THE COMING OF THE KING.

"They shall see the King in his beauty." All day long we watched and waited, Waited at our darling's side, While her frail bark slowly drifted Out upon a shoreless tide. We had wept in bitter anguish, We had prayed with burning tears, While our hearts drew back affrighted, Looking down the loneliness years. All in vain our tears and pleading, All in vain our sorrowing; We could only watch and listen For the coming of the King.

Oh, the terror of the coming Of the grim and ghastly foe! Oh, the darkness of the pathway Where our darling's feet must go! Oh, the glory of the summer, Bending skies so blue and clear, And the splendor of the roses, And the bird-songs far and near! Must she leave this world of beauty, All the joy our love could bring, And lie down in darksome silence At the coming of the King?

Came He solemnly and slowly As a lord who claims his own, Touched the white hands clasped together, And they grew as cold as stone. Suddenly the blue eyes opened, While our hearts grew faint with fear; In their depths in solemn rapture Faith and hope were shining clear. Did she see the golden portals? Hear the songs the blessed sing? "Perfect peace," she softly murmured, At the coming of the King.

When the days are long and lonely, Summer days most sweet and fair, When we gather in the gloaming, Round our darling's vacant chair, Say we softly to each other, "Fairer scenes than we can know, Sweeter airs and softer voices, Made our darling glad to go." Shines her happy face upon us, Still a smile is lingering; So in patient trust we tarry For the coming of the King. —Advocate and Guardian

IT IS BOOMING.

THE PRESIDENT AND CABINET TO VISIT MARYLAND. THEY WILL ALL BE HERE DURING THE EXPOSITION.

The Committee's Reception at the Different Departments in Washington—Farmer Brown's Appeal to the Agricultural Department, &c.

Frank Brown, president of the Maryland State Agricultural and Mechanical Association, accompanied by a special committee consisting of his Honor, Mayor Latrobe, Col. Jno. L. Thomas, Representatives Harry Welles Rusk and Henry Stockbridge, Jr., John E. Hurst, Senator Wm. D. Burchinal and Charles T. Wescott, of Kent county; Nicholas B. Talbot, president of the Federation of Labor; Isaac D. Brooks, Jr., Levi Weinberg, Senator Milton G. Urner, of Frederick; Col. Theo. F. Lang, F. P. Stevens, Col. Thomas S. Hodson, John S. Gilman, Daniel E. Conklin, Lewis Gutman, W. W. Johnson, Jackson Holland, superintendent of the new postoffice; Jno. W. Linton, Noble H. Creager, Pay Inspector A. J. Pritchard, Senator John B. Wertz, Dr. Horn, J. Frank Sipple and W. A. Marburg, visited Washington by the 10:20 a. m., train June 5th in the private car "Delaware" which had been kindly tendered by Vice-President O. K. Lord, of the B. & O. R. R., to invite the President and his Cabinet to attend the formal dedication of the new postoffice and court-house building in Baltimore on the night of September the 12th next; and also to attend the Exposition at Pimlico, which extends from the 9th to the 14th, inclusive, and witness the sham battle intended as a representation of the battle of North Point on the Pimlico Fair Grounds on the afternoon of September the 12th, and the bombardment of Fort McHenry on the night of the 13th.

AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

The hour having arrived for the committee to visit the White House, as had been pre-arranged by Postmaster Brown, the members of the committee were formally presented to President Harrison, who was extremely courteous and warm in his expressions to the Mayor and the several members of the delegation, stating that he had already been informed of the intention of the merchants of Baltimore to dedicate the new Postoffice and Court House building on September the 12th, and he was gratified to know that the citizens of Baltimore and of the State of Maryland were so well pleased with the government building as to make an event of its dedication; that he would accept the invitation and if it were possible, be present on the occasion, not for the purpose of dedicating the post-office building, but particularly for witnessing the commemoration of the defeat of the British troops in Baltimore; that he had much more interest in the celebration of an event of this character than he had in the dedication of the postoffice, and that he was glad to know the people of Maryland commemorated events of this character; he knew the celebration would be a great success from an agricultural, manufacturing and historical standpoint, for it could not fail to be such in the hands of so competent and influential gentlemen as were represented by the committee. He was well aware of Maryland's hospitality, as it had been his pleasure to receive the same on several occasions, and although this was not terrapin season, he knew that Baltimore was never lacking in her

POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT.

They first called on the Postmaster General, John Wannamaker, Postmaster Brown introducing Mayor Latrobe and the committee. After the formal invitation had been extended by the Mayor, Mr. Wannamaker said it would give him great pleasure to attend the celebration and that his presence could be depended upon; that he thought Baltimore could be proud of the new postoffice and court-house building, which was a credit to the State and country, and that since his experience in the Centennial Exposition in '76 he had determined that exhibitions of this character were always beneficial to any community in which they were held, and that he was always willing to render any assistance he could to make them a success. He was very much interested in Baltimore as a sister city to Philadelphia, particularly in the postoffice and mail facilities over which he had supervision, and that the mercantile community must not expect direct return from this exposition, but there was no question or doubt in his mind that the manufacturing and other industries were stimulated and that many new enterprises were the outcome of industrial exhibitions and celebrations of the character proposed in Baltimore.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

The committee next visited the Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. William Windom, whose consent it was necessary to obtain for the formal dedication of the building. He received the committee warmly, and after the invitation extended by Mayor Latrobe, and the Secretary's consent for the formal dedication, he replied that it would be impossible for him to resist such an important and influential delegation, and if they had asked for an appointment he would have been obliged to surrender, but as to his consent to the dedication of the postoffice building, he had made inquiry since he had been notified of the contemplated visit of the committee, and had learned from the supervising architect that the building, although not entirely completed, would be sufficiently so to admit of its formal dedication on the date mentioned; that he would willingly and gladly give his consent to the same; and that he felt a special interest in the postoffice building in Baltimore, as he was the chairman of the committee that made the first appropriation for its erection, and he had always exercised what influence he had in behalf of further appropriations for the completion of the structure; that he was strongly attached to Baltimore on account of his many personal friends who reside there, and owing to the many pleasant visits it was his privilege to have made, and with the full appreciation of the hospitality of the city; that it affords him great pleasure to accept the invitation, and he certainly would be present unless something unforeseen occurred.

Supervising Architect Windrim was then visited. He also accepted the invitation to be present.

AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

The hour having arrived for the committee to visit the White House, as had been pre-arranged by Postmaster Brown, the members of the committee were formally presented to President Harrison, who was extremely courteous and warm in his expressions to the Mayor and the several members of the delegation, stating that he had already been informed of the intention of the merchants of Baltimore to dedicate the new Postoffice and Court House building on September the 12th, and he was gratified to know that the citizens of Baltimore and of the State of Maryland were so well pleased with the government building as to make an event of its dedication; that he would accept the invitation and if it were possible, be present on the occasion, not for the purpose of dedicating the post-office building, but particularly for witnessing the commemoration of the defeat of the British troops in Baltimore; that he had much more interest in the celebration of an event of this character than he had in the dedication of the postoffice, and that he was glad to know the people of Maryland commemorated events of this character; he knew the celebration would be a great success from an agricultural, manufacturing and historical standpoint, for it could not fail to be such in the hands of so competent and influential gentlemen as were represented by the committee. He was well aware of Maryland's hospitality, as it had been his pleasure to receive the same on several occasions, and although this was not terrapin season, he knew that Baltimore was never lacking in her resources for receptions of this character. Col. Jno. L. Thomas suggested that the President, with his Cabinet, might have a very pleasant trip on the "Dispatch" down the Potomac and up the Chesapeake before witnessing the bombardment of Fort McHenry, or the "Dispatch" could be sent around to Baltimore and the President and Cabinet could leave Washington after an early dinner in the afternoon by rail, board the "Dispatch" at Light Street Wharf, see the bombardment, fireworks, etc., and return to Washington at an early hour for retiring. The program seemed to interest the President and it is expected that he will decide upon one or the other of these suggestions.

NAVY DEPARTMENT.

The committee then proceeded to visit the Secretary of the Navy, Hon. B. F. Tracy, and first requested that the department would furnish several men-of-war, ammunition, etc., to bombard the fort on the night of September the 13th, and to co-operate with the association as far as possible in making the bombardment a success, and that the Secretary would be one of the visitors on the occasion, not only to witness the dedication of the postoffice, but to witness the maneuvering of the forces under his charge. The Secretary replied that the Navy Department would furnish the men-of-war, and render all the assistance in its power to make the entertainment a success, and that it would be a pleasure to him to witness both the dedication and the bombardment.

WAR DEPARTMENT.

They next called on the Secretary of War, Hon. Redfield Proctor, and requested his co-operation in allowing the forces now garrisoned at Fort McHenry to return the fire on the night of the bombardment, and also to increase the number of men on this occasion as much as it was expedient for him to do, and in addition to this to furnish batteries and men to assist in the sham battle to take place at Pimlico on the 12th of September, which was to be a representation of the battle of North Point; and then extended an invitation to him to be present at the dedication and also to witness the battle scenes. The Secretary replied that he would gladly render any assistance he could to carry out the schemes, and he requested the committee to furnish him in detail what they would be likely to require as to the number of guns, men, ammunition, etc., in written form and then the matter would be taken up and he would see that their wishes were gratified to the extent possible under the circumstances.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

They then visited the office of the Secretary of State, but unfortunately Mr. Blaine was in New York, but they extended a formal invitation to him through his assistant, who stated that he had received the official communications from Mr. Brown, president of the association, informing him of the proposed celebration and that he had no doubt that the Secretary intended to be present on the occasion, and accepted the invitation on behalf of the Department of State and would present the same to Mr. Blaine on his return from New York. An invitation was also extended to the Assistant Secretary, who said it would afford him great pleasure to be present some time during the celebration.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

The next visit was to the Department of Agriculture. Secretary Rusk being absent from the city, an invitation was extended to him through the Assistant Secretary, who said he accepted the invitation on behalf of the Agricultural Department and the Secretary; that it would be a pleasure to Secretary Rusk and himself to be present at the celebration. Mr. Brown then stated to the Assistant Secretary that in addition to his being postmaster he was President of the Exposition Association and a practical farmer, and he appealed to him as an agriculturist for his interest in behalf of the exhibition, and as he understood the duties of the Department of Agriculture, they embraced not only the agricultural interest but the mechanical and industrial interest generally of this country, and as it was proposed to hold on the State Fair Grounds at Pimlico an extensive State Agricultural and Industrial Exposition the association felt they had a claim upon the newly organized Agricultural Department, and he, in his official capacity, appealed to him as representing the Secretary for their co-operation and assistance in rendering the exhibit at Pimlico not only creditable to the association but to the State and country at large. The Assistant Secretary replied he was glad to learn that the Agricultural Association had a practical farmer at its head, and from the energy already displayed in behalf of this exposition he had no doubt of its success, and that the Department of Agriculture would render all the assistance in its power to make it so.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

The committee then visited the Secretary of the Interior, who had already been notified of the intended visit and was waiting to receive them. He extended a hearty welcome, stating that he had more interest in Maryland than perhaps the committee was aware. That his mother was a Maryland woman, born and raised in the city of Hagerstown, Washington county and that therefore Maryland was near and dear to him, although he did not know that his department had any points that could be utilized for the benefit of the exposition unless we could transport some of the Indians from the west. Mr. Brown took advantage of this suggestion and said, Mr. Secretary why cannot we get the Indians quartered at Carlisle, Pa., or a representation from the normal school at Fortress Munroe, to which the Secretary replied that he knew of no reason why they could not be obtained and that he would be glad to confer with President Brown upon the subject at some future day; any assistance he could render in this connection would be a pleasure and that he accepted the invitation, not only for the pleasure of witnessing the dedication of the Postoffice and the representation of the battle scenes of 1814, but he would visit Maryland with pleasure as the home of his maternal ancestor; that it was always a pleasure to him to feel that he rested on Maryland soil.

LAW DEPARTMENT.

The Attorney-General was then visited, but owing to the lateness of the hour and his arrangements to leave in a few moments for a train to keep an engagement, he was unable to receive the committee but said to Mr. Brown that he would accept through him, the invitation and would be glad to have him call and explain the details at some future day, but regretted exceedingly that he had not time to see the committee and catch the train.

The committee having completed the program for which they visited Washington returned to Baltimore on the special car "Delaware" of the B. & O. much pleased with the results of the visit, fully satisfied that they had not only secured the presence of the President and Cabinet, but that they would have the hearty support of all the departments in Washington on behalf of the Exposition. The Association has beyond doubt scored a strong point through the work of this committee, and it now remains for the citizens of the State generally, the agricultural, mercantile, manufacturing and other interests to make the Maryland Exposition one of the grandest that has ever taken place in this section of the country, and to make the battle scenes which have already been set forth by the press, the most complete representation of the defeat of the British troops at Baltimore that the most enthusiastic and critical could desire.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

The next visit was to the Department of Agriculture. Secretary Rusk being absent from the city, an invitation was extended to him through the Assistant Secretary, who said he accepted the invitation on behalf of the Agricultural Department and the Secretary; that it would be a pleasure to Secretary Rusk and himself to be present at the celebration. Mr. Brown then stated to the Assistant Secretary that in addition to his being postmaster he was President of the Exposition Association and a practical farmer, and he appealed to him as an agriculturist for his interest in
