THE WEIGHT OF A WORD.

Have you ever thought of the weight of a word

That falls in the heart like the song of a bird.

That gladdens the springtime of memory and youth

And garlands with cedar the banner of Truth,

That moistens the harvesting spot of the brain,

Like dewdrops that fall on a meadow of grain,

Or that shrivels the germ and destroys the fruit

And lies like a worm at the lifeless root?

I saw a farmer at break of day Hoing his corn in a careful way;

An enemy came with a drought in his eye,

Discouraged the worker and hurried by.
The keen-edged blade of the faithful hoe

Dulled on the earth in the long corn row;

The weeds sprang up and their feathers tossed

Over the field, and the crop was—lost.

A sailor launched on an angry bay When the heavens entombed the face of the day;

The wind arose, like a beast in pain,
And shook on the billows his yellow mane;

The storm beat down as if cursed the cloud,

And the waves held up a dripping shroud—

But, hark! o'er the waters that wildly raved

Came a word of cheer, and he was—saved.

A poet passed with a song of God Hid in his heart, like a gem in a clod.

His lips were framed to pronounce the thought,

And the music of rhythm, its magic wrought;

Feeble at first was the happy trill, Low was the echo that answered the hill,

But a jealous friend spoke near his side,
And on his lips the sweet song—died.

A woman passed where a chandelier Threw in the darkness its poisoned spell;

Wearied and footsore from journeying long,

She had strayed unawares from the right to the wrong.

Angels were beck'ning her back from the den, Hell and its demons were beck'ning her in;

The tone of an urchin, like one who forgives,

Drew her back, and in Heaven that sweet word—lives.

Words! Words! They are little, yet mighty and brave;

They rescue a nation, an empire save—They close up the gaps in a fresh bleeding heart

That sickness and sorrow have severed apart.

They fall on the path, like a ray of the sun,

Where the shadows of death lay so heavy upon;

They lighten the earth over our blessed dead.

A word that will comfort, oh! leave not unsaid.

Now you must picture us, gloved and bonneted, standing on deck and gazing at Antwerp, the city "on the wharf." There seems to be an unwritten law among mariners that before a ship can be "made fast" it must fool around the dock for about an hour. The Westernland did its duty nobly in this respect; consequently the passengers had a good chance to rest themselves by standing first on one foot, then on the other, for the trusty steamer-chairs were tied up ready to be put on shore. I knew that Antwerp had been a place of splendor and importance, still I expected to see a low-roofed city crouching on the ground, and was disappointed by the large storehouses and rows of tall brick buildings. The dock presented one foreign feature—the soldiers; little thin men, in white pantalons and red coats trimmed with gold, carrying heavy guns.

As soon as the gang-plank was out, a swarm of little men in blue uniforms came on board and settled round the baggage spread out on the lower deck. These were the custom-house officers, and I watched to see how they were received by the experienced passengers. I saw at once that the proceedings were simple, so I touched one of the little men on the elbow and tapped insinuatingly on my trunk and bag.

The little man faced about so fiercely that the pointed ends of his mustache quivered. I smiled and nodded, and tapped my trunk again.

He asked in French: "Have you anything to declare?" It was spoken in the careless, indistinct fashion that men use for questions which they ask over and over again, week after week, and I thought he was asking whether this was all I had. I nodded more vigorously than before, and he fairly bristled while he held the government chalk suspended in his right hand.

A gentleman standing near translated the question, and my head immediately began to shake an emphatic "no." The officer glared, then an expression of scorn and disgust took possession of his lovely countenance, and he chalked a fancy flourish on my baggage, and left me to my meditations. In due time all the things were carried off and spread out on the dock, and when the travellers had engaged cabs or taken places in the hotel coaches their baggage was put on top of the vehicles. In Europe no Adams' Express Co., relieves the pilgrim of his burden.

We went to a queer little hotel kept by an old widow and her daughter—Hotel de la Fleur d'Or.

It was once a convent, but has been in possession of this family for more than a hundred years. It is in the Rue des Moines (The Monks' Street), nestling in the shadow of the Cathedral. I looked above the doorway for a golden flower, but failed to discover one. As soon as we had made arrangements with the daughter, who speaks very good English, we went out, for S. and I had business to attend to at the ship's office. In order that I might send a telegram and a cable message we were taken by a friend to the Bourse or Exchange, a beautiful building, unlike anything that we saw afterward. To send a cable message in the ordinary way is expensive, but to send according to the Cable Codex costs very little.

This Codex, published by E. A.
Adams & Co., Boston, enables the traveler to send a few cabalistic words, which are translated when they reach headquarters and sent in rational form to their destination.

I will say nothing about Antwerp in this letter, for I want to tell you of Ghent and Bruges. After attending to our business, we returned to the Fleur d'Or, packed all necessary toilet articles in our bags, ate a hurried dinner, and started on our travels. I had understood that we were to ride to the train, but when I saw the first detachment of the party proceeding on foot, I concluded that the station was near the hotel. But this was not the case, and as the day was hot and the stones were hard underfoot, long before we reached the station I was ready to drop with exhaustion. I would have turned back, but S. was with the advance-guard beyond the limits of communication, and I could not desert her; but I knew she too was tired. Dr. J. has the strength of Hercules, and generally wears seven-league boots, and the rest of the party were in training to walk in Norway.

At the station we waited a short time in a great room which had the attractiveness of a barn, not a door or a window open. Foreign cars are divided into little compartments, each holding twelve persons.

Two seats, facing each other, ran across the compartment and it has a door and two windows at each side.

These windows do not open, but each door contains a square pane of glass which can be raised or lowered by means of a strap.

The seats are stationary, so six passengers must ride backward.

The difference between first, second, and third class cars is mainly a matter of upholstery.

As Ghent is not two hours from Antwerp, we bought third class tickets, and, by feeling some person, Dr. J. got the exclusive right to two compartments not separated by a partition, and we were looked on as an English family.

The ride gave us glimpses of rural life in Belgium. The country seemed to be one vast farm, guarded by formidable windmills, and tended by the occupants of the little red-roofed houses. Profusely scattered among the vegetables, and flax and grain, were wild flowers—gorgeous crimson poppies and delicate blue blossoms—lending their beauty as finishing touches to one of Nature's charming pictures.

Arriving at Ghent we found the streets almost deserted, for it was just the middle of a hot afternoon; but we saw processions of children going home from schools that give no July vacation.

We walked to the Cathedral of St. Bavo, and its lofty arches and cool marble floor afforded us a grateful retreat.

Wearily we sat down on the little chairs with tall backs, and enjoyed the impressive solitude of our first foreign cathedral. It stays in my memory as a beautiful church, with long aisles, high Gothic arches, fine columns, and, in the centre, a showy pulpit made of carved wood, presenting an allegory of the Tree of Life, with Time and Truth.

When we had worn off the sharp edge of our fatigue, our friends went to the neighboring Belfry to see the arrangement of the forty-four chiming bells and get a view of the city. I yearned to see the great bell Roland, but S. and I had vowed that we would not ascend any thing in any place. So we found a priest who spoke English, and went with him to see the chapels of the cathedral. I cannot describe these foreign chapels in architectural terms, but will simply say that they are like immense bay-windows, screened from the main part of the church by tall iron or steel gates elaborately decorated in open work.

The churches are cruciform, and where the head of the cross meets the arms the Grand Altar or High Altar is placed. I think the chapels are generally built as in St. Bavo, around the head of the cross, back of the Grand Altar. The little priest was a good guide, allowing us to take our time and not annoying us with loquacity. The chapels contain tombs, altars, and pictures. There we saw an alabaster bishop in full episcopal robes reclining peacefully on his lofty tomb.

Of all the pictures in St. Bavo's Cathedral I hang only one "on Memory's wall." The Adoration of the Lamb, painted by Jan and Hubert van Eyck nearly five hundred years ago. It is a winged picture, that is, one completely hidden by folding doors or wings. We looked first at the pictures on the outside of the wings; then the priest pulled a cord and the wings flew apart, revealing the treasure they had concealed. The main part shows a grassy plain, in the centre of which is a crimson altar with a lamb standing on it, and angels kneeling around it; in front, is a fountain.
At a distance from the altar other worshippers are grouped around it, —the apostles, virgin, martyrs, popes, cardinals, bishops, monks, &c. At one side of the picture is Saint Cecilia playing on her organ, and attended by angels; on the other side are angel choristers. At the top are three large, majestic figures: Christ in a crimson robe, the Virgin clothed in blue, and Saint John the Baptist in green.

The wings show crowds of worshippers going to Jerusalem, which can be seen in the background. I cannot recall the pictures on the outside of the wings, but I have given this general description of the main picture in order that you may have an idea of its vastness. The colors are rich and varied, and nothing that I saw afterward weakened the effect produced by this great work of two of the old masters.

After seeing the chapels we examined the Grand Altar, in front of which stand four gigantic copper candlesticks, and the priest told us they formerly belonged to England but had been sold by Cromwell.

Leaving the church, we went with the rest of the party to the old Marche der Vendredi (Friday Market-place), now kept as an open green square with seats for the wayfarer. It is surrounded by the oldest building of Ghent; they stand as sentinels, watching the place where great historic events have occurred.

The whole scene was peaceful, but we could not help thinking of tumult and bloodshed, and martyrs' agonies.

Leaving "gray old Ghent" soon after five o'clock, we passed more gardens with windmills and wild flowers, and saw many canals and bridges. In an hour our little locomotive puffed into Bruges, the city of "bridges." I must reserve our Bruges experiences for another letter, and when I speak of Antwerp I will make general mention of Belgian streets and people.

To be Continued.

A Word to Young Men.

It is as easy to be a rich man as a poor one. Half the energy displayed in keeping ahead that is required to catch up when behind would save credit, give more time to attend to business, and add to the profit and reputation of those who work for gain. Honor your engagement. If you promise to meet a man or to do a certain thing at a certain moment, be ready at the appointed time. If you go on business, attend promptly to matters on hand, then as promptly go about your own business.

Do not stop to tell stories in business hours.

If you have a place of business be found there when wanted. No man can get rich by sitting around stores. Never "fool off" business matters. Have order, system, regularity, promptness. Do not meddle with business you know nothing of. Never buy an article you do not need, simply because it is cheap and the man who sells it will take out in trade. Trade is money.
Strive to avoid harsh words and personalities. Do not kick every stone in the path; more miles can be made in a day by going steadily on than by stopping to kick. Pay as you go. A man of honor respects his word as he does his bond.
Aid, but never beg. Help others when you can, but never give what you cannot afford to, simply because it is fashionable. Learn to say "no." No necessity for snapping it out in dog-fashion, but say it firmly and respectfully. Have but few confidants, and the fewer the better. Use your own brains rather than those of others. Learn to think, and act for yourself. Be vigilant. Keep ahead, rather than behind the time.

Young man, cut this out, and if there be folly in the argument, let us know.

Lost wealth may be replaced by industry; lost knowledge by study; lost health by temperance or medicines; but lost time is gone forever.—Samuel Smiles.

The mind in its own place, and in itself, can make a heaven of hell, a hell of heaven.—Milton.

TO CRITICS.

WALTER LEARNED.

When I was seventeen I heard From each censorious tongue, "I'd not do that if I were you, You see you're rather young."

Now that I number forty years, I'm quite as often told Of this or that I shouldn't do Because I'm quite too old.

O carping world! If there's an age Where youth and manhood keep An equal poise, alas! I must Have passed it in my sleep.

—Century Bric-a-Brac.

HOWEVER convenient for other purposes a chair may occasionally prove, its original use determines its appropriateness, both as to time and place. Chairs are to sit in, and therefore are not wanted at parties. It is the ruin of a party to have too many chairs in the room. The guests sit down in convenient corners as soon as they enter. The more skillfully these seats are arranged the more certain they are to sit down, and then woe be unto the party! In one corner is the belle of the ball, at the mercy of a dull swain who does not know how to get away, for it is a frightful undertaking for a shy man to leave one seat and find another; in another corner is the lion of the occasion, who does not wish to get away from his brilliant companion, and, probably, will spend the evening with her, since to dislodge a comfortable tele-a-tele is no easy matter. In the middle of the room the perplexed and discouraged hostess wonders why people do not circulate more. Too many chairs is the trouble. If people could not sit down, obviously they would not, and any hostess is clever enough to manage a party where the guests are constantly moving about, where the strangers are mixed with the habitués, the lion is jostled against the eager admirers whom he selfishly seeks to avoid, and the belle is surrounded by many swains

CANCER AND TOBACCO.

There is a disposition in certain quarters to grow sensational again, on the cancer question, and there have been given out some surmises, as to the rumored approaching death of Col. Ingersoll, as the result of a cancer similar to that of which Gen. Grant died, and the disease is attributed to the use of tobacco. The case of Mr. John Roach is also brought forward, even though it has been said, he never smoked at all.

We had a case recently, in this neighborhood, that of Mr. Peter Sell, and his executor has told us personally, that he only used tobacco occasionally and then very moderately, and only in the way of chewing.

Those to whom tobacco may be injurious endure the evil sufficiently, without magnifying its tendencies in a cranky manner, to the horrible results which are not pertinent in the case. No doubt its excessive use may hasten the development of the disease, where the predisposition to it exists, and so may any impropriety in diet, or personal conduct.

The mere fact of a repugnance in persons, to the taste or the odor of tobacco is no justification for them to war, in season and out of season, with all who do not agree with them. The natural repugnance that remains insuperable in many, indicates beyond dispute that the weed is unsuitable for the use of such persons, and they should not persist in efforts to overcome it, under any circumstances. Many do abandon it, but there are others to whom it is a benefit and, therefore to be encouraged, as witness, the cases of vigorous and robust persons of all ages, and especially the staid octogenarians who keep up the habit as a necessity of their lives, without which there would be a distressing vacancy in their existence.

Let those who find the habit injurious abandon it forthwith, and pursue that course of life which may best consist with health. Many find a necessity for this after the age of sixty and act accordingly.

But as organizations differ, there are particulars in which mere individual experience may not be made the rule to govern others. We are "fearfully and wonderfully made." Because a person who may have died of hydrophobia, used tobacco, no one would assert that the disease resulted from the tobacco. There must be a congenial or some other predisposing cause to develop cancer and kindred diseases. There are the cases of women, and others who do not use the weed, and of the millions who do, the few cases of the disease occurring among them, are wrongly used in condemnation of the whole. But when all is said, questions of health are not to be determined by those of diseased minds or bodies. Those who suffer from disease of any kind are ever ready to catch at the passing straws that float on the sea of life before them, as remedial agents. So the patent nostrums flourish, and with them the work of the physicians widen.

Health in reality means unconsciousness of organization, your sturdy yeomen are never concerned about the heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, &c. They that are well, need no physician. Illiberal judgment on these questions is to be condemned as well as on others.

The New Year has advanced with rapid strides. First Mother Earth has tried to settle down from the earthquake disturbances by which she was so thoroughly shaken up in August, and then a series of railroad accidents and others at sea, have opened the record of horrors in an appalling form, and the commercial centres have had their mutations, all which prove that time will run its course as of yore.

In the United States Senate on Thursday of last week, bills were passed granting pensions of $2,000 a year to the widows of Generals John A. Logan and Francis P. Blair.

A most disastrous shipwreck occurred on Saturday morning near the Little Island life-saving station, fourteen miles south of Cape Henry. Not less than twenty lives were lost among them five life-saving men, who, in discharge of their duty, were drowned. It was a German ship and not one of her crew survives.

DEATH OF JOHN ROACH.

John Roach, the well-known ship builder, died at 8.06 a. m. Monday, Saturday night he experienced sharp, shooting pains at the root of the tongue, with a difficulty in breathing. He grew weaker Sunday, but toward evening revived. Dr. Taylor at 5 o'clock Monday detected the approach of death, and at once informed the family that Mr. Roach had only a few hours to live. The dying man lost consciousness about half-past seven. His end was unmarked by a struggle. In the room surrounding the couch of the dying man were Mr. and Mrs. Wm. F. McPherson, of Philadelphia, John B. Roach, Garrett N. Roach, Stephen W. Roach, Miss Emilie Roach, John Walton, a nephew, Mrs. Roach and three grandchildren.

The funeral took place on Thursday, from St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church.

John Roach was born in county Cork, Ireland, on Christmas day, 1813. His father, Patrick Roach, was a merchant of that town, but after his death the family were left in poor circumstances, and in 1829 John Roach came to this country, and being without friends or money went to work at a brickyard, and soon succeeded in saving a little money. He next secured employment in the Howell Iron Works, in New York, and after saving some money and mastering his trade as an iron founder, he purchased land in Illinois, leaving the bulk of his savings with his employers. His Illinois speculation proved unsuccessful, and his savings being lost by the failure of his former employers, he returned to New York, where, by hard work at his trade, he finally saved enough money to purchase a small foundry where he employed four men. His business grew until at the time of his assignment, eighteen months ago, he employed 3,000 men, and his weekly pay-roll was $30,000. He put all his available profits into his business, until at last he possessed the best facilities in the country for building ships and marine engines. In 1867 he bought the Morgan Iron Works, and in 1871 he established his large ship-yard at Chester, Pa., where he built eighty or more iron ships, with an aggregate tonnage of 210,000 tons. The extent of business done by him in ships and marine engines amounted to $35,000,000. Mr. Roach did a large amount of government work, his last undertaking for the government being the building of the four steel cruisers, the Dolphin, Boston, Atlanta and Chicago. His failure to come up to the requirements of the government in the construction of the Dolphin brought about Mr. Roach's assignment. Afterward, however, the difficulties between Mr. Roach and the government were virtually adjusted, the assignees retired, and the firm was reorganized under the name of the Morgan Iron Works, the partners being Mr. Roach and his two sons and Mr. George E. Weed. Mr. Roach married Miss Emilie Johnson, who survives him, with three sons and two daughters. His fortune was at one time estimated at five millions, and in spite of business troubles he left a large estate.

DEATH OF BISHOP GLOSSBRENNER.

Bishop John Jacob Glossbrenner, senior bishop of the United Brethren Church, died at his residence in Churchville, near Staunton, Va., on the 7th, inst., at 6 o'clock, a. m. The Bishop was born in Hagerstown, Md., on July 24, 1813, and was therefore in his 74th year. He has been in ill health for the past three years. His wife died about two years ago. In early life he connected himself with the United Brethren Church and entered the active ministry at the age of nineteen. He was married to Miss Maria M. Shuey, near Staunton, Va., in the year 1833. In 1845 he was elected bishop, and continued in that office as one of its most popular executive officers, although by their polity an election is held every fourth year, until the general conference in May, 1885, when he was made Bishop emeritus. For sixty-five years he has been actively identified with the work of his church, for although he was retired two years ago, he did not cease his labors and often regretted that he could not answer all the calls made upon him from various parts of the church for his services on special occasions.—Sun.

An earthquake shock was felt in San Francisco on Tuesday morning.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special to the Emmitsburg Chronicle. JANUARY 12. Considerable business has been transacted at the Capitol during the past week. Among the first matters to receive attention in the Senate, were the pension bills of Mrs. Logan and Mrs. Apolline Blair, widow of Frank P. Blair of Missouri. The bill granting a pension to Mrs. Logan, was based upon the General's military services. It was shown, that General Logan had been severely wounded five times, and while on the battle-field of Fort Donaldson, had contracted rheumatism. Senator Cullom stated that there was no question that he died of rheumatism contracted in the service of his country. The bill was finally passed, giving Mrs. Logan $2,000 a year. Senator Vest, thereupon introduced a bill increasing the pension of Mrs. Apolline Blair, from $50 a month to $2,000 a year, and at his request, the bill was immediately considered and passed. Mr. Vest stated, that if the widow and family of any man were to be paid out of the treasury in proportion to his public service, it was the widow and family of General Blair. There appear to be, several rather singular facts, connected with these two pensions bills. It will probably not be recalled, but several years ago, when the bill to pension the widow of General Blair came up in the Senate, Senator Logan was strongly—even bitterly opposed to the measure. He was in fact, the greatest enemy the bill encountered and the question (although overlooked at the time) naturally arises, why a first water patriot like Logan, objected to granting a pension to the widow of Frank Blair—one of the most ardent and noble supporters of the Union? No one is likely to ever answer the question satisfactorily, and I think it extremely doubtful, if the departed Senator, could or would do so, were he in the land of the living.

There was a farcical little debate in the House this week, when the Naval reorganization bill came up. Mr. Sayers, of Texas began the festivities with the usual prelude, to wit:—emphasizing (in a voice choked with emotion) the "lamentable and deplorable" condition of the navy. Although there was nothing particularly original in this declaration, it did not fail to elicit the usual number of grins and nods of approval. As soon as Mr. Sayers, was rendered utterly incapable to proceed, (hushiness) Mr. Boutelle kindly continued the prefatory remarks. He assumed rather a humorous vein, and drew a clever little caricature of "a navy too weak to fight, and too slow to run away." Nearly all the members agreed that the sketch was well drawn, but the clause "too slow to run away" was very generally condemned, as a base and uncalled for slander. After many witticisms had been exchanged the House adjourned, without having taken an action. Most of the members, however agreed, that they had spent a capital day.

Senator Sherman this week, reported favorably from the committee on foreign relations an amendment intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill to provide for the expense of a preliminary reconnaissance, to be made under the direction of the Secretary of the navy, to examine the configuration of the conventional boundary line between Alaska and British Columbia, following the coast from Portland channel to the 141st meridian, and to ascertain and report how far the natural features of the country permit the accurate location of the line of demarcation contemplated by the treaty of 1867, ceding Alaska to the United States. The officer conducting such reconnaissance is requested to make such recommendations touching the practical establishment of the boundary line as in his judgment may be necessary.

Two misers, Joseph Perry, aged 73, and Robert Price, aged 65, were found starved or frozen to death in their humble abode in a basement, in Philadelphia, on Sunday. Perry is supposed to have left a large sum of money, as at one time he owned real estate valued at $100,000 or more.

A FIRE at the residence of Prof. Alexander Graham Bell, of telephone fame, on Tuesday, caused damages to the extent of $30,000. Mrs. Bell and children and five servants, being asleep when the fire occurred, barely escaped with their lives. Prof. Bell was in New York.

A NOBLE CHARITY.

Every situation in life has its responsibilities, and much is required of him to whom much is given. In the constant evidence of selfishness that rules, it is refreshing to note the instances which now and then appear to relieve the gloom of the picture. Such an one is presented at this time in the case of young Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt.

He has taken a great interest in the Railroad Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, and, having seen that institution grow from a small beginning in one or two railroad organizations until it has branches to the number of sixty-six, with libraries containing 21,072 volumes, which cost $17,034, and with accommodations for the moral cultivation and innocent recreation of the men, he proposes to do a most generous thing for the New York Central's branch, over which he presides. He has secured the ground opposite the Grand Central Depot, New York, and will erect thereon a stately structure, the various apartments of which will be provided with libraries, reading rooms, baths, gymnasiums, lecture rooms, in fact with everything that can be desired for the entertainment, instruction, elevation, comfort, innocent amusement and the nurture of Christian principles in men. This munificent gift will be the property of the railroad employees of the New York Central.

Mr. V. has long been a member of the Young Men's Christian Association, and by his action in the case will build himself a monument illustrative of the happiness that may result from discharging the obligations that grow out of the possession of great wealth.

READ THIS TWICE.

In addition to our premiums of music and "Mikado" cards, we have just issued a beautiful panel picture, in colors, 14 x 26, a facsimile reproduction of one of the Paris salon painting for 1884, entitled "Two Sisters." It is a perfect gem, and well worthy a place on the wall of any of the patrons of Dobbin's Electric Soap. We have copyrighted it, and it cannot be issued by any other house than ourselves. The edition is limited, and will be issued gratis to readers of this paper in the following manner only:

HOW TO GET ONE Save your wrappers of DOBBIN'S ELECTRIC SOAP, and as soon as you get twenty-five mail them to us, with your full addresses, and we will mail you "The Two Sisters" mounted ready for hanging, free of all expense.

The soap improves with age, and those who desire a copy of the picture at once, have only to buy the twenty-five bars of their grocer at once. This will insure the receipt of the wrapper, and thus before the edition is exhausted. There is, of course, no advertising on the picture.

THE Only Way to Conquer Dyspepsia.
It is perfectly preposterous to introduce poisons and other artificial solvents into the stomach, in the expectation that they will assist digestion by acting on the food itself. They will not. Nor is it possible thus to overcome dyspepsia. The only way to conquer that disorder, and prevent the numerous diseases and disabilities which it so readily provokes, is to renew the activity of gastric action by strengthening the stomach. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters eradicates the most inveterate forms of indigestion by restoring vitality to the alimentary organs, and those which are tributary to them. The liver, the bowels, the kidneys and the nerves, no less than the stomach, experience the invigorative effects of this standard tonic, which possesses alternative properties that greatly enhance its beneficial influence, and give a permanency to its effects which they would not otherwise possess.

Be sure and call for Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, if you are troubled with a bad cough or cold.

Mr. L. B. Kiefer, of Lancaster, Pa., wrote us: Having a sprained leg of almost thirty days standing, and after trying half a dozen advertised preparations in the market without satisfactory results, I tried Salvation Oil, and in less than three days my leg was all right again. There's nothing like it.

THERE has been more and better sleighing this new year, on a smaller amount of stock in trade (snow) than we can remember. It began with a thorough freeze of slush and soil, and each successive layer in small quantities, has acted as a non-conductor to hold the mass together, but then there was no let-up in the cold. The effect on the grain will soon appear. We trust it may not be severe.

Eyster's New Opera House.
Through the enterprise of Mr. A. Eyster, proprietor of the Western Maryland Hotel, Emmitsburg can now boast of a New Opera House, which is a credit to the village as well as the good taste of its projector.

The building is just South of the hotel on the street that leads to the railroad station. It is 75 feet long and 38 feet wide, has an arched ceiling 18 feet high in the centre. The stage is 18 feet front and 16 feet deep. The scenery was specially designed and painted for the room by Mr. James Arnold-Morris of London and New York, and consists of wood, landscape, kitchen, parlor, etc., etc., a curtain and draperies of crimson and gold colored plush; a handsome carpet covers the stage while the furniture and upholstery for the stage are elegant. Comfortable chairs make the seats. The room is heated by stoves and lighted with gas. A comfortable waiting room is at the foot of the stairs that lead to the hall. With this complete addition to the needs of the village, we may expect entertainments hereafter that will be improving and beneficial on all sides.

An Embezzler Sentenced.
Before adjourning on Thursday last week, the Circuit Court at Westminster passed sentence on Lewis Bollinger, who pleaded guilty of embezzlement several weeks ago. Bollinger is well known in this and adjoining counties, having at one time been possessed of considerable property. He was the agent of the Birdsell Manufacturing Company of South Bend, Indiana, and as their agent sold four clover hullers. In payment he took the notes of the purchasers payable to himself, and sent to the company forged notes payable to the company, purporting to be signed by the purchasers. For the fourth machine he received part payment in money, and this money he appropriated to his own use. There were three indictments for forgery found against him by the grand jury, and an indictment for embezzlement. Bollinger delivered to the company the genuine notes payable to his order, and upon his pleading guilty of embezzlement the state entered a plea in the forgery cases. The court sentenced him to be confined in jail for two months, and in passing sentence said that he had been strongly recommended to the mercy of the court, and as the facts surrounding the case indicated that he had been made the tool of others, and was perhaps more sinned against than sinning a light sentence would be imposed.—American.

The Perpetual-Motion Move.
Our contemporaries of the county have devoted much space of late to descriptions of "a perpetual-motion machine," invented as alleged by Dr. W. H. Gray and Son, of West Falls, this county, together with the claims of the inventors.

We just dismiss all such matters with the least ceremony, as being outside of the possibilities of human attainment, it having time and again been proven philosophically, mathematically, and every way a physical impossibility to reach that goal, and to attain which unbounded resources have been destroyed in every age of the world's progress.

Years ago that ingenious mechanic, our late fellow citizen Mr. James Taylor, father of Mr. Hiram Taylor, having spent much time in trying to solve the question, and having as he thought reached satisfactory results, submitted his plans and ideas to that great statesman and scholar, the distinguished John Q. Adams, who true to his settled principle of regarding the petitions and answering the letters of all applicants, responded at length in an exhaustive treatise on the subject, first in its general bearings, and next in great detail mathematically; showing the impossibility of reaching the end contemplated.

After devoting great space to his calculations and demonstrations, that would have puzzled a trained mathematician. He stopped short with the remark in effect—but these are matters which require the skill and knowledge of those versed in mathematics, showing the universality of his learning, and at the same time his respect for its due restriction within its respective departments. He must be a profound investigator who may set aside the deductions of that learned and immortal patriot. Life is too short to spend its fleeting hours on subjects whose characteristics simply reach reductio ad absurdum.

A Big Egg.
Master Thomas W. Troxell, a son of Mr. James W. Troxell, sent us an egg of a common barnyard chicken that measured 8 inches by 6 1/2 inches. It is extra at these times when the hens generally are on a strike. We don't ask any one to beat it, that's for the kitchen autocut to do. But if a larger one is found we must know of it. Any honest hen should equal it at present prices.

The Sun Almanac.
The Almanac of the Baltimore Sun for 1887 reached us last week, it consists of 100 pages, and is executed in the highest style of the printers art, and constitutes a book of reference in which everybody will find the fullest presentation of subjects for which reference may be desired, church, political business, legal, &c., also a complete record of events of 1886. It is sent free to all subscribers to the Sun, Daily or Weekly.

Cole's Cavalry Anniversary.
The 23d anniversary of Cole's Cavalry Veteran Association, volunteers of Maryland, was celebrated on Monday day night at Wagner's Green House, Baltimore, by a banquet. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Col. Henry A. Cole, president; Major O. A. Horner, vice-president; C. A. Newcomer, recording secretary; J. G. Maynard, corresponding secretary, and A. J. Kessler, treasurer. Prayer was offered by Rev. Charles Cole, chaplain. The welcome address was delivered by Lieut.-Col. G. W. F. Vernon. Col. H. A. Cole, after whom the cavalry is named, delivered a brief address. The toasts were responded to by Col. G. W. F. Vernon, A. M. Flory, Major O. A. Horner and Capt. L. M. Zimmerman. Sergt. C. A. Newcomer read "The Battle in the Snow." Among those present were Major O. A. Horner, Harvey G. Wintor, Geo. L. Gillean, Wm. J. Gilson and Wm. A. Fraley of Emmitsburg.

Church Convention.
A convention in the interest of church work was held in the Reformed Church at Rocky Ridge, on the afternoons and evenings of January 5 to 7. Among the subjects discussed were the following: "The proper conduct of Christian funerals;" "Advantages to be derived from Church Publications;" "The Relation of the Reformed Church to Christian Education;" and "The Attitude of the Reformed Church to Missions in the past and present." The ministers present were Revs. E. R. Deatrick, chairman; J. W. Santee, D.D., A. Ditzler, D. A. Souder, A. S. Weber, A. B. Stoner, U. H. Heilmann and the Moravian Minister of Graceham. The attendance at the evening sessions was very large, and the discussions were characterized by great earnestness and plainness of speech. The holding of conventions of this kind cannot help but be profitable to both ministers and people and will lead to clearer views of Christian doctrine and duty.

STRANGE as it may sound, counterfeit money, under the existing law, can be passed with impunity on Sunday. It is, therefore, well for the public to be on the lookout for a clever counterfeit twenty-dollar silver certificate of the 1880 series. The bad bills may be detected by the substitution of the letter R for the letter X in the word "taxes" on the back of the bill, by the seal being brick-red instead of cardinal, and by the length of the counterfeit, which is one-eighth of an inch shorter than the genuine issue.—Catholic Mirror.

Williamsport's Centennial Anniversary.
The centennial anniversary of Williamsport will occur on the 18th day of next May. The town was incorporated at the November, 1786, session of the Maryland legislature and Thomas Hart, Thomas Brooks, Moses Rawlings, Richard Pindle and Alexander Claggett were designated commissioners to survey a section of ground, not exceeding one hundred and fifty acres, as the site of the town. Thomas Brooks was the surveyor and the plat made by him embraced eighty-two acres. Record of the plat and certificate was made in May, 1787, at the request of General Otho Holland Williams, the founder of the town and from whom it derives its name.—Herald and Torch Light.

A Safe Robbery.
A daring safe robbery was committed at Frederick some time between Saturday night and Monday morning. The losers were Messrs. D. Tidlow & Sons, who have a large grain and feed warehouse on East Patrick street. The office in which the safe is located is in a corner of the building. An entrance was effected through a rear window. A quarter-inch augur hole was bored in the safe door and a small dynamite cartridge inserted. The explosion shattered the lock and burst the door open, but was not heard, because the thieves had placed grain bags against the door to deaden the sound. Eighty dollars in cash were stolen. The tools used were stolen from an adjoining shop.—American.

THERE has been some discussion of late about the planting of peach trees. The latest ideas favor elevated ground on the hill side, and the success of the orchards on the western side of the South Mountain is given in substantiation. The correctness of the position is indisputable. Cold is necessarily more concentrated in a valley than on the uplands, for the reason that the narrow bounds act as channels into which the winds compress the cold. But after all there is a belt of territory specially favorable for peach culture—such an one extends from Edgemont to Smithsburg. But we are not disposed to give our opinion that the Eastern slopes of our mountain may not be made thus productive until experiments shall have so proven.

Free Trade.
The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefited the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen, has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles, have perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10 cents remain the same size.

A Lucky Accident.

A Chicago druggist relates the following story of a lucky accident: "I was sitting beside the stove in sort of doze, when the night-bell rang violently. The instant I opened the door a boy not yet in his teens stumbled into the store with a prescription in his hand. It had been written by a prominent physician on Washington boulevard. More asleep than awake, I set about preparing the medicine—a task which consumed fully half an hour. After the boy had departed, I returned to my seat, and was just falling into a deep slumber, when the thought that I had made a mistake in the preparation of the medicine flashed through my mind. I leaped to my feet as scared a man as ever lived. Seeing the prescription, I read it over and over, again, each time becoming more convinced that I had made a most egregious and perhaps fatal error. No aconite had been prescribed, yet my thoughts and the moist plug in the bottle containing the drug told me that the poison was in the medicine. I darted out of the store in search of the boy, whose name I did not know; but he was nowhere to be seen. Returning to the store, I paced the floor like a madman. Unpleasant visions flashed before my eyes, and I was about to drop upon a lounge in despair, when the bell began to tinkle again. I thought my fate had surely come when I started toward the door. Imagine my surprise to find the same boy crying as though his heart would break, and holding a piece of a broken vial in his hand. "I—I fell and broke the bot—" the lad whimpered. "Spilled the medicine I gave you?" I gasped, not waiting for the boy to finish his sentence. "Y-e-e-s, sir!" "Hooray!" I yelled, choking the boy off and hugging him to my breast. I may have acted like a baby just then. I kissed him again and again, and squeezed him as though he had been a long lost child. When the astonished lad had left the store this time he clutched the pure, straight stuff, but I wouldn't pass through another hour of such torment for all the drug stores in the city."

Topnoody Taken Down.

Mr. Topnoody threw down his newspaper with a muttered objur-gation, and looked across the table at his wife. "What's the matter?" she inquired. "This confounded civil service reform twaddle makes me sick," he exclaimed. "I don't see why it is that a lot of men can't do their duty when it is marked out plainly before them."

"Did you order that coal today?" she asked irrelevantly, but with a new light shining in her face.

"I beg your pardon, my dear," he said, picking up his paper again, "that's got nothing to do with civil service reform."

"Did you order that coal, I said," she persisted.

"N—no, my dear," he hesitated. "I forgot all about it. But I'll do it the first thing in the morning. As I was saying, my dear, this civil service reform—"

"Don't talk to me, Topnoody, about civil service reform," she said hotly. "What you want to devote your time and attention to is domestic service reform. There isn't a lump of coal in the cellar; the boards are off the side fence; that back yard looks like a pig-pen; there hasn't been a stick of kindling chopped since Saturday; you haven't given me a cent of money in two weeks, and the cook is going to leave in the morning. You may think that's the way to do things, Topnoody, but I want to say to you that I'm running this administration now, and if you don't stop fooling with politics and attend to business you'll hear from headquarters after a fashion that will make your head swim. Civil service reform, indeed!"

Topnoody never said a word; he knew better.

Speaking of a new riding habit the Boston Herald thinks that it will not be generally worn by the girls until a great many girls wear it. That seems clear enough, yet it is a trifle confusing.

So he carefully baited a little fishhook, tied a short line to it, swallowed the hook, and tied the line to his buttonhole. Then he waited for a bite. By and by he thought he had one and yanked the line; the hook caught in his throat, and had to be dug out. He didn't catch the worm.—New York Sun.

Two families of Smithport, Pa., occupy the same house, and each has a potato bin in the cellar. A good little story has infused into London Punch something of its old lemon flavor this week. "The squire" is represented as asking an undertaker about a horse which the former had sold to the man of funerals. "Was he quiet enough?" that is what the squire wants to know. "Well, sir," responds the undertaker, "he did give us a little trouble at first. We put him in one of the morning coaches, you know, and parties don't like to be shook up in their grief. But we've put him in the 'earse now, and we haven't heard any complaints so far."

REV. DR. S., a prominent divine, had been spending a few days—not in this weather—on an island on the Maine coast, and, intending to depart on a certain morning, he started for the boat in company with a friend. A porter followed with the doctor's valise. Arriving at the wharf, they found that the boat had gone before the advertised time.

Not aware of the clerical character of the company, the porter swore several shocking oaths in quick succession. "What do you think of that, doctor?" ask his friend. "Well," said the doctor, slowly and impressively, "there are times when the services of a layman are indispensable."

As English writer tells the following: A family let their house furnished, leaving in it a large dog. The tenant was an old lady, who liked to sit in a particularly comfortable chair in the drawing-room, but as the dog was also very fond of this chair, she frequently found him in possession. Being rather afraid of the dog, she did not care to drive him out, and therefore used to go to the window and call "Cat!" The dog would then rush to the window and bark, and the lady would take possession of the chair. One day the dog entered the room and found the old lady in possession of the chair. He ran to the window and barked excitedly. The lady got up to see what was the matter, and the dog instantly seated himself in the chair.
