MOTHEATEN.

I had a beautiful garment,
And I laid it by with care;
I folded it close with lavender leaves
In a napkin fine and fair.
"It is far too costly a robe," I said,
"For one like me to wear."

So never at morn or evening
I put my garment on;
It lay by itself under clasp and key
In the perfumed dusk alone,
Its wonderful hoodery hidden
Till many a day had gone.

There were guests who came to my portal,
There were friends who sat with me,
And, clad in soberest raiment,
I bore them company;
I knew I owned the beautiful robe,
Though its splendor none might see.

There were poor who stood at my portal,
There were orphaned sought my care;
I gave them tenderest pity,
But had nothing beside to spare;
I had only the beautiful garment,
And the raiment for daily wear.

At last, on a feast day's coming,
I thought in my dress to shine;
I would please myself with the luster
Of its shifting colors fine;
I would walk with pride in the marvel
Of its rarely rich design.

So out from the dust I bore it—
The lavender fell away—
And fold on fold I laid it up
To the searching light of day.
Alas! the glory had perished
While there in its place lay.

Who seeks for the fadeless beauty,
Must seek for the use that sends
To the grace of a constant blessing
The beauty that use reveals,
For into the folded robe alone,
The moth with its blighting steals.

HELP.

The world is full of labor,
It toils in weariness;
You cannot bear its burden,
But you can make it less.

A little child is trying
To lift a heavy load;
Go help the helpless toiler
Along the weary road.

A poor, old, friendless woman
Is tottering on alone;
Her trembling strength has failed her
Go offer her your own.

Though little be the action,
His heart the Lord will see;
And he will be the witness,
"Ye did it unto me."

The Banker's Narrow Escape.

FROM THE FRENCH OF ALEXANDER DUMAS.

The death of the famous dog Sutherland, thus named after the Englishman who had made a gift of it to the Empress Catherine II., of Russia, nearly caused a tragic mistake, in so far as it nearly cost the donor, a celebrated banker, his life. The occurrence took place at St. Petersburg.

One morning at daybreak Mr. Sutherland, the gentleman who had presented the dog to the empress and who was consequently a favorite with that august personage, was suddenly awoke by his man servant.

"Sir," said the footman, "your house is surrounded with guards, and the master of the police demands to speak to you."

"What does he wish with me?" exclaimed the banker as he leaped from his bed somewhat startled by the announcement.

"I know not," answered the footman, "but it appears that it is a matter of the highest importance, and which, from what he says, can only be communicated to you personally."

"Show him in," said Mr. Sutherland as he hastily donned his dressing-gown.

The footman departed and returned some minutes afterwards with his excellency Mr. Relieu, upon whose face the banker read, at the first glance, some formidable intelligence. The worthy banker, however, maintained his calmness, and, welcoming the master of the police with his usual urbanity, presented him with a seat. His excellency, however, remained standing, and, in a tone the most dolorous which it was possible to assume, said:

"Mr. Sutherland, believe me when I assure you that I am truly grieved to have been chosen by her majesty, my very gracious sovereign, to accomplish an order, the severity of which afflicts me, but which has, without doubt, been provoked by some great crime."

"By some great crime, your excellency!" exclaimed the banker. "And who then has committed the crime?"

"You, doubtless, sir, since it is upon you that the punishment is to fall."

"Sir, I swear to you that I know not of any reproach with which to charge myself as a subject of our sovereign, for I am a naturalized Russian, as you must know."

"And it is precisely, sir, because you are a naturalized Russian that your position is terrible. If you had remained a subject of his Britannic majesty you would have been able to call in the aid of the English consul and escape thus, perhaps, the rigor of the order which I am, to my very great regret, charged to execute."

"Tell me, then, your excellency, what is this order?"

"Oh, sir, never will I have the strength to make it known to you."

"Have I lost the good graces of her majesty?"

"Oh, if it were only that!"

"Is it a question to make me depart for England?"

"Oh, no; even that must not be."

"Mon dieu! you terrify me. Is it an order to send me to Siberia?"

"Siberia, sir, is a fine country and which people have culminated; besides, people return from it."

"Am I condemned to prison?"

"The prison is nothing. Prisoners come out of prison."

"Sir, sir!" cried the banker, more and more frightened, "am I destined to the knot?"

"The knot is a punishment very grievous, but the knot does not kill."

"Miserable fate!" said Sutherland, terrified. "I see, indeed, that it is a matter of death."

"And what a death!" exclaimed the master of the police, while he solemnly raised his eyes with an expression of the most profound pity.

"How! what a death! Is it not enough to kill me without a trial, to assassinate me without cause? Catherine orders, yet—"

"Alas! yes, she orders—"

"Well, speak, sir! What does she order? I am a man; I have courage. Speak!"

"Alas! my dear sir, she orders—If it had not been by herself that the command had been given, I declare to you, my dear Mr. Sutherland, that I would not have believed it."

"But you make me die a thousand times. Let me see, sir, what has she ordered you to do?"

"She has ordered me to have you stuffed!"

The poor banker uttered a cry of distress; then, looking the master of the police in the face, said: "But, your excellency, it is monstrous what you say to me; you must have lost your reason."

"Not an instant must be lost, my dear sir; the order of her majesty does not admit of delay?"

"Without granting me time to put my affairs in order? But it is impossible!"

"Alas! it is but too true, sir."

"But you will allow me first to write to the empress?"

"I know not if I ought; my instructions were very emphatic."

"Listen! It is a great favor—a favor which is not refused to the greatest culprit. I entreat it of you."

"But it is my situation which I risk."

"And it is my life which is at stake."

"Well, write; I permit it. However, I inform you that I do not leave you a single instant."

"Thanks, thanks. Pray, request one of your officers to come, that he may convey my letter."

The master of the police called a lieutenant of the Royal Guards, delivered to him the letter of poor Sutherland, and ordered him to bring back the answer immediately. Ten minutes afterwards the lieutenant returned with the order to bring the banker to the imperial palace. It was all that the sufferer desired.

A carriage stood at the gate. Mr. Sutherland entered it, and the lieutenant seated himself near him. Five minutes afterwards they were at the palace where Catherine waited. They introduced the condemned man to her presence and found her majesty in convulsions of laughter.

"It was for Mr. Sutherland now to believe her mad. He threw himself at her feet, and, seizing her hand in his, exclaimed: "Mercy, madam! In the name of heaven have mercy on me; or, at the least, tell me for what crime I have deserved a punishment so horrible."

"But my dear Monsieur Sutherland," replied Catherine with all the gravity she could command, "this matter does not concern you at all."

"How, your majesty, is it not a matter concerning me? Then whom does it concern?"

"Why, the dog, of course, which you gave me and which died yesterday of indigestion. Then, in my grief at this loss and in my very rational desire to preserve at least the skin, ordered that fool Relieu to come to me and said to him: "

"Monsieur Relieu, I have to request that you will have Sutherland stuffed." As he hesitated, I thought he was ashamed of such a commission; whereupon I became angry and dismissed him on his errand."

"Well, madam," answered the banker, "you can boast that you have in the master of the police a faithful servant; but at another time, pray, I entreat of you, to explain better to him the orders which he receives."

The four-footed Sutherland was duly promoted to a glass case, vice the banker—relieve

A Grand Entertainment. Emmitt Lodge, No. 47 I. O. M., of Emmitsburg will hold a T. Entertainment, a series of affairs; and a game of Base Ball will be played, on the grounds of Joseph Byers, Esq., to-day (Saturday). The crowning of the Queen of Love and Beauty and the Maids of Honour will be interesting ceremonies, and no doubt the occasion will be well attended and afford great enjoyment. Turn out!

A Breakdown and Runaway. On Monday Mr. Edgar Anman having driven out to Mr. W. G. Gilson's farm to return home, when a wheel broke down and he was tumbled out. The horse then ran off; the king-bolt came out of the buggy, and there was a complete wreck, the horse was caught at the east end of the town, and proved to be pretty badly cut. A fine young horse like him should not be hooked to a rickety vehicle.

Mayor Beatty's Birthday. Mayor Beatty, the organ builder, of Washington, New Jersey, celebrated his thirty fifth birthday on the 14th inst. The Mayor, although still young, has accomplished more than falls to the lot of any one man in a million in a lifetime, and it is not too much to say that his name will pass down to history enrolled with Vanderbilt, Gould, Garrett, Sage and others of the most successful business men of our times.

Burglary in Westminster. WESTMINSTER, Md., Aug. 20.—The store of Jacob Bixler, this city, was entered and robbed last night of about $40 worth of jewelry, knives, revolvers and silk handkerchiefs, beside a suit of clothes, a hat and two pairs of shoes. Entrance was effected through a front window, and the thief left his hat and boots in the store. A colored man who got on an early train to Baltimore at Tannery Station this morning is suspected as the burglar. He did not buy a ticket.—Sun

Burning of a Barn and Contents. FREDERICK, Md., Aug. 20.—A large barn on a farm near Petersville, in Frederick county, Md., owned by Mrs. Samuel Gouverneur, of Washington, and tenanted by Peter Roelkey, was, with contents, consisting of nearly 2,000 bushels of wheat, a lot of hay, farming implements, &c., completely destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. The fire is said to have been caused by a boy attempting to burn a bees' nest. Total loss about $3,000; insured for about two-thirds.—Baltimore News.

From the Maryland States. Last Friday while Mr. Frederick Kelly was fishing in the Monocacy his right arm was slightly paralyzed, and when he returned home the right side of his body was affected. He is now confined to his home.

Last Saturday Mr. Philip M. Clemm residing at Lewistown, this county, met with a painful accident. He was engaged hoeing a log, and when in the act of turning the log was caught under it and sustained a fracture of the jaw bone. He is doing as well as could be expected.

A Narrow Escape. MR. D. C. Winebrenner, the popular North Market street merchant, met with an accident on Saturday morning last from which he made a very narrow escape from serious injury. He was walking down West Church street, opposite the Carlin House, when a workman, engaged in trimming trees in the lot adjoining the Reformed Church, threw a heavy piece of wood over the fence which struck Mr. Winebrenner in the face and knocked him down. An examination of his injuries showed several bruises on the nose, forehead and cheek.—Daily Times.

Eating Corn. THE most enjoyable way, beyond doubt to eat roasting ears, is from the cob direct, but to do this implies good teeth, if the grains are scored the pressure of the incisors, liberates the pulp germ and all, and leaves the husks adherent to the cob; but to persons who share the corn from the cob, there is generally the loss of the germs for these remain in the cob. It were a happy thing for some inventive genius to produce an instrument that could at once score the corn, and remove it from the cob. But perhaps we are behind the times, the instrument may exist already, unknown to us.

Choked to Death. On Saturday evening Andrew Hartman, of Franklin township, came to town and put up at the Battlefield hotel having several suits pending in court this week. On Sunday morning, at the breakfast table, a piece of unseasoned beef lodged in his throat, and he left the table, gagging considerably. Mr. Thorn and others followed him to the porch, where they found him choking, and being unable to relieve him, medical assistance was sent for. Dr. Tate was called in, but by the time he arrived Mr. Hartman was dead. He was about 70 years of age.—Star and Sentinel.

The Registration. THE officers of Registration have given notice that they will sit from 8 o'clock, a. m. till 7 p. m. in their respective Districts in the county, on Tuesday the 4th, Wednesday the 5th, Thursday the 6th, Friday the 7th and Saturday the 8th days of September, 1883. For attending to their duties as Registrars. Our legislators in their wisdom, have seen fit to make a monopoly of the publication of the Registration notice in Frederick; we are thus debarred from giving the particulars, but what we have printed is substantially what covers about one and three-quarter columns of the favored journals.

Family Reunion. THERE was a pleasant little family picnic at Lake Conroy yesterday by the members of Mr. Mathias Martin's family, who with his wife, and son-in-law and the latter's wife is visiting his children who reside in St. Joseph and Creston, Iowa. There were present Mathias Martin and wife, of Emmitsburg, Md., Mr. Topper and wife, of Emmitsburg, Md., Wm. Martin and wife of St. Joseph, Morrison Burns and family of St. Joseph, Miss Jennie Stuppy of St. Joseph, Miss Stella Hoffman of Emmitsburg, Md., Miss Elsie Hoffman of St. Joseph, Joseph T. Martin of St. Joseph, and Eugene Martin and wife of Creston, Iowa. His family are trying to persuade him to stay here and it is hoped that their persuading power will be sufficient to insure success of their efforts. Mr. Martin is a little hardy man of 60 but looks younger now than any of his sons or sons-in-law.—St. Joseph (Mo) Herald.

Pastoral Notices. THE September Eclectic offers a table of contents to its readers worthy of its reputation. The opening paper, by Prof. John Tyndall, is on the distinguished American scientist, Count Rumford, who discovered some of the most remarkable discoveries of the present age. Rev. Dr. Augustus Jessopp is the author of a noticeable article, entitled "The Coming of the Friars." Cardinal Manning's article, "Without God, No Commonwealth," will excite an interest not bounded by denominational lines. Mr. W. S. Lilly, in his paper on "Supernaturalism: Medieaval and Classic," makes a strong exposition of the historic workings of a powerful natural instinct. In the article on "The Rinaldo of Torquato Tasso," the literary student will find an interesting account of the first study of that great epic masterpiece, "The Jerusalem Delivered." Mr. Phil. Robinson, who has made a reputation as a humorous essayist, is well represented in the article on "Leses and Apes;" and in the paper on "Robert Browning, Dramatist," by W. L. Courtenay, the admirers of one of the greatest of modern English poets will find a sympathetic and subtle study of Browning's genius. A historical study of great interest will be found in "Cairo; The Old and the New," by the distinguished Egyptologist, Dr. George Ebers. The conclusion of the story, "The Little World," is reached in the present number, and short articles of a taking character will be found under the titles of "Spontaneous Combustion" and "The Bourbons." Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond Street, New York. Terms $5 per year; single copy, 45 cents For Sale by all newsdealers.

The Century Magazine for September is embellished with a portrait of Robert Burns, and furnishes its readers with some interesting sketches of the poet's home and early surroundings, in an article entitled "A Burns Pictorial," a profusely illustrated description of "Cape Cod," by T. Mitchell, is not only pleasant and readable, but furnishes a good deal of information concerning this sandy, lonesome-looking point on the New England coast; W. D. Howells' story, "A Woman's Reason" is continued, and seems to be drawing to a conclusion; "A Muck Ox Hunt" "The Tragedies of the Nest;" "Indian War in the Colonies;" "Ornamental Forms in Nature;" "Professor Agassiz's Laboratory," will each and all be read with interest as well as profit, whilst the second instalment of the anonymous story, "The Bread Winners," which is eliciting so much attention, will of itself, prove an attraction for apart from the intrinsic merits of the story, there is the mystery which surrounds the authorship, arousing, as mysterious always does, far greater attention than any amount of excellence that leaves us nothing to guess or wonder at. The poetry, Eric-a-Brac and other reading matter of this number are all up to the standard of literary entertainment generally furnished by this popular Magazine. The Century Co., Union Square, New York.

The American Agriculturist for September is unusually full of hints and directions for the winter keeping of plants, not only to preserve them for spring, but for the enjoyment of their beauty and fragrance in our homes during the season when we find most of our pleasures within doors, but there is also abundance of space given to out-door subjects. Live Stock, Late Weeds, Roses, Strawberries, Planting of Onions, Raspberries, Blackberries, &c., as well as much useful and interesting reading. A family living in the country could not well find a visitor more entertaining and instructive than the American Agriculturist. Published by The Orange Judd Co., Broadway, New York.

An Enquiry. A writer in the American Farmer mentions a peculiar blight of tomato plants growing near a walnut tree, for which he is unable to account, and as I have had the same experience I would like to know if any one can tell what causes the injury, and what kind of vegetation is most susceptible to it. The plants were healthy and vigorous when set out and grew finely until full of blossoms and the fruit was beginning to form, when suddenly they wilted down as though they had been scalded, and died in a few days, while others, planted at the same time continue to flourish and mature fruit, corn, cabbage and onions growing in close proximity to a walnut tree, are not affected in the least, but the writer mentioned above, has noticed that an Arbor Vitae hedge died in every place that had near a walnut tree. One season I tried the experiment of raising Tomatoes in a barrel, and had the barrel placed under this very walnut tree, without injury to the plants which grew finely and bore good fruit. It must therefore be the effect of the roots of the tree on the soil and not its shadows that produces the injury, but what is it that effect? ONE WHO WANTS TO KNOW.

A Sad Case of Tetanus. Andrew J. Hoffman a well known young man who had but lately reached the age of 24 years, was together with his brother engaged in the milling business, on Marsh creek, Adams county, Pa., formerly Sardoe's Mill, about 4 miles from this place. About three weeks ago he was engaged in replacing a bolt in a wheel in the mill, he took the precaution to secure the wheel with a chain, but the chain broke when the bolt was not properly in place, and the result was that the index finger of his left hand was caught and severely injured; The wound gave him no pain, and created but little inconvenience, so that he regularly performed his duties as miller, and he also did his usual travelling about after an interval of about ten days, symptoms of tetanus manifested themselves which after about ten days more of intense suffering resulted in his death "Jack" as he was familiarly called had many friends by whom he was highly esteemed, and his death has cast a gloom over the community. The interment took place in the Cemetery of the Lutheran church in this place on Friday afternoon, Rev. E. S. Johnston, the pastor officiating.

Bagging Grapes.

HOW, WHY AND WHEN TO DO IT.

D. S. MARVIN.— Having been one of the first to use this process, I conclude that by it we gain partial exemption from rot and more or less exemption from the depredations of birds and boys, and complete exemption from sun-scald. The process, however, retards ripening; but tends to preserve the fruits from injury by wind or frost. In climates where rot in the berry is to be counteracted, I should bag when the fruit was not more than one-third grown. Further north, defer the operation until the grapes commence to color, so as to hasten ripening. Grapes in bags may hang until after heavy frosts. Then, if picked and stored with the bags on, in a cool place, they come out during winter, ripe and more delicious than by any other process. No. 1 bags of standard size are large enough for Delaware; Nos. 2 and 3 will be needed for medium and large clusters. If some manufacturer will give us bags just the tint of the leaf, he would fill his pockets; with these the vines would look more uniform and the birds and bugs would not be tempted so much. Good—not thick—manilla paper is best. The bags should be slipped over the clusters, folded and pinned close around the stem so as to exclude rain. The vines should be managed so as to develop large buds to obtain clusters worth bagging, and all small clusters should be cut off.—American Farmer.

Destruction of Weeds.

This work should be attended to as early as possible. A cotemporary remarks that "a farmer has no more right to grow a crop of weeds upon his own land to furnish seed to trouble his neighbors than he has to build fires upon his own land where they will oblige the neighbor to fight fire in order to protect his own property from the flames." In some States the law requires every land owner to destroy all weeds that now grow, fortunately, in many neighborhoods this law is not enforced, but if it were, the farmer who delights in cleanly cultivated fields might hope to see the time when he would not have a thousand weeds contesting with each useful plant for the fertility of the soil. It seems of but little use to try to prevent weeds from going to seed upon one's own land when some negligent neighbor is raising seed by the thousand to blow upon the fields each time the wind is in the right quarter. Keep the roadsides, hedge-rows and the edges of cultivated fields clear of weeds as faithfully as are those fields devoted to crops, and then strive to induce the neighbors to do the same.

THE complicated diseases brought on by intense study, thought, care, anxiety, etc., are often of the most serious nature. Heed such symptoms as loss of memory, universal lassitude, heart disease, kidney complaints, liver trouble and a general breaking down of health and strength. When thus afflicted, when the least exertion causes great fatigue, when life seems a burden, use the reliable strengthening tonic, Brown's Iron Bitters. It will afford you sure relief.

FARMERS should experiment with all kinds of fertilizers within their reach. Quite often there is found on some farms muck that can be profitably drawn to land adjoining or in the near neighborhood. The quality of muck varies so widely that lack of success with it in any place is no evidence that other muck will fail elsewhere. The best muck contains lime and phosphoric acid.

THE practice of some of the best farmers now is to keep pigs through the summer on green food, cut and carried to the pens, with a little grain, and what milk can be spared after butter making. Spring pigs are thus made to weigh 200 pounds at seven months, they get little grain. The best time to sell such pigs is at the beginning of cold weather, usually in October.

PROFESSOR MONROE, of Annapolis, says that ordinary fruit acids, such as are contained in apples, tomatos, rhubarb, lemons, etc., all act upon tin. One case is mentioned where persons eating fruit preserved in tin cans were made violently sick, and tin only was found in the fruit. Glass only should be used when to keep preserved fruits.

SHRINKAGE in lumber varies according to the tree from which it is made. Oaks will shrink in drying a half inch to the foot, while the redwoods of California show no perceptible change, and the heavy Eastern or South American woods lose but little.—Scientific American.

Miscellaneous.

Sun Spots.

The Detroit Free Press says: It began to rain again soon after dinner yesterday, and a disgusted citizen who came down on a Woodward avenue car beside an old man remarked:

"I presume this is owing to those spots on the sun."
"Hey?" called the other, as he put his hand to his ear.
"Spots on the sun!" yelled the other.

"Hey? Spots? Where are the spots?"
"On the sun!"
"Hey?"
"On the sun!"

The old man rose up, crossed the car and looked out of the window and squinted around for a minute, and then returned and said:

"Can't see the sun 'tall. How did the spots come there?"
"I don't know."
"Hey?"
"I don't know."
"Have you seen 'em?"
"No."
"You have, eh?"
"I said no."

"Oh! you haven't? What was your object in telling me there were spots on the sun? I am not so old that I permit any one to make a fool of me!"

The other now looked out of the window and assumed a careless air, but the old man was right after him with:

"You come into a car when I am minding my own business and begin to talk about spots on the sun. Who are you, sir? Did you want to get me up to pick my pocket?"

"They say the rainy weather comes from the spots on the sun," exclaimed the other.

"Who says so? Name the man! I'm around all the time, and I haven't heard of any spots on the sun! If you think you can work any game on me you are badly sold!"

The citizen got up to change his seat, but the old gent pulled him down and said:

"You wanted to work some sort of a game on me, and I know it. If I ever catch you within a rod of me again I'll tie you up in a knot in two minutes! I'll put spots on you till you can't sleep!"

The citizen made a break and got out, and though he had no umbrella he dropped off in the midst of the rain with the look of a man glad to make the exchange. He had just reached the curb when the old man came to the platform and called out:

"Took me for a greenhorn, did you? I wish I'd walked you right to the police station! Ah, you miserable swindler! Spots on the sun! May he you made something out of sweet-oiling around me!"

Ready-made Houses.

The Northwestern Lumberman (Chicago) predicts, from the large number of inquiries regarding the ready-made house business, that it will eventually become a large industry and consume a large amount of lumber.

A gentleman visited the Lumberman office recently who wanted from twenty-five to fifty houses for a colony that is about starting to Dakota. Such houses for the people settling in that territory, often in other sections, are just what is needed. In many parts of Dakota it is impossible to buy lumber, and often when lumber can be obtained the services of a carpenter are hard to secure. A ready-made house can be shipped to its destination and erected by any man of ordinary ingenuity. It saves all bother of running around the country after building material and men to put it together. A gentleman called at the office of the same paper a few days ago wanted a house to set up on a lot in the city limits. He could rent the lot during the summer for a small sum, and thus avoid paying big rent, and at the same time have a house of his own to live in that he handily moved whenever it was desired to do so. A late inquiry from Philadelphia was made regarding ready-made houses for export, and the same day came letters of inquiry relating to the same subject from West Virginia and New York. These letters, and hundreds of others, show that the ready-made house business is not carried on experimentally enough to meet the demand. There is no good reason why a manufacturer of knock-down houses should not use 100,000,000 feet of lumber yearly in this city alone.—Scientific American.

Mrs. C. Gordon, 84 Stoker street, Baltimore, Md., says: "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for general debility and now feel like a different person."

Humorous.

It is the very rich men in this country who can afford to put on million airs.

RICHES have wings. If you don't believe this proverb, look at back of the silver dollar.

A broom may be kept in good condition for a long time if it is washed once a week in clean hot suds, and then hung up to dry.

In a village church recently a paper was circulated asking for contributions "for the purpose of paying the organist and a boy to blow the same."

Mrs. ELIZABETH SCHMIDT, 136 Conway street, Baltimore, Md., says: "My daughter and myself have been cured of dyspepsia by using Brown's Iron Bitters."

"My husband has a very even disposition," said one lady to another. "So I thought," was the reply, "for I never remember seeing him in a good humor."

"Now, then, witness," said the cross-examining counsel sternly, "does the preceding witness enjoy your entire confidence?" "Great Scott, no! Why, that's my wife!"

SPEAK up, Johnny! "How do you find the third side of a triangle?" asked an Austin teacher of one of his pupils. The boy, grumblingly, said in a low voice that the teacher was a donkey. "Say it over again, Johnny, and speak up louder." Perhaps your answer is the right one," replied the pedagogue, who is a little deaf.—Texas Siftings.

WHEN Brown broke one of his wife's china tea cups, she bewailed the loss in doleful strains. She was so sorry, she said, she had had that cup so many years. A day or two later, a new lamp globe was broken. Then Mrs. B. was so sorry because it was brand new. If it wasn't for that, she wouldn't have cared one bit. Women are wonderful creatures, but their logic is more wonderful than they.

A LION once put on an ass's skin and went out into the woods. Meeting an ass, the lion said, "Good morning." "Good morning to you, sir," retorted the ass. "Who are you?" "I am an ass," said the lion. "Beg your pardon, but you are a lying," said the ass. Then the lion went along until suddenly he killed himself. The moral of this is—"Never make an ass of yourself."

ONE of the Seventh Regiment guards, who was on duty at the Peekskill encampment one night, was approached by a short and stout man in uniform, who walked with his hands placed upon the base of his stomach. "Who goes there?" called the sentinel, presenting his musket. "I am der band," said the stout man, in a mournful tone. "Well, hays you got the counter-sign?" the guard inquired. "No," said the man, sadly, "but I haf got der golia. Bless me! me pass till I go by der hospital tent."

A WELL-KNOWN Connecticut clergyman had a deacon who insisted upon leading the singing at the pray-meetings. He was a great blunderer, and he sang all the sad and melancholy tunes he could think of. The hymn was given on:

"I love to steal awhile away."
The deacon began, "I love to steal!"
—to Mezz, where he broke down. He started with Dundee—"I love to steal." The third time he commenced and broke down, when the pastor rose and gravely said, "I am sorry for our brother's propensity. Will some brother pray?"
