THE ORY OF THE DREAMER.

BY JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY.

I am tired of planning and toiling,
In the crowded hives of men;
Heart weary of building and spoiling,
And spoiling and building again,
And I long for the dear old river
Where I dreamed my youth away;
For a dreamer lives forever,
And a toiler dies in a day.

I am sick of the showy seeming,
Of a life that is half a lie;
Of the faces lined with scheming
In the throng that hurries by.
From the sleepless thoughts' endeavor
I would go where the children play;
For a dreamer lives forever,
And a toiler dies in a day.

I feel no pride, but pity
For the burdens the rich endure,
There is nothing sweet in the city
But the patient lives of the poor.
Oh, the little hands too skillful,
And the child mind choked with weeds!
The daughter's heart grown willful,
And the father's heart that bleeds!

No, no! from the street's rude bustle,
From trophies of mart and stage,
I would fly to the wood's low rustle,
And the meadow's kindly page.
Let men dream as of old by the river,
And be loved for the dream away;
For a dreamer lives forever,
And a toiler dies in a day.

REMINISCENCES OF A SUMMER TRIP.

[Written for the Emmitsburg Chronicle.]

In no way refreshed by our night's rest, we reached Paris at 6:30 a. m. Upon showing our checks, we were directed to a large room where we saw our baggage exposed to view on a long counter. We smiled at two men, and presented our keys to them. They unlocked my little trunk, but its neat, innocent appearance must have satisfied their suspicious minds, for the lid was allowed to fall, and the key was restored to me. The dreaded Paris examination of baggage was over.

We went in a coach to the Hotel St. Romain, Rue St. Roch, where we engaged rooms and breakfasts; we intended to take our other meals at restaurants. Later in the day we undertook our first walk, but the heat was so intense that we were glad to return to the hotel after losing our way and wandering about till we were almost dead. In the evening G. arrived, and we were once more a complete party. G. was charmed with her Rhine excursion, and during the rest of the summer whenever S. and I were specially pleased with a grand building she delighted to quell our raptures by saying: "Oh, but you ought to see the Cathedral of Cologne!"

We had intended to stay two weeks in Paris, but our Zurich journey had interfered with our time, so we knew that we could stay only ten days. Unfortunately, we had come at a hot season; the city was like a fiery furnace, and there was a slight fragrance about the gutters which we did not enjoy. Then, too, there are so many hotels and restaurants, that the odor of food was wafted through every street. Of course, these discomforts can be noticed only at a hot, day time, when probably no large city is free from them. On the fourth day we had floods of rain, which rushed in torrents through the streets, and on two other days we had heavy showers.

I missed many things that I wanted to see, not only on account of the unfriendly weather, but because I was sick the whole time we were in Paris. Fortunately, I was not enough of an invalid to need attention from my friends, or to interfere with their comfort, but I was not able to pay my respects to all the lions. We liked the St. Romain very much. Our three rooms communicated, and opened at the end of a hall, so that no strangers passed our doors. Every morning breakfast was sent up stairs, according to French fashion, and we were served with delicious milk which came in sealed jars and had real cream on top.

I am sorry that I cannot speak of French cooking, but I lived principally on invalid's food and did not even taste the famous rolls and coffee. At the restaurants we had some funny experiences in asking for the things which we wanted. Each person is expected to leave a fee for the waiter, who receives no regular wages; most persons leave two copper pieces worth about four cents, and the same custom is observed with cabmen, only in their case the fee is larger.

I forgot to mention our beds—they were enough to fill any American with awe. They were shaded by crimson canopies, and looked like gypsy tents. My bed was so lofty that each night I thought: "Well, to-morrow night I will mount first on a chair."

In Paris no lady need hesitate to go out alone in the daytime, or to visit any of the churches, libraries, or art galleries; but young girls are never seen without their chaperones.

The city is certainly very beautiful, yet I was a little disappointed in it, that is, I should not care to live there. All the people live in apartment-houses, six, seven and eight stories high, varying in style and comfort. The entrance is guarded by a concierge or porter, who directs visitors to the floor where their friends keep house. Every evening the streets were thronged with people taking pleasure after the business of the day. In this country such eager crowds would be a parade, but there it seemed to be a regular custom. They seemed happy and were very lively; I don't recall a beggar or any object of distress.

The Seine is not the majestic river that my fancy had pictured, but a modest little stream walled up on both banks, and presenting the appearance of a canal. Yet at one place it is wide enough to contain two large islands, which are covered with famous buildings. It is crossed by many bridges, and little steamboats pull up and down the stream, and stop at certain stations along the quays. If you want to visit any place near the river, instead of going by omnibus or tramway, you go by boat.

A good way to see the city is to ride on top of a tramcar or an omnibus; a perfectly proper thing to do, but embarrassing in the ascent and descent. These vehicles carry only a limited number of passengers, and when there is no room for more a sign is hung out displaying the word "Complet." A story is told of a rushing American who was doing Paris, and boasting that he had been to every place but "Complet" and those "busses never would stop for him. We saw nearly all the broad boulevards and avenues in our rides through the city, the famous churches, public buildings, and monuments. We had taken care to settle ourselves in quarters near the Louvre, where we wanted to spend most of our time. I can give you no idea of the size or appearance of the Louvre, or of its wonderful treasures. I have read that etymologists trace the origin of the name to the word Loup, wolves, because the palace stands on the site of an old hunting chateau where these fierce animals abounded. In time the word became Louverie and finally Louvre. It is an immense stone building with two long wings, between which there is a courtyard.

This beautiful palace where kings and queens have dwelt has been used for more than a hundred and fifty years as a museum for works of art. The treasures of the world are there—pictures, statues, jewels, bronzes, vases of all kinds, all sorts of gold and silver ornaments, rare and beautiful armor, costly glass and china, coins and medallions, antique furniture and wonderful tapestries. The floors are stone, marble, and polished wood. Some of the rooms have magnificent ceilings, decorated with allegorical and mythological frescoes. There are acres and acres of paintings in the various rooms and galleries.

One room called the Salon Carree or Square Room must have special mention. It is finished in white and gold, the beautiful ceiling is supported by caryatides, and the artists names are on the frieze. This room contains the choicest paintings of the Louvre; among them are sacred pictures by Raphael, Murillo, and Paul of Verona, and Van Dyck's famous portrait of Charles I. of England.

One long gallerie takes its name from the Venus of Milo, standing at the end of it in queenly beauty. Every person sits down in silence before the armless goddess, for words would be useless. Among the old statuary there are several majestic Minervas, one of which is the noble Pallas found a century ago at Velletri, Italy. It rivals the Venus of Milo in its affections, and I shall always love them both.

In my next letter I will tell you about the Cathedral, the Cluny Museum, the triumphal arches, etc.

THE WISHING RING.

BY SADIE L.

A young peasant who had been very unlucky in all he undertook was sitting on his plough to rest and to wipe the perspiration from his face. An old witch came hobbling by, and cried out to him: "Why will you plague yourself? Nothing good comes of sighing. Go two days' journey, until you come to a great fir-tree that stands by itself in the midst of a forest, and overtops all the other trees. If you can bring it to the ground, your fortune is made."

The peasant did not wait for second thought, but, taking his axe, at once began his journey. After two days he found the fir-tree. He immediately began to cut at it, and when it fell with great force to the ground, there tumbled from its highest branches a nest containing two eggs. The eggs rolled upon the ground and broke into pieces; from one came out a young eagle, and from the other a little, golden ring. The eagle grew visibly until he was half the height of a man, shook his wings as if he would try their strength, raised himself a little from the ground and cried:—

"Thou hast given me freedom. For thanks receive the ring that was in the other egg. It is a wishing ring. If thou wilt place the ring on thy finger and, at the same time make a wish, it will be fulfilled. But it must be only one wish. After that is accomplished, the ring has no further power, and is only an ordinary ring. Therefore consider well before wishing, or else thou mayest repent."

So saying, the eagle raised himself high in the air, flew in great circles above the peasant's head, and shot off towards the sun, quick as an arrow.

The peasant took the ring, placed it on his finger and started homewards. Towards evening he reached a city; there he saw a goldsmith standing in his shop, where there were many costly rings for sale. The peasant walked up to him, showed his ring and asked what it was worth.

"A mere trifle," answered the goldsmith.

The peasant laughed loudly, and told him that it was a wishing ring, and was worth more than all the costly rings in the shop. Now, the goldsmith was a false, artful man. He invited the peasant to stay overnight with him, and said: "A man with such a treasure to conceal as you have will bring luck to my house." He offered him the best of everything his house afforded, and flattered him exceedingly. When night came, he drew, unnoted, the wishing ring from the peasant's finger, and replaced it with one that looked exactly the same.

With great impatience the goldsmith waited for day. He wakened the peasant in the early morning, and said: "You have a long journey still before you; it is better to start in the cool of the day."

As soon as the peasant had gone, the goldsmith went hastily to his room, closed the shutters and bolted the door, drew the wishing ring on his finger and cried: "I will have, immediately a hundred thousand dollars."

Scarcely had he spoken the wish, when it began to rain hard, polished dollars, which struck him on the head, shoulders and arms. He began to cry out with pain, and would have run to the door; but before he could reach and unbolt it, he fell, bleeding, to the earth. But the rain of dollars did not cease; their weight soon broke the floor of the room, and the goldsmith, together with his gold, fell headlong into the cellar. Still the storm of gold continued, until the hundred thousand dollars were told, and then the goldsmith lay dead in his cellar, with the money piled upon him. Alarmed by the noise, the neighbors came flocking around the house, and when they saw the goldsmith surrounded by his gold, they cried: "It is a great misfortune when blessings come as thick as sticks." Then came the heirs of the goldsmith and divided his wealth among them.

Meanwhile the peasant went contentedly to his home, and showed the ring to his wife. "Now, dear wife, our fortune is made," he cried; "let us consider well what to wish for."

"Would it not be a good thing," answered the wife, "to wish for some more land? We have so little, and there is a great strip of land that does not belong to us lying between our little patches."

"What is the good of that?" replied the peasant. "If we only work industriously and have some luck, we can soon buy the land for ourselves."

So the peasant and his wife went to work with all their might, as they had never worked before, and by the end of a year they were able to buy the strip of land and to have a little money besides.

"See," said the peasant, "we own the land now, and still have the wish."

The wife thought it would be a good idea to wish for a cow and a horse. But the husband answered: "Why should we waste our wish on such trifles? In a short time we can buy a cow and a horse for ourselves."

And, truly, in less than a year, they had purchased the cow and the horse. And the peasant rubbed his hands for joy and said: "Another year and the wish is spared, and we have all we wished for. What luck we have!"

But the wife answered: "You used to be always grumbling and wishing for impossible things, and now, when you could have just what you want, you plague and worry yourself, and let the beautiful years go by. You might be king, emperor, count, and have boxes full of gold; but yet you can't decide what to wish for."

But the peasant answered: "We are both young, and life is long. There is only one wish in the ring, and that would soon be gone. Who knows what might suddenly happen to us, if we use up the ring? Do we need any thing now? Since we have had the ring, does not every one wonder at our luck? Then let us be prudent. In the meantime we can consider well what to wish for."

So the discussion ended for the time. And it seemed as if, with the ring, a blessing had lighted upon the house; for barns and fields as the years rolled on, and finally the poor peasant became a great landholder, who worked with his servants during the day, but in the evening sat at his house-door receiving salutations from the people.

Thus the year went on. Sometimes when they were quite alone, the wife reminded her husband of the ring, and made all kinds of propositions. But he always answered there was yet plenty of time, and it were best to remember there was but one wish; and at last the subject of the ring was scarcely mentioned between them. Certainly the peasant himself played with the ring on his finger twenty times a day, but always forbore to make a wish at the same time.

Forty years went by, and the peasant and his wife grew old. Their hair turned white as snow, and yet the wish was not named. One night the two old people went to sleep, and never awakened again. Children and grandchildren stood around them and wept, and one of them would have removed the ring from the peasant's finger; but the eldest son said:

"Let us bury the ring with our father; he has worn it all his life, and our mother looked often at it. She must have given it to him when they were young."

So the ring which the peasant had always thought was a wishing ring was buried with him; and yet it had brought all the fortune into the house that one could have wished for. So true it is that even bad things in the hands of the good bring greater blessing than do good things in the hands of the bad. Cooper & Conard's Monthly.

LAUNDREYMEN are the most humble and forgiving beings on earth. The more cuffs you give them the more they will do for you. Paul Herald.

THE OLD OLD STORY.

History is continually repeating itself. The unrest of the world is now as great as ever, and it prevades apparently the entire universe. In the physical department, earthquakes agitate the earth in almost every quarter. Rumors of war excite the nations, and they come and subside as if in sympathy with the changes of the atmosphere. Industrial pursuits are retarded by the Labor Strikes that keep commercial circles in constant fear of dire events apparently impending; Legislation itself appears undecided in its movements, and efforts are being made to forestall new plans, months in advance of their inauguration. Change, and the conflict of opposing forces manifest themselves in everything that surrounds us.

Even our own existence is maintained against a succession of untoward occurrences that assail its progress.

To the inquiry whence all this turmoil, why this constant disquietude? there comes but one satisfying reply. The disorganized state of humanity, the consequence of its direful fall, involving the whole creation, so that the earth itself and its elements tend evermore to disintegration and ruin.

There is but one assuring comfort for humanity in all its woes, one only refuge from the sorrows and storms of life; it is found in the revelation of the Divine will to men. Its scope is so wide and all embracing as to enlist the efforts of all good men, and the wonder is that it can ever falter, so vast is the field, so mighty the demand for help, that the most concentrated efforts and the mightiest schemes of action but feebly reach the needs.

As long as sorrow exists, as pain is endured, as want pinches or hope grows dim, the field of philanthropic endeavor will invite to its cultivation, and the hand that can soothe will find occupation.

To look beyond present woes is to contemplate the realities of the future, and they who most benefit their fellowmen are those who by life and work most diligently point to the hopes of the world to come.

ANOTHER RAILROAD HORROR.

On Saturday last, the most appalling railroad disaster that has happened in New England occurred on the Central Vermont railroad, at the White River crossing.

Four heavily loaded passenger cars, filled with pleasure seekers, going to the Montreal Carnival were hurled from an open bridge, down a rocky gorge seventy feet into the darkness, and striking with an awful crash upon the ice bound surface of the river. The wreck ere long took fire from the stoves of the cars. Forty-two were burned in the presence of friends who were incapable of aiding them. Out of a hundred passengers only three or four escaped unhurt. The accounts of the extricated were thrilling in the extreme. A broken rail was the cause of the accident. The cold was extreme, being 12° below zero. The accident has called forth a wall of agony over the land. Many were burned to death who might have been extricated but for the flames; and the question of a better mode of warming cars has received a new impetus, and it is thought if the road inspection had been complete the broken rail should have been discovered and the catastrophe prevented.

This accident seems to surpass that of some weeks ago on the B. & O., at Tiffin, Ohio.

LET IT COME.

With the universal adoption of the principle that "public office is a public trust," and the best talent at the head of the Civil Service Commission, to ensure good appointments throughout; and parties acting from principle and not just to secure the emoluments of the offices; government will about have reached its millenium glory.

The President affixed his signature to the interstate commerce bill last Friday afternoon, thus by his approval making it a law. The signing of the bill was in full accord with the opinion of Attorney-General Garland, rendered to him on last Monday, and it is very well understood to be in accord with the views of the cabinet.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special to the Emmitsburg Chronicle. FEBRUARY 8.—The Edmunds' retaliatory bill which passed the Senate a few days ago, has apparently created a commotion in England and Canada, as the press of both countries is just now severely criticizing the attitude assumed by the American Congress in the discussion of the fishery dispute. Mr. Ingalls' speech although a trifle florid, was characterized throughout by sound sense; the vote on the measure clearly showing that nearly every Senator regarded the matter in the same light as the eloquent Ingalls. While there is a possibility of future trouble in connection with this bill, it is not generally expected. England is not in a position to take any radical course, even though it be in behalf of Canada. The ominous growling of several of the European powers, is calculated to render England somewhat prudent. The delectable condition of English politics is also a fair indication of satisfactory adjustment. The situation, however, is one not unattended with danger, and should make Congress realize the inadequacy of the United States Navy, should any serious trouble arise.

The ball given by the Chinese Minister last week, has been a theme for an endless amount of comment. Although only nine hundred invitations were sent out, about twelve hundred persons were present. Who these people were, and by what authority they intruded upon a foreign minister's hospitality, is of course the very natural and pertinent query. The question is not a difficult one to answer. The three hundred uninvited were simply social dead-beats, a class by no means small in the National Capital. The disgusting exhibition of greediness in the supper-room, was neither uncommon nor remarkable. The mere presence of people, who invade a private establishment uninvited, will explain any subsequent act or conduct. The feelings of Chang Yen Hoon, when he gazed upon the ravenous and turbulent horde can be better imagined than described. No people on earth are more particular in observing the rules of etiquette than the higher class of Chinese. It must therefore have appeared rather singular to the minister, that the enlightened American should have for the moment divested himself of every claim to a civilized being, and placed himself on a par with the lower order of creature. There is a popular rumor, that a pig can be trained to behave himself in company. If there is any truth in this, it places the guzzlers in rather an unenviable position.

About a fortnight since, the British minister Sir Lionel West gave a ball and as usual a large number of persons of the dead beat class, presented themselves. Miss West the hostess who is a girl of considerable force of character was standing talking to several of her guests, when three ladies entered. The trio walked in and with great complacency seated themselves. Miss West hesitated a moment and then walked over to where the strangers were seated.

"Excuse me, but have you an invitation?"

"No," ejaculated the three in chorus, "our husbands are in the navy."

Miss West walked away, and calling a servant, instructed him to show them the door. It is unnecessary to state that they left in high dudgeon.

There is a bill in the Senate, favorably reported and on the calendar for the relief of J. Fisk Mills, son of the late Clark Mills, for work done on the equestrian statue of the late General Rawlings some sixteen years since. By authority of the War Department Mr. Mills took a cast of General R. immediately after his death, and was furnished a studio in the basement of the Capitol in which at great expense he executed in plaster an equestrian statue of him, which was at the time universally admired. Before any appropriation was made for casting it in bronze, Miss Winnie Ream, now Mrs. Hoxie, a former pupil of Mr. Mills, stepped in, and through the efforts of Senator Voorhees and others, secured the contract for the execution of the statue. This bill is the only recognition of Mills in the matter, and this is in the sum of the mere pittance of $2,500.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

THE total available supply of peanuts for consumption to Sept. 30, 1887, is 3,479,700 bushels. The consumption last year was 2,905,000 bushels, thus giving an increase in the supply of 574,700 bushels.

ARCHBISHOP ELDER authorizes the statement that the Catholic Church is in no way responsible for the organization of a theatrical company to gather money to aid in paying the Purcell debt, nor does he in any manner sanction such a scheme.

A CITIZEN of Pocahontas, Ia., has invented a new fuel, which bids fair to take the place of coal in the prairie countries. He grinds cornstalks and coarse prairie grass together and moistens them. This pulp is pressed into blocks about twelve inches long and four inches thick and dried. One block will give an hour's steady heat. This fuel can be produced for $2 a ton, and the inventor claims that it will last twice as long as the best soft coal.

FARMER HILLMAN of Sharon, Ga., looking for gold on his farm found a spot where the soil was curiously discolored. He set his negro hired man to digging, and he found that he had struck simply a clay bed. No gold was found, but the negro who was rheumatic, discovered that when he dug in the clay his pains ceased. He excavated quite a pit, and now persons in that vicinity declare that the soft clay of the pit is a sure cure for rheumatism; and it is reported that invalids who go there on crutches, after applying the clay to the affected parts, go away unaided.

TWENTY thousand people, it is said, are annually destroyed in India by animals, and of these nineteen in twenty are said to be bitten by snakes. The number of human victims tends to increase, in spite of the fact that the number of wild beasts and snakes destroyed has doubled in the last ten years, and that the government reward paid for their extermination has risen proportionately. Nearly 2½ lakhs of rupees (about $125,000) were thus paid in 1884. Next to venomous reptiles, tigers claim most victims. Ten years ago wolves, mostly in the northwest provinces and Oudh, killed five times as many people as of late years; but the extermination of wolves seems to be going on rapidly. Leopards are the alleged cause of death to about 200 human beings annually. Apart from the loss of a man's life, the returns show an annual destruction of 50,000 head of cattle.

Free Trade.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefited the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Bocher's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen, has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles, have perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10 cents remain the same size.

If the weather of the 2d day of February be taken as characteristic of that which is to be for the succeeding six weeks, then we are to expect a condition of calm for the next six weeks. But the calm being that of intense dampness, with a temperature low enough to make it sensible to all that hath breath, it may be doubted whether on a fair vote with a free ballot, the popular verdict would not have been for more sunshine, more wind and less elemental weeping from the skies. We know full well that wishes can't control the clouds, but find a peculiar satisfaction in going on the records as wanting in harmony with the existing state of atmospheric affairs.

When zero rules, more clothing, extra fuel in the stove, and seclusion from the outer world, make up for the disturbance of our ordinarily equable state; when the summer's heat oppresses, we can always find a cool retreat; and when the blinding lightnings flash, we can close our blinds, when the earthquake rocks our couch, we can—wait till it ends. But in this bone-dissolving dampness, this marrow chilling moisture, with just enough of a gale to drive it thoroughly home, then oh then! we grow suddenly speechless!

A Chance for Health.

Is afforded those fast sinking into a condition of hopeless debility. The means are at hand. In the form of a genial medicinal cordial, Hostetter's Stomach Bitter embodies the combined qualities of a blood purifier and purgative, a tonic and an alterative. While it promotes digestion and assimilation, and stimulates appetite, it has the further effect of purifying the system and strengthening the nervous system. As the blood grows richer and purer by its use, the system recovers its normal condition, a tonic and an alterative. Our thanks are due to Senator E. K. Wilson, of Maryland, for a copy of his speech in the United States Senate on the "Railroad Attorney's Bill."

Our farmers should take up the question of carp culture for this section, and give it practical effect. We have many favorable points for its initiation.

A MOTHER speaking of Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup, said:—It is the only medicine I would give to my baby. At all drug stores, twenty-five cents.

Take a dose of Dr. Bull's Baltimore Pills if your bowels are costive; we know of no better medicine.

Give your cattle Day's Horse Powder if they seem out of condition. It tones up the system.

Fire at Westminster.

Fire was discovered in G. W. Albaugh's clothing store, S. Kann, Son & Co., M. C. Hurley and others, early on Thursday morning. It burned fiercely and caught the adjoining building occupied by H. Harris, liquor dealer. The Albaugh building was destroyed, valued at $20,000, Kann's loss estimated at $25,000, Hurley's at $5,000. Just before the fire was discovered an explosion was heard in Hurley's store in the locality of the safe.

Farmers' Club Meeting.

We take pleasure in publishing the first installment of the proceedings of a Farmer's Club that has had existence in this locality for some years, and is composed of experienced, intelligent and substantial farmers. We hope to hear from them often and shall be happy to give a helping hand in the diffusion of the results of their observations. Of all men, Farmers can least afford to hide their light under a bushel.

DECEMBER 30, 1886.—The Blue Mountain Club of Frederick County, Md., met at the residence of Mr. Lewis P. Shriver. Roll called and all present except Geo. G. Byers and Prof. J. B. Kerschner. Minutes of the preceding meeting were read and adopted. The secretary read the constitution and by-laws for the benefit of W. S. Guthrie. The subject of "feeding and general care of stock," was discussed by nearly all the members present. There was some diversity of opinion relative to the feeding of cattle, but on all other points there was accord of views. It was agreed in the first place that stock of all kinds should be well housed, and well protected from the cold and chilling blasts of winter. Stock kept warm will keep on less feed than when exposed to the inclemency of the weather, and when spring comes are in a better and more thriving condition. Stock should also be handled carefully, kindly and humanely, but be made to know, especially horses, when you speak to them, that you mean what you say, but not be always jerking and cuffing at them. With regard to feeding cattle for beef, the Club agreed that whole corn in the ear could be fed with profit in fall or until the corn became hard, when it should be chopped cob and all, that it was better than the pure corn, as cattle need a bulky feed. Some advocated mixing oats with the corn and having it chopped together that it would prevent the cattle from scouring, but never feed excessively, no more than what they will eat up clean, as there is danger of overfeeding them, that it is economy to feed longer and not so much at a time, fattening cattle need earth. They should either have it accessible in the yard, or be permitted to have a range outside, where they can have free access. They should be fed, watered and salted regularly. Milk cows should not be turned out in the winter to a creek or pond for water, but should have good fresh, warm water out of a well or cistern, as cold water chills them and checks the flow of milk. They should be fed well and regular, they are like a mill, the more you put into them the more you could expect to get out of them. Some of the members advocated feeding them corn chopped, others corn and oats, and still others a change of feed from one thing to another, and all admitted, they had good results, proving that if a cow is fed liberally of almost any kind of grain she will give good returns. Horses should be fed grain during the winter in order that they may be strong and ready for work in the spring, but not in too great a quantity, coals for the first year or two should be fed bran and oats, it is not good to push young horses too fast. Hogs should be kept dry and warm, and if possible the front of all hog-pens should be southward in order that they may get as much sunshine as possible. The warmer they can be kept, and the more sun they can get the better. Hogs for profit should be kept growing all the time, there is not much danger of pushing them too fast, and the sooner you can get them into market the better. At this point dinner was announced to which all present did justice. After relieving the proprietor of several chickens and turkeys, not forgetting his fine roast of beef, the different vegetables, cakes, pies, &c. The Club proceeded to visit the barn and other buildings, and found everything in good condition. The Club was again called to order by the President, when Jas. W. Troxell made a short address, relative to the labors and success of the proprietor. Moved by R. E. Hockenmiller that we present something useful to J. Rowe Ohler, a newly married member of the Club, in order to show our appreciation of him. R. E. Hockenmiller, D. S. Gilman, J. S. Motter, appointed as a committee to make the purchase. Joseph Byers was elected a representative to the B. M. F. C. to the State Agricultural Association to meet in Baltimore, January 1st, 1887. Declared by the President that we meet at the residence of H. F. Maxwell, on the 1st Saturday in February. Subject to be discussed, "the Superstitions notions relative to the different signs." Adjourned.

R. E. HOCKENMILLER, Sec'y.

Those who have cared to observe the phenomena regarding Prof. Jacobs' deliveries on the Indian Summer question, to which we have frequently referred, will recognize that we are upon the February term of the atmospheric state peculiar to the designation; next there will be a season more or less discernible in May, and then the conspicuous term in August. Each return has characteristics of its own season; the extreme dampness of winter, the inspiring delights of spring, the sultriness of summer and the invigorating air of autumn.

"VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE" for 1887, is one of the most beautiful ever issued by that enterprising seedman, the decorations, in arrangement and coloring being graceful and artistic; the illustrations natural and satisfactory, whilst the information with regard to the choice and cultivation of flowers and vegetables cannot fail to be of great assistance to professional gardeners and invaluable to amateurs. We advise our friends who have not a copy of the Floral Guide, to procure one before beginning spring work, by applying to James Vick, Seedman, Rochester, N. Y.

A Big Slide.

On Tuesday of last week at a very steep and slippery hill on the turnpike road near Fairview, this county a six horse team drawing a wagon heavily loaded with wheat, while coming down the hill, was tumbled over the edge of an embankment, the horses, wagon and driver all going down. The wheat was tossed out and some of it spilled, but neither the horses nor driver were injured. The team belonged to Hanson Bussard, of near Middletown, this county. This accident occurred at the same spot where a coach full of Union soldiers was turned over the bank to the level ground below in the winter of 1865.

The Unity of Brothers.

FR. CXXXIII.
The esteemed Frederick News of Monday last, expressed itself with commendable freedom on "Journalism in Frederick," and whilst complimenting the "fraternity" manifested by the "county journals," deprecates the absence of a like reciprocity of good offices among those of this city.

The News should not forget "The distance lends enchantment to the view." The rural papers are located far enough apart to be able to mind their own affairs, without conflict among themselves, and are otherwise in a condition of cordial good wishes, for mutual encouragement in the conflict for success, remote from each other domains. In our observation, we have noticed, that among the mercantile classes, where a new comer enters the community and carries forward the long settled basis of profits, all goes well and the tradesman on meeting, have always cheerful smiles—more or less sincere—for one another; but let that man recede a half cent on the pound of sugar, and old Gold dust forth with flares up; the community of nations is disturbed, a state of war ensues; treaties are abrogated, and the belligerent having the best munition of war takes the rule.

Somehow or other our friends at Frederick are evidently in conflict, the rules and regulations of correct trade are in disharmony, and the only remedy can be in a due recognition of the principles and regulations that govern the most correct and honorable circles of the profession. The first requisite to the amendment of manners is to find out where the fault lies, and correct it there and then.

MATHEWS—KNOTT.—On February 7, 1887, near Eyer's Valley by Rev. G. J. Roudabush, Mr. Jacob G. Mathews to Miss Emma L. Knott, all of Frederick County.

Our esteemed friend J. M. Tiernan, Esq., of San Gabriel, Los Angeles county, Cal., has placed us under obligations for a Map of Ramona, county of Los Angeles, which represents in detail the property of San Gabriel Wine Company, six miles from Los Angeles, with Shorb's Track attached, the latter representing the lands of our former well known citizen, J. DeBarth Shorb, Esq. The surveys were made in 1886. Ramona is situated at Shorb's Station, only three miles from the city limits, on the Southern Pacific Railroad. It has a perfect climate, free from frost and fogs, pure mountain water, a productive soil, unequalled, alluvial, very rich and easily cultivated, and in full view of the Sierra Nevada Range of Mountains. If circumstances permitted, that is precisely the place we should make for. Mr. Tiernan is local Agent of the Company.

The Frederick City and County Directory.

It is the best and most complete representation of our county affairs ever laid before the people, and also contains a remarkably well compiled historical sketch of the county. The publishers are Messrs. W. T. Delaplaine & Co., of Frederick, and the book is supplied at the reasonable price of $2.

How to Tan Sheepskins.

To those who occasionally kill a sheep we would say: Remember the following recipe for tanning a sheepskin. They make the best kind of mats for the house or carriage, and a good Cotswold skin, well tanned, makes a good cushion for the wagon seat, and for many uses it is valuable.

"For mats, take two long wool skins and make a strong sud, using hot water; when it is cold wash the skins in it, carefully squeezing the dirt out of the wool; then wash the soap out with cold, clear water. Then dissolve alum and salt, each a half pound, with a little hot water, sufficient to cover the skins, and let them soak in it over night for twelve hours; then hang over a rail to drain. When they are well drained, spread or stretch carefully over a board to dry. When a little damp, have one ounce of saltpetre pulverized, and sprinkle on the flesh side of each skin, rubbing in well; then lay the flesh sides together and hang in the shade for two or three days, turning the under skin uppermost every day until perfectly dry, then scrape the flesh side with a blunt knife to remove any remaining scraps of flesh. Trim off projecting points; rub the flesh side with the hands, and it will be very white and handsome, suitable for a door or carriage mat. They also make good mittens. Lambkins, or even sheepskins, if the wool be trimmed off evenly to a half or three-fourths of an inch long, make beautiful and warm mittens for ladies and gentlemen, and the girls with a little practice can make them."—Maryland Farmer.

There must be somebody backing that paper, for I ordered my paper stopped, and I know three or four more who got mad and stopped theirs, but the blamed paper seems to come out just the same." Foolish man, don't think that because you get on your car and stop your paper it will make any perceptible difference with the run of the office. The same article that you got mad at, tickled half a dozen other men so that they came and subscribed. Always remember that a paper is not run for the benefit of one person, but for all. Go and take a drink out of Lake Superior, and then look along the shore and see how much you have lowered the water. When you have ascertained the exact figures, you can put them down as representing pretty accurately, to individually, toward the success or failure of the average newspaper.

Everything There but the Guests.

A prominent member of the Masonic fraternity ordered an entertainment a few nights ago for the members of his lodge, and mailed invitations to those he wished to attend. The night came, the canvas backs, terrapin, oysters and other delicacies, the waiters and the hosts were all there, but only a few friends who knew of the affair through other channels than the finely engraved cards of invitation. Being there, the good things had to be eaten. The next day the host went to the postoffice to see if his mailed invitations had gone astray. A search revealed the whole lot carefully stowed away in a corner, having been held for additional postage. The roof of the postoffice was a few inches higher for a brief spell. —Baltimore Sun.

GROGGER—Anybody been in while I was out?"

New Boy—"Yes, a female shop-lifter."

"Eh! Wha—what did you do?"

"I tried to call the police, but she boxed my ears and told me I'd got to behave."

"Then what did you do?"

"I couldn't do nothing, an' she emptied the money-drawer in her pocket."

"Great jinks! Didn't she say anything more?"

"Nothin', 'cept she 'spected you was drunk again."

"Oh! That's all right. That's my wife."

We saw a young man with two heads on his shoulders the other day, but didn't consider it worth a curiosity. One belonged to his girl.

THE PAPER FOR THE PEOPLE.

On the 17th of May, 1887, The Baltimore Sun will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary. From the earliest period of its career The Sun has been a "household word" in the homes of its subscribers, and a synonym for accuracy of statement, fair dealing, promptness, energy and thoroughness in the collection of news. It is editorially independent, and its editorial policy is one of conservatism and moderation. It is not a newspaper in the United States whose opinion carries more weight or whose influence is more widely extended than The Sun's, a fact upon which it may justly pride itself as the legitimate result of painstaking care in the preparation of all matter admitted to its columns. The Sun's facilities for collecting news from all quarters of the globe are being constantly extended and improved, and new features are added without regard to expense, and the legitimate result of painstaking care in the preparation of all matter admitted to its columns.
