BLESSINGS IN DISGUISE.

Milton sits musing in the porch,

The bright blue sky above him,

But cannot see the light of heaven,

Or smiles of those who love him;

But though the utter darkness hides

The earthly from his vision,

He sees the bowers of Paradise,

And splendors of the Elysian;

He learns from angels at his side

Creation's awful story,

And looks upon them face to face,

Undazzled by their glory!

Beethoven, music's great high priest,

Whose heaven-born fancies capture

The tangled skeins of harmony

And weave them into rapture,

Hears not the voice of human kind

Nor sound of life and motion;

Nor tempests on the echoing hills

Nor moan of restless ocean—

And yet in silence of his mind

Can hear the throb and thunder

Of jubilant hymns and solemn chants,

And lays of love and wonder!

Thus, though relentless fate may close

The gateways of our senses,

Immortal spirit overleaps

Their barriers and defences,

For harm and loss diurnal,

Yields greater joys than flesh affords,

In forests of the eternal!

To blind old Milton's rayless orbs

A light divine is given,

And deaf Beethoven hears the hymns

And harmonies of heaven!

THE ELECTION OVER.

To foreigners our quadrennial elections are matters of great wonderment. That the millions of electors enter upon contests of mighty proportions; in which the contradictions of opinions reach the intensest stages of opposition for the determination of the rulers for the four years to come; and when the contest has been decided the opposing forces just calmly settle down in quiet acquiescence of the popular will. Those who were but yesterday opposed to one another in bitter dissension, are to day, in friendly review of the situation, accepting the verdict, as the expression of the fundamental law on which the government rests; such peaceful revolutions as they may be called are unknown under any other government, whilst in many, where comparatively small changes occur, the peace and good order of the land are mightily disturbed, if not overthrown.

In one view of the case the actual outcome of the elections, is but the change of the offices from one party to another, but while the country is governed by parties, these parties are intent upon carrying out certain principles and policies which they deem essential to the growth and prosperity of the government; this is the ground upon which the conflicts are waged; these are the ends to be subserved in the agitations which every fourth year seem to threaten the foundations of the government. Happily the checks and balances of the various departments act and react upon each other so kindly, that quiet and the even tenor of every day follow at once upon the announcement of the silent decision of the ballot box.

Everybody with enlightened judgment recognizes that not personal ends, but great principles of government are involved and thus the waves of popular disturbance are calmed as the storm subsides before the majesty of the constitutional provision for perpetuating the government.

With the Return of the Republicans to the possession of the offices they still have their ancient opponents to watch their acts, and check any disposition to run into extreme measures. In the official term about to begin their may be abundant opportunities for sins of omission and commission, through which they will get leave to vacate, just as the Democrats are about to do.

METEORS.

The Earth will cross the Orbit of the November meteors on Tuesday next; but not at the thickest part. There may be a fine display. Look out!

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

SNOW storms have been reported throughout the north west.

PETROLEUM has been discovered in an artesian well at Harrisonburg, Va.

THE Boston Herald estimates that 4437 new books were published last year in this country.

ONE day's newspaper and magazine mail in the New York post-office was 134 tons, 267,580 pounds.

WHEN he walks about his country estate Prince Bismark is always accompanied by a body guard of two stalwart soldiers.

Mrs. Charles N. Thorpe, wife of the president of the Keystone Watch Co., of Philadelphia, on behalf of 350 women employed by the company, last week presented Mrs. Cleveland a watch, the case of which was made by them.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887. Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.,—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience, have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,
L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.,
Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

A dispatch from Washington to the Baltimore Sun, gives the following opinions on the complexion of the next House:

Secretary McPherson, of the republican congressional campaign committee, says the next House will consist of 173 republicans and 152 democrats.

Representative Brockinridge, of Kentucky, a democratic member of the ways and means committee, expresses the opinion that the republican majority in the next House will be very slender, and is confident that it cannot exceed 10 in any event.

DANIEL D. MAGNUM, of Danbury Conn., is a blacksmith who has made a bid for fame and fortune. He has invented a wagon reach constructed that the wagon can be turned around anywhere without the backing process. His invention is called a Magnum bonum.

THE late Rev Dr. B. M. Schmucker, of Pottstown, Pa., left his valuable library to the Lutheran Theological Seminary, at Philadelphia, and where there are duplicate copies they are to become the property of Muhlenberg College at Allentown. The library is large and rare.

DAVID HOSTETTER, the millionaire manufacturer of "Stomach Bitters," a citizen of Pittsburgh, Pa., died in New York Monday. David Hostetter, partner in the firm of Hostetter & Smith, manufacturers of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, was born in Lancaster county, Pa., of Pennsylvania Dutch extraction, January 23, 1819. His father, Jacob Hostetter, M. D., was a successful practitioner. Mr. Hostetter was accredited with the possession of great wealth, ranging in estimates of from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000. He made this largely through appreciation of the value of advertising, the virtues of his "bitters" having been extolled in almost every newspaper throughout the world.

Do you suffer with catarrh? You can be cured if you take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier. Sold by all druggists.

THE Standard Oil Company proposes to furnish natural gas to Harrisburg, which it is claimed has been discovered in large quantities in Perry, Dauphin, Mifflin, Juniata and Huntingdon counties.

A GIANT locomotive is being constructed in Boston. It is for use on the Atchinson road, and has two cups, one over the boiler for the engineer, and the other in the usual place for fireman. The driving wheel's are of paper, with steel tires. Economy in fuel is accomplished by a pump which utilizes the exhaust steam to heat water, and by a large combustion chamber, which burns all the gas. It is expected the engineer will make 80 miles an hour, with 10 coaches, on an ordinary road.

The year 1888 has been a remarkable one for cold and wet. There has been nearly seven inches excess of rain fall over the average, only three years since 1870 showing nearly so much. Up to October 15th there were 111 days that rain fell and only 63 clear days and 133 fair days. Up to the same day there was a deficiency of 488 degrees or nearly two degrees a day. Where all this heat is gone and whether we shall get it back so as to bring up the average, nobody knows. But if there is anything in average, we ought to have a warm dry winter. So says the west Chester Record.

Why You Feel

So weak and exhausted is because your blood is impure. As well expect the sanitary condition of a city to be perfect with defiled water and defective sewerage, as to expect such a complicated piece of mechanism as the human frame to be in good order with impure blood circulating even to its minutest veins. Do you know that every drop of your two or three gallons of blood passes through the heart and lungs in about two and a half minutes, and that, on its way, it makes bone and muscle, brain and nerve, and all other solids and fluids of the body? The blood is the great nourisher, or, as the Bible terms it,

"The Life of the Body."

Is it any wonder, then, that if the blood be not pure and perfect in its constituents, you suffer so many indescribable symptoms?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands "head and shoulders" above every other Alternative and Blood Medicine. As proof, read these reliable testimonies: "G. C. Brock, of Lowell, Mass., says: 'For the past 25 years I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In my opinion, the best remedial agent for all the ailments of the blood is contained in this medicine.'"

Eugene I. Hill, M. D., 381 Sixth Ave., New York, says: "As a blood-purifier and general builder-up of the system, I have never found anything to equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It gives perfect satisfaction."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla proves equally efficacious in all forms of Scrofula, Boils, Carbuncles, Eczema, Humors, Lumbago, Catarrh, &c.; and is, therefore, the very best.

A GREAT MAGAZINE.

The Century for 1889.

HE question has often been asked, "to what does The Century owe its great circulation?" The Christian Union once answered this by the statement that "it has been fairly won, not by advertising schemes, but by the excellence which characterizes it in every department."

In their announcements for the coming year the publishers state that it has always been their desire to make The Century the one indispensable periodical of its class, so that whatever other publication might be desirable in the family, The Century could not be neglected by those who wish to keep abreast of the times in all matters pertaining to culture. And the unprecedented circulation of the magazine would seem to be the response of the public to this intention.

With the November number The Century begins its thirty-seventh volume. Two great features of the magazine which are to continue through the new volume are already well known to the public, the Lincoln history and the papers on "Siberia and the Exile System." The first of these, written by Messrs. Nicolay and Hay, President Lincoln's private secretaries, contains the inside history of the dark days of the war, as seen from the White House.

THE SIBERIAN PAPERS, by George Kennan, are attracting the attention of the civilized world. The Chicago Tribune says that "no other magazine articles printed in the English language just now touch upon a subject which so vitally interests all thoughtful people in Europe and America and Asia." It is already known, copies of The Century entering Russia have these articles torn out by the customs officials on the frontier.

DURING 1889

The Century will publish the most important art feature that has yet found place in its pages. It is the result of four years' work of Mr. Timothy Cole, the leading magazine engraver of the world, in the galleries of Europe, engraving from the originals the greatest pictures by the old masters.

A series of papers on Ireland, its customs, landscapes, etc., will appear, and there are to be illustrated articles on Bible scenes, treating especially the subjects of the International Sunday-School Lessons, and that, on its way, it makes bone and muscle, brain and nerve, and all other solids and fluids of the body? The blood is the great nourisher, or, as the Bible terms it,

THE FUNERAL AT MORGAN'S.

When I reached Morgan's on the Yadkin River, North Carolina, there were several people about the door and three or four mules hitched to the fence. It looked as if the family were in trouble, and I was passing on when Morgan himself came out and stopped me and said: "I couldn't let you go by, nohow. 'Deed, but I'm glad you've come." "You seem to be in trouble."

"An' that's one reason why you must stop. My Poll is dead. She was hit by a rattler early this morning on your hill. Come in an' chirk the ole woman a bit."

It was a specimen mountain cabin and they were specimen mountaineers. The mother sat rocking, with an apron covering her whole head and a boy of ten sat in a corner wiping his eyes and nose with impartiality on the family towel. Such of the neighbors as had come in were awed to silence by the presence of the corpse on the bed. Poll was a girl of eighteen, poor and scrawny, and her face having that pinched look which the face of every mountain female bears as something natural to it. It appeared to be a great relief to all to have a stranger arrive, and after a few minutes Mrs. Morgan uncovered her head and explained.

"The Lord jist brung it about Himself. He said to Poll: 'You go up yan hill and git some sassafras root for coffee,' and she went. Then He said to the snake: 'When Poll cums you bite her in the calf of the left leg,' and he bit her. It was the Lord and nobody else."

"Yes, that's so, Jenny," said the husband.

"I'm sartin it's so," chorused all the others, while the boy added: "Yes, but what did the Lord want to hev Poll bit fur? Was He un down on she un?"

"'Cause He un wanted Poll to be an angel, and she couldn't be an angel 'till she was dun gone dead," answered the mother.

"That's jist it," sighed the father.

"It is hard for you to lose her, but she is better off," I said, to break the long silence that followed. "Reckon she ar," replied the mother. "Poll was a good gal, an' she'd a bin mar'd this fall, and the feller she was to hev mar'd has got a mawl and three hogs an' a gun, but the Lord knows best. When He wants anybody for an angel they has got to go somehow. Stranger, do you know about heaven?"

"I have read about it."

"Do they hev rich duds and good livin' up thar?"

"The very best, Mrs. Morgan."

"I'm glad on't. Poll never had nuthin' better'n cheap calico to w'ar and pone an' bacon to eat, an' I hope she'll now git as good as anybody. Hev angels got to be educated?"

"No, ma'am. All are alike."

"That's powerful right. Poll never went to skule but two days, an' if the Lord should ax her how fur it was to Greensboro, or what the Tennessee began she'd hev him up a tree. Yes, that's powerful right."

"An' gwine b'arfut an' smokin' a pipe or dipsnuff wouldn't count agin her, would it?" asked the father.

"I think not. There was nothin' evil in that."

"Not a bit. Poll was a powerful good gal. It's like losin' teeth to lose her."

The boy was evidently a little jealous, and he suddenly spoke up: "Wish a snake would bite me?"

"Hiram, don't you go fur to consider to remember any sich wicked thing!" sharply exclaimed the mother. "When the Lord wants you He'll send for you. Mebbe He'll hev you bit by a snake, an' mebbe He'll hev ye clawed by a wild-cat, or pizened by jim-weed."

"Yes, Hiram, you shet!" sighed the father.

I wanted to go on that evening, but Morgan said he'd take it as a great favor if I'd stay over to the funeral next day, and so I couldn't well get away. When the morrow came it brought with it the only preacher for ten miles around, and he took me for a walk up the road and acknowledged that he was a mighty poor dispenser of the Gospel. He said he wanted some hints, and I gave him the best advice I had to offer, never having been in such a situation before. The deceased was dressed in her Sunday calico, placed in a rude coffin, which one of the men had spent the night in making, and the grave was dug out a knoll about forty rods away. About twenty-five people were in attendance, and every one was a genuine sympathizer. Each man as he shook hands with Morgan said:

"I'm powerfully sorry, Dan, but it had to be."

And each woman sought to comfort Mrs. Morgan by saying:

"She's better off, poor thing—a heap better off nor we who ar' left in this shuckless world."

When the time came for the preacher to step forward and officiate his nerve failed him, and he awoke and said:

"He un is from the no'th, and he un knows better what to say. Let he un go ahead."

"Stranger, mought I ax ye to oblige?" queried Morgan. "We is pore an' humble critters, but we try to live in sich a way as not to make the Lord ashamed of us. Ye mought not be a perfussing Christian, but we are shure yer heart is right."

I tried to comfort them in their sorrow; they were all fervent singers, and somehow we got along all right. When the mother took her last look at her dead child she held up her hands and said:

"O Lord, I'm a-dependin' on ye through all my tribulations! I'm only a pore critter in the mountains, and I kin skeerely spell yer name in print, but don't desert me now when heaps of trouble press me down. Let Poll into Heaven, and when the rest of us die let us in, too, and we will praise Thy name forever. Amen."

When all had taken a last look every eye was wet with tears. Rough, uncouth, uneducated—living scarcely like civilized beings—but their hearts were as tender as children's, and their words were honest. As the coffin lid was being screwed down an old woman spoke up:

"Stranger, Heaven's for all, ain't it?"

"Yes—for all."

"Them rich folks in Greensboro don't stand no better show than us pore critters in the hills?"

"Not a bit."

"And the Lord won't shet any of us out fur usin' a snuff-stick or dancin' at a houserain?"

"No."

"Glory! I was afeared He would, though it ain't in my Bible."

She fell back and quietly used her snuff-stick and six of us carried the body to the grave. A hundred thousand eulogies might have been pronounced, but none could have equalled the few words which dropped from the lips of a gray-haired mountaineer who stepped forward. Clapping his hands he whispered:

"O Lord, we've sent ye another soul to judge. Be merciful and remember the burdens she had to bear."

There was but one room to the house. I had one of the two beds, and wife and husband had the other, while the boy slept on a bunk. At midnight the wife called over to me in the darkness:

"Stranger, ar, ye shore about Heaven?"

"How?"

"Hain't so many rich an' eddicated folks died that thar won't be room fur pore Poll inside?"

And when I reassured her she fell asleep within five minutes, perfectly satisfied that I knew all about it.—M. Quad in Detroit Free Press.

Squire Hobbs' Precepts.

We never thoroughly know a man until we hear him laugh.

Despair is the gateway to insanity.

Argument will pull a wise man down to the level of a fool, but it never raises a fool up to the plane of wise man.

Fame, like lightning, generally strikes the man who is not expecting it.

Originality is the faculty of adapting an old idea to a new occasion. When a man ventures an opinion he will find some one who opposes it. Hence a man without opposition is a man without opinions.—THE CENTURY Bric-a-Brac.

Tick.

It's a very little word. Stands for a virtue in a clock and a vice in household habits. It is a quick, quiet, insidious—if you will—vice, that wrecks the happiness of many a home. It is so easy; and, like the glistering of an icy pavement, it betrays its appearance until the victim is down.

AND now the honest farmer packs His apples up for town; This is the top row of his sack: O O O O O O O O O O And this is farther down: O O O O O O O O O O.

A FAMOUS baseball umpire is running for the Massachusetts Legislature. He ought to be elected. He knows a strike when he sees it.

"WHERE have you been for a week back, Brannigan?"

"Been to the hospital, sorr. But how did you know Oi had a weak back, sorr?"

LAST week a conductor on the West Shore road was importuned by a woman passenger to stop and back the train in order that she might look for the false teeth that had fallen out while she was napping on the window ledge.

"WHY was Elijah translated?" asked the Sunday School teacher. As none of the class replied very promptly, a thin youth in the back row ventured the explanation: "Possibly it was because he wasn't understood in his own language."

DUMLEY (who has sold a watch) —"You told me, Robinson, taht if I would let you have the watch you would pay me in thirty days. It's a good deal more than thirty days now." Robinson—"Not by that watch; that watch loses twelve hours out of the twenty-four."

CUSTOMER (having finished his dinner)—Er—about what is the customary tip, waiter?

Waiter—It varies somewhat, sah, 'cordin' to the gemman hisself. De meanest man what ever come into de place, sah, giv me 10 cents.—Epoch.

"I SAY, Doc," casually remarked Dumley, who doesn't believe much in doctors' bills; "my stomach is a little out of order; what ought I to do?"

"If it is out of order," was the reply, "fine it two dollars, and give the money to some physician."

COUNTRY MINISTER, (to boy fishing).—"I'm sorry to see you fishing on Sunday, little boy." Little Boy.—"Ain't you goin' a fishin', too, mister?" Country Minister.—"I am fishing for souls."

Little Boy.—"Well, you'll find 'em werry small an' shy in these parts, mister."

THE "cholastic Sun" speaks editorially of "the female feather workers of New York City." This is a bad case of "illiterate Bohemianism." The reference is apparently to women and girls. But a hen in a dirty coop is apt to be a pretty lively feather worker, and is a female, too.

"WHAT are you doing now?" inquired one tramp of another when they met in a country road.

"Taking part in the political campaign," said the second tramp.

"Well, you're a sweet looking politician. Do you make speeches?"

"No, I travel from barbecue to barbecue."—Chicago Mail.

"Has the town grown much in the last ten years, Mr. Snaffles?"

"Grown? My, yes. Why this very lot we're standing on I paid $10,000 for in '72. I sold it in '81 for $2,000, and had to buy it back on foreclosure for $1,500. Stranger, you can see this town grow, but the trouble is it's an ingrowing town."

FATHER (reading)—And as Shakespeare so beautifully expresses it, "use strengthens habit." Daughter.—"I don't think that altogether right, papa." Father—"Why not, my dear; how is it wrong?"

Daughter.—"Why, goodness knows, my riding habit has had 'use' enough, and instead of being strengthened by it, it is nearly worn out."—Fun.

MAUD—And you are really engaged to Mr. Hawkins, Ethel?

Ethel—Yes. I hardly know whether I love him or not, but he was so earnest that somehow I could not refuse him.

Maud—Yes, I know. When I refused him last summer he told me he was going to marry somebody or bust before Christmas.—Terre Haute Express.

REV. CHARLES POUNDTEXT, (who has been writing his sermon, looking up suddenly).—"Maria, will you take the children out of the room for a few minutes?" Mrs. Poundtext, (in surprise).—"Certainly, my dear. But—are they annoying you?" Rev. Poundtext.—"Not at all; but I have just dipped the manicule brush in the inkwell, and I would like to be at liberty to make a few remarks."

The BALTIMORE WEEKLY SUN continues to preserve its position, maintained for many years, as a model Family Newspaper. During the past year, in order to accommodate the great variety of matter seeking admission to its columns, it has been found necessary to issue a Supplement almost every week, presenting a home newspaper unequalled for freshness and variety. Its literary features are selected with discriminating taste and with special reference to the entertainment and instruction of the family circle.

Its Agricultural and Veterinary Departments, edited by specialists, have been of great value to the Farmer, while its Fashion Articles, Household Recipes, etc., have continued to be a source of weekly interest and instruction to ladies. The latest news up to the hour of publication is given in its correspondence and telegraphic dispatches, while its editorials, besides discussing current events in an impartial spirit, afford much wholesome advice and suggestion on social, economic and other topics. The proceedings of Congress, and Maryland and other Legislative, the National Political Conventions, and the Presidential and Congressional elections are among the important features that will be promptly and copiously presented in its columns during 1888.
