beautiful monument over the grave of the Very Rev. Doctor McCloskey. It is fourteen feet high, built of Italian marble, and is the most beautiful monument in the Mountain Cemetery.

This inscription, brief, simple and plain English as it is, is in keeping with the humble and modest life of Father John, the most devoted, zealous, charitable and self-sacrificing President and Pastor that ever presided over the old College and Mountain Congregation.

Many of the Alumni have expressed their desire of being present at the unveiling of his monument, but in deference to the modesty which would not even permit him to wear the insignia of his Doctorship during life, all ceremonies were dispensed with.
