ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity, send free of charge, a full and complete description of his condition, and the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the adver-tiser's experience can do so by addressing him in perfect confidence. JOHN B. OGDEN, May 20-1y 42 Cedar St., New York.

GROWING OLD.

Softly, Oh, softly, the years have swept by thee, Touching thee lightly with tenderest care; Sorrow and death they have often brought nigh thee, Yet they have left thee but beauty to wear.

Growing old gracefully, Gracefully fair.
Far from the storms that are lashing the ocean,
Nearer each day to the pleasant home Home-light;

Far from the waves that are big with commotion,
Under full sail, and the harbor in sight;
Growing old cheerfully, Cheerful and bright.

Past all the winds that were adverse and chilling, Past all the currents that lured thee, unwilling,
Far from the course to the Land of the Blest;

Growing old peacefully, Peaceful and blest.
Never a feeling of envy or sorrow When the bright faces of children are seen;

Never a year from the young wouldst thou borrow—Thou dost remember what liest between:

Growing old willingly,
Thankful serene.
Rich in experience that angels might covet,

Rich in a faith that has grown with thy years,
Rich in a love that grew from and above it.

Soothing thy sorrows and hushing thy fears:
Growing old wealthily,
Loving and dear.

Hearts at the sound of thy coming are lightened, Ready and willing thy hand to relieve;
Many a face at thy kind word has brightened—

"It is more blessed to give than receive."

Growing old happily, Ceasing to grieve.
Eyes that grow dim to the earth and its glory

Have a sweet recompense youth cannot know;

Ears that grow dull to the world and its story Drink in the songs that from Paradise flow:

Growing old graciously,
Purer than snow.

Mrs. Atkinson's Baby.

The Atkinsons have had a terrible time over their baby. Mr. Atkinson sent home a folding crib, with slats made in two pieces and hung down upon hinges. When they opened this crib and put the mattress in it, Mr. Atkinson omitted to fix securely the catches that held the slats. Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson went to bed early that night, and about eleven o'clock, while they were asleep, the baby got awake and began to kick vigorously. The result was that the slats slowly descended and deposited the baby upon the floor. The baby, being particularly wide awake, crawled out into the room, and seeing a light in the entry, went through the door just as Mr. Atkinson's aunt, Miss Boggs, was coming up the stairs to bed. She picked the baby up, and finding that his father and mother were asleep, she carried it to her room in the third story, and determined to take care of it through the night.

About an hour later Mrs. Atkinson awoke, and thought she would glance over at the crib to see how the baby was getting along. No sooner had she done so than she jumped from the bed in alarm. The baby was not there! The bottom seemed to have fallen out of the whole contrivance. Her first thought was that the baby was lying under the mattress smothered to death. She pulled the mattress aside, but there was no sign of the baby.

Then with wild alarm, she shook Mr. Atkinson, and told him to get up. Atkinson growled out in a sleepy tone—

"The paragon is in the closet; go and get it yourself."

"Alonso!" shrieked Mrs. Atkinson, "you don't understand—the baby is gone—stolen—kidnaped—murdered, maybe! Oh, what shall I do?"

"Now, be calm, Julia," said Atkinson, getting out of bed; "don't get hysterical. The child, most likely, is under the bed."

"No it isn't; it's not there!" exclaimed Mrs. Atkinson, upon her hands and knees.

"Possibly," said Alonso, beginning to feel uneasy, "he has crept into the closet. Let us look."

"This is horrible," said Mrs. Atkinson, clasping her hands.

"Do you think," asked Mr. Atkinson, "that he could have crawled in to the bureau drawer and pulled it in after him?"

"Certainly not," said Mrs. Atkinson. "You know he couldn't."

"I think I hear him now. He has fallen out of the window," said Mrs. Atkinson, as a faint wail floated up from the back yard.

"No; it's only Mrs. Magruder's cat yawling on the fence," replied Atkinson, as he closed the sash.

"Have you looked in the bath tub in the next room? Perhaps he has gone to take a bath."

"Drowned! I know it! I am sure of it!" yelled Mrs. Atkinson, rushing into the bath room.

"He's not here," said Atkinson; "could he have gone down stairs and fallen into the sugar bucket in the pantry?"

"We must search the whole house for him," said Mrs. Atkinson.

So they began to hunt. They looked everywhere. In the clothes hamper, in the kitchen cupboard, in the pantry, in the parlor, and even in the cellar, but without avail.

"He couldn't have gone up stairs, because he couldn't climb the steps," said Mrs. Atkinson.

"No; he must have been stolen.
He has been stolen by burglars. I shall never see him again—never!"

"Don't give way, Julia. Be calm.
I will go at once for the police."

Mr. Atkinson dressed himself hurriedly, and dashed down stairs and out into the front street. He met a policeman almost at the door, and in frantic accents laid the case before him. The policeman sounded an alarm, and soon had six other policemen at hand. They entered the house and proceeded to examine the fastenings. Everything was right, and one of the policemen said:

"In my opinion the burglar is in the house yet."

"We'll go for him," said another.
So drawing revolvers, they proceeded to search the building. Presently Mr. Atkinson heard the report of a pistol in the kitchen. He rushed down.

"I think I've killed him," said policeman Jones. "Bring the light, quick."

"And killed the baby, too," shrieked Mrs. Atkinson.

"By George, I forgot the baby," said the officer.

Then the light came and they found that policeman Jones had shot his dog, which had followed him into the house. Then policeman Smith's pistol went off accidentally, and the bullet hit the kitchen clock, which at once struck nine hundred and eighty-one and the confusion and racket so unstrung Mrs. Atkinson's nerves that she went into hysterics and emitted successive yells of a terrific character.

This brought Miss Boggs down from the third story in great alarm.

"What on earth is the matter?"
she called.

"Matter! said Atkinson, "don't you know that burglars have broken into the house and stolen the baby?
Why, we've been having the awfulest time you ever heard of for the last two hours."

"Why, I've got the baby up stairs with me," said Miss Boggs. "I've had him all night."

"You have?" exclaimed the party in a breath.

"Certainly."
"Do you mean to tell me," said Atkinson, with supernatural calmness, "that baby was quietly sleeping in your room all this time?"

"Yes."

Atkinson simply looked at her He felt language was unequal to expression of his feelings. Mrs. Atkinson flew up stairs, two steps at a time. The policemen laughed and filed out, Jones pulling his dog by the tail. Atkinson went to bed with raging anger in his soul; and the next morning he put a sheet iron bottom, fastened with rivets, under that folding crib.

How a Newspaper Pays.

How a newspaper pays can be at once seen, if you will give the matter a little thought. Suppose you take a paper that is only issued once a week; you get fifty two copies a year, each containing the general current news of the times.

The educational advantages to the family, derived from only a weekly paper, are cheaper and more impressive, useful and thorough, after the children have learned to read, than the teaching in the ordinary schools.
It is a notable fact, and many eminent examples might be referred to, that families that are never without newspapers become more intelligent and more influential than those who go through the ordinary scholastic studies without the habit of reading newspapers. After reading, writing and arithmetic are taught to a child, if a choice is to be made between school books and newspapers, it would be much more beneficial to the child to give it two or three well-selected newspapers to read than to confine it to the text books of the school. Newspaper education is polytechnic and universal, and is indispensable to a proper qualification for true American citizenship.

A good newspaper saves money in all business matters. If you want to sell or buy anything you will likely see the current price in a newspaper, and you will also see what you might want advertised; you do not have to take hearsay, and thus suffer from mistakes and delays; you just turn to your paper, and know all you wish to find out. You will often save the subscription cost of your paper by one single order for ten or twenty dollars' worth of goods. You will often find chances for good bargains advertised that cannot be found in any other way.

A few months since, a merchant in Pensacola advertised to sell a certain staple article of provisions very cheap; it was quite a large lot of it, and the consignor ordered it sold at once. I sent an order, and when several of my neighbors in the country saw what I had gotten, and I told them the price, they said: "If you had told us, we would also have sent orders." I said: "If you will take the papers you will always know in time, without waiting a second hand talk." I saved the price of my newspaper subscription in Pensacola for one year by that single transaction. Indeed, it would be impossible to enumerate the amount of pecuniary benefits received from newspaper advertisements alone, to say nothing of the general information of vital importance contained in them.

Journalism in all its departments is a business that requires more self-sacrifice, more indefatigable labor, more patience, endurance and nice discrimination than any other profession. There is no class of men that furnish so cheaply the indispensable intelligence, wisdom and virtue, for the support of the government and welfare of the people, as the well-trained and efficient journalist. Every good citizen should take and pay for a good paper, he owes it to his country, his family and his own self-respect and interest.

SHANT I take a blue pill? No, don't take it and run the risk of mercurial poisons, but when bilious and constipated get a package of the celebrated Kidney-Wort, and it will speedily cure you.
