THANKSGIVING.

The day set apart by the civil authorities for the annual public acknowledgment of our dependence on Almighty God, for the gifts and mercies bestowed upon our land in the year just ending, recurs on Thursday next. Timely notice of the day has been given, and it is presumed that due preparations for the event have been made.

The proclamation of President Cleveland, presents about as complete a homily, in few words, as can be presented in explanation of the occasion, its aims and duties, together with a conspicuous flavor of the festivities and social reunions appertaining thereto, and we commend its perusal or reperusal as may be, as the starting point in the celebration of the day.

With us happily the time does not direct our thoughts to the victories of war; the commemoration of historical events, or the glorification of greatness; but it marks the time of fully gathered harvests of grain and fruits, and other products of the soil; the close of the season, a pause as it were at the opening of the rest of the winter to render unto the Almighty Giver, the hearty thanks of the grateful recipients.

Constituted as we are of bodily and spiritual existences, the observance of the day necessarily calls into exercise the activities of our dual being as thus represented; the needs of the one side being regarded, necessarily involves due exercise for the other, hence the idea of thankfulness completes itself in such reasonable and decorous attention to physical wants, as the time aptly calls forth. It is a time for happy reunions of friends, the cementing of old ties, and determination of plans and engagements for future action.

Thus far the prospect respects those upon whom fortune may smile, whose favoring circumstances find them fully prepared to observe the day as prosperity may dictate. But on the other hand there are many on whom the stern hand of adversity has rested, and whose narrow means preclude the pleasures which such an occasion ought to bring; for such the hand of divine charity should be opened, to give of our abundance to comfort and cheer the heart of the poor. He of whom it is written, "never man spake like this man," has said: "For ye have the poor always with you, and whenever ye will, ye can do them good."

CHARLES WILLIAMS SENTENCED TO DEATH FOR ASSAULTING MRS. KEENE.

CAMBRIDGE, Md., Nov. 16.—Chas. Williams, colored, who was convicted in the Circuit Court for Dorchester County on Friday last of a criminal assault upon Mrs. Eliza S. Keene, of Hooper's Island district, Dorchester county, in May last, was brought into court this afternoon to receive the sentence of the court. Williams walked into the court room with a nonchalant air, greedily masticating a quid of tobacco, and took his place in the prisoner's dock. To the usual question whether he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon him, he replied in a clear voice, "No, sir, I haven't got anything to say." Judge Holland then proceeded to pronounce the sentence of the law. "For this crime the law decrees that your life shall be forfeited, not so much to punish you as to deter others and protect society from the fiendish passion that led to your crime. It will be well for you if your punishment ends with the execution of the sentence of the court, which is that you be taken hence to the jail of Dorchester county, from which you come, there to be confined until such day and time as the Governor of the State of Maryland may appoint for your execution, and upon such day and time so to be appointed you be taken thence to the place of execution, and there be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may God have mercy on your soul."

In India the British captured the Burmese warship, belonging to King Thebaw, on Sun's day last, the fire from the British steamer Kathleen caused 200 of the crew of the Burmese vessel to jump overboard. The vessel being captured prevents further obstructions in the river or the moving of warlike munitions over it.

THE HANGING OF RIEL.

Louis David Riel, the leader of the Indians and half-breeds in the insurrection in the North-Western Territory, was hanged on Monday at Regina, N. W. T., notwithstanding the great efforts that were made to save him. Four of his companions, Big-Bear, Man-Without-Blood, Bad-Arrows, and Miserable-Man, are now awaiting the execution of the sentence of death passed upon them.

The trouble grew out of the act of 1868, known as the Rupert Land act, under which the Hudson Bay Company sold to the Dominion of Canada, the North-west Territory. When the government surveyors in 1869 went to set the country off into square blocks, they ignored the landmarks of the Indians and half-breed settlers, whose farms had each a river frontage. Riel stopped the surveyors, took possession of various points, including the capital of Manitoba, issued a bill of rights and demanded the right to elect executive and judicial officers, and a Legislature which should pass upon the acts of Parliament respecting the North-west. A counter revolution headed by an English-Canadian named Scott, was suppressed by Riel, and by him Scott was ordered to be shot. In 1870, Col. now Lord Wolseley, marched at the head of 1,000 troops to Fort Garry, and dispersed the insurgents, Riel and many of his men taking refuge in Montana. Riel was banished for five years; after that time returned to Manitoba, and was elected to the Parliament, but never took his seat. The government had meanwhile given each of the half-breeds in Manitoba 240 acres of land, dissatisfied therewith they claimed to have been unfairly dealt with. Then arose the second insurrection that began last March and ended in the capture of Riel and many of his followers in May. Before the arrival of the troops the immigrants had committed many excesses, the knowledge of these diverted much sympathy from Riel and his associates, that had previously existed on the part of a large element of the population of Canada, and great efforts were made to save him. The French Canadians while deploring the excesses of the insurrection, regard the hanging of Riel as an assassination.

Whatever may be the true bearing of the case, the separation between the French and the British Canadians has been widened by the execution and may give rise to grave political results.

THE WAR BEGUN.

The rumours of war in Eastern Europe, culminated in a battle in the Balkans on Saturday last. The Servians captured and occupied the Bulgarian city Iru, and their war cry was "On to Widdan and Sofia." Turkey was preparing to take a hand in the game. On Tuesday morning there was reported "a repulse of the servians by the Bulgarians under Prince Alexander. The servians were on their way to Sofia. In Sunday's fight the servians lost fifty killed and two hundred wounded. Subsequently the Servians marched on Widdin, gave battle to the Bulgarians near Widdan, and defeated them, with heavy losses on both sides, they captured 1000 prisoners, and also the Dragoman pass as well as the village of that name. The despatches for Wednesday, represented, a change in the tide of the war.

Prince Alexander it was said, leads his troops to victory. The Bulgarians after desperate fighting carried every one of the servian positions, that were menacing Slivitz. Thus it has happened that whilst the powers have been in conference at Constantinople to arrange the Roumelian-Bulgarian trouble, the Servians by their precipitancy have so complicated matters, that all Europe may yet be involved in war. Russia covets Constantinople. Austria and the other powers are deeply interested to frustrate her designs, and so the story runs.

The annual Report of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad covers several columns in fine print of the daily papers. We sum up the matter in few words, that notwithstanding the ruinous competition among the railroads and the universal depression in business that has prevailed, the company has paid its stockholders an annual dividend of ten per cent., and added $110,819.38 to its surplus, which is regarded a magnificent showing.

The New York Grant memorial fund now amounts to $99,005.

THE THREE AMERICAS EXPOSITION.

Special to the Emmitsburg Chronicle.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 16, 1885. Promptly, according to the published promise of the Management, the North, Central and South American Exposition opened its extensive grounds and vast halls to the public on Thursday, 10th inst. It was a gala day in this city: with decorated buildings, cessation of business, streets crowded with holiday seekers, cars crowded with Exposition seekers, a brilliant procession, a steamboat and war steamers' parade on the broad river, the thunders of artillery; and the blue sky, bright sun and bracing atmosphere to cheer the most confirmed cynic.

The people of New Orleans followed the military and civic procession to the Exposition Grounds by tens of thousands. The new steam railroad, from the centre of the city to the grounds, ran trains every ten minutes; and this was universally and justly admitted to be one of the happiest improvements by the new Management.

They purchased the buildings and other property of the first Exposition—the Cotton Centennial;—and, without any government, State or municipal pecuniary aid, have succeeded, after months of assiduous and trying labor, in having every inch of space occupied by exhibitors, and grounds and buildings renovated, improved and in complete order, without incurring any indebtedness.

It is certain that every State and Territory of the Union will present its claims for eminence in natural and artificial resources; and every country on the Western Continent, besides, will be amply represented. The Commissioners of the different States and Territories have many of them the valuable experience of the preceding splendid Exposition to guide them. They have wisely organized an Association to give strength and harmony to their patriotic labors: showing their appreciation of true merit in the election of Gen. D. McKee, of Arkansas, as President, and Col. Chas. B. Turrill, Commissioner from California, as Secretary.

The prominent new features of the Exposition are: The steam railroad from the centre of the city to the grounds; the electric railway conveying visitors from the St. Charles Avenue entrance to the Horticultural Hall; the collective exhibits of cities and towns; the games between the leading base-ball clubs of the country; the winter races, for which many first class stables are already entered; the large and select orchestra; the firemen's tournament; the transformation of Horticultural Hall into a winter garden, with tropical and semi-tropical fruits growing; the special Creole exhibit; and the wonderful pyrotechnic display, under Mr. Pain's management, entitled "The Destruction of Pompeii." This is one of the most magnificent spectacles ever seen in this country. It has attracted tens of thousands of admiring spectators at the principal watering places in Europe, and has only been seen in this country at Manhattan Beach. This will be its first exhibition at the South.

There will not be this year a separate department of "Women's Exhibits." The ladies' handwork will accompany the general displays from each city, territory or State. The Management wisely determined, also, not to make any discrimination as to locality or space with the exhibits of colored fellow citizens. They will appear side by side with those of the products of the skill and industry of the whites. The marked success that attended the exhibits, at the last Exposition, from Mexico and other Latin American Republics, justifies the belief that the Exposition for the Three Americas will be of incalculable benefit to our people and to our friends south of us, clear to rock-bound Patagonia. For the victories of Peace are greater than those of War.

EASTON'S NEW BISHOP.

The special convention of the P. E. Diocese of Easton met in Christ Church Easton on Wednesday to elect a Bishop of the diocese to succeed the late Bishop Lay, and Rev. Dr. G. W. Smith, President of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., was chosen, only three ballots were taken. It is not known whether he will accept.

The Bureau of Statistics reports a falling off of $93,251,921 in our foreign trade in the past year.

The New York Sun says: "President Cleveland's Thanksgiving proclamation is a very good specimen. It is well written, pious in tone, and elevated and philosophical in spirit," and then proceeds to give its views, to the effect, that such proclamations "belong to the Governors of states, not to the President of the Union."

"The Constitution nowhere authorizes the Federal Executive to issue religious manifestos. It is not a part of his duties to direct the devotions or inspire the acts of gratitude which individual citizens should render to the Divine Providence."

From the beginning the Governors of States have called their people to an autumnal thanksgiving, a festival of prayer and a banquet of prosperity. In the midst of the civil war, when the fate of the Union hung upon the decision of battles, the President wisely and properly undertook the lead in this celebration; but now a Democratic President might refer the function back to the Governors, and let State Rights once more prevail as in the democratic times of Jefferson and Jackson."

Conflagration at Galveston Texas.

At 1:40 a. m., o'clock on the 13th inst., an exceedingly destructive fire broke out in a small foundry and car repairing shop on the strand in Galveston, Texas, a fierce gale spread the flames with great rapidity. One hundred acres of dwellings were burned, the entire east end of the city scarcely contains a dozen brick houses, all were wood. Texas pine, a house would burn down in five minutes. The loss is placed at $2,500,000, equal to one eighth part of the taxable value of the city. Relief committees were organized, business was entirely suspended.

THE POPE RECOGNIZES SPAIN'S RIGHTS.

MADRID, Nov. 16.—It is understood that the Pope has recognized Spain's sovereignty over the Caroline Islands, and advises Germany to accept the commercial concession contained in the Spanish note of September 10. The decision, it is said, was presented to Germany and Spain to-day.

How to Preserve, to Slake and Apply Lime [We commend the following article from practical hands, as one that must commend itself to every intelligent farmer.]

The mode of preserving and slaking or applying lime properly, depends upon the time of year, and what kind of a field it is to be applied to. To realize a good crop of corn for instance, there is no better way to get lime to act quickly than to first haul it on large piles in the Fall or early Winter, selecting the highest points or knobs so that the ground descends each way from the heap, this will prevent the water from getting under the heap, and this will keep it from slaking. If the ground is level or hangs toward the heap the surface water will get under the pile of lime and then it will soon cause it to get in a wet, mushy condition. But if care is taken in selecting the highest ground or places for the heaps, and about 150 to 200 bushels of lime be put on a good round pile, running it up to a point and topping it out right as you would anything else you desire to keep dry. After your amount is on and your pile completed, take your shovel and make a little ditch around close to the bottom of the pile several inches deep and open it so the water can leave the heap. And if in the process of slaking the pile bursts open, close it. All this will require very little work and anyone at a glance can understand the idea. And if this rule is carried out, lime can always be kept in a proper condition for a year if desired. And if you want to make double sure, let it slake several inches deep on the surface, then cover with a few old boards, or a dozen bundles of fodder will do; no particular expense, time or trouble necessary to keep lime in an excellent condition, if only a little judgment and attention are given to the matter in time. In a few hours 1000 bushels can be shaped up to keep almost any length of time, try it and be convinced. It is advocated by the best agricultural writers that lime slaked in this manner retains more of the fertilizing properties, has more virtue, is more profitable, and gives better results than any other way it can be applied.

There are other good reasons why lime should be hauled in the fall. There are no crops in the way to be neglected by the time required to do the hauling; the team is not worth half as much at this time of the year as in the spring, and you have much more time than any other part of the year; and don't put off until spring what can easily be done in the fall. And one of the principal advantages is you are sure to have the lime just where you want it, and when your ground is ready, which is very important at this busy time of the year. The idea with the successful farmer should always be to get ahead with all work that can be done before the busy work begins. By being crowded too much the ground is often worked too wet or not pulverized thoroughly, and perhaps work gets very late by having too much on hand.

Now to give you an idea of the matter, 1000 bushels of lime hauled on large piles in the fall, and when spring comes and you get your ground ready, with two wagons and three hands that will work and stick to it, will spread it first-class in less than two days and a-half, if the weather is calm, so you can have your lime out of the way and working your ground in a few days time. The other way it may take you just that many weeks, it depends altogether on whether you can get your lime at the exact time. Everything must work favorably to get done in less than ten days. And when you put it on small heaps you always run a risk of having your lime drowned, if this should be the case, which it often is, your lime would not be worth half to what it would have been if spread from a large pile kept in proper condition.

Miscellaneous.

How to Spoil Children. Scene in a library—gentleman writing, child enters: "Father, give me a penny."

"Haven't any; don't bother me."

"But, father, I want something particular."

"I tell you I haven't got one about me."

"You must have one; you promised me one."

"I did no such thing. I won't give you any more pennies; you spend too many. I won't give it to you, so go away."

Child begins to whimper. "I think you might give me one."

"No—go away—I won't do it; so there's an end to it."

Child cries, teases, coaxes—father gets out of patience, puts his hand in his pocket, takes out a penny, and throws it at the child.

"There! take it, and don't come back again to day."

Child smiles, looks shy, goes out conqueror—determines to renew the struggle in the afternoon, with the certainty of a like result.

Scene in the street; two boys playing; mother opens the door; calls one of them, her own son:

"Joe, come into the house instantly."

Joe pays no attention: "Joe, do you hear me? If you don't come I'll beat you good."

Joe smiles and continues his play. His companion is alarmed for him and advises him to obey.

"You'll catch it if you don't go, Joe."

"Oh! no, I won't; she always says so, but never does. I ain't afraid."

Mother goes back in the house greatly put out, and thinking herself a martyr to bad children.

That's the way, parents. Show your children by your example that you are weak, undecided, untruthful, and they learn aptly enough to despise your authority, and regard your word as nothing. They soon graduate liars and mockers, and the reaping of your own sowing will not fail.

A Note in Natural History. Mr. Simon Barnes, our clever live yman, asked us to go with him in the woods a few evenings ago, and he said he would show us a trick about calling birds. As is not generally known, even to good hunters, Mr. Barnes says that the whistle of the male and female is quite different, which, by close observation, we learned before we returned from our hunt. At this season of the year the male birds are easily called up by merely giving the call of the female. The male seems to say "Bob White," and the female "Boy see." By the time he had given us the dots we were out in the woods. Having secreted ourselves, he gave the female call, and here one came right straight for us. Sometimes they will come flying and pitch close to your feet. We were out but a short time, and we killed five. Mr. Barnes tells us that he generally goes out in his buggy, calls them to him, and kills them at short range. He never kills a female, for they will not come to the call. This is one branch of ornithology to which heretofore we were an entire stranger.—Buxley (Ga.) Democrat.

Gold Excitement in West Virginia. There is excitement on North river, Bloomer township, Hampshire county over the discovery of gold-bearing quartz on the lands just north of North river postoffice. Specimens of the quartz have been sent to assayers in several eastern cities and reports sent back that it was very rich. The quartz vein has been located for over a mile along the north river, and an inspection of the gravel and sand in the river bed shows auriferous deposits in paying quantities.

The starched linen collar is under the ban of dress reformers, one of whom says: "In connection with coughs and weak throats few people consider to what an extent these are due to chills caused by the impervious starched linen collar. An unstarched woolen collar is recommended."

One clergyman rebuked another for smoking. The culprit replied that he used the weed in moderation. "What do you call moderation?" inquired the other. "Why, sir," said the offender, "one cigar at a time."—Church Herald.

THERE will be more coal marketed this year than in any other year in the history of the coal trade.

Humorous.

ON a lark—its feathers. THE Bored of Trade—Tired salesmen.

"PLEASE state of what dynamite is made?" asks a subscriber. That depends entirely upon what kind of dynamite you refer to. O'Donovan Rossa's dynamite is composed principally of wind.

It is easy enough, said a witty Irish orator, to repeal the union of the United Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland. Just transpose two letters, and they become untied kingdoms at once.

"WHAT'S the first thing you would do, Jones, if you were stung by a hornet?" asked Smith, who had been reading an article on the treatment of stings.

"Swear," replied Jones, solemnly. And the conversation abruptly ceased.

PROSPECTIVE bridegroom (to prospective bride)—"Would it be possible, do you think, dear, to postpone our wedding until Monday? I am in receipt of a despatch calling me to Buffalo on important business." Prospective bride.—"I'm afraid not, George, dear. The wedding presents, you know, are only rented until Saturday."

OLD Blobs got tired of having the dog around, a useless beast, although affectionate, and, taking him out in a vacant lot, he tied a half-pound can of dynamite to his tail and lit out for a safe place to see the explosion. The devoted animal followed his master closely, and the faster Blobs went the faster went the cur, with the fuse hissing behind him. Just about this time the thought crossed Blobs's mind that he ought to have tied the dog; but he didn't stop to consider it. Just as he lost his wind and picked up a stone to persuade the dog to leave the thing went off. It was a success. Portions of the late Mr. Blobs are arriving daily by mail from the different counties, and the funeral ceremonies will be held when the returns are all in. The dog is dead.

"A love for the animal kingdom is common to everybody," said a Sunday-school talker. "Some people love birds, others like dogs, horses, goats, etc., and it is quite proper that they should do so. I suppose every little boy and girl here loves some dumb creature better than all others. Don't you my little friends?"

All hands went up. "That's right, and I'm glad to see it. It shows that you have hearts full of love for the poor creatures who have not been blessed with reason and other precious gifts like yourselves. Now, to illustrate a point I am going to ask some little boy to tell me what his favorite is among the domestic animals. Ah, thanks. This little boy shall answer. What do you like best, my little man! Speak up loud, so that all may hear you."

Boy (in tones that made the windows rattle and put the audience in an uproar)—"Chicken!"

Political Economy. Old Harkney, when he announced himself as a candidate for justice of the peace, made this strong point: "Feller citizens, I is in favor o' political 'conomy. Widout dat great fack de country will go ter rack."

Shortly after the election, Andrew Banks, a political "striker," called on the magistrate and said: "Mawnin, 'sah; mawnin."

"Fast rate, I is erbelegged teryer, how is it wid yesse?"

"Oh, toler'ble. Say, jedge, 'fore yer wuz 'lected yer promised ter gin me two dollars. Does yer ricolleck de fack?"

"Mighty well, I neber furgits nuthin'"

"Glad ter heah yer say it, gin my money, please an' let me go."

"Does yer ricolleck de ticket I wuz 'lected on?"

"Yas."

"Whut wuz it?"

"P'litical 'conomy, I b'lebes."

"Dat's de ticket. Here," handing him twenty-five cents.

"Whut's dis fur?"

"Whut's it fur? W'y it pays yer off, dat's whut it's fur."

"I won't hab it."

"All right," putting it into his pocket. "I neber begs 'er pusson. P'litical 'conomy means twelve an' er half cents on de dolfar an' dat's de ticket I run on. Sht de do' when yer goes out. Good day."—Arkansas Traveler.
