CONSOLATION.

Through the village, o'er the river to the breezes gladness flinging,
With the glory of their music, are the church-bells sweetly ringing.

Wearied, sad and disappointed, hope borne down by many a fear,
I, a stranger, pause and listen, as their gladness sound I hear.

In my heart sweet memories waken round me gleams a glory vast,
Looking all bright thoughts together of the future and the past.

Holy music, rich in blessing, is the gladness of the song,
That the breezes o'er the river from the church bells bear along.

In my heart hope reawakens, bringing strength and life and light,
Love to suffer, will to battle and to conquer for the right.

Though cast down, yet not despairing, glorious words I seem to hear,
Words to make me strong in daring, words to cast out doubt and fear.

In the belfry stand the ringers, while the silver song still swells,
But they cannot hear its beauty for the clashing of the bells—

Only others, not the workers, hear the glory of the strain;
While we bless them, they must labor, theirs the suffering, ours the gain.

This, perhaps, the noblest lesson that the holy music tells,
While across vale, wood and upland all its silver gladness swells.

Ye, who live, who love, who labor, bearing, daring all you can,
So you may, by God's good blessing, ease one suffering heart of man.

Help one brother to grow better; cause one sinful soul to see
God's great grace, and love, and patience, ever waiting, ever free—

Freer than His holy sunshine, or the blessing of the rain,
And the freest to those sad ones who are worn with doubt and pain.

Oh, take heart! perhaps no knowledge, no sweet thoughts for help will given,
May be granted for thy cheering in thy life on this side heaven.

Love thou on in earnest working, and precedence thou yet mayest see That some hearts whom thou hast soled have been blessing God for thee.

—Chambers Journal.

A YOUNG LADY'S SOLILOQUY.

[The following was published in Chambers Journal more than twenty years ago, yet many are still hopelessly waiting an answer to the question without making an effort to solve it in a practical way.]

Uselessly, aimlessly drifting through life,
What was I born for? For somebody's wife,
I'm told by my mother. Well, that being true,
Somebody keeps himself strangely from view.

And if I cannot find a more beautiful prize,
I believe I shall die in my unsettled state;
For though I'm not ugly—pray, what woman is?

You might easily find a more beautiful prize,
And then, as for temper and manners, 'tis plain,
He who seeks for perfection will seek here in vain.

Nay, in spite of these drawbacks, my head is perverse,
And I should not feel grateful "for better or worse."

To take the first booby who graciously came
And offered those treasures, his home and his name;
I think then my chances of marriage are small.

But why should I think of such chances at all?
My brothers are all of them younger than I.

Yet they thrive in the world, and why not let me try?
I know that in business I'm not an adept,
Because from such matters most strictly I'm kept.

But this is the question that troubles my mind,
Why am I not trained up to work of some kind?

Uselessly, aimlessly drifting through life,
Why should I wait to be somebody's wife?

A CHEERFUL temper, joined with innocence, will make beauty attractive, knowledge delightful, and wit god-natured. It will lighten sickness, poverty and affliction, convert ignorance into an amiable simplicity, and almost render deformity itself agreeable.

Talk not of fortune, talk not of fate,
We make our own troubles, however we prate;
This world would be honey, where now it is gall,
Were we only contented and merry withal.

Damming the Sacramento.

From the Century Magazine.

Away up under the shadows of Mount Shasta, plunging down to the south, foaming, shorting, thundering down the "and as if to shake the mountains loose, the new-born Sacramento River is as cold and clear and white as the eternal snows that feed his thousand gold-bearing tributaries.

Long ago, in the early days of California, when all the rivers were thought to be full of gold, it was considered a matter of course that the great Sacramento, far up at its source, was also gold-bearing, and that it only needed men and a little labor to "wing-dam" this stream some summer, and find a vein of gold almost as rich as the famous deposits of the Feather and the American rivers, which feed the Sacramento and drain the melting snows of the Sierras far away to the south.

And so it was in the spring of 18—, with this purpose in view, that a party of strangers in San Francisco hastily pooled their fortunes, consisting mainly of hope and muscle, and, ascending the Sacramento River to within thirty miles of its source, settled down there and began to cut it in two with a wing-dam.

Now, in one short and yet uncompleted summer, these ten men managed to do the amount of work which they had, it is hard to say. Winter was not far off at the furthest in this altitude, but then, how a man working for himself will strike out with the thought constantly before him that the very next blow of his pick may mean to him wife, children, father, mother, home, or what is the same thing, gold that would pave the road leading back to these and all else dear to man!

Late one evening, as the bravos, hairy, half-robed miners still wrestled with the bowlders down in the bed of the river, which as yet had yielded no sign of its secrets, a pale, slim boy stood on the bank and inquired, in a helpless way and with a weak, tired voice, if they did not want "to hire help."

The men stopped, looked up, then at each other, then at the boy above them on the bank; and then roared with laughter.

"Hire help! Look here, are you the help?" howled the strongest of them, called "Samson."

"Yes, sir."

Again the ragged men leaned on their picks and shovels, lifted up their heads, and roared.

"Say, are you an orphan?" laughed "Colonel Lasses," turning a quid.

"We're all orphans here, and a long ways from home. Are you an orphan and a long ways from home?"

"No, sir," piped the tired boy, "I am not an orphan; but I am a long ways from home."

"Well, you better start home, then. It will be dark by the time you get there, I guess. From the Flat, eh?"

"From the Flat, sir? Where is that?"

"Why, Portuguese Flat," claimed in a tall fellow, with a touch of gentleness in his voice. "It's four miles down, the only mining camp on this end of the river. Where did you come from, my kid, that you didn't know that, eh?"

"Why, sir, I came from the other way—down from Oregon."

Some of the men caught their breath and looked at each other, and others shook their heads. But the very tall and ragged one who was called "Nut Crackers" leaved soberly aside on his pick.

At last one of the men, a sprightly, handsome young fellow called Timothy, threw down his long-handled shovel and, coming up out of the mine, said:

"Well, my kid, you may not be an orphan, but you're a mighty long ways from home; about a thousand miles, I guess. And as you can't get back there to-night, you'd better bunk with us—eh, boys?"

"Bet your boots!" cheerily cried Nut Crackers at his side, as he twirled a finger playfully through the boy's yellow hair.

A heavy-booted, half bear creature, that came crawling out of the mine after his younger partners, gunted out a qualified assent, and the party went slowly stringing out toward the brush shanty of the company, which stood a little way back from the foaming river. Others followed, for the sun was down and it was time to "knock off."

The boy was weary and altogether wretched. He was tall and pale and thin, like a weed that has grown in shadow, and was not likely to be an addition to the working force of the mine; but he was reserved and respectful, and so eager to help about the camp in bringing wood and water, and so careful not to be in the way, that he was tolerated until after the tired men had had their suppers. And then when they had filled their pipes, and had thrown themselves about the roaring and sweet-smelling fire of yew and juniper, he was made to feel quite at home, and soon fell so soundly asleep by the fire that he knew nothing more till the sun came down over the mountains, next morning, and looked him full in the face and awakened him.

It was Nut Crackers' "cook-week," and he had left a tin cup full of coffee hot by the fire, where the boy still lay. With an air of desperation, he was now, down on his knees, with his sleeves rolled up, before a tub full of boiling hot water and obstinately greasy tin plates. He made an experimental dive with his big fist into the boiling water, and then suddenly leaped up, and hopping high on his naked heels, launched into a series of incoherent oaths, which was timidly interrupted by the boy.

"Let me wash 'em for you, please," "You?" said Nut Crackers, savagely, in an effort to vent some of his irritation on the new comer.

"Yes, as soon as I wash my hands."

"You'd better drink your coffee, and get some color in your face first!"

"I will. But, sir, I want to wash the dishes for you. I know how. I always washed the dishes for mother at home when she was sick."

Nut Crackers stopped swearing. Pretty soon he came up to the boy, who was washing his hands and face in the little stream that slid through the catap, and, snapping his fingers, which were as red as boiled craw fish, said:

"Kid, have you got a mother and do you? But bah! Yes, wash 'em. It's not a man's place to wash dishes. Wash 'em and clean up about camp. Got no money to pay you; we're all on the verge. But you clean up about here, and stay 'round for grub; time enough to get down to the flat after beans."

And with this he unrolled his sleeves and hobbled off down to the mine, leaving the boy in charge of the few blankets, brushbuds, camp-kettles, pans, and old boots which made up the tangible fortune of the "Sacramento Wing Dam Company."

When the tired men came up to dinner that day, they found such a change for the better that they persuaded the boy to stay. True, they had no money, even for themselves; but when they "struck it," and strike it they must the very next week—he should be paid, and paid well. And with this understanding they went back to their work that afternoon, leaving behind them a boy with a lighter heart than he had borne for half a year.

WE are not laborers only. Life is more than work and drudgery. The world contains, besides bodies and brains, precious souls, capable of joy, love, peace, sympathy and a sense of the beautiful.

Who blesses others in his daily deeds, Will find the healing that his spirit needs: For every flower in others' pathway thrown,

Confers its fragrant beauty on our own.

Let the poor sufferers from female complaints take courage and rejoice that a painless remedy has been found. We refer to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is prepared at 228 Western Avenue, Lynn, Mass. Send to Mrs. Pinkham for pamphlets.

How Long Man may Live.

It was Professor Hufeland's opinion that the limit of possible human life might be set at two hundred years. This is on the general principle that the life of a creature is eight times the years of its period of growth. That which is quickly formed perishes, and the earlier complete development is reached the sooner bodily decay. More women reach old age than men, but more men attain remarkable longevity than women. Some animals grow to be very old. Horned animals live shorter lives than those without horns, fierce longer than timid, and amphibious longer than those which inhabit the air. The voracious pike exists, it is said, to an age of one hundred and fifty years; the turtle is good for a hundred years or more; and among birds, the golden eagle is known to have lived nearly two hundred years, while the sly and sombre crow reaches the venerable age of a century. Passing up in the scale of life to man, and skipping the patriarchs, we find many recorded instances of longevity among the classic Greeks and Romans. Pliny notes that in the reign of the Emperor Vespasian, in the year 76, there were one hundred and twenty-four men living in the limited area between the Apennines and the Po of one hundred years and upward, three of whom were one hundred and forty and four over one hundred and thirty-five. Cicero's wife lived to the age of one hundred and three, and the Roman actress Luccia played in public as late as her one hundred and twelfth year.

Coming down to more recent times—the most notable authentic instance of great age is that of Henry Jenkins, of Yorkshire, England, who died in 1670, one hundred and sixty-nine years old. He was a fisherman and at the age of one hundred easily swam across rapid rivers. Another historic case is that of Thomas Parr, Shropshire, a day laborer, who lived to the age of one hundred and fifty-two years. When more than one hundred and twenty he married his second wife, and till one hundred and thirty he could swing the scythe and wield the flail with the best of his fellow-laborers. In his one hundred and fifty-second year Parr went up to London to exhibit himself to the king. It proved an unlucky visit, for violating the abstinence habit of a century and a half, the old man feasted so freely on the royal victuals that he soon died, merely of a phthorax. On examination his internal organs proved to be in excellent condition, and there was no reason why he should not have lived much longer. save for this unfortunate taste of royal hospitality. Prof. Hufeland's roll of centenarians includes many more remarkable cases among them that of Mittlestedt, a Prussian soldier, who served sixty-seven years under both Fredericks, fighting many battles and enduring much hard campaigning, and who, after all this, married successively three wives, the last when he was one hundred and ten, only two years before his death.—Springfield Republican.

How Sunstroke can be Cured.

For an effective cure for sunstroke the following is especially commended:—Remove the patient to a shaded spot at once. Place the body in a sitting posture, the back against a wall, with the feet and legs resting upon the sidewalk and extended in front of the body. Get ice water and a bottle of some strong essence of ginger. Pour the ice water over the head, copiously; never mind the clothes. Then pour two or three table-spoonfuls of ginger in about half a tumbler of water and make the patient swallow it quickly. Keep the head cool by using a little of the ice water, and in case there is not much of a glow upon the body give more ginger. If the directions are followed there will be no occasion for the services of an undertaker. Ginger is far the best to use, but where it cannot be had quickly two or three good drinks of brandy will answer.—Boston Herald.

A KIND "No" is more agreeable than a rough "Yes."

A Ship's "Log."

The speed of vessels is approximately determined by the use of the log and log line. The log is a triangular, or quadrangular, piece of wood about a quarter of an inch thick, so balanced by means of a plate of lead as to swim perpendicularly in the water, with about two-thirds of it under the water. The log line is a small cord, the end of which—divided into three, so that the wood hangs from the cord as a scale pan from a balance-beam—is fastened to the log, while the other is wound round a reel on the ship. The log, thus poised, keeps its place in the water, while the line is unwound from the reel as the ship moves through the water, and the length of the line unwound in a given time gives the rate of the ship's sailing. This is calculated by knots made on the line at certain distances, while the time is measured by a sand glass of a certain number of

CANICULAR, OR DOG DAYS.

According to the Almanacs, the Dog Days commenced on the 13th inst., and will end on the 27th of August. Sirius, or the Dog Star, the brightest of all the stars, is situated in the Great Dog constellation, and very early came to be recognized as the ruling star of this period, which extends forty days before and twenty after the rising of the star. It was ignorantly supposed to be the occasion, of the extreme heat, and the diseases incident to this season of the year.

It so happened that the time of the rising through a very long period coincided with the hottest season of the year; but the old astronomers were ignorant of the fact, that latitude determines the time when the star rises, and that owing to the peculiar inclination of the earth in its rotation, the date is necessarily subject to a constant variation, which in time will entirely reserve the present order.

The time of the dog-days among the ancient Romans and Egyptians included the period of the most luxuriant growth of vegetation, and the over-flowing of the Nile, when decomposition naturally tended to produce a vitiated state of the atmosphere, which developed the diseases attributed to the influences of the star.

The force of prejudice, and the results of superstitious ideas, have always perpetuated themselves through the ages, and it is well known that the notions which have once obtained influence, over our education, are found to exert their power even after we come to understand their falsity.

It is even thus, that many undefined notions still exist in regard to this time of the year.

Thus for example, many a fond parent is sorely exercised now, lest the child may wander off, and disport himself in swimming in the waters, to the imminent danger of being attacked with boils, or other grievous ailments, or be liable to be bitten of dogs, it being erroneously held that hydrophobia is more likely to occur now than at other times. The housewife too, blames the season, instead of her lack of prudential care, as being the cause of the poor quality of her dairy productions.

And many equally ridiculous notions have current belief, which have been handed down from the ages when astronomical science was in its infancy, and when considerations of hygienic investigation were unknown and the public health and individual comfort, and domestic conveniences as now known, were matters of fortuitous moment.

It concerns us to comprehend that as intelligent beings, liable to the changes of times and seasons, the articles of food which may give us health and strength and promote our well-being in the month of January, are not properly, the ones for July; and that the clothing which protects us in winter is superfluous when the sun shines upon us in a vertical direction, that the due adjustment of our habits of life and exercise must be adapted to present surroundings. Science truly has accomplished wonderful results in promoting health and comfort. But to reduce this knowledge to practice is at all times needed to make these results useful.

Good judgment, properly exercised, is at all times essential to personal health, which is the basis of public prosperity.

Whilst the physical changes in nature determine natural development, our bodies as parts of the grand work, need to be governed and controlled to work in consonance with the laws that regulate the whole economy.

It was fondly thought that with the vindication of the law, the lately executed assassin of Garfield, would pass into the record of memorable criminals. But it seems that the foulest deed in history, is to be kept before the public attention, in one form or another. As with the doctor's wrangle over the treatment of the victim, so now they are at it again over the autopsy of the accursed assassin.

It was recently announced at Hamilton College that the institution had received a gift of $50,000, for the erection of a Memorial Scientific Hall, to bear the donor's name, which for the present is withheld.

THE DRAMA OF THE NILE.

The announcement made yesterday by Admiral Seymour to the Governor of Alexandria that at an early hour of to-day the bombardment of the city would begin is the long-expected conclusion of a series of political events made possible only by the procrastinating policy of the representatives in Egypt of France and England. Down to September last the country was at peace, and Egypt was prosperous beyond what had been known for many a century. Under Anglo-French control the condition of the peasantry was being rapidly improved—schools were being opened, justice was at length somewhat fairly administered, the administration was intelligent and honest, the Khedive was respected, the interest on public debt was promptly met, and there was a surplus in the Egyptian treasury. But the burden imposed upon the people by that debt had long been a source of discontent, and at the date mentioned Arabi Bey, a colonel of the Egyptian army, sprung from the fellah or peasant—honest, bold, and possessed of fine talent for intrigue, appeared before the Khedive's palace suddenly at the head of a brigade of mutinous troops, and demanded and obtained, by a show of rebellious force, certain concessions looking to the advancement in power of himself and co-conspirators. From that moment anarchy grew apace. Arabi, at the instigation, it is asserted, of certain philanthropic English theists in politics, pushed his claims for national independence rapidly from stage to stage of revolution; until now the control is virtually at an end, the authority of the Khedive is nil, and even the maintenance of order depends upon the will solely of the sworn enemy of European influence. Social disorganization and commercial collapse follow the success of an upstart dictator, and whatever interests England possesses in Egypt are placed in extreme jeopardy. Having attempted and accomplished the expulsion of foreigners from the land of the Nile, it remains to be seen what justification for his hardness is to be found in his courage, resources and talent for war.—Baltimore Sun, 11th inst.

The same paper of Wednesday, says: The British fleet, under Admiral Seymour, attacked the Egyptian fortifications at Alexandria, at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning. By noon most of the Egyptian batteries had been silenced and the bombardment practically ceased. The Egyptians fought with some persistence till their guns were dismounted by the terrific fire from the fleet. The British loss was 5 killed and 27 wounded. At the last advices the Egyptian commander was still holding out, and the object of the bombardment had not been accomplished. Admiral Seymour expected to resume the attack this morning. Turkey protests against the action of England in beginning hostilities, and has advised France that she will send no troops to Egypt.

On Wednesday the British fleet threw a few shells into Alexandria, and there was a cessation of hostilities. A flag of truce, to gain time as is supposed, resulted in nothing. Extensive fires raged in the city.

The Sun's summary for Thursday, says: Admiral Seymour's reconnoitering parties, sent ashore yesterday to ascertain the situation of affairs in Alexandria, found the city in flames, looted and desolate. Arabi Pasha had disappeared, taking with him, it seems, the bulk of the population. A few miles out from the city he divided his forces, part moving along the line of the railroad toward Cairo, but the larger part taking a more easterly course toward Rosetta, as if intending there to meet the English on landing their infantry from the Bay of Atoukir. But nothing is really known of the rebel's whereabouts or intentions. It is reported that part of the English fleet has gone to Port Said. This, if true, would imply that the Suez canal is to be protected. Unspeakable atrocities in Alexandria are reported, but the accounts betray exaggeration. The Khedive and Dervish Pasha are known to be safe. Now that all is over, what has been gained? England is disembarassed of her troublesome ally, France. The situation is clearer, and the attitude of European cabinets is better known. But the Constantinople conference has resumed its sittings, and it remains to be determined what power is to take the next step—land troops, pursue Arabi Pasha and restore the status quo.

The earnings of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company last month footed up over $4,000,000.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent]

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 13th '82

To judge from the expressions of disgust coming from members of Congress, anent the slow motions of the Senate in preparing for adjournment, one would naturally suppose that very few of the honorable gentlemen had come here from choice. They all seem to have a bad case of homesickness, and nearly every one I have met for several days past has insisted that unless Congress adjourned in a week he would go home anyhow, and stay there. The chief reason for this haste to leave is the anxiety in the Congressional mind about a renomination. In nine cases out of ten the Representative comes here to represent his own interests a great deal more than he does those of his district, and when his hold on the place is in jeopardy his heart is "over the sea" and there is a far away look in his eyes—There ought to be a rearrangement of the sessions, or the time for holding elections, so that the Congressional campaign would come in the year of the short session, ending the 4th of March. Then the incumbents could go home to look after "fences" without interfering with their duties. If the Senate adhered to its programme of amendments to Mr. Kelley's tax bill, opening the door of discussion as wide as that question must, there would be a sick lot of Representatives fanning themselves in the south wing of the Capitol.

It is not true that Congressmen become tired of Washington life per se because, when personal interests do not draw them away, the great majority are loth to leave the Capital, a fact which is attested by the large number who remain here as lobbyists and claim agents after their terms expire. There is spice and variety enough here to suit the most fastidious or the most depraved—for the quiet man who delights in his books, his letters, or his Congressional work, or the wild, roving fellow who would rather view nature through the bottom of a glass than listen to the most logical argument on National affairs, who take especial delight in an occasional game of draw poker, or find solace in the company of the fair quills society. To be sure, it is a trifle dull during the summer, and the weather is perhaps a few degrees warmer than in some places, but there is life here all the same, and it costs just as much to "see the elephant" as it does in Gotham. During the session of Congress the appearance and character of the people are constantly changing. To day we have the solid business men of the Quaker City, looking after their harbor appropriation bill; to morrow the finances of New York; the following day the rushing, pushing men of the West, and then, as an offset, are the sturdy men of the rural districts, who have a few hours for gazing in awful surprise at the Capitol, the Treasury building, the White House, and the Washington Monument. You can come to Washington, spend a very pleasant time and return with the most agreeable recollections of the visit, or you can so deport yourself as to go home a wiser but sadder man than you came. During the summer, when unconfinement by the routine of legislation, I shall give you something about the attractions of Washington—the public buildings and institutions here in which people everywhere are interested.

Apropos of a recent talk with Secretary Teller about our Indian policy I noticed an incident at the Star-route trial a day or two since. One of the Western witnesses stated in the course of his testimony that Indians from the agencies had killed drivers and run off stock on the route between Bismarck and Fort Keogh. "Do you mean friendly Indians?" inquired two able lawyers in one breath. "That's what they are called," replied the frontiersman. The surprise expressed by these atorneys is natural and easily accounted for. They are like ninety-nine one hundredths of the people of the East, in a state of profound ignorance of the Indian problem. These gentlemen are both men of ability, educated men of the world, standing high in their profession. No doubt they think, if they ever take the trouble to think about the matter at all, that the roseate pictures drawn by the Indian agents are true, and that the Indians are abused individuals, who spend most of their time in praying for the wicked whites. But they don't. On the contrary, they busy themselves, between free meals at the Government's expense, in contriving plans where by they may increase their stock of horse hair and human hair.

Here is an incident that points a moral to the Government's idiotic Indian policy: In the summer of 1870 Captain Rafferty of the Sixth cavalry went on an Indian scout from Fort Richardson, Texas. He struck a small band of braves and killed three of them. One of them was a big Indian—heap big chief. He had on him a huge silver medal, granted, if I recollect aright, by President Van Buren. It bore on one side the figures of a white man and an Indian with hands clasped in friendly grasp. On the obverse side was an inscription which I have forgotten. These Indians did not belong to a wild tribe, but to the agency at Fort Still, Indian Territory. The chief had on his person a pass signed by the Indian agent in charge of his tribe, certifying that he was a "good" Indian, peaceable and quiet, and granting him permission to go on a hunt. He went on a hunt. But it was a hunt for horses and scalps in Texas! He also had bread tickets on his person, showing that he could appreciate the light bread of civilization, and bought it whenever he had money. This incident is only one out of thousands. The Indians cajole their tender-hearted, soft-headed agents into giving them a pass to go hunting. They go. And some white men are killed and their horses and other stock run off. But the poor Indian had their "hunt!" Oh! the poor creatures. Your correspondent will leave in a few days for the far west, and will have a chance to tell you something more about the noble red man of the forest, unless some friendly red-skins lifts his scalp. It is gratifying to know that the present Secretary of the Interior understands the Indian question in its practical bearings.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

The famous Gen. Skobelev died at Moscow on the 7th inst.

The coronation of the Czar has been postponed until 1883.

Mrs. Edwin A. Newton, sister of Rev. Dr. Tyng, of New York, died at Pittsfield, Mass., Sunday night, aged eighty six years.

John W. Garrett has offered fifty thousand dollars to the Government for the Harper's Ferry property, but the Government can't see it.

Seven hundred and sixty new-lays and one newgirl partook of the dinner given by Geo. W. Childs in Fairmont Park, Philadelphia, one day last week.

In the middle of June the snow lay thick at Balmoral, Scotland, and the cold was intense. Snow also fell in Fifehire and in Norfolk, England.

On Monday Chas. Stiles, member of the Chicago Board of Trade, was murdered at the Palmer House by his mistress, Rosa Sterling. Palmer led a fast life.

A colored man, while plunging near Opelousas, La., a few days since, struck a ten-gallon jar, filled with Spanish silver coins of date of 1779. The amount is estimated at $8,000 to $10,000.

LEPROSY FROM CHINESE CIGARETTES.—Leprosy, says a physician of San Francisco, has not a few victims among the whites. Especially it is revealing itself about the lips and torques of boys who smoke cheap cigarettes made by Chinese lepers.

Two Indiana farmers quarrelled about a wrench, and went to law. The costs of court and counsel fees have reached $1,700, both litigants have mortgaged their property to raise the money, and the case is continued.

It is as much of a mistake to hatch your silkworms before you have food for them as to court your chickens before they are hatched. The attempt at silkworm culture in Champagne, Ill., has proved a total failure because the worms came out of their eggs before the osage, on which they were to live, had come up.

THERE is a good deal of excitement in Philadelphia over the supposed poisoning of the Schuylkill river. The water is of a dark greenish color, and thousands of dead fish are lying along the banks and floating in the river. Residents along the river in the vicinity of Pottstown complain of the sickening stench, and several persons are reported to have been made ill thereby. The engineer of the Philadelphia water-works has investigated the matter and says that the water is charged with sulphurous acid, which comes from abandoned coal mines that are being pumped out. Nearly all the water used in Philadelphia is drawn from the Schuylkill.

BISHOP EIDER, coadjutor of Archbishop Purcell, diocese of Cincinnati, in accordance with a Papal brief received a few days ago, has convened a meeting of the suffragan bishops of the province of Cincinnati to elect a bishop for the newly-created See of Grand Rapids, Michigan. There are nine bishops in the province. The meeting will take place this week, and will be entirely private.

THE TARIFF COMMISSION.—The Senate in executive session has confirmed the following nominations: Tariff Commissioners—John L. Hayes of Massachusetts, chairman; Henry W. Oliver, of Pennsylvania; Jacob A. Amblor, of Ohio; Robert P. Porter, of the District of Columbia; John W. H. Underwood, of Georgia; Duncan F. Kenner, of Louisiana; Alexander R. Boteler, of West Virginia; William H. McMahon, of New York.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Lieut. J. W. Danenhower has suggested to the Secretary of the Navy that the bodies of the victims of the Jeanette expedition should be brought home if possible and given to the friends of the deceased for burial. Secretary Chandler has appointed Capt. Walker and English, of the Navy, and Surgeon-General Wales, a committee to report upon the expediency of the project.

RIO JANEIRO, May 24.—From the River Plate comes the news of the murder of the French explorer, Dr. Jules Crevaux, and all his party—seventeen in all—by the Obah Indians of the Pileomayo, in Bolivia. Dr. Crevaux, after exploring the northern tributaries of the Amazon, was engaged in exploring the southern ones and the northern ones of the River Plate. He was ascending the Pileomayo to its source when cut off.

THE DANGER OF THE STOCK MARKET.—A man may be incredulous enough to risk his money in the fickle mysteries of a mercurial stock market but when he gets the Itching Piles, he goes straight for Dr. Swayne's Ointment. Unlike the Bulls and Bears of the Stock Exchange, who clean you out of hard earned cash, it returns your money with interest, in the way of allaying the intense itching and insuring sweet repose. ju17

THE DEERING

TWINE SELF-BINDING HARVESTER.

AN IMMENSE SUCCESS! 10,000 SOLD THIS SEASON!

BENJAMIN F. STEWART

THE SOLE AGENT.

Call and see the Greatest Machine of the day. Perfectly simple in its construction; no mechanic needed to run it; any farmer can work it.

The Deering will bind grain not for a day, but for an entire harvest. It is light draught and no weight on the horse's neck.

IT IS EASY OF OPERATION

—AND—
MADE OF THE BEST MATERIAL

It cuts and binds entire crops without missing a solitary sheaf. It separates every sheaf and never chokes.

Other machines require three and four horses, and in a single grain require extra help with them.

The sheaf does not come open in hauling in. The Deering does its work so easy as to relieve both man and horse.

Every satisfaction guaranteed or no sale, and every purchaser his own judge and jury.

The Famous ADRIANCE REAPER.

This machine has been in active work in Pennsylvania for the past six years, and to-day stands at the head of its class. Be careful to examine its superior points. No gearing in the master wheel—a point which no other reaper can claim. Three speeds for the reaper, and as an independent of the knife—running fast in light grain, medium in standing grain and slow in down grain. No other reaper has it. Reel head is placed far away from table and no grain can wind in it. Only four cog wheels, with long bearings on three boxes. Platform can be tilted for transportation on the road in five minutes. Seat folds instantly. Rakes can be adjusted for either rake to sweep the table form every one to every sixth and all turned into rakes instantly without stopping. Angle Iron Finger Bar which can be adjusted to your mind as an expected result give the farmer an experimental machine. No "rattle trap" gearing with "gimble" joints, which talks well but works poorly, but in its place we give you a mower with the old reliable gear, using long shafts, procuring our first and slow motion from the bevel pinion, and the second or fast motion from the straight spur pinion equalizing the wear and strengthening its cutting capacity—exactly the reverse from all other mowers. Also perfect Tilling Lever, with astonishingly simple and perfect and low spring points of guards, and when folded the bar lays flat across the frame, which every one will admit is the only safe way. Front cut which allows the operator to watch both machine and horses and no danger of being thrown in front of the knife.

THE CELEBRATED ADRIANCE MOWER.

This mower is now entering upon its twenty-seventh year and old mowers covet it. It is manufactured at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., by Adriance, Platt & Co., who also build the world renowned GEMME BECKEY REAPER and MOWER, combined and single. The manufacturers have not been compelled (as some of its competitors) to change its principles from year to year and as an expected result give the farmer an experimental machine. No "rattle trap" gearing with "gimble" joints, which talks well but works poorly, but in its place we give you a mower with the old reliable gear, using long shafts, procuring our first and slow motion from the bevel pinion, and the second or fast motion from the straight spur pinion equalizing the wear and strengthening its cutting capacity—exactly the reverse from all other mowers. Also perfect Tilling Lever, with astonishingly simple and perfect and low spring points of guards, and when folded the bar lays flat across the frame, which every one will admit is the only safe way. Struck by a Falling Limb.
Tuesday afternoon last during the heavy prevailing wind storm a limb was broken from the large sycamore tree shading the spring in the farm recently purchased by Mr. Robert J. Shafer, and tumbled by Mr. Jacob Ridenour and in falling struck the youngest daughter of Mr. Ridenour on the head, knocking her to the ground inflicting a severe wound.
—Boonsboro Times.
Miss ELIZA ROSS, daughter of Hon.
William J. Ross, of Frederick, was stricken with paralysis at 10 o'clock on July 8th and died at 3 that afternoon.
She had attained her 40th year. She was quite wealthy and with the late Miss Eleanor Potts, was the dispenser of unnumbered charities to the deserving poor of this city. Her funeral took place on Tuesday evening last at Mount Olivet Cemetery.—Examiner.
A PETITION has been presented to our town Commissioners by many of the tax-payers, praying that the rate of taxation be reduced from the proposed amount, and that the streets be not paved as proposed, that the roughness and constant rumble may be avoided. There may be two sides to these questions, we trust wise counsels may prevail. The general state of the village is highly commendable.
On the 11th inst., John Stahl, traveling agent for J. H. Miller, a patent medicine dealer of Somerset, Pa., was driving along the road near Addison, Pa., and did not notice a party of men filling trees and they did not see him. He passed an immense tree just as it fell and was caught by it, the spreading branches completely covering the horse and buggy. The choppers hastened to the spot to find Stahl dead, the horse dying and the buggy demolished. Stahl was between 65 and 70 years of age.
The Results of Necessity.
What the ancients suffered for the want of knowledge in medical science can only be appreciated by contrasting the vast amount of suffering cured and pain alleviated in modern times, by the use of Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases. Its introduction was characterized by the necessary withdrawal of a score or more of illusive, quick nostrums, whose evil effects have left living monuments to denounce them. Thus is exemplified the proverb, Necessity is the mother of Invention. July 7
In the matter of the legal qualification of the Burgess of Emmitsburg, about which our correspondent "CITIZEN" wrote, last week, we are well informed that the Burgess had at one time conveyed a property of his, for good and sufficient considerations, to his wife, but that property was subsequently sold, and the one he now holds is in his sole possession, and thus the question arose.
The town commissioners should have settled the query, without allowing it to become a matter of public enquiry.
The Registration.
Up to noon of to-day (Friday), as we are about to "make up" this issue, the Registrar for this District has recorded 118 names. The lists heretofore have contained 775 names. The progress thus far (44 days), illustrates the wisdom of doing the work in harvest time, and may in the end prove a disfranchisement, rather than the securing of the right of the electors to vote. It does not argue well, either, for the August sitting. The politicians will have to move up now in the interest of the dear people.
Deceased.
On Saturday, July 11th the remains of Miss Nancy Bowden, who died very suddenly in Bedford, arrived at this place.
The corpse was taken to the residence of Mr. S. P. Stoner, and the following morning was interred in the Reformed burying-ground. Deceased was a sister of Mrs. S. P. Stoner, of this place, and of Mr. Frank Bowden, of Bedford, with whom she lived, and a former resident of Waynesboro. She was a very estimable lady and was in the 88th year of her age.
—Keystone Gazette.

ALTHOUGH but a few hours will remain from the time we go to press, till the registration of voters for this month closes, we earnestly recommend every voter to be registered at once. No one can vote who fails to get his name on the books. The registrar it is true will sit again from Monday to Saturday, August 14 to 19 inclusive; but there should be no delay in a matter so important, then don't put it off.
New School Houses.
The County Commissioners met at their office, in this city, on Monday last and awarded contracts for the building of new school houses to the following persons at the places named: At Peters-ville, for colored children, to Singleton Albaugh; at Red Hill, in Buckeystown
District, to Singleton Albaugh; at Loy's
in Craggstown District, to Jos. A.
Weddle; at Ladysburg, in Johnsville
District, to George C. Gardner; at Hazel Bottom, in Jackson District, to Isaiah Moser; at Mount Carmel, in New Market District, to James H. King; at Forrest's, in Catocin District, to H.
Clay Hays. The houses in this city,
Fairview, in this district, and Unionville,
in Linganore District, were not awarded for want of satisfactory bids. Another opportunity will be offered on these—Examiner.

NOTICE TO FARMERS AND OWNERS OF PRIVATE RESIDENCES.—The safest and best company in which Farmers and owners of Private Residences can insure their Property, is the Time-Tried and Fire-Tested Agricultural Insurance Company. It insures nothing but private Residences and Farm Property. In the last 27 years it has not had a loss of over $5,000, in one fire, and cannot be affected by sweeping conflagrations, as its risks are all detached. It insures against damage by Lightning, whether fire ensues or not, and insures Live Stock against being killed by Lightning any where on the farm. The Agricultural Insurance Co., has the largest capital, and the strongest and largest company, doing an exclusive Dwelling Business in the United States, if not in the world,
and is now issuing 50,000 Policies a year.

Robbery.
Last Saturday afternoon, whilst Mr.
Peter E. Bussard, living on the Nekirk farm, about two miles north of town,
was at work in a corn field some distance from the dwelling, Mrs. Bussard and the young lady living with her also left home to pick some cherries. On the return of the ladies to the house some time afterward, Mrs. Bussard took a seat on the porch and the young lady entered one of the rooms, where she confronted a colored man who was just coming out of another room. The intruder seemed as badly frightened as the young lady, and rushing out past her and Mrs. Bussard, ran rapidly towards this place. The ladies called Mr. Bussard and he went in pursuit of the fellow, but when near town lost the track of him. An examination revealed the fact that the thief
had carried off a pocket-book belonging to Mrs. B., which contained a little over $5. Mr. Bussard had the money in the house with which to pay off his harvest hands, and it is altogether likely that if the ladies had not surprised the thief as soon as they did he would have gotten away with that also.—Valley Register.

Good Suggestions.
COMMUNICATED.
MR. EDITOR.—As the question with regard to the right of the present Burgess to hold the office, seems to be definitely settled, it would be well for him to prove his fitness for the position, by a vigilant oversight of every part of the town, in view of securing cleanliness and health. As a general thing we are a model community as regards cleanliness and order, but if our respected chief magistrate will take an occasional stroll,
in the light of day, through our back alleys, he will see more than one place in which the seeds of disease will surely germinate, unless prompt measures be taken to remedy the evil, before the malign influences which belong peculiarly to this season of the year, have had time to do their work. The drains from sinks, barnyards, &c., are in several places, in such bad condition as to be positively offensive, and because they are out of the way and seldom seen even by the owners of the property, remain unnoticed, therefore it is the duty of the Burgess to leave no corner unvisited,
and allow no condition of things to exist that is likely to imperil the health of the community.
Malarial diseases, which are the scourge of so many localities, do not,
and cannot trouble us, if we exercise proper vigilance. Whilst on this subject it would not be out of place to ask,
why the recent notice to the citizens
about throwing rubbish, &c., in the alleys, was not printed and posted conspicuously about the town, where everyone could see it and would be likely to read it, instead of being written on little pieces of paper not likely to attract any attention or be read at all? If economy was the motive for such a course, it is poor economy, and will be likely to have no other effect than to make the Burgess
as well as the other town authorities, supremely ridiculous. CITIZEN.

MALARIA, Chills and Fever, and bilious attacks positively cured with Emory's Standard Cure Pills—an infallible remedy: never fail to cure the most obstinate, long-standing cases where Quinine and all other remedies had failed.
They are prepared expressly for malarial attacks, in double boxes, two kinds of Pills, containing a strong cathartic
and a chill breaker, sugar-coated; contain no Quinine or Mercury, causing no griping or purging; they are mild and effective, certain in their action and harmless in all cases; they effectually cleanse the system and give new life and tone to the body. As a household remedy they are unequalled. For Liver Complaint their equal is not known; one box will have a wonderful effect on the worst case. They are used and prescribed by Physicians, and sold by Druggists everywhere, or sent by mail, 25 and 50 cent boxes. Emory's Little Cathartic Pills, best ever made, only 15 cents.—

The Well a Success.
The artisan well sunk by Mr. Miller,
of Baltimore, for the Gettysburg Water Company, on East Cemetery Hill proves a success. After reaching a depth of one hundred feet, mainly through granite rock, a tea hours' test was made last Friday, and with a 2 1/2 inch pump from 32 to 48 gallons of water were thrown per minute, according to the amount of steam used. This, in the opinion of the Company, will be sufficient to supply the town for years to come, and should time
develop the need for more, another well can be sunk, and water found without question. This last experiment adds force to the theory inspired by the success attending the sinking of the two common wells in the old and new cemeteries, that the whole hill is full of water at any depth below forty feet. The water pumped from the artisan well is exceedingly clear and bright, and evidently of the same excellent quality that the springs at the foot of the hill have so long supplied a portion of Gettysburg with.
The Company will immediately enter upon preparations to build a reservoir
at the well, from which point the natural flow is expected to reach to tops of the houses on the highest point of town
—Baltimore street "hill." The property of erecting a large reservoir must be apparent to all, and the "good luck"
the Company has had in securing water at such comparatively small cost will enable it to invest more than was originally contemplated for keeping a large supply against emergencies. Every consideration demands that the new water works
be first class.—Compter.
