TO MRS. FRANCIS L. MACE.

BY CLARA PIERCE.

"Only waiting," sweet the cadence Of the faith-inspiring words, Like some aeolian measure, Thrilling as the song of birds. Breathing hope in every sentence; Throbbing pulses join the strain, Hearts bowed down with weight of anguish Rise in rapture o'er their pain.

"Only waiting till the shadows Are a little longer grown?" E'er we hear the longed-for welcome To our bright eternal home. Even now we catch the radiance Of the promised land afar, And a sweet prophetic vision Rises up, as, bar on bar, Falls the soft and plaintive music Like a benediction down, Till, our very cross forgetting, We perceive the waiting crown. Jordan's flood no more appalls us, Undismayed we seek its tide; Straining eyes o'erlook the billows Surging darkly at our side.

For we only see the glory Of the Land beyond the wave. What to us the sting of dying? What the victory of the grave? Hark! The music throbs no longer, Trembling hands and tear-wet eyes Pay their sweet and holy tribute, As the hymn in silence dies.

HOW TO ECONOMIZE.

BY MARY E. VANDYNE.

"Why is it so difficult to economize?" The wrinkles of Mrs. Lorton's brow were very deep, and it was with an air of weariness amounting almost to despair that she laid down the pencil wherewith she had been checking off a list of accounts.

Aunt Abby lifted her eyes from the stocking which she had been darning with such exquisite neatness, and gazed sympathetically at her distressed friend.

"I am afraid you don't quite know how," Mrs. Lorton looked astonished, and we girls, who were spending the holidays with our friend, wondered also what the little lady could possibly mean.

"Don't know how?" Political economy, I am willing to admit, is a most difficult science; but I did fancy that domestic economy involved anything deeper than simply self-denial and the avoidance of unnecessary expenditures.

Aunt Abby smiled. "It may seem that way in the beginning; but I really doubt if there is any part of our daily living that requires more tact, judgment, and experience than this same business of economizing successfully."

"The results of my last year's work inclined me to suspect something of the same kind," sighed Mrs. Lorton. "I clearly must have made a great many mistakes somewhere, but just where I am at a loss to discover. I certainly have tried very hard, and have done without a great many things I used to think were quite necessary to the comfort and happiness of the household; yet here the figures are, really the sum total is very little less than it was a year ago, when our income was so much larger."

Mrs. Lorton looked thoroughly discouraged. We who admired her so much and took such pleasure in the intimate friendship to which she had admitted us, sympathized with her most thoroughly. She evidently saw how we felt from the expression of our faces, for she turned to us laughing and said:

"You young ladies must be very much interested in my financial troubles. It is too bad to entertain you with my lamentations over these unruly ends that seem to require such an undue amount of stretching in order to meet."

We hastened to reply that anything which concerned her could not fail to interest us, when Aunt Abby (a relative, it should have been explained, of Mrs. Lorton's husband, a gentle little lady whose life had been spent in a distant city) riveted our attention at once by saying:

"I was just about the age of these young ladies when I first made acquaintance with what I am now inclined to call the science of domestic economy, though, like you, when I first found myself under the necessity of mastering it, I thought there was little in it, save doing without many things I was accustomed to, and bearing the discomfort as heroically as possible."

"Well," smiled Mrs. Lorton, "what are the great underlying principles (isn't that the phrase?) also the processes whereby we are to arrive at practical results namely, the bringing of our expenses within my husband's means?"

"Well," echoed Aunt Abby, "one of the leading principles is the abandonment of the velvet cloak I saw you working at so industriously this morning, and all garments of a similar character."

"What can you mean? Why, I have worn that cloak two winters, and now I have put new sleeves in it, and it is quite as good as new. Surely nothing could be more economical than that. Why, I take immense credit to myself for that performance."

"Precisely. It would have been very extravagant to give or throw the cloak away. You would have blamed yourself greatly, would you not?"

"Of course I should."

"Well, let us emulate the famous cow, and 'consider.' The cloak is of Lyons velvet; the new sleeves require a yard of the same material, costing $10. The cloak now is 'quite as good as new' but, new or old, it can only be worn in fair weather. There must be a cheaper one to 'save it.' Again, this velvet cloak requires a handsome dress under it, and a cheap bonnet would be quite incompatible with it. You require, therefore, to complete the operative process resulting from the underlying principle of this velvet cloak, the repairing of which was such an economical measure, an expenditure of anywhere from $50 to $100 to produce the harmony in your toilet which your cultivated taste demands, and perhaps $50 more for another suit in which to go out on cloudy days, to wear which, and for all the ordinary, commonplace business of life. Would it not, then, have been much more economical to let the velvet cloak go, and purchase a substantial cloth one, trimmed with fur, we will say, so that it shall be handsome enough for visiting, suitable for church, not too frail to stand a sprinkle of rain, and requiring to go with it nothing more elaborate than a well made cashmere dress and a tasteful bonnet of felt, or some material as enduring?"

Aunt Abby paused, and following her suggestion, we all emulated the cow, and "considered" Mrs. Lorton's wrinkled forehead relaxed, and after a few moments she broke into a merry laugh.

"Why did you not read me that lecture a week ago? I believe that is the way in which I have been 'economizing' the whole of this past year."

"I have no doubt of it. It is the way in which every one begins, I fancy."

Aunt Abby amused us for the next half-hour with merry stories of the things she had bought to match other things in her early days of economizing, and Belle and I thought guiltily of some elaborate gauze overdresses, broad sashes, and expensive artificial flowers which we had recently purchased with a view to arranging some cheap evening toilets over two old silk skirts.

"I believe I have been doing the same thing with the children," sighed Mrs. Lorton.

"I believe you have," smiled her friend, "for only last Sunday I heard Jenny tell her sister, very gravely, that mamma was going to lengthen her blue silk by putting on a new flounce."

"Yes, and then the blue silk would demand a blue plush jacket, and that would call for a bonnet with ostrich plumes, or some other bit of frail magnificence."

"What shall I put on the girls?" "Two pretty tailor made suits."

"And waste the silk frocks because they are a trifle short?" "Decidedly, or else they will waste a great deal of money, and the children be left without any suitable serviceable garments for half the occasions on which they wish to go out."

Aunt Abby was growing very eloquent with her theme.

"I think," she said, "that a great many of the worries, the wrinkles, and gray hairs that vex the days and destroy the beauty of our American matrons grow out of this very want of harmony and arrangement in our domestic affairs. Wealth has been bestowed so lavishly upon American people in the past; we have enjoyed so much luxury, and gratified our tastes and longings so habitually, that as a nation we know very little of domestic economy. To use a rather vulgar saying, if we economize anywhere we are apt to 'save at the spigot and let out the bung.' We are wasteful in our kitchens, extravagant in our wardrobes, and careless of our furniture. Our attempts at saving when the necessity comes suddenly upon us are apt to be violent and spasmodic, and productive of very small results."

Aunt Abby smiled suddenly. "I remember one instance," she went on, in explanation of her amused expression, "when I proclaimed to my father, whose household was the scene of my early experiments in domestic economy, that for the last three months I had not spent but fifty cents a day for food, and with a household of six. 'Well, and what have you now in the house in the way of provisions?' he inquired, mildly. 'What had I?' I investigated my closets, and found—well, an empty flour barrel, an empty sugar barrel, a butter firkin with scarcely a pound of butter in it, no rice, no soap, no starch, no potatoes, no coffee, no tea. In fact I had simply gone on exhausting our supplies until everything had to be bought at once. My fifty cents per day had simply paid for milk, meat, vegetables, and such things as must be purchased day by day. I shall never forget the mild glance of injury wherewith my impatient parent went over my accounts which read, 'January, February, March, $15 per month; April, $65.' Our income was a very small one, and for some time I had to endure the impatience of tradesmen who kept asking 'when I would please settle that little bill?'"

"Another of my mistaken fancies," Aunt Abby proceeded, "was in regard to laundry work. What is so pretty about a house as white curtains, fine toilet tables with muslin drapery, and so on? And the muslin 'costs so little.' Alas, yes! But when the bill of one dollar for each window comes in from some Celestial, an Ah Wang, or Chu Wai, or Lang Fu shakes his long queue and 'mus habee him monee,' then one begins to realize what luxuries these pure white hangings are."

"Another point where economy is apt to press sorely is in the entertainment of one's friends. One does so long to give them something a little better than the ordinary fare, some one dainty dish to do them honor and to show what an accomplished housekeeper and cook presides over the table! But when that dainty dish must be shared by all at the table, those terrible bills will show it if the luxury is often indulged in."

"But one must entertain one's friends."

"Indeed one must. But then, if we reflect that it is their affection for ourselves, and not their appreciation of our cuisine, that brings them, we shall feel solicitude about producing and culinary triumphs for their delectation."

"But, Aunt Abby," sighed Mrs. Lorton, "would not life be very dreary with only brown stuff dresses, bare windows, and a diet of roast beef and cottage puddings?"

"No, I think not. Luxuries case to be pleasures when they bring care and worry as to how they are to be paid for with them. Besides, there can be a great deal of variety in the stuff dresses are made of; all drapery does not require semi-annual refreshing in the laundry; beef and cottage pudding are but two of the healthy, nourishing, and inexpensive varieties of food our markets provide."

"But I must finish my sermon. It is getting too long, and only that my audience is too polite to yawn, they would certainly do so. I will simply 'sum up,' as old-fashioned ministers used to say at the conclusion of 'eightly.' If you want to economize, think well whether the thing you propose to do will not, in addition to the original expenditure, bring with it a train of expensive consequences. Remember that nothing is cheap if it is not durable. Do not fancy that you are economizing if you are simply using up supplies that must be renewed at some time. Remember that in living beyond your income you harass yourself much more than you impress others."

"There, good people," laughed Aunt Abby, as she gathered up her knitting, "you have results of a great many severe lessons that I once learned in a very severe school."—Christian Union.

ONE CHICKEN.

How to Make it Go Round for a Large Family.

A writer in the Rural New Yorker says: The following I think a novel way of using a fowl and making much of it, and likewise rather original: First select a yellow-skinned fowl weighing about four pounds; after a good singeing wash well in cold water, and put over the fire in a kettle with plenty of water; let it boil; throw away this water, as it removes any taste of feathers; then return to the fire and cover with cold water, and boil slowly until tender. Season well with salt and pepper. Next, take up and joint and pick out all the best meat both dark and light, and cut in pieces one or two inches square (or longer), cut the liver and heart also in pieces, the size of dice, mix well with dark and light meat, and place in a deep stone or earthen dish and pour from the kettle enough of the top of the broth to completely cover the meat. Set away for future use.

Return all that remains, bones, skin and all, to the remainder of the broth, and boil until the bones are perfectly clean. Now strain through a colander and pick out the bones; next chop all you have, skin, gizzard and meat, very fine—the finer the better. If onion is not distasteful, slice one small one, and add two or three cloves, and boil in the broth a few minutes; then skin out and add the chopped chicken, and boil only a few minutes. It is ready to use, either with a little thickening poured over thick slices of toasted bread, or as a soup which cannot be excelled. A pound of bread cut very thin and toasted to a nice brown to crumb, is nice in place of vegetables or crackers. This amount will serve six hearty persons. Now for the choice bits: Say, the third day after the soup (in cool weather), make pies or turnovers. Warm the chicken and drain through a colander, leaving the broth in the kettle for gravy. Next take three pints of unsifted flour (about two pounds). Sift twice or thrice through a fine sieve your baking powder and salt, and three tablespoofuls of fine sugar. Wet with sweet milk; make a dough just stiff enough to handle. Roll the dough thin and spread over it one-fourth pound of shortening—butter is best and should be soft—then sprinkle with flour and roll up. Cut up in pieces for biscuits, roll about one-half an inch thick, and you have a circle the size of a caucer. Wet the edge half way round, lay on pieces of chicken to cover half the size, turn over the empty half and pinch the edges firmly together. Butter a dripping pan, lay on the turnovers so that the seam will be at the top, and be careful to lay them sufficiently apart to give each room to rise, for rise they will if they are good. With a sharp-pointed knife make a hole in the top of each and partly insert a piece of butter. Bake in a hot oven as long as large biscuit. Serve very hot with plenty of chicken gravy, which is made with a small piece of butter and flour added to the broth.

Now what have these two dinners cost? With mashed potatoes, not over ninety cents, all told. And very likely a very good breakfast or small dinner yet remains. The cold turnovers cut in rounds one inch thick and steamed are very nice.

I have also usedveal in the same manner, and it does well, at about half the price of chicken.

The Duty to be a Lady.
It is first the duty of a woman to be a lady. Good breeding is good sense. Bad manners in woman is immorality. Awkwardness may be ineradicable. Bashfulness is constitutional. Ignorance of etiquette is the result of circumstances. All can be abandoned, and do not banish man or woman from the amenities of their kind. But self-possession, unshrinking and aggressive coarseness of demeanor, may be reckoned as a State prison offense, and certainly merits that mild form restraint called imprisonment for life. It is a shame for women to be lectured on their manners. It is a bitter shame that they need it. Women are the umyizes of society.

It is they to whom all mooted points should be referred. To be a lady is more than to be a prince. A lady is always in her right inalienably worthy of respect. To a lady, prince and peasant alike bow. Do not be of restrained. Do not have impulses that need restraint. Do not wish to dance with the prince unsought; feel differently. Be sure that you confer your honor. Carry yourself so loftily that men shall look up to you for reward, not to you in rebuke. The natural sentiment of man toward woman is reverence. He loses a large means of grace when he is obliged to account her a being to be trained into propriety. A man's idea of woman is not wounded when a woman fails in worldly wisdom; but if in grace, in tact, in sentiment, in delicacy, in kindness she should be found wanting, he receives an inward hurt.—Gail Hamilton.

Think a Little.
Did you ever sit down on a Saturday night and make a careful inventory of the week? Did you ever stop to consider the number of "nickels" and dimes spent during the week for which you have nothing to show? Did you ever think how much more money could have been saved for a "rainy day" from the weeks' earnings, had you done as you ought to have done to yourself and the loved ones at home? Can you not on Saturday night look back over your acts of the past week and see where you could have been the means of doing good to some poor creature, some unfortunate one whose toil could have been made the easier by some pleasant word from you, which having neglected the opportunity you have a feeling of regret, and could you but live over again the days that are gone, you would have lived them better? These are but few of the many thoughts that come to the minds of the considerate on Saturday night.

Would Act Like a White Man.
"Look heah" said an old Mason, addressing his wife, "I tole yer ter quit 'sociatin' wid dem railroad niggers. Yer mus' ricklect dat yer husband' is er justice o' de peace."

"I doan' kere ef yer is," his wife replied; "it waz de railroad niggers wut 'lected yer. While de 'citement o' de 'backshun wuz gwine on yer tole me ter pay all de 'tention I could ter dem niggers."

"Dat's all right, Liza, but look heah. De thing am different now. Den de sityuation wuz full o' 'ciety and uncertainty. Now de clouds am dun passed erway. Den de hoeake wuz er cookin'; now it am cooked. While de dough am on de baker it am necessary fur ter keep up er hot fire in de stove, but after de bred am done it am foolish ter keep on er pokin' wood in de stove. So now, Liza, jest let de stove git cool. When we git hongry erin we ken build up anoder fire."

"Dat's all right, Mason, but ef yer breaks de stove an' flings de pots an' pans erway, how yer gwine ter cook when yer does git hongry erin? Yer's finger' erway dem pots in actin' de way yer's doing."

"Liza, yer knowledge is mighty fine an' yer filosofy is good; yer gogرافy is fust-class an' grammar is high up in de picturs, but lemme tell yer, I hab made up my mine ter act like er white man in dis matter; yer know how he do. Dean' reckernize de men wut 'lected him. Dat's de way he do."

THE SOUTHERN EXPOSITION.

Special to the Emmitsburg Chronicle.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 27, 1886.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special to the Emmitsburg Chronicle. SEPTEMBER 20.—The President and Mrs. Cleveland have returned to the city.

Much interest is manifested at present about Secretary Manning. It appears very doubtful whether he intends to resume his duties at the head of the Treasury, or not.

SMELLING THE BATTLE AFAR OFF.

The Frederick News is gradually preparing to distinguish itself in the present political campaign.

White on this subject it would be well to remind those who intend to enter the fight in this district that any of the nauseous political slanders which they may contemplate using against the prohibition candidate will meet with the prompt resentment of the entire Christian church in this country.

Candidates are always liable to criticism, that's why they are such. Every man on becoming a candidate accepts the position, with whatsoever may be involved in it.

MORE SHAKING UP.

On Monday, at 5.05 P. M., there was another earthquake shock, at Charleston, S. C., the first heavy one since the 21st ult., and another on Tuesday afternoon.

Among those that are more worthy of notice are the wonderful museum of Natural Science, presenting a collection which is the largest and rarest ever exhibited in this country, occupying over 10,000 square feet of space.

AN Associated Press dispatch from Hartford, Conn., dated Sept. 22, says:—

"A startling addition to the recent big defalcations in New England was made known here today. George M. Bartholomew, president of the Charter Oak Life Insurance Company and of the Holyoke Mass. Water Power Company, and holding other important trusts, has absconded, leaving a deficiency of over half a million in his accounts.

The immediate cause of the expose was the embezzlement recently by Thomas Plunkett, who has also disappeared, of the funds of the Hartford Silk Company.

A Considerate Thief.

A sneak thief got into the kitchen of Mr. M. Kerrigan one night last week, and made away with a loaf of bread that was just fresh, but kindly left half a loaf for the family breakfast.

Children's Day.

The exercises of Children's Day as announced for last Sunday, having been postponed on account of the indisposition of the Pastor, will be held in the Reformed Church on to-morrow.

Registration.

The officers of the registration will attend and sit on Monday the 4th and Tuesday the 5th days of October in performance of their official duties in the several Districts of Frederick County.

INDIAN Summer comes next.

It begins early in October there may be several continuous weeks of it; if it delays till mid-October it will go half through November, and if later, will bring the opening of winter about December 2d.

It is very easy to call the storms that have recently prevailed equinoctial. But there were frequent storms all through the summer, and yet they come, but they are not attributed to any particular condition of day-light or darkness. This shows the absurdity of the terminology.

"It is humor, wit, and honesty could save" from the ill's flesh is heir to, what a good price they'd bring in the market. Well, twenty-five cents will buy a panacea—Salvation Oil.

A merchant down town sells more of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup than all other medicines together. It surely must be the best remedy for a cough, cold, and other similar affections. Price 25 cents.

An adjourned meeting of the Diocese of Easton, held on Wednesday, September 29, resolutions were passed expressive of deep sorrow, at the death of the newly elected Bishop, Rev. Dr. Dyrstale, and another election for a successor to the late Right Rev. H. C. Jay, was held, which resulted in the choice of Right Rev. John Henry Ducahet Wingfield, as Bishop of the Diocese.

Here to Stay.

Some sparrows seem happy in recording that the sparrows have left their localities along with the migratory birds. It is not so here; on the contrary they show no signs of discontent with our pure mountain air, and the remarkably salubrious surroundings of this village.

They are not regarded with any special favor among us, but it cannot be denied that they exhibit good taste in appreciation of an inviting locality.

Hay-Stacks Burned.

MIDDLEBURG, Sept. 29.—Mr. James Koons, living on the banks of Big Pipe Creek, about 2 of a mile from this place, had 3 hay stacks burned last Saturday night. Mr. Koons suspected a man by the name of Staley of setting fire to them, and on Monday went to Westminster and informed the authorities. The deputy Sheriff came to this place and arrested Staley, who acknowledged his guilt, and then asked permission to change his clothes, which was granted, and he then gave "leg bail" for security.

From the Catoctin Clarion.

Rev. A. Stoner preached his farewell discourses in the St. John's and St. Jacob's churches of the Sabillasville charge, on Sunday morning and afternoon of September 19th. Rev. E. Welby, the pastor elect, will take charge the first Sunday of October.

The finest piece of masonry on the line of the W. M. Railroad is the new pier, now completed for the new iron bridge over Big Pipe Creek. Mr. Cyrus Moser with a force almost entirely made up of Mechanicstown mechanics are the builders. The stone comes from Gap Siding quarry about two miles west of this point and are gotten out in sizes as required by Mr. E. Moser and his force of hands.

Silly Croakings.

Be not deceived by the idle talk of those who predict a severe winter from thick corn-husks and such like indications of which they base their judgment. The thickness of the husks simply denotes the vigorous and healthy growth of the corn, and cannot have regard to the weather. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and ye hear the sound thereof, but know not whence it cometh or whither it goeth," is the language of the scriptures, and teaches us to meet the changes of nature as they occur with an humble trust in the Good Providence that rules over all. So for all prophesying and dismal suggestions refer to the same high authority, and learn their vanity, and how utterly without foundation they are.

Everything Goes Wrong.

In the bodily mechanism when the liver gets out of order. Constipation, dyspepsia, contamination of the blood, imperfect assimilation, are certain to ensue. But it is easy to prevent these consequences, and remove their cause, by a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which stimulates the biliary organs and regulates its action. The direct result is a disappearance of the pains beneath the ribs and through the shoulder blade, the nausea, headaches, yellowness of the skin, ruddy look of the tongue, and sour odor of the breath, which characterize liver complaint. Sound digestion and a regular habit of body are blessings also secured by the use of this celebrated restorative of health, which imparts a degree of vigor to the body which is its best guarantee of safety from malarial epidemics. Nerve weakness and over-tension are relieved by it, and it improves both appetite and sleep.

Aids.

Mr. Charles N. Hargett, Chief Marshal of our Agricultural Society has appointed the following gentlemen as his aids during the fair: J. Marshall Diffendal, Shafer T. Hargett, Chas. T. Best, Louis F. Keafauer, Jacob T. Moffett, James Smith, of T., James B. Davis, Elmer Brown, Thomas E. Cling, Charles Zimmerman, Silas Thomas, John E. Yonker, Upton Michael, Joseph Roelkey.—Examiner.

Killed While Making Cider.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Sept. 27.—Jacob Harper, a man of about fifty years, was killed while making cider at a large press, near town, this afternoon. He was working under the large beam, which was supported by a narrow board when the board broke and the beam fell. It struck him upon the back and crushed him against the press. His backbone was fractured. He died almost instantly.—Sun.

FARMERS, dairy-men and stock-raisers all use Day's Horse Powder. There is nothing so good.

The season for late suppers and consequent indigestion is at hand. Dr. Bull's Baltimore Pills is a specific for dyspepsia. Try them. Price 25 cents.

If the ailments of babyhood attack your baby use at once Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. Price 25 cents.

Drexel's Bell Cologne cheers our solitude.

From the Star and Sentinel.

The East Pennsylvania Evangelical Lutheran Synod, in Session at Reading, Friday, resolved not to receive or retain hereafter as beneficiary any young man who indulges in the use of tobacco in any form.

The post office at Graeffenburg, this county, has been discontinued by the Postmaster General, on account of the death of Miss Riegle, who kept it for several years, and the want of a candidate to succeed her.

From the Herald and Torch Light.

One of the large grey horses employed by Messrs. S. M. Bloom and Company in their transfer wagon, died on Saturday of lockjaw. It was twenty-four years old, but a servicable animal.

The directors of the Washington County National Bank at Williamsport have determined to reduce the capital stock of the bank by refunding five dollars upon each share to the stockholders, thus making the par value of the stock ten, instead of fifteen dollars per share.

Rebecca L. Hughes, executrix of Letitia P. Harvey, deceased, on Tuesday morning sold at public sale, in front of the court house, forty-nine shares of Hagerstown Bank stock at thirty-eight dollars and seventy cents per share—par value, fifteen dollars. This is the highest price ever realized for this stock.

Two persons living near Millstone Point were bitten by snakes during the last week. Lewis Miller was sitting on his doorstep putting on his shoes, when a rattlesnake crawled under the house and bit him on the finger. A little daughter of hiram Wells was also bitten while gathering wood. Both were in a critical condition for some time, but their lives were saved by the prompt application of remedies.

Borrowing Among Farmers.

To lend unto the needy and give unto him that asketh is both charitable and neighborly, and when the practice is properly conducted, a great convenience all around, but when it is all one side it becomes another thing entirely. A farmer may supply himself with an outfit of such tools and implements as are necessary to carry on his farm and garden, but to keep them in his possession and in good order is not so easy. One comes to borrow a hoe, rake, or spade, for use in his garden; another wants to borrow a saddle to ride a few miles, another a log chain, swingletree, mottack, etc., until half the things on the place are lent out, and when wanted for use must either be sent for (much the most probable) or the owner do without until it suits the borrower to return them. But the evil does not stop here. Not infrequently the borrowed article comes home broken, and, if of iron or steel, always rusty, or even after having been kept so long, the borrower does not actually claim it as his own. That neighbors can accommodate each other, and with mutual advantage, there is no doubt, provided the practice is properly conducted—there then being, as old Grimshaw would say, "reciprocity in the business," but with the advantage all on one side it is a sort of reciprocity not so agreeable on the other. The farmer should first provide himself with the necessary tools to carry on his farm, and if by accident he is compelled to borrow should at least take good care of and return anything that is lent him at the moment he is done with it.—Ex.

To avoid the worry in loaning, every lender should keep a book in which to charge the articles loaned, to the borrower and credit when returned. In this way any article wanted at any time can be traced at its holder.—Ed.

A Woman Shoots a Constable.

About 1 o'clock on Monday afternoon, Mrs. Amadeus Eyer, residing near Rocky Ridge, this county, shot and seriously injured, Mr. Nelson Barton, a constable who had called to serve a writ on her. Mr. Barton had arrested her once before, when she threatened his life. Mrs. Eyer is considered weak-minded rather than vicious. Mr. Barton was reported as being in a critical condition, but is now very much improved.

From the Frederick Times.

Last Friday William Gonso, a former resident of Frederick, died at his home in Baltimore, after a lingering illness of consumption, aged about 33 years. Mr. Gonso was a printer, and learned the "art preservative" in the Examiner office, this city.

A sad and fatal accident happened. Mr. Rodney Lambert, a former resident of this county, at Quincy, Ill., Wednesday last week, by a brick wall falling upon, and instantly killing him. Mr. Lambert was a native of this county, and was well known here. Last winter he spent the Christmas holidays in Frederick with his cousin, Mr. F. G. Thomas, and while here renewed many old friendships. He was about 54 years of age, and leaves a family. His father-in-law, Daniel Lambert, was present at the time of his son's death, and narrowly escaped with his life.

From the Williamsport Transcript.

Harry Foster, a sixteen-year-old lad, who resides near this place, met with a bad accident on Saturday last. Together with several companions, he went gunning in the Chapel Woods. He was engaged, in loading a shot gun at the time. He had succeeded in getting one barrel loaded, but failed to put down the trigger. In repeating the process upon the other, the first was discharged, the greater portion of the contents entering his right hand. The ends of the second, third and fourth fingers were taken off, and the thumb so badly lacerated that amputation was found necessary shortly afterwards. The muscles of the palm of the hand were also badly torn, but the arteries not seriously injured. The attending physicians, Drs. Snively and Krepf, of this place, inform us that the lad will recover the use of his hand. He is now resting quite as comfortably as the character of the injury will permit.

Improvements of quite an extensive character were begun on Monday by Messrs. Rhorer and Bomberger, carpenters of this place, upon the M. E. Church. The sides of the edifice will be wainscoted as far up as the window sills in both a handsome and substantial manner; extensive alterations will be made to the pulpit, with a view of modernizing it; the ceiling ceiled with flooring, and a brick vestibule, extending as far outward as the street, and built up into a tower, erected. The congregation found the above improvements to be a growing necessity, and have no doubt opportunely gone about making them.

Obituary.

Capt. Daniel Rhinehart, aged 62 years, died last Thursday near Union Bridge, and was buried on Sunday. He was a native of Carroll county, and at the outbreak of the war raised a company and served until nearly the close of the war in the Union army. Since the war he has been engaged in farming near Union Bridge. He was a brother of the sculptor, W. H. Rhinehart and of Mr. C. T. Rhinehart, of Baltimore. A widow and five children survive him.

Fire at Marion, Pa.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Sept. 29.—Early this morning the dwelling-house, store-room and warehouse of Andrew Statter, at Marion, were destroyed by fire. It is supposed the fire was incendiary in its origin. The loss to Statter is $5,000; insurance $3,000. The store-room and warehouse were occupied by S. S. & J. H. Day. Their loss is over $7,000; insurance $6,500. Simon Remy, who was assisting in the removal of goods from the building, was shot in the leg by a bullet from a revolver which fell from a secretory to the ground and was discharged.—Sun.

READ THIS TWICE. In addition to our premiums of music and "Mikado" cards, we have just issued a beautiful panel picture, in colors, 14 x 24, a facsimile reproduction of one of the Paris salon paintings for 1884, entitled "Two Sisters." It is a perfect gem, and well worthy a place on the wall of any of 'the patrons of Dobbins' Electric Soap. We have copyrighted it, and it cannot be issued by any other house than ourselves. The edition is limited, and will be issued gratis to readers of this paper in the following manner only:

HOW TO GET ONE. Save your wrappers of DOBB'S ELECTRIC SOAP, and as soon as you get twenty-five mail them to us, with your full address, and we will mail you "The Two Sisters" in a limited quantity. The soap improves with age, and those who desire a copy of the picture at once, have only to buy the five-cent bars of their grocer at once. This will ensure the receipt of the wrapper, as the stock of this edition is exhausted. There is, of course, no advertising in the picture.
