MAY.

I feel a newer life in every gale!
The winds that fan the flowers,
And with their welcome breathings fill the sail,
Tell of serene hours—
Of hours that glide unfelt away
Beneath the sky of May.

The spirit of the gentle south-wind calls
From his blue throat of air,
And where his whispering voice in music falls,
Beauty is budding there;
The bright ones of the valley break
Their slumbers, and awake.

The waving verdure rolls along the plain,
And the wide-forest weaves,
To welcome back its playful mates again,
A canopy of leaves;
And from its darkening shadow floats
A gush of trembling notes.

Fairer and brighter spreads the reign of May;
The tresses of the woods
With the light dallying of the west-wind play,
And the full brimming floods,
As gladly to their goal they run,
Zest the returning sun.

—James Gates Percival.
WIND-VOICES.

Pile high the logs and draw the curtain round,
I will not heed—what matter that the wind
Howls round the house and shakes the window-blind?
I know 'tis nothing save the wintry sound
That speaks of Autumn's death;
Beneath its angry breath
The leaves lie slain upon the trodden ground.

Suppose we cannot keep it out? Suppose
Those are real voices in that angry roar
That surges round the house? Suppose,
Once more
The dead thus speak the words; the Cold repose
Of just-relinquished life.

CATCHING A BUFFALO.

BY BILL NYE.

A pleasing anecdote is being told through the press columns recently, of an encounter on the North Platte which occurred some years ago between a Texan and a buffalo. The recital sets forth the fact that two Texans went out to hunt buffalo, hoping to get enough for a mess during the day. Toward evening they saw two gentlemen buffalo on a neighboring hill near the Platte, and at once pursued their game, each selecting an animal. They separated at once, Jack going one way, galloping after his beast, while Sam went in the other direction. Jack soon got a shot at his game, but the bullet tore a large hole in the fleshy shoulder of the bull, and buried itself in the neck, maddening the animal to such a degree that he turned at once and charged upon horse and rider.

The astonished horse, with the wonderful courage, sagacity and sang froid peculiar to a bronco, whirled around two consecutive times, tangled his feet in the tall grass and fell, throwing his rider about fifty feet. He then rose and walked away to a quiet place where he could consider the matter and give the buffalo an opportunity to recover.

The infuriated bull then gave chase to Jack, who kept out of the way for a few yards only, when, getting his legs entangled in the grass, he fell so suddenly that his pursuer dashed over him without doing him any bodily injury. However, as the animal went over his prostrate form, Jack felt the buffalo's tail brush across his face, and, rising suddenly, he caught it with a terrific grip and hung to it, thus keeping out of the reach of his enemy's horns, till his strength was just giving out, when Sam hove in sight and put a large bullet through the bull's heart.

This tale is told apparently by an old plainsman and scout, who reads it off as though he might be telling his own experience.

Now, I do not wish to seem captious and always sticking my nose into what is none of my business, but as a logical and zoological fact I desire, in my cursory way, to coolly take up the subject of the buffalo tail. Those who have been in the habit of killing buffaloes, instead of running an account at the butcher shop, will remember that this noble animal has a genuine camel's hair tail about eight inches long, with a chenille tassel at the end, which he throws up into the rarified atmosphere of the far west whenever he is surprised or agitated.

In passing over a prostrate man therefore, I apprehend that in order to brush his face with the average buffalo tail, it would be necessary for him to sit down on the bosom of the prostrate scout and fan his features with the miniature candle bud.

The buffalo does not gallop an hundred miles a day, dragging his tail across the bunch grass and alkali of the boundless plains.

He snorts a little, turns his blood-shot eyes toward the enemy a moment and then, throwing his cunning little taillet over the dash board let, he wings his way in an opposite direction.

The man who could lie on his back and grab that vision by the tail would have to be moderately active. If he succeeded, however, it would be a question of the sixteenth part of a second only whether he had his arms jerked out by the roots and scattered through space or whether he had strength of will sufficient to yank out the withered little frizz and hold the quivering ornament in his hands. Few people have the moral courage to follow a buffalo around over half a day holding on by the tail. It is said that a Sioux brave once tried it and they say his tracks were thirteen miles apart. After merrily sauntering around with the buffalo one hour, during which time he crossed the territories of Wyoming and Dakota twice and surrounded the regular army three times, he became discouraged and died from the injuries he had received. Perhaps, however, it may have been fatigue.

It may be possible for a man to catch hold of the meagre tail of a meteor and let it snatch him through the coming years.

It might be that a man, with a strong constitution could catch a cyclone and ride it bareback across the United States and then have a fresh one ready to ride back again, but to catch a buffalo bull in the full flush of manhood, as it were, and retain his tail while he crossed three reservations and two mountain ranges, requires great tenacity of purpose and unusual mental equipoise.

Remember, I do not regard the story I refer to as false; at least I do not wish to be so understood. I simply say that it recounts an incident that is rather out of the ordinary. Let the gentle reader lie down and have a jack rabbit driven across his face, for instance. The jack rabbit is as likely to brush your face with his brief and erect tail as the buffalo would be. Then carefully note how rapidly and promptly instantaneous you must be. Then closely attend to the manner in which you abruptly and almost simultaneously have not retained the tail in your memory.

A few people may, have successfully seized the grievous and startled buffalo by the tail, but they are not here to testify to the circumstances. They are dead, abnormally and extremely dead.—Exchange.

MR. SMART has a wife who is fond of gossip, and the other evening when she was making various remarks about people, he said to her: "Isn't Mr. Boone a friend of your's?"

"Of course; and he is a mighty nice man."

"Well, I saw him not two hours ago with his arms around a woman."

"What? What's that? His arms around a woman, and he a married man!"

"Just that exactly."

Well what is that world coming to, anyhow?"

"Really, I don't know. Boone seemed to be enjoying it."

"Where did you see him?"

"Out on a certain back porch. He put his arms around her, and she put her face close to his, and then they kissed each other and I went away."

"Who could the huzzy have been? Did you see her?"

"Yes, and that was the strangest part of it all. I honestly never thought Boone would do such a thing."

"Who was she?"

"His wife."

A STORY OF THE EARLY SETTLERS.

BY ILLION ST. JOHN.

"Tell us a story, grandpa." It was a youngster who spoke, and as the words fell from his lips he came forward with a chair, and seated himself by the side of a little old man, with a kind expression, whose hair and beard were of snowy white ness.

"Oh, yes, grandpa, please do!" cried two or three flaxen-haired urchins, as they shoved their chairs up before the hearth. "Tell us about the bears and wolves, that used to be so numerous when you and grandma first moved into the big woods."

"No, grandpa, tell us about the panther that you shot in the big tree!" put in a black-eyed boy of some twelve years. "I think that story's just 'boss.'"

"I think the story about the old Indian man is the best," said a kind little girl of ten summers, as she placed her hand upon the aged man's knee, and looked up into his face. "You'll tell us that one—won't you grandpa?"

The old man arose and placed a couple of sticks of wood on the fire, in the good old New England fireplace and then went to the front window and gazed forth into the darkness. It was a night of storm and gloom, and the howling wind shook the windows spitefully.

"Well, boys and girls," said he, coming back and resuming his seat, "to-night carries my mind back to the time when we passed such a terrible hour in the forest."

Little Mary climbed up into the old man's lap; and with an anxious group of young listeners about him, he told the story.

"We had been in the wilderness nearly three years; and we had a good log house and log barn, and a clearing of some twenty acres. One afternoon, in mid-winter, my father requested me and James to go over to neighbor Belcher's and get a quarter of venison that he had left there the day before. 'And mind you, boys,' said he, 'you must be back before sunset. This is imperative.'"

"We promised obedience, and with light hearts hurried away."

"The distance to Mr. Belcher's was about two miles; over a rough, log road, and all the way through the woods. But to hardy, frontier boys, of fourteen and sixteen years of age, this was nothing; and at an early hour we arrived at Belcher's cabin, where we were kindly received by the family; after which we were soon engaged in sport with the Belcher boys—riding down hill, chasing each other across the stumpy fields, and visiting their traps and snares."

"Time passed rapidly, as it always does when pleasantly engaged, and in the fullness of our joys we thought not of returning until nearly night; when the loud roaring of the wind among the trees on the hill, and the angry whirling of a few feathery flakes of snow, warned us of an approaching squall."

"Hurriedly we repaired to the house, and, wrapping up the venison in a clean cloth that we had brought with us, we started homeward."

"Boys," said Mrs. Belcher, coming to the door, 'you had better stay with us to-night. It's a going to snow like fury, and the wolves will catch you in the dark before you get home.'"

"No, thank you, Mrs. Belcher," said I; 'father commanded us to be back before sunset, and it must be that time now. How thoughtless we have been that we did not start before!'"

"But it's dangerous boys," she expostulated; 'the wolves may devour you. Stay with us, and start early in the morning.'"

"She could not induce us to stay, however, for our guilty consciences were inwardly reproaching us for staying so long already. What would our kind parents say when dark night should come on without bringing our return?"

"Pshaw!" said James, who was some two years older than I; 'the wolves won't trouble us!' and with these words we started into a brisk trot.

"Already it was dusky in the thick woods, and soon the snow commenced to fall very fast. We had reached the top of a high wooded ridge, over which the road wound, and were plodding along, facing the stormy blast, when a low, dismal howl greeted our ears from the swamp below."

"Jim," said I, 'that's a wolf, sure's the world! I don't know but that we'd a done better to have stayed at Mr. Belcher's.'"

"Come on!" he returned. 'Who's a going to be afraid of one wolf? They never attack anything unless there's a gang together; and we'll be home before they get congregated; we're most half way home now.'"

"A few moments later the same dismal howl rang mournfully through the thick forest again. And this time an answering howl came up from the other side. Another moment and then a prolonged echo resounded behind us; and then another, and another, from the glen away beyond the head of the swamp."

"A cold shudder ran through my quivering frame, and my panting breath seemed to come in fitful gasps. What would become of us? We should be devoured by the wolves. Father, alarmed at our absence would come to find us, and they would kill him too! And mother and sister would mourn, and perhaps starve and die alone in the wilderness! And it would all be on account of our wicked disobedience. The thought was withering, and it racked my very soul with mental agony."

"We had been carrying the venison by turns. James snatched it from my arms, and we fled like frightened deer down the hill."

"As we neared the low ground, the sombre hemlocks shut out the little lingering light of day and we could but just discern the road. Louder and more fierce sounded the blood-curdling howls, as the cruel beasts gathered nearer about us, and we began to realize that a terrible moment was approaching."

"Suddenly a dark, tawny object dashed across the road directly before us. The dried twigs snapped, and the bushes rustled, as it leaped to one side and sent forth a quick, hoarse growl, causing us to quake with terror."

"James threw down the venison. He grasped my hand, and we sped along the road with all our might. A moment later such a commingled snarling and howling arose as I pray heaven I may never hear again."

"They were fighting over the venison; and now, if we would save our lives, we must do our utmost to escape during the few moments they would be engaged in devouring it."

"But ere we had proceeded a hundred rods they were coming again in swift pursuit. We were now running up hill; and we soon became so tired it seemed as though we must drop from exhaustion. Panting for breath, we staggered on. It seemed as though we should never reach the summit. We broke over the height at last, however; and, as we commenced to descend, a bright light glimmered through the forest, like a brilliant lone star of joy. It was the light from our own cabin window in the quiet little valley below."

"It rained in our despondent breasts a new ray of hope, and we darted on with renewed energy. The blinding snow dashed in our faces, and winter's frozen blast roared through the naked forest like a hurricane. The wolves were now close upon us again, and in a moment we might feel their sharp fangs pierce our flesh."

"We felt sure, if we could reach the clearing, they would pause in their pursuit, and then we should escape. By turning into a rude, log path, we could reach a corner of it within thirty or forty rods from where we were. It was the nearest point; though to reach it we would have to cross a deep, rocky gully, through which ran a small, turbulent stream of water."

"We did not stop to argue, but dashed down the steep declivity, regardless of hurts and bruises, and soon reached the creek. I know I would not have dared to rush down that precipitous bank in the way I did if it had been in the daytime and I could have seen where I was going."

"As we scrambled up the opposite bank, we heard three or four of the savage beasts crossing the creek behind us, and by the time we had reached the top they were upon us."

"James hurriedly drew off his coat and threw it down into the gulch."

"My soul! What a fearful noise ensued, as they leaped upon the tattered garment and tore it into shreds. It seemed as though all the fiends in Pandemonium were let loose. But it occupied their attention only for a moment, and then they came on again."

"We threw our hats behind us, but they did not stop for them. A huge gray wolf, uttering an angry snarl, leaped over my shoulder, his sharp teeth snapping close to my ear as he dashed past. The next moment he leaped to one side, snapping savagely at my legs; and, fastening

WAKING UP.

Notices in the Frederick papers called for a public meeting of the citizens of that town for Thursday evening, of this week, to take some suitable action in regard to the Court House railing. It is impossible to anticipate that action, and the results will reach us too late to be given in this issue. We cannot however forbear expressing the pleasure it gives us to note the disposition of the residents of Frederick to move in the matter. In this case we believe that "to will is to do," at least half the work, but it should be remembered that it not only concerns Frederick city, but the whole county.

Every good citizen should have a pride in all that concerns the county-seat, and especially the Hall of Justice, to which in some interest or another, all at times, have occasion to resort, and when thus visiting the courts of law, the record of fees, &c., every man finds the evidences of cultivated taste, neatness and propriety in the surroundings, he cannot but leave the place with a sense of satisfaction, as having a personal interest in the matter, and entertain a just pride as being one of the people to whom it belongs.

The fears that the grounds may be subject to depredations and encroachments, we believe to be idle. Even the rude and uncultivated are not wanting in a sense of the beautiful, and when the present enclosure is opened before them, under proper regulations, they will show themselves as interested for their preservation as others. That which is forbidden and fenced around is more likely to be rudely used than the open grounds. This advance in the direction of the aesthetic, we predict, will manifest its just influence in many directions.

IN MEMORY OF LUTHER.

UNVEILING OF THE STATUE OF THE REFORMER AT WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—The colossal bronze statue of Martin Luther, representing the religious reformer as he stood at the Diet of Worms declaring his unalterable convictions, was unveiled to-day in this city. The statue stands in front of the Lutheran Memorial Church, at the junction of Massachusetts and Vermont avenues.

The statue reaches an elevation of more than twenty feet, the pedestal being eleven feet in height. The latter consists of four blocks of dressed granite, the undermost covering an area of 120 square feet. The only inscription, "Martin Luther," is in raised letters upon the principal block of the pedestal. The entire body and limbs of the figure are enveloped in the folds of a priestly robe. The left hand holds a closed book, the clenched fingers of the right resting upon it. The raised face, deeply-knotted brow and firmly closed lips, together with the sturdily placed limbs, portray determination and defiance. It is a duplicate of the principal figure of the Luther group at Worms. The ceremonies ended with a benediction.

New York, May 16.—The remains of Charles O'Connor were buried from the Roman Catholic Cathedral this morning. Over three thousand people were present at the ceremonies. Among them were Roscoe Conkling, ex-Senator Kernan, Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, of Trinity Episcopal Church; Monsignor Capel; Bishops McQuade, of Rochester; Hendricks, of Providence; R. I.; William M. Everts, Hon. Roswell P. Flower, John Kelly, ex-Mayor Grace, John Graham, William Lummis, Hon. Benjamin H. Bristow, Joseph H. Choate, Wm. WHERE TO SPEND THE SUMMER.

Enquirers on the above subject will find a satisfactory answer by turning their footsteps this way. For healthful air, beauty of scenery, fine drives, pleasant retirement, and every desirable comfort, no island situation can surpass the attractions of Emmitsburg. Come early and enjoy the whole season.

The United States Senate Tuesday passed a bill placing U. S. Grant on the retired list of the army, with rank and full pay of general of the army.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 20, 1884. A leading Republican official, who expects to be in Logan's cabinet after the 4th of next March, said to-day that if he was President, having 200 delegates at his back, he would do anything enough to get the remaining 211 or dish out his patronage somewhere else. Now if this is not a strange and a strong commentary upon the weakness of Arthur's administration, I don't know where to look for the other proof. With 150,000 well fed office holders at his beck and call, and this grand army so distributed throughout the country as to spring to the breach at every local convention in every State, county, town and school district, it passes all understanding that he should be out-generaled in every single State, his own included. The goodly-goody resolutions that have marked the action of these conventions, and which pat Mr. Arthur on the back, are simply the heartlessness of politics—they mean simply an invitation to Mr. Arthur to stand aside with his patronage and give the rest of the fellows a chance.

Just as I expected. The railroad land grant lobby have been getting in their work to some purpose. The House Judiciary Committee report that Congress has no legal right to declare the forfeiture of any of these grants, because such action would be in violation of the provisions of the Constitution that prohibits the impairment of contracts! Here is a company to which was granted one and a half millions of acres of the public domain, on condition that the road should be completed and in operation within five years. This company not only did not complete their road, but they never even began its construction. After waiting four years without lifting a hand toward fulfilling its part of the contract the company, with an audacity worthy only of a soulless corporation, attempted to transfer the grant to another company, which of course intended to appropriate it as the company might see fit, because it had no contract to keep with the Government.

The Interior Department got a pretty strong scent at this huge rodent, and nipped the affair in the bud, but the powerful lobby comes to the rescue and the railroad bondholders will realize the full value of their securities without having invested a dollar in the construction! If the people don't like this way of doing things, they had better ask: what are they going to do about it!

Mr. Randall's appropriation committee is doing a good work in cutting down the consular and diplomatic appropriation. It would be money in our pockets, and the saving of a vast deal of public scandal if about one-half of this diplomatic retinue of tinselled humbuggers were wiped out altogether. The moment that an American is clothed with the little brief authority of a foreign consul, he seems to lose all respect for his country as well as himself. There is no more need of consuls at five-sixths of the places where they are now loafing at Government expense, than there is for warming pans at Timbuctoo.

It is a big job for one man to undertake when he attempts to reform the innumerable abuses of this world. He must be a sort of political agnostic, who believes that a Congressional enactment is all that is necessary to carry out the evolution and revolution of human nature, provided that the whole ground can be covered in a single bill. Senator Cullom, of Illinois, is one of those fresh fellows who has not been in the Senate long enough to receive his matriculation, but he has got a bill—in fact several of them—which propose to change this Government into one of the regular papa sort. One of these bills is turning the entire railroad system of the country over to a quintuple of "Ancient Mariners," with a modern port of a salary. Now the principle may be all right, and I am not going to quarrel over it if it is not, but I would like to know how long five men are going to stand out against the interests of two thousand millions of profitably invested capital?

Another of Mr. Cullom's propolasmatic enactments—if it gets through—is an edict against the dealing in "futures," the gambling in stocks, or the trading or speculation in grain, produce, oils, &c., of the officers of national banks. The Pope's bull against the comet had the effect to make many people confident of his power when the meteor disappeared, but with all the superficiality of modern insight of things yet to happen, there's nobody who believes that such a measure would have any more effect toward an achievement of its purposes, than the character of legislation has had in the Senator's own State, in which the memory of Chicago's commercial and financial rascalities is fragrant to those who got to Europe with their stolen wealth, and fragrant to the thousands of poor devils who lost their all. Don Pedro.

REPENTANCE ON THE GALLOWS.

The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher does not believe in gallows tree saints. His reported words are:

"Nothing to my mind is more indecent than the way in which criminals are cosseted and carried out of life. A murderer is in prison awaiting the expiation of his crime on the gallows, and the most salacious and abominable sympathy is shown to him. Women send flowers to his cell. Some of them would even kiss an ulcer for him. Priests and philanthropists run to see him. Tracts, books and delicacies are showered upon him, and all, forsooth, because he is going to die. Are not poor men dying all around and no sympathy poured out for them? But here is a monster, and for him the flood gates are opened. The newspapers say he died trusting in Jesus. Fought? What a world of mischief that thief on the cross did! Can the whole current of a man's life be changed in a moment? Can one become learned in the love of heaven in a minute? Can reeking passions learn from vestal purity? Can a boor from the country learn in a night how to conduct himself at a party in a mansion? And yet a man who has crept to the gallows through the common sewer blossoms at the last minute, when all hope of pardon is gone, into a saint. I don't believe it."

A New York babe had the distinguished honor of being claimed by two women, each of whom was sure that she was the mother. The referee to whom the difficult question was submitted of deciding which was the mother was not able to apply the test so successfully employed by Solomon, for he was assured that each of the claimants honestly believed the child to be her offspring. The means he did employ was, however, a very ingenious one; it might be termed a psychophysiological one. The referee based his decision upon a comparison of the motions of the hands and fingers of the child and the claimants, and a comparative study of the structure and anatomy of their toes. Referee Wickes will doubtless be regarded by an admiring posterity as the Solomon of the nineteenth century.—American.

POSTMASTER GENERAL GRESHAM'S decision to recommend a fast mail train over the Western Maryland Railroad is a joyful piece of news to the people of this State. The train is greatly needed, and we hope that the Postmaster General's prompt action in the matter will be followed by a hearty endorsement on the part of Congress. Our representatives should watch the matter anxiously, and see that it succeeds.—American.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

For one set of Instruments, on General Wire over one mile from city, $50 for Business or Residence.

For Residence in city limits on a general wire, $30.

Rental paid quarterly.

EXPLANATION.—A special wire is a wire with only one instrument on it, connecting with exchange.

A semi-special wire is one limited to only two sets of instruments, connected with exchange.

A general wire is one upon which the Company reserves the right to put as many instruments as they deem proper, connecting with exchange.

To call the Exchange, press the Button on left of Bell, as you ring one long ring, then take down the "Hand Phone," and when you hear from the party wanted, say "Please give me No. " (the No. wanted), keep your Telephone to your ear until you hear from the party wanted. When through talking say "Good-bye," hang up the phone, with the large end down, and give one short ring of the bell, to notify the exchange that you are through talking.

When you are called, do not ring back, but take down the Hand Phone and place it to your ear, and say "Who Called?"

Thinking the public for their kindness and patronage in the past, while manager of the W. U. T. Co., here, I most respectfully solicit a continuance of the same for this Company.

The amount realized was $145,65, which will be applied to the payment of the present floating debt of the county now bearing five per cent. interest per annum.—Examiner.

Mr. GEORGE P. ROWE, the talented young attorney who has been studying for some time in the office of County Attorney T. D. Ryan, and who applied for admission as a member of this bar some days ago, was examined yesterday by the committee appointed for the purpose, and acquitted himself in the most satisfactory manner. He was admitted to the bar at once, and is now a full fledged and very promising attorney.—St. Joseph, Mo., Gazette.

The Water Works.

The frequent rains of late, have considerably delayed the work of laying the mains, but on the completion of one half a mile, on last Saturday, they introduced the water, and the officials were highly pleased to note the perfection of the work, it being all compact and without leak throughout, and at the end of the line, the water rose many feet above the hills to be surmounted, thus verifying the calculations on which the work has proceeded.

Probably Fatal Accident.

FREDERICK, Md., May 19.—William G. Cole, driver of a four-horse Indian oil-conveying wagon, in attempting to enter the Carlin House stable with his team tonight, was caught and crushed between the seat of the wagon and one of the girders of the building and so terribly crushed that he will probably die. His lower limbs are said to be wholly paralyzed from injury to his spine. He is about forty years of age and resides near Baltimore.—Ball, Sun.

The pronounced opinion of the ablest physicians all over the country indicates that Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup is the best remedy for all the sufferings of little children caused by Wind Colic, Dysentery, Diarrhoea or Summer Complaint. Price 25 cents.

From the Boonsboro Times.

A valuable horse belonging to Mr. Martin Emmert, which had been turned to pasture on Sunday evening was found dead of the following day in an adjoining wheat field. A few days prior to the death of this horse, a hand living with Mr. Emmert threw a valuable horse up on a narrow, injuring him to such an extent as to unfit him for work.

Mr. Geo. W. Baker, residing between here and Keedysville, on the farm adjoining that of Mr. A. M. V. B. Daener, shot five foxes one day last week.

Line and Worms.

Mr. Wm. H. Gelbach, of this place, informs us that a thorough application of lime water to gooseberry and currant bushes infested by worms, has proven for him a perfect remedy. The worms seem to have disappeared entirely.

Nicholas Wierman, Esq., of Menallen township, grows large crops of perfect plums every year by an occasional sprinkling of the trees with lime water. These hints are worth acting upon.—Compler.

Air slaked lime dusted over the vines will prove effective.—Ed.

The Baltimore Sun.

On Saturday last the Baltimore Sun entered upon its ninety-fifth semi-annual volume and forty-seventh full year, a model newspaper in all respects, the Sun seems to advance in excellence and usefulness with the advancing years; with the best editorial talent, the very completest machinery of the times, its course cannot be otherwise than onward, and as influential in moulding public opinion, its authority is recognized on all sides. We regard the paper as indispensable to every office and every family that desires to be properly posted up on the affairs of daily interest and the news of the world.

List of Patents.

The following Patents were granted to citizens of Maryland, bearing date of May 13, 1884. Reported expressly for this paper by Louis Bagger & Co., Mechanical Experts and Solicitors of Patents, Washington, D. C.:

J. J. Baldwin, Baltimore, machine for turning insulator—plus 298,543.

B. C. Fuster, Baltimore, folding cash box—plus 298,569.

Richard Gormall, Baltimore, cash-carrier—plus 298,688.

W. H. Rose, Baltimore, bicycle—plus 298,607.

W. C. Wolfe, Hagerstown, steam pump for portable steam engines—plus 298,435.

The Telephone Exchange.

We made our first visit to the Telephone Exchange on Wednesday evening; the visit was one of much pleasure. The view from the room, which is on the third story, is quite interesting, and then the polite attentions and kind explanations of the Manager, Miss Belle Holman were highly gratifying. A wonderful piece of mechanism is that which contains the many valves and stops and butler that constitute the apparatus; and convenient as it is wonderful. It is truly "a harp of a thousand strings," whose vibrations can be heard by all who choose to pay for the privilege. Miss B. says there have been 2409 calls over the wires since the office was opened on May 7th.

Look out for Blot.

As the cattle will soon be turned upon the young and luxuriant clover, due caution will prevent much distress, the ranker the clover the more danger of the hoven or blot; a gradual introduction to the grass until the stomach becomes used to the change, and avoiding it when wet will generally prevent at all, but when the attack occurs give promptly 3 drachms of either chloride of soda or chloride of lime, some drovers depend altogether on the knife to relieve the pain, and some farmers simply fix a round stick in the animals mouth to be held in place by a rope over the head, 2 hours at a time for the first week are as long as the animals should be on the field.

Precautions against Lightning.

The time for thunder storms is upon us, we have already had several of great intensity, we therefore reproduce some suggestions we made on the subject about a year ago. "There is necessarily great difficulty in determining as to precautionary means to avoid the danger, and yet there are many occasions where persons incur needless risks, among these are standing under a tree during a storm; the tree, to be sure will measurably ward off the rain, but the human head is a better conductor than the tree, and when the tree is struck the electricity will almost invariably leave it and pass through the person under it. The best security in such cases is to lie flat upon the earth. To sit in a draught of air is also dangerous; the quick-silver on looking-glasses makes them dangerous, generally the middle of a room is the safest place, reclining on a feather bed is regarded a safe position. A properly constructed lightning-rod is however the surest safeguard of all. To have such, buy your own iron, and have your blacksmith cut it up to get a good point of platinum, that metal will scarcely melt, nor will it rust, important matters for a good conductor, see that the rod goes into the ground until it reaches moisture, it should terminate in the well, or the house-drain. Avoid the lightning-rodmen, for a poorly constructed or defective conductor, is more dangerous than none; the rod should be three quarters of an inch in diameter and be covered with good black paint. In no case allow a foul chimney on your premises. Investigation will generally discover the attractions which cause the descent of the electric current and these should be noted as things to be avoided."

A Sudden and Terrible Death.

The Telephone brought us word last Saturday afternoon, that a man by name of Henry Martin residing at St. John's church near Littlestown, Pa., was coming to this place with his team attended by his son a lad of about 12 years old, observing that a bag of feed had disappeared from the wagon, the son told his father to give him "Fanny" and he would get it, a man put the bag on the colt for him, this soon fell off, the colt started on a run, the boy fell off and his legs becoming entangled in the traces was dragged rapidly for some distance bounding and rebounding to the earth, and when found was dead and horribly mangled, both legs and an arm were broken and his skull crushed in, the accident happened about 3 miles from this place.

Poisoned From Drinking Tea.

A singular case of poisoning occurred at Ringgold, this county, last evening, the victims being Mr. John Rumberger and wife and a Mrs. Crenger, who is employed by Mr. Rumberger. The persons above mentioned ate supper as usual, at which meal tea was served. Shortly after the family had left the table, Mrs. Rumberger was taken with cramps, and all efforts to alleviate the pains proved ineffective. Dr. Boteler, of Waynesboro, Pa., was hastily summoned, who, upon examination of his patient, pronounced the trouble a case of poisoning. Emetics and other proper remedies were applied, when the patient began to revive. Mr. Rumberger, and Mrs. Crenger also had a slight attack, but they soon recovered. Dr. Boteler says the poison must have come from the tea which they drank for supper, as there was nothing else that could have contained it. By telephone this morning we learn that Mrs. Rumberger has recovered sufficiently to sit up, but still feels the effect of the attack. The tea, we are informed, was purchased in this city.—Globe.

PERSONALS.

Mr. Geo. Houck, of Waynesboro spent Sunday in town.

Mr. Samuel Willide and wife of near Mechanicsville, visited at H. Stokes, Esq., on Wednesday.

Rev. Fr. McCarthy, former Pastor of St. Joseph's Church, is visiting Rev. Fr. White, at the Parsonage.

Messrs. Chas. M. Clarke and Paul S. Johnston, of the Keystone Bicycle Club of Pittsburg, stopped in this place Wednesday night and through Thursday on their return from the great meeting of wheelmen in Washington City, their spinning locomotion as they proceeded from place to place caused not a little admiration.

Rev. E. S. Johnston and his son Edwin, made a visit to Washington City this week.

Mr. P. Kelly, salesman of A. R. Blacklock & Co., of Baltimore made a business visit this week, he was as hearty and genial as usual.

Mrs. M. Rhinehart, and Mrs. S. Flegle, of Carroll Co., made a visit to their aunt Mrs. L. M. Motter.

Mr. A. S. Shepherd, of Baltimore, has taken the position of assistant book keeper in the Mutual Life-Stock Insurance office, of this place.

Base Ball Notes.

A game was played on the 18th inst., between the E. F. M's. of the College and the Black Stockings. The former club had everything its own way, and defeated their opponents by the following score:

The New Postal Note.

A new postal note, which is to be substituted for the old and original issue, has recently been issued. The color of the old one was yellow; the new issue is of a lilac tint and much handsomer in appearance. It is not so complicated as the original design, and can be filled out much more rapidly. The only punch required is in the columns of dimes and cents on the right side of the note. On the left are coupons designating the number of dollars, one coupon remaining attached for one dollar, two for two dollars, and so on. In the old issue the dollars, dimes and cents were all on one side, and required to be punched. On the right side of the new design is a vignette in the shape of a shield, in which is represented the head of the Goddess of Liberty. Postmaster Miller, of Frederick City, has about three hundred of the old denomination on hand which will be used before a new book is ordered.

How to Prevent Fires.

The following simple precautions if strictly followed would prevent a great many destructive fires. The rules might be posted in every store, dwelling and factory with good results:

1. Always buy the best quality of oil.

2. Never make a sudden motion with a lamp either in lifting or setting down.

3. Never set a lamp on the edge of a table or mantle.

4. Never fill a lamp after dark, even if you should have to go without a light.

5. See that the lamp wicks are always clean and that they work freely in the tube.

6. Never blow out a lamp from the top.

7. Never take a lamp to a closet where there are clothes. If necessary to go to a closet, place the light at a distance.

8. Use candles just as much as possible in going about the house and in bedrooms. They are cheaper, can't explode, and for very many purposes are just as good as lamps.

9. Matches should always be kept in earthen jars or tin boxes.

The Ecclectic Magazine for June is distinguished by a number of notable articles. The powerful and suggestive paper by Herbert Spencer, on "The Coming Slavery," is one to arrest the attention of thinking readers. A striking essay in another vein, by Archdeacon Farrar, is on "Frederick Denison Maurice," who has affected religious life in England more than any other man of his time. Matthew Arnold's American lecture, "Numbers; or the Majority and the Remnant," is published in full. Special attention is called to Swabian's vigorous and pungent criticism, entitled "Wordsworth and Byron," which will be completed in the next number. Frederick Harrison's "Historic London" will be read with great interest; and among many readable minor articles may be noted "Christopher North," by Viscount Cranbrook; "Alexandre Dumas, the Elker," by Edmund About; "The Origin of the Electric Light," from Chambers' Journal; "A French Salon," from the Saturday Review; "Two Literary Break-fasts," by Charles Mackay; and "A New Theory of Sun-Spots," by Richard A. Proctor. The story of "Bourgeoisie," from Blackwood's, is of marked power. The whole number is eminently readable.

Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond Street, New York. Terms, $5 per year; single numbers, 45 cents; trial subscription for 3 months, $1.

There are four profusely illustrated papers in the June Century, and four full-page pictures, this number of the magazine is perhaps even more notable for its literary features than for its pictures. Of special interest is Miss Fanny Stone's "Diary of an American Girl in Cairo during the War of 1858."

It is a vivid and remarkable narrative of the life of General C. P. Stone's family during the month that mother and daughters were exposed in Cairo to the greatest uncertainties and dangers, while General Stone was at his post with the Khedive, and aiding in the English operations against Arabi. President Eliot of Harvard, discusses the question, "What is a Liberal Education?" in a paper on "The Use and Abuse of Parties," Dr. Washington Gladden advises independents to try to act with their party in the choice of candidates, and to both lead and follow.

In "Topics of the Time," an editorial called "Reaping the Whirlwind" is a sequel to the editorial of the April Century entitled "Mob and Magistrate," which so surprisingly anticipated the Cincinnati riot. Another editorial in the June number relates to another phase of the riot—the militia and the measures Congress ought to increase its efficiency. The illustrated papers of the June Century, in their order, are "A French American Sea-port," being an account of the Island of St. Pierre, near Newfoundland, and a part of Mr. S. G. W. Benjamin's series describing his cruise in the Albatross; a picturesque anecdotal description, by Franklin H. North, of the seamen's retreat on Staten Island, or "Sailors' Sun Harbor," to which paper belongs the frontispiece of a number, an engraving from St. Gaudens's statue of Robert Richard Randall, the founder of Sun Harbor; "American Wild Animals in Art," by Julian Hawthorne, with illustrations, and a curious and scholarly paper, interestingly illustrated, by Dr. Edward Eggleston, on "Commerce in the Colonies." In fiction, Henry James's new story, "Lady Barberina," in this number, concerns itself with the complications of marriage settlements; Mr. Cable's "Dr. Sevier" is continued; and Robert Grant's story of "An Average Man" is concluded. The short story of the number is a vivacious sketch of character and incident by H. C. Banner, entitled "The Red silk Handkerchief." The poetry is contributed by Kenyon Cox, Dr. T. W. Parsons, Miss Emma Lazarus, John Vance Cheney, Christopher P. Cranch, Richard Watson Gilder, and Mrs. Helen Jackson (H. H.), and there are several clever and amusing poems in "Brica-Brac."

From the Valley Register.

Miss Ella Mysinger, a young lady about 18 years of age, living in the family of Mr. Richard C. Kefauver, 14 miles east of town, narrowly escaped being burned to death last Wednesday afternoon. She had just kindled a fire under a wash kettle out doors, using a quantity of shavings for the purpose, and turning around to cleanse a tub, the wind blew the flames toward her and set her clothing on fire. She was quickly enveloped in flames, and started to run towards some hands employed on the premises, who were only a short distance away. They also ran to meet her, but by the time they reached her nearly all her clothes from the waist down were burned off. They tore all the remaining clothing from her body, slightly burning their fingers in doing so. But for the presence of these gentlemen, the unfortunate girl would probably have been burned to death.
