WORK COMES NEXT.

The contest for office has ended, the people have made choice of the agents who are to conduct their public affairs. There are some things representing party policy, which in the course of events, necessarily govern the action of the successful candidates, because these have been predetermined, as the popular will; but for the most part, every one has to decide questions with reference to the public good, to the best of his judgment. The execution of official duty is representative; one man acting for many. If it were simply to record rules laid down in advance, the representatives, delegates or whatever they may be, would be mere puppets, without any independence of thought and action. But men are ostensibly elected on account of their moral character, good judgment, sound discretion, and general intelligence, and are expected to bring all these to bear in the performance of official duty; mere party ends have a limited range, and the worthy incumbent, acting under his official oath finds himself bound to broader views than those of mere party advancement. The man who may desire a special favour, in consideration of a vote given, in such cases will find himself confronted with the reply, "I am sworn to promote the public good."

An upright official will give ear, to every respectful plea that comes before him, on the grounds of right and justice, and will govern his acts accordingly, for on his induction to office he bears the responsibility of all that is involved in the office, which of course regards the highest good of the entire population, under his administrative limits. Those elected to the Legislature are Delegates or Senators from Frederick County; the County Commissioners, the Orphan's Court, &c., as the case may be, stand in the same relation to their respective places, and not as representing either political party, whose predominating vote may have determined the election. Therefore the passion and strife of election contests subside when the conflict ends, unless in the case of persons whose limited vision, and personal bitterness of sentiment, do not allow them to view things apart from party bearings, and who live alone in, and for the strife.

Resting from the commotion of the past few months, and thinking they have done their duty in filling the offices, the people now, anxiously look forward to the results of their decision, and whilst holding every officer to strict accountability, patiently await the outcome.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

THOMAS NAST, the caricaturist, is just recovering from a serious illness.

THE Denver Medical Times says that there are more physicians in that city, in proportion to the population, than in any other of the United States.

A FIRE in Shenandoah, Pa., Monday destroyed the United States Hotel and the newspaper offices. Two hundred houses were destroyed and 500 families were made homeless and destitute. The loss was $350,000.

NEW YORK, November 13.—Dr. J. Marion Sims, a physician well known in this country and Europe, died this morning of heart disease. He attended a patient last evening and retired apparently in his usual health. Early this morning he conversed with his wife, and shortly after she observed that something was wrong and immediately summoned a son, who is also a physician. An examination showed that the doctor was dead. Dr. Sims was to have sailed for Europe on Saturday next.

POSTMASTER HYDEKOPFER, of Philadelphia, recently addressed the following letter to one of his employees: "I am informed that there is considerable discussion of political and other matters which do not pertain in any way to postoffice business during the time when you are on duty and that you are one of the principal disputants. This being the case I do not consider that your services are worth $800 per annum, and unless I am satisfied that you totally refrain in future from discussing all matters not connected with the regular business which may arise in the course of your duty, you may expect your salary to be at the rate of $600 per annum."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 14 '88.

The roster of the new Congress about assembling will present numberless anomalies in the way of public men, who by the concatenation of our strange politics have broken into the capitol and become a component part of the government. The devious paths of a political career will lead many of them back to the shades of a disagreeable retirement, while others will go on until the cravings of ambition shall be satiated with a post office or a foreign mission. In the House there will shine with a good deal of effulgence, the Ananias of the Pampas, Mr. Tom Ochiltree, who has recently cut a larger figure in the news papers than any Texas man since the days of the redoubtable Sam Houston. In the Senate there will be another Tom, surnamed Bowen, the antipodes of the Texan Sinbad in many things, though expertness in the art of prevarication may not be one of them. The latter Tom followed the fortunes and misfortunes of war into Arkansas, where he lifted his mighty voice in behalf of a united people and a seat upon the Supreme Court bench, where he held the scales of justice with so steady a hand that the people of Colorado sent down for him to come on and look after their mining interests. The over-issue of some Arkansas State bonds about the time that Tom left that neighborhood was said to have been an inducement for his departure; but Tom says it was a lie, and I believe it is true. Tom's career in the State that has sent him to the Senate has been attended with such a constant succession of successes as to enable him to count his duets by millions, which he knows how to utilize better than any man in seven States, except his 30 day predecessor, Tabor.

We shall also have in the Senate, in addition to the financial giants of past Congresses, Mr. Sabin, of Minnesota, a two millionaire, who made his money in booming logs and judiciously performing his part of the contract to furnish supplies for the Stillwater penitentiary. He it was who flooded Windom, after the best mental material in the State had been exhausted in the contest, though it should not be said that Mr. Sabin is wanting in the intellectual requisites of a good Senator. He is a clever fellow withal; companionable, and accessible to a degree rarely met among wealthy public men. His colleague, McMillan, has few of the qualities that go for popularity, and all Minnesota says that a first-rate judge was spoiled when they made a Senator of him. He was really a born judge, acquitting himself admirably upon the bench in the callousness of twenty five, and making his way to the Supreme Court without apparent effort. He manifested his slight acquaintance with the political methods of those days by turning Joe Wheeler out of the St. Paul post office and putting his own brother-in-law in the place, for which he has since been pursued by Wheeler's newspaper, the Pioneer Press.

Roscoe Conkling comes to Washington every now and then, and while here usually falls in with somebody to whom he talks more or less freely. During his last visit, not many days ago, it is stated that he made some savage remarks about the present administration. Among other things he is reported as saying that "this administration has passed from a languid existence into a comatose condition. The only sign of existence left is a feeble beating of the pulse in the Department of Justice." Mr. Conkling especially blames this administration for not making some live issues for the republic party to go upon in the next campaign. There is probably only one republican prominent enough to be nominated who would have Conkling's support. This is Grant. There has been a great deal of talk about Grant lately. A number of republicans are looking to ward him, believing that he would be the strongest man they could name. A republican Congressman from the west, a great admirer of the President, called upon the latter recently for the purpose of finding out whether he would be a candidate for re-election. He talked with the President two hours, and when asked if he found out whether Mr. Arthur was a candidate or not, replied: "I can't say I did. The best I got out of it was an impression." "Well, what was your impression?" "My impression was that the President had not yet made up his mind. He is in a hesitating mood. He sees, probably, no advantage in coming out and saying: 'I would like to have the nomination.' I think he is doubtful about carrying New York without the aid of Mr. Conkling, and so long as he is doubtful on that point his friends will not get much satisfaction from him touching his candidacy." Among the best informed politicians, however, there is little doubt that Mr. Arthur wants the nomination and that he would like to replace Mr. Folger in the Treasury department with some friend who would do more to aid him with the machinery of that department.

The candidates for Speaker of the new House of Representatives are opening headquarters at the prominent hotels and the contest begins to warm up. One curious feature is the calm certainty which apparently fills the breast of each candidate and the large number of votes each has pledged. There are about 190 democratic members, but if all the claims of support are allowed there must be at least 300. Mr. Randall makes the largest claim, and he is an exceedingly shrewd campaigner, but after several quiet talks with Congressmen from different sections I am inclined to think Carlisle stands the best chance of success. In the crowd already beginning to throng the hotel corridors may be seen, elbowing their way between excited partisans, the faces and figures of several claimants who have haunted the seat of government for session after session in the abiding hope that at some time or other the coffers will be opened to them and they shall go home satisfied. Some of these hopeful claimants ought to have been satisfied long ago. Others, again, ought long ago to have been permanently discouraged. Many who have been paid were not entitled to the money they got, and the fact has probably operated to prevent just claimants from receiving the paltry sums for which they have been ineffectually pleading. The most persistent or the most ingenious. DOM PEDRO.

THE 400th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther was celebrated on Saturday throughout the Protestant world. In Germany the celebrations were imposing and of a National character.

AN Arkansas writer is amazed at the number of persons in his State who have absolutely and persistently resisted every effort at progress. He adds that in southern and southern Arkansas are hundreds of farmhouses that have not yet had a cooking stove, and that a railroad surveyor tells him of many farmers who have set their faces resolutely against railroads, on the ground that the locomotives would scare game out of the country. A reporter for The Sun who was recently in Arkansas saw a farmer who was trying to sell out because a railroad is to be built within thirty miles of his farm.—N. Y. Sun.

FIGARO says the favorite German dish is saucisson, kraut, and sauerkraut, which is crowned with a wreath of black puddings and hashed meat. Below this a cornice of sauerkraut, intermingled with pickled beet root, forms a ring which reposes on a mould of smoked and grilled sausages. The mould itself is surrounded by a kind of embossed ornamentation, consisting of seven kinds of sausages, the names of which are to be found in the famous Kochbuch composed by a professor of chemistry at Heidelberg. A pea pudding, flanked with potato dumplings, forms the base of the dish, over which is thrown a quantity of currant jelly and spirits, which is set on fire.

THE Catholic burial-ground in Steubenville, O., was abandoned not long ago, and a new locality was purchased west of the city. On Saturday Fathers Hartmeyer and Hartley went to the old cemetery to remove the body of Father Duffy, who had been buried about eighteen years. One of the party had been a pall bearer at the funeral. He thought he knew the right grave, and said that the grave was opened, a metallic casket was found, rusty with age; but on opening it the remains brought to view were not those of a male person, but of a young woman. The body was not identified by any one present, but was shown to be in a remarkable state of preservation. The eyes of the corpse were open, and were of a bluish color, and the hair was light brown and curling. The shroud alone showed evidences of decay. But the most remarkable discovery was the position of the right arm of the sleeper, which instead of lying folded across the breast, was drawn around the neck, the palm of the hand nearly touching the left side of the face. The conclusion was that the woman had been buried alive, having been in a trance at the time of interment.

Gotham Gossip.

A Good Story about Patti and the Captain of the Steamer Arizona.—Popular Sea Captains.—How a Master Lost Command of his Ship.—"Don't!"—Western Aspirations after Good Form.

NEW YORK November 13th, 1888.

They tell a good story apropos the arrival of Patti. The diva it will be remembered for the last few trips to and from this country, has been in the habit of travelling by Arizona of the Guion Line, "the greyhound of ocean." The captain of this vessel is a ladies man par excellence. Men as a rule do not like him, and as a rule he does not care for them, but with ladies he is extremely popular. Among his customs is that of inviting half a dozen ladies every afternoon to his state room to drink tea. Patti of course grew very fond of him, much to the indignation of her husband, Nicolini, who cordially disliked him, and, in fact, took pains to show it. On the voyage to England last spring, Mme. Patti invited the captain to visit her at her castle in Wales, and the gallant tar promised to do so. Later in the season however, he wrote her regretting he could not avail himself of her kind invitation as his sojourn on shore was always extremely limited, and hence he could not very well afford to go on an extended journey. Mme. Patti must have been gravely offended at this, for, when some months ago it was finally decided that Patti was to sing again in this country, the agents of the line sent a representative to her, requesting to be informed what state-rooms should be reserved for her on the Arizona, and on what day she proposed to sail she replied very laconically: "I do not wish to sail on the Arizona. In fact I shall not travel any more by a line whose officers are not gentlemen." The surprise of the agent and the chagrin of the gallant master of the Arizona may be imagined, but the glory leaked out and is now told with a great deal of gusto in shipping circles.

An interesting chapter might be written on popular sea captains, who are well known in both hemispheres on account of the enormous extent of travel between the Old and New World. There is the captain of the Alaska, for instance. He is very popular with the owners of the line on account of the care he takes of his ship. During a voyage he fairly lives on the bridge. With passengers, however, male as well as female, he is very unpopular, on account of his stern, ungracious and repelling ways. The captain of a certain steamer of the White Star Line is a great favorite among men, while ladies are inclined to think poorly of him because he pays little or no attention to them. He is very fond of a game of poker and of a social glass, and hence is always a welcome figure in the smoking room. His sociability is not unremunerative, for he is an expert poker player, and generally wins the money from his opponents.

The Red Star Line has a strict rule forbidding masters of their vessels to take their wives with them on a voyage, either as passengers or guests. One of the captains was married some months ago, and desired to give his wife a wedding trip across the ocean. On arriving in port, he went to the company's office and asked permission to take his wife across. "Certainly, captain," was the reply. He then went to Philadelphia where he was domiciled, and returning the day before the ship was to sail, came on board. Meeting a steward, he gave him some order, when to his amazement, that official tipped his cap and remarked: "I beg pardon, sir; you're not in command of the ship, sir; Captain—sir—is in command sir."

Our friend at once posted to the Secretary's office. "Did you not give me permission to take my wife aboard?" he asked. "Yes, sir," blandly replied the official, "and to save you all trouble and make the voyage as pleasant as possible, we have reserved the two best state-rooms for you and Mrs.—and ordered Captain—to take the ship across. The instant she touches Antwerp you will take command of her again." The young wife remained in Europe for some months and returned on her husband's ship, taking her sister with her and registering in maiden name. The captain never met her except at meal times, and in fact was never in the saloon except on these occasions. When he met them on the deck he just touched his cap to them. When the ship made this port he reported what he did at the company's office, "I wished to show them," he said, "that man can and will do his entire duty even though he has his wife aboard."

Some weeks ago the Appleton's published a little book called "Don't," consisting of a series of precepts as to what violations of good form, or good taste or good manners one is to avoid in polite society. One of the members of the firm told me the other day that the book had already an enormous sale. The first edition of 25,000 had already been exhausted, and in fact orders were coming in so fast that there was some difficulty in filling them. "Strange to say," he added, "most of the books have gone to Boston, and the demand now is from the West, from such cities as St. Louis, Cincinnati and Chicago." This would seem to show that although each of the above cities seem to think that the Sun ought to rise where it is located, they are yet anxious to rub off the rough edges which make Western people noticeable whenever and wherever they get into the more polished society of the East.

MR. JAMES L. DORSEY, tax collector at Rockville, Montgomery county, had $700 in gold in his dwelling when it was burned down on the night of the 2nd inst. A few hours before the fire broke out, Mr. Dorsey had $3,000 of county money in the house, but fortunately having to pay a bill, he put the balance in his pocket, and it was thus saved from destruction.

A GREAT many people, men and women, think it unnecessary to be polite at home. When among strangers, or out visiting, they are pink of perfection in these respects, but short, crisp words and cross looks they reserve for home folks. This neglect of kindly consideration towards the members of one's own household is one of the main causes leading to dissension, heart, jarring contentions, and unhappy homes. Politeness in the family circle will keep securely there harmony and love.—Ex.

THE Frederick correspondence of the Baltimore Sun says: The recounting of the ballots cast in Frederick county at the recent election for Mr. Joseph Byers, of Emmitsburg, and Dr. J. J. Henshaw, of Mechanicstown, for the House of Delegates, was concluded Thursday, and the result is an increase of ten votes for Dr. Henshaw, republican, making his majority 23 instead of 13 as returned by the judges of election. Mr. Byers, at whose instance the recount was made, gained a few votes in several districts, but lost in others.

Mrs. JOHN W. GARRETT, wife of the president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, who was so very seriously injured by being thrown from her carriage on the Hillen road, died at her country residence, Montebello, Baltimore county, at 8:10 o'clock on Thursday morning. In falling from the carriage she struck her head upon the road with great force, causing concussion of the brain, from which she became unconscious, and so remained for the greater part of the intervening time.—Daily.

THE Baltimore Sun true to its old record, performed some wonderful feats in getting the returns of the late election from Southern Maryland, as well as the mountainous country of Garrett county, the record was made up along with those of the places near at home; horses, steam, row-boats, electricity, &c., were brought into requisition and every obstacle, but delay in counting the votes, was successfully surmounted. The Sun is always reliable, and in nothing more so than its election figures.

On Monday the 5th, whilst Mr. Howard Houck, of Butler township, was coming down the mountain in company with his hired man, with a four horse load of rails, the lock-bar of the wagon broke, which caused the wagon to run on the horses. They in turn started and ran off. Mr. H., in getting off the wagon, was thrown to the ground and painfully injured. One of the horses fell and was dragged for a distance and badly hurt. At this time all the horses became unbitched, except the lead horse, the wagon wheel striking the horse which was down, stopped it and caused the team to stop also. Otherwise no doubt the wagon would have been wrecked and some of the horses killed.—L. in Star and Sentinel.

THE Sanitary Convention meets in Baltimore shortly. It is to be hoped its deliberations may result in great good to the state. We never could comprehend why a man who lives outside of municipal boundaries, should be exempt from observing sanitary precautions any more than the residents of the town. A single disease producing cause in an isolated locality may infect a whole town; uncleanly premises, mud holes existing year after year, and such like nuisances should be abated wherever they exist. The man who neither respects the welfare of his neighbors nor his own, should be compelled to do so. We want such legal regulations as may bring these matters under legal supervision, whether in the towns or the rural districts. It will pay better than taxation in all respects.

Corrected Returns.

We thought we had given a correct "Full returns" of the election in Frederick County last week, but although we copied from the Baltimore American, we reproduce the whole this week from the official vote. The total vote of Frederick county for governor is Holton, Rep., 5,304; McLane, Dem., 5,101. For comptroller, Mulliken, Rep., 5,271; Turner, Dem., 5,131. For attorney general, Stockett, Rep., 5,271; Roberts, Dem., 5,131. The vote of the legislative ticket of Frederick county is as follows: For senator—Steiner, Rep., 5,049; Bowles, Dem., 5,303. For House of Delegates—Keefer, Rep., 5,239; Annon, Rep., 5,310; Morrison, Rep., 5,255; Markell, Rep., 5,284; Henshaw, Rep., 5,211; Byers, Dem., 5,193; Quinn, Dem., 5,131; Moberly, Dem., 5,081; Pinkinger, Dem., 4,980; O'Donnell, Dem., 4,976.

A Fiendish Attempt—Not Failed.

An attempt which resulted in failure was made on Sunday to wreck a passenger train on the Shenandoah Valley Railroad, at a point near Berryville, Va. The obstruction consisted of large stones and fence rails. The engine and baggage car passed over the obstruction without further damage than the breaking of an iron bar on the car. Five coaches, locomotive and a baggage car constituted the train.—Globe.

Week of Prayer—1884.

The Week of Prayer commences with the first Sunday in the year, January 6th, and the general arrangements of topics are as follows: Monday, January 7th, Praise and Thanksgiving; Tuesday, January 8th, Confession of Sin and Prayer for cleansing and Renewal; Wednesday, January 9th, Prayer for Families and Instructors of Youth; Thursday, January 10th, Prayer for the Church of Christ; Friday, January 11th, Intercession for the Nations; Saturday January 12th, Prayer for Missions at Home and abroad. This is the general series of topics, and sub-divisions may be made according to the wishes of visitors and churches.

Burnt.

Mr. Jacob Waybright who lives in Pennsylvania just across Mason and Dixon's line about 4 miles eastward of Emmitsburg had just finished threshing his wheat crop on last Tuesday and started on the clover seed, when a strong flow off a pulley, a cylinder is supposed to have heated and in a moment conveyed by the clover dust, fire flashed all through the barn, destroying its contents in a short time, being 430 bushels of wheat, a large quantity of hay and straw, together with the clover huller, the property of J. W. Wiggins to whom the loss is heavy. The horses and all other live stock were saved; several shocks of corn fodder were destroyed in the field near by. We have not learned the amount of insurance on the barn, but it was a large one, and was only erected about two years since.

Death of a Minister.

Rev. E. P. Funk, pastor of the Woodberry United Brethren Church, died at noon on Tuesday from heart disease and dropsy, at his residence at Woodberry. Mr. Funk was thirty-five years of age, and a native of Rockingham county, Pa. He had been in the ministry for fourteen years, and was pastor of the Woodberry Church for two years. Before accepting the pastorate at Woodberry, he had a charge at Halifax, Pa. He was ill about two months, and for over a week he was aware that an early death was inevitable. He consequently made all preparations for his death, selected his pall-bearers, the officiating minister (Rev. J. L. Grimm, of Salem Church, this city), and made other arrangements. He leaves a widow and one daughter. His remains will be buried at Hummelstown, Pa.—American.

Burned to Death.

A sad affair is reported from Cumberland township, Adams county, Pa., where Mattie Price, aged about 10 years, was burned to death. The deceased is a grand child of Mrs. Susan Price, of Mudtown. The circumstances, as near as we can learn, are about as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Black, with whom the child was living, had gone to the corn field in the morning, and left Mattie to take care of their infant, about a year old. They also left instructions for the girl to commence the preparation of dinner at a certain time. Upon arriving at the house at noon, Mrs. Black found her babe sitting in the doorway crying bitterly, and the body of little Mattie lying in the yard dead. All her clothes were burned from her body, and the flesh burned to a crisp. It is supposed that as she attempted to light the fire for dinner, her clothes caught and she ran out doors. There were several pieces of wood and a box of matches found at the stove. The affair is truly a sad one.

A new Lutheran Theological Seminary building is to be erected at Philadelphia, to accommodate 100 students and the valuable library of Rev. Dr. Charles P. Krauth, late vice-provost of the University of Pennsylvania.

As Mrs. Robert Stewart, of Perry county, was putting away the supper dishes on Saturday evening week, her little son chasing his pet dog under the table, upset a lighted lamp upon her, and her clothing took fire. It was impossible to extinguish the flames until the poor woman was so terribly burned as to cause her death next morning.

On Friday afternoon, the dwelling of Mr. Wm. Reitzel, near the Chapel, in Buchanan Valley, Franklin township, was destroyed by fire, with most of its contents. Mr. Rickrode occupied part of it; but there was nobody in the house at the time. It is thought the fire originated from the stove pipe. Mr. Reitzel, who is a single man, lost all his furniture and clothing, having had to borrow a coat from a neighbor. Part of Mr. Rickrode's furniture was gotten out by neighbors. Our informant thinks the insurance on the property had run out.

Death of Rev. M. L. Shuford.

The sad intelligence reached us on Wednesday morning, of the death, at Washington, D. C., on that morning at 2 o'clock, of Rev. M. L. Shuford, pastor of the Reformed church at Burkettsville, in this valley. Mr. Shuford had been in attendance on the meeting of Potomac Synod at Newton, N. C., of which he was elected Vice President. He frequently complained of not feeling well lately, but attended all the sessions of the Synod and remained afterwards to visit his relatives in North Carolina. He was on his way home, but it seems upon reaching Washington became too ill to proceed any further. His family was telegraphed for, and his wife and son at once went to him, and Wednesday morning the sad news was telegraphed of his death. Mr. Shuford was born in Rutherford county, N. C., January 24th, 1818, and his age therefore was 65 years, 9 months and 12 days. He entered the ministry in 1844, and has been the beloved pastor of the Burkettsville charge for about 11 years.—His remains reached Burkettsville at noon on Wednesday, and the funeral services will take place there at 11 o'clock this (Friday) morning.—Valley Register.

INSTALLATION.

The Rev. Andrew T. Hays was installed pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Berlin, Md., on the evening of the 2nd inst., by a Committee of the Presbytery of New Castle. By special request of Mr. Hays, the Rev. W. Simonton, of Emmitsburg, Md., his late pastor, preached the sermon, presided, and proposed the constitutional questions. The Rev. J. Frank Stoenepfcher of Dover, Del., charged the pastor, and the Rev. Edward A. Snook of Cool Spring, Del., the congregation. The audience was large, intelligent, and closely attentive to all the exercises, and at the close came forward and gave their pastor a cordial greeting.

The interest of the ladies in the occasion was shown by the tasteful manner in which the pulpit and its surroundings, were decorated with a beautiful variety of autumnal flowers.

Mr. Hays enters upon this his first pastorate under promising conditions. His people are united and hearty in his support, appreciative of his labors in their behalf and will no doubt cordially cooperate with him in all well directed efforts to secure the prosperity of the church, and the good of the community.

From the Maryland Union.

The passenger trains coming into Frederick on the Pennsylvania railroad will hereafter stop at the corner of East Sixth and East streets, to allow passengers to get off. The new station will be known as North Frederick.

On Monday morning of last week Mr. Jacob Zimmerman, an aged and respected citizen of Frederick county, died very suddenly at his home near Bethel Church, about five miles from Frederick, at the advanced age of 93 years. Mr. Zimmerman was hale and hearty, and on the Friday previous worked about his house. During that night he began complaining and lingered until Monday, though no fatal results were anticipated. The deceased was an exemplary christian gentleman; was much beloved by his family and held in high esteem by his neighbors and friends for his many kind and charitable acts toward all. He was a strict member of Zion Reformed Church. He leaves an aged and feeble widow, five sons and many grand and great grand children, besides a large circle of friends to mourn his death. His funeral took place Tuesday, the 6th inst., from Zion Reformed Church, Rev. Dr. E. R. Eschbach officiating. The pallbearers were Charles Fout, Chas. Broadrup, Perry Smith and John Shankle.

Mechanics' Liens.

Everybody is not familiar with the lien law of Maryland, and a correspondent has asked the Baltimore Sun for information thereon. The journal replies: The Revised Code of Maryland provides that "every building erected and every building repaired, rebuilt or improved to the extent of one-fourth of its value shall be subject to a lien for the payment of all debts contracted for work done or materials furnished for or about the same." There may be liens also for work done on machines, wharves, bridges, boats and vessels. If the contract for work or materials shall have been made with one except the owner of the lot on which the building may be erected, the person furnishing materials or work will not be entitled to a lien unless he notifies the owner or his agent in writing within sixty days after furnishing the same. In case of machines, wharves and bridges every such debt shall be a lien until after the expiration of six months after the work has finished, but no longer unless a claim shall be filed at or before the expiration of that period.

From the Herald and Torchlight.

An entertainment was held at the Hagerstown Female Seminary last Friday evening, commemorative of the birth of the great Reformer, Martin Luther. It was of a high order, and reflected great credit upon the Seminary, its pupils and teachers. Mrs. J. B. Hendricks presided at the piano.

An attempt was made on Sunday to wreck a passenger train on the Shenandoah Valley Railroad, at a point near Berryville, Va. The engine and baggage car passed over the obstruction, which consisted of large stones and fence rails, without any further damage than the breaking of a brake bar.

Charles Berr, a lad 12 years old, and son of Mr. Elmer C. Barr, of Downsville, met with a serious accident on the school grounds on Tuesday, that may result in crippling him for life. The boy while wrestling with a school-mate, fell with his leg under him, dislocating the ankle, and tearing loose the tendons. Dr. V. Reichard reduced the fracture, and at this time the lad is resting easy. The fracture is a very bad one, and the probabilities are that it will result in a permanent disability.

THE CENTURY

PROGRAMME FOR 1883-'84

The programme for the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third under the new name, is as anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every season, THE CENTURY shows a decided gain in circulation. The new volume begins with November, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A New Novel by George W. Cable, author of "Old Creole Days," etc., entitled "Dr. Sevier," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the eve of the late Civil War.

"Life in the Thirteen Colonies," by Edward Eggleston, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country.

Three Stories by Henry James, of varying lengths, to appear through the year.
