WASHINGTON, D.C., June 29th '82.

Probably by the time this letter reaches you, or at least before many of your readers have seen it, the assassin Guiteau will have atoned, so far as his miserable life can atone, for the great crime of a year ago.

Efforts in his behalf, of whatever kind, have proved unavailing, and he must go to settle the account with the God he claims to serve. It is not vengeance or even full retribution, but it is tardy justice according to the law.

Several inventors of appliances for hanging came here with hopes of having their apparatus used, but in every case they are turned away. The fact is, that the scaffold now at the jail is sufficient for the purpose.

A man from Cleveland, Ohio, came to the jail lately with what is called an improved scaffold. His invention was examined, as a matter of accommodation to him, but was not found to be possessed of any superiority to the ordinary scaffold.

One of the recommendations to the Cleveland scaffold lies in the fact that the inventor was well known to Gen. Garfield. The rope to be used has been rigged up for the occasion. It is a fine piece of Manila, originally seven-eighths size, which has been stretched until it is now of but three fourths size.

The great conflict for existence goes on continually. The command to subdue the earth, demands the constant exertion of man's strength; it is required of him not only to make new conquests, but to guard against the deterioration of the work he has accomplished.

The greater the advances in this direction, the greater is the accumulation from his efforts, and the opportunity for recreation is enlarged. Hence at every season of the year, occasions arise when resting periods of longer or shorter duration, invite us to lay down our burden for awhile, and yield ourselves to careless mirth.

Lettings have been pouring in upon the warden of the jail for three months asking admission to witness the execution, and during the last two weeks an average of nearly one hundred such letters per day have been received, from all parts of the country.

its motions by the passage of any of the appropriation bills, but will have a leisurely debate on the Bankruptcy bill and various other measures. And when the Senate enters upon a debate no human being can foretell when it will end.

Another Iowa storm. Des Moines, Iowa, June 23.—Another terrible rain and wind storm passed over Iowa yesterday afternoon. The recently desolated town of Malcom, Pawnee county, which is still exposed to the elements through the damaged and roofless buildings, was visited for three hours by the storm.

The damage to the goods rescued from Saturday's storm is enormous, and will probably prove fatal. At Pleasantville, Marion county, the residence of P. Lyon was badly twisted, and props placed against it on the east side were driven through the walls.

A dispatch from Des Moines, June 25 says, that the Emmetsburg Palo Alto county was badly damaged.—The depot of the Burlington road was unroofed, several houses were blown down and various outhouses and three persons were killed. A man was thrown upon a hot stove and badly burned. A child was blown several rods, and is perhaps fatally injured.
