THE DIFFERENCE.

In sombre mood I took up memory's glass And backward glanced o'er five and twenty years

I saw a laughing, happy child at play, Her sunny tresses wreathed with flow'ers gay,
And eyes aglow with mirth. That little lass Was I, a quarter century since! Ah, may I
If you but count their pain, their hurries tears,
Those weary years are fifty, if a day

Again I looked, with magic lens reversed,
And lo, so near that I might almost touch

Her tossing curls, and hear her laughter when She chases butterflies through flowery glen,
I saw the same wee lassie as at first My little self! How long is it since then?

What? Five-and-twenty years! So much?
So much?
No, no! Upon my word 'tis hardly ten!

STORY OF A BANK CHECK.

What I have to tell is absolutely true. It did happen exactly as I shall try to write it. The only things I will omit are the names of the persons and the place where it happened. I might by lengthening out the story show the play of those fell passions, greed and covetousness, but I trust what I have to say will not lose its point from brevity.

The moral is the same old trite one, that honesty is the best policy.
When a man is tempted to commit a wicked action it often happens that the injury done another becomes irreparable. There is a sequence in all dishonest transactions which escapes the evil doer. Effect follows cause. This may come instantly, as quickly as an explosion when the hammer of the gun strikes the cap containing the fulminate, or the fire may lag back, but it will come some day or other. This is a longer preamble than I thought would be drawn from my pen, but as I am not a young man I may indulge in such comments, because in the life of any one who has passed the half century the force of the inevitable constantly occurs to him. A man of my age has been long enough in the world to have seen passing before him many a sad drama; he has been present at the very first scene, and has been an unwilling witness of the terrible conclusion.

I suppose few people who have had direct transactions with banks are not aware that errors sometimes happen. The heads of firms rarely are acquainted with such mistakes.
It is the business of clerks who have the checks cashed to see that the amounts paid them are correct.

Paying tellers if they do err are rather likely to pay too much than too little. Should they give more than the face of the check calls for, if the receiver of the money is dishonest, then the payer does not always hear about it. If he underpays, the demand for the difference is invariably made at once. I am rather inclined to repeat the assertion that in such mistakes as are made in the rush of business it is the commoner error to pay too much. Sometimes a very tired man whose brain has been too long on the stretch, or who is ill or nervous, mistakes the number of the check for the amount and pays away some thousands instead of hundreds.

I have known this to happen in a New York bank to a young friend of mine. He had sufficient good judgment not to embarrass the paying teller by making any noise about it. He resumed his place in the line, handed back his bank book politely requested the teller to look at the check he had presented, the amount he had received, and it was all so quietly done that he made for life a fast friend of a careful and expert bank teller. I have two or three times been overpaid by a bank teller. People who shop have very often mistakes made in their change to their advantage. Need it be said that without waiting an instant restitution should be made?

I was a clerk in a house when the incident I am about telling happened. We did a large business in the city of—, and our check book was in constant demand. I made out the checks and kept the bank account, but did not have the signature of the firm. Generally, for greater security when the amounts were large, I drew out the money myself. A great many of the transactions we were engaged in required us to pay at once to the individual the hard cash. The paying teller of our bank in the business season had all he could attend to. The money to be paid for an agricultural product very much in demand would on some days make the cash disbursements of this bank amount to $750,000. I remembered that on one occasion, looking at the teller, he seemed tired and depressed. Presently my check for some amount less than $1,000—wanted by me in five and ten dollar bills—he overpaid me $50. He had counted the money over twice before passing it to me. I recounted the money, found the error, and, being pressed for time, could not return the $50 until after 3 o'clock. The teller was obliged to me, but I noticed he bore a worried look. A month after this we had some balance to pay a customer living out of the city, amounting to $456. A check was drawn by me, handed to the creditor, and his account was balanced. The business entirely dropped out of my mind.

Some three months afterward the firm received a letter from this man, which was rather ambiguous of its find. There was an error, so he said in his account. Would we look over it? At once I examined the books, checked off every item, went through all the debts and credits of his business and ended by inspecting the final check paid him.
My employers, who were very honest and careful gentlemen, were satisfied with the accuracy of the account, and I was instructed to write him a letter to that effect. I did so as politely as I could, but at the conclusion of my letter I said: "You leave us in the dark, however, as to one thing. Three months have elapsed since our check was given to you.
If you had not been paid what was due you would have certainly heard from you before. Have you been overpaid?" My senior employer, a shrewd business man, looking over my letter, remarked: "Perhaps your question here might not be liked by Mr. —. However, let it go." I mailed the letter. We heard nothing more about it for a month. Then there came a tortuous letter from the man. "His account was wrong," he wrote. "My be he had come across some money he could not exactly account for."
He did not state how much money it was, or how it happened. It was a mean shamable on his part. I knew that. He had pricks of conscience; that I was certain of. The firm consulted with me what they should do. I made up my mind that more money had been paid the man on the check than he was entitled to. I went at once to the teller of the bank. I found him ill, nervous and tremulous. "Yes," he said, "my accounts were wrong. There had been a big deficit. I have not slept for months. I am afraid I have overpaid some one. But thank God I have made it up. I mortgaged my house and passed the amount short to the credit of the bank. I must have made a blunder somewhere.
But the strain on my mind has been killing me. I feel as if I were no longer fit for the place." He seemed to me to have moments of doubt and uncertainty. "I still cling to my place," he said. "Of course I have no recollection of having ever paid that check of $456." I said to him "that I had hopes of getting some of the money back," but I did not like to tell him how. But what I did do was to go that evening to the president of the bank and state the case to him. As it had been through him that I owed my position in the firm, he had every confidence in me. My advice was asked I was forced to declare that I thought the paying teller had better be given another and lighter position. Next day, when I went to the bank, the old teller had been apparently relieved. He was casting up some accounts in the ledger. When I spoke to him across the railing he did not seem to recognize me. Next day I was shocked to learn, through the president of the bank, that such positive indications of mental trouble had been shown by the teller that his friends had thought it wise to confine him in his house. His accounts had been at once rigorously examined, and were found to be correct. It was perfectly true that he had mortgaged his house, and had paid the amount received into the bank. He had concealed the loss for three months or more from the bank, which was a mistake on his part, but he had been punctilious enough to even add the interest for some ninety days."

Now, I felt absolutely certain that the man to whom the check had been paid must be a rascal. If he had offered restitution it came late—very much too late. My firm gave me carte blanche to manage the matter as I pleased. I could not have him arrested. As he lived in an isolated part of the country no efficient summons could reach him. If I had been aggressive before, probably not a cent would have been returned. I wrote now a sharp letter.
I said: "That a very large amount of money must have been paid him over and above the face of the last check given him, which was for $456." I stated "that I knew exactly how much it was." I must confess outright that this was bluff.
I was not sure that the teller had not made other mistakes besides this one. I wrote that "unless the money was at once restored I would blast his reputation. If he was inclined to be honest, even at this late date, let him do all he could and send back the whole amount." I thought it wiser not to let him know the mental condition of the teller.
I was quite certain that if he knew that the teller was out of his mind not one penny would he return. I wrote to him "that he must be in a hurry about it; that only the teller and I knew about it, and that my firm were as yet in ignorance."

At once, by return mail, I had a letter. The sum was not, as he said what I represented it to be. He made some specious arguments about a man finding a purse, and the description of it not tallying with the actual purse lost, or the amount init. Under such circumstances was a man bound to return it? If I could prove that he had been overpaid I ought to state exactly what was the amount. He might, he added, "never have written me a word about it, and no one would have been the wiser." But he had a conscience, so he said. I replied with a vigorous letter. I confuted his arguments, "He knew," I said, "the moment he had the bank notes passed over to him that he had been overpaid." A man might find a piece of gold in the dust of the road, and could never tell who dropped it there. But there was no analogy between the two cases. I cried for "immediate restoration or there would be an ex-posure." His answer did not come for ten days. "I was mistaken," he said. "He was not aware that he had been overpaid until he got home.
Then he did not know of it for a week afterward. It came out then in his accounts." I knew this to be a wicked lie, but it contained at least the written acknowledgement that he had been overpaid. His letter concluded as follows: "The matter has worried me considerably; has taken up a great deal of my time, and time for me is money.
Don't you think there should be compensation allowed me, or, in other words, can't we make a compromise?" (Oh, the blackguard!)
"If such a thing could be arranged I will come to the city and pay over to you the money. I am not afraid of the bank. I consider that my transactions have been with your firm."

The money overpaid by the teller had been some $4,000, and had probably counted out $4,500 instead of $456. I hated to do it, but I offered the scoundrel his traveling expenses.
His reply came promptly. To leave his business was worth a great deal more than that. Then, again, he thought of bringing his wife on with him and enjoying themselves. The up and down of it was that I must offer him a certain amount. "My temptations, you remember, have been very great." I offered him $500. I was disgusted. I felt like going to his place and tackling him myself. "This is my ultimatum," I said. "If I do not hear from you in ten days I will disclose the whole matter and you will be dishonored." His letter came back promptly enough. "He would take the $500.

It wasn't very much. The bank was ever so rich. Corporations had no souls." I consulted with the bank president, who thought it was better to close with the man. Would it be believed that the wretch and his wife came to — apparently on a pleasure trip? He had done a sharp and clever piece of business. He had not the least compunctions of conscience. He came to the office of an evening and I do not hesitate in saying that in his hip pocket there was a revolver. He handed me over something less than $2,000, asserting that the amount received, less the traveling expenses and the $500, made up this balance. When the money had been transferred by me to the safe I gave him a piece of my mind. I did not spare him. I heaped on him every insulting epithet I could think of. Then he showed his temper, which was an ugly one. "Now," said I (remember I was 26 then, and hotter blood ran through my veins than to day).
"You have wrecked an honest man's brains. That teller of the bank whose money you took has lost his reason. He will, I am afraid, never be a sane man again. This is your work." That seemed to cow him.
"Your repentance comes too late.
I hate you so that—God forgive me —had you as much as lifted your finger against me, I should not have hesitated in killing you like a dog, and no jury in the land would have touched a hair

Emmitsburg Chronicle.

EMMITSBURG, MD.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 30, 1884.

SEPTEMBER.

The morning was a bright September morn;
The Earth was beautiful as if new-born; There was that nameless splendor every-where,
That wild exhilaration in the air,
Which makes the passers in the city street Congratulate each other as they meet.
—LONGFELLOW.

EVERYBODY KNOWS IT NOW!

I Told You So! That's Always the Way!
You Never Can Keep Anything to Yourself. It's in Everyone's Mouth Already.
Why, Even the Little Boys and Girls at Home and in the Schools and on the Streets are Talking About the Grand Gala Day, and the Wondrous Oriental Magnificence of the Gorg. s Free Show in the Public Streets by John Robinson's Ten Big Gigantic Brand New Shows Combined Especially for the Year 1884.

John Robinson has always presented to the people one of the largest and best organized exhibitions in the world, but this year he has determined to be the head and front of them all. He has had an army of men at work at his home in Cincinnati, and a colony of agents, hunters and curiosity-seekers in every known climate under the sun, and the result has culminated in an enormous combination of Ten New Monster Distinct and Separate Shows, all combined and united under one vast and huge confederation the like of which never has been heard of since the beginning of the world. Ten Big New Gigantic Shows, with a huge Three-Ring Circus and a parade never equaled in splendor on earth before.
The intense interest and eager curiosity which has been aroused in the minds of our citizens by the extensive advertisements placed before them through the medium of the public press will receive overwhelming additional impetus from the unparalleled splendor of the gorgeous street pageant. The magnificent display of oriental grandeur, prancing steeds, gorgeously uniformed bands, and a thousand other thrilling and attractive features, will be the rarest, richest and most beautiful ever seen in our town.
This and vastly more than is here presented will be seen in Emmitsburg on Friday, September 12.

To Whom It May Concern.

We have been publishing the Emmitsburg Chronicle for nearly three months over five years, in all that time there has been a large number of our Citizens, who have not only been readers, but have commended our work very graciously, and yet they have not subscribed for the paper, depending upon the use of the neighbors' copy. We think this all wrong and cannot be blamed for so doing. It is ungracious to expect us to work for the public benefit, without being seconded in our efforts by the patronage, that may enable us to meet the expenses of the situation. Give us your efficient aid and influence friends, the encouragement of your subscriptions, your advertising, and short notices of local events for publication. The record of the Chronicle to this time is one our citizens may be proud of, when you accord us benefits, you benefit the community. Let it be remembered we devoted our entire time to the occupation it gives us, but we are not situated to serve the public on an eleemosynary basis.
Our business is straightforward at all points, trickery, and flattery, and underhanded ways are not to be thought of, and threatening deliverances do not consist with our views, but it must be understood that without cordial cooperation a pause may come to the work.

Pull Together.

To build up a town, the citizens must work to a common end. The teamster works in vain when the horses pull inregularly. The idea that a town has a future before it, and faith in that idea will help amazingly, every hand will aid to reach it. Location and the possibilities included in it, should create the public spirit that will animate the common work. Home feeling must supersede all other partialities, and the pass-word to favor in other quarters will be in the fact that one hails from the place. A proper pride in your home place will cause those who entertain it, to work in its behalf, and this work will advance not only your own, but also your neighbors material interests. Those who continually interpose objections to every projected improvement, who hang back and never start any, nor help those that are started, arrest the course of progress; they are dead weights, that have to be pushed aside ere the car can go forward. Patronize your home merchants and mechanics and home industries and interests of all descriptions. If it should seem selfish to be thus intent upon worthy ends, let it be remembered that self-love rightly directed is the true ground of all love.

A Remarkable Summer.

The summer now hastening to a close has been a most remarkable one in many respects, and particularly so in regard to the temperature. There have been conparatively few extremely hot days, and the evenings and mornings were cool and pleasant with but few exceptions.
There were several days when the air was sufficiently chilly to make overcoats and coal fires desirable.—Ez.

Disgraceful.

Some of our cemeteries are a disgrace to the community. Are the dead of happy memory, and whose works remain so soon forgotten that their tombs and the surrounding grounds may be neglected?
Even the Heaven care for the resting places of their dead.

Hay Fever
I have been a Hay Fever sufferer three years; have often heard Ely's Cream Balm spoken of in the highest terms, did not take much stock in it because of the many quack medicines. A friend persuaded me to try the Balm, and with the most wonderful success. This recommendation you can use for the benefit of Hay Fever sufferers.—T. S. Geer
Syracuse, N. Y.
Ely's Cream
Balm is a remedy founded on a correct diagnosis of this disease and can be depended upon. Cream Balm cures no pain. Gives relief at once. Cleanses the heart. Causes healthy secretions. Abates inflammation. Prevents fresh colds. Heals the sores. Restores the sense of taste and smell.
A thorough treatment will cure. Not a liquid or snuff. Applied into the nostrils. 50 cts. at druggists; 60 cts. by mail. Sample bottle by mail 10 cts.

WHEAT and GRASS!

Large Crops

—BY USING—

DIAMOND

SOLUBLE BONE,

—MANUFACTURED ONLY BY—

Walton Whann & Co.,

Wilmington, Del.

LARGE INCREASE IN SALES!

BETWEEN 800 AND 1,000 TONS
SOLD IN FREDERICK COUNTY
IN 1883.

This fertilizer differs in its composition from any other in use. It yields from two to ten bushels more wheat per acre than any other fertilizer.

Bear in mind, that with an application of 400 lbs. per acre an increase of 2 bushels of wheat per acre, in excess of the yield produced by other fertilizers, at the low price of $1.00 per bushel will reduce the cost of our DIAMOND BONE to the purchaser.

$10 Per Ton!

Where it is used the growth of Clover following the wheat is always large and vigorous.

Our sales are doubling yearly—this is the best evidence we can give of the estimation in which this fertilizer is held where it has been used.

We could here give certificates from hundreds of persons who have used it and recommend it to the farming fraternity, but deem it useless. For such certificates we refer you to our circulars, which can be had free on application.

For SALE BY SHANK & LONG,

Woodsboro, Md.

Agency at Emmitsburg:

We refer to the following named among farmers who used the Soluble Bone last year in this district:
JOSEPH DYERS, JOHN S. AGNEW, MILLER PATTERSON, DAVID MOITZ, GEO. W. PLANK, JOSEPH HOLDS, who having used it say that its results are as good as those of fertilizers that cost $5 to $8 more per ton.
