ON THE HEIGHTS.

There cometh to my ear with rush of foot,
From out the city's din and wild uproar,
Th' exceeding bitter wailing of defeat,
With "Vivas" that salute the conqueror.

I list life's turmoil with its wear and fret,
Her children weary with endeavor vain,
Content myself with inward peace—and yet—
I, too, have felt the lash of human pain—

Known what it was to throw my soul intense
Into some project never meant to be;
And in this grasping after things of sense,
Impale despair on infidelity.

Lose e'en a God in stony unbelief,
Because his sovereign purpose was not mine:
And in the wild impulsiveness of grief,
Impugn the uses of His discipline.

But, ah! it was a cloud that quickly pass'd,
Revealed in its roll His face to view;
A something further on, more prone to last,
Than this poor country we are passing through.

And now, when fortune's plans seem most perplex'd,
And faith and friendship, both, a thing untrue,
I look into them oft, these faces vex'd,
And whisper softly, "If they only knew!"

Knew what it was to live above these things,
Into those further heights of pure desire,
Upon the pleasure of transporting wings,
To move the being up a planning higher.

To further heights where, though the world below
Be chasing phantoms ever soon and late,
We, raptly standing, with our eyes aglow,
Attain to Heaven, our feet on adverse fate.

—Margaret C. Bisland in N. O. Times-Democrat.

WANTED—A HEIRESS.

BY EMMA A. HOPPER.

"Here's a story you!" said Mrs. Gerry to a literary friend, seated in her handsome parlor. Her jolly, matronly face broadened with smiles at an apparently diverting recollection.

"You wouldn't credit the incident if you read it; but as I was an eye-witness, I can vouch for it. You'll be paid for listening; it's really too good!"

"I took what I called a vacation after we got done with Asbury Park and Saratoga last summer. Mr. Gerry was going west on a two-weeks' business trip, and said I:

"I've worked hard this summer, and I'm going to take a rest. I've talked amiably to five hundred people I haven't cared for; I've rowed and sailed all summer, though it makes me sick, and bathed religiously, when I hate it; I've chaperoned a million girls to doings of all sorts, and even succeeded in getting one or two engaged—and I've earned a period of peace. I'm going to spend the two weeks of your absence, Mr. Gerry, in a woodland retreat."

"Well, it wasn't that precisely, but it was passable. I went to a little hotel in the Catskills. I found too many people there to suit me, though. Old Colonel Marlow came the next day—an entomological old crank, craving his pardon; he carries a trunkful of dried beetles and things about with him; and Harry Fosdick was there with his friend Mr. Pierson.

"I had met Fosdick before, and abominated him for a conceited sprig and an heiress hunter. Mr. Pierson was a lank young creature, with an insane smile and a middle parting to his hair.

"They were two of a kind, and most congenial, till the new waitress burst upon the scene. If the new waitress didn't stir things up!

"Polly, her name was. The other girls were the regulation sort, imported from the city, I imagine, frizzed hair, red jerseys, pert ways—you know them.

"Polly was an oasis in the desert. Polly wasn't exactly pretty, but she was as fresh and blooming as a rose, as neat as wax, and as bright as a dollar. I fairly nabbed her for my table, and kept her; and we got to be very good friends, Polly and I.

"Old Colonel Marlow was at my table. He mooned at me three times a day through his spectacles, and talked moths and mosquitoes to me till I felt like one of his pin-stuck specimens.

"But after Polly came the colonel bent the light of his glasses on her with vivid interest. I thought at first that the old absurdity was in love with her.

"But that wasn't it. He followed me out to the piazza one day; he looked excited.

"Mrs. Gerry, said he, 'I have made a remarkable discovery—extraordinary! Do you know the identity of the young woman who serves at our table?"

"I know she lives down the road somewhere," said I, "in a vine-clad cottage, probably, and that the proprietor of the hotel, having bought butter and eggs from her father, made bold to ask Polly to fill the vacancy left by the sudden departure of a waitress, and that Polly being obliging and not too proud to turn an honest penny, came along."

"The colonel looked sly.

"That's what the landlord has given out," said he. "The story is a fabrication. Listen, Mrs. Gerry! That young woman is Miss Mary—or Polly, as she is called by intimates—Miss Polly Gardner. I am an old friend of her grand-father's, and I have seen her frequently. You have heard of her? She is heiress to half a million."

"I had heard of her. She was a friend of the Lemoynes, and the Lemoynes are friends of mine. I laughed a full minute.

"The last heard of Miss Gardner," said I, "she was in Europe. I don't think she's returned."

"That young person is Miss Polly Gardner," said the colonel, peremptorily. "I recognized her at a glance—at a glance, Mrs. Gerry."

"You are short-sighted, colonel," I ventured, "and perhaps a little absent-minded."

"Possibly, Mrs. Gerry," said the colonel with dignity, "the fact remains that I recognize Miss Gardner beyond doubt, strange though the fact may seem."

"She is, then, out of her senses?" said I, patiently.

"I trust not," said the colonel. "But Miss Gardner, Mrs. Gerry, is a whimsical young woman. She has a reputation for peculiarity. Her large and independent fortune has made her somewhat crochety. I am not greatly astonished at this freak, remarkable thought it is. Evidently she has tired of gaieties, frivolities, and has taken this course for a complete change. I have read of such things," said the colonel, thoughtfully, "but never before have I seen it. If it were the act of any but an eccentric, self-willed young woman, I could not believe my eyes."

"But nobody outside of a mad-house," said I, "and considerably more in that strain."

"All in vain. When the colonel betook himself and his butterfly-net and his bottle of ether into the woods, some time later, it was with his phenomenal belief unchanged.

"I shall not accost her," said he. "An exposure would undoubtedly annoy her."

"Undoubtedly," said I.

"That's the first chapter of the comedy. To comprehend the sequel you must understand that the colonel is garrulous. When I saw him talking to Harry Fosdick, and later to Mr. Pierson—when I observed them listening with open mouths and bulging eyes—I knew what he was imparting.

"Now, I'm discreet and far-seeing. I kept my counsel and awaited developments.

"Sure enough, the little Fosdick joined me in the parlor one morning.

"That is a charming girl at your table, Mrs. Gerry," said he. "And a lady. That is evident. I may as well confess that I am much impressed with her. Some men would blush to confess it, Mrs. Gerry, merely because she has not a high social position nor money.

I, said the little wretch, 'am a man of more independence. I admire Miss Polly and I own it boldly.'

"Bah! how I wanted to take him by the collar and shake him. But I knew his sin would overtake him, for I knew his corrupt little head was teeming with thoughts of the Gardner half-million. Where pure meanness is concerned I am merciless. I own that I chuckled.

"Then came along Mr. Pierson, of the lady-like hair. He referred to Polly in terms of warm approval.

"When I marry, Mrs. Gerry," he remarked, "I marry the girl of my heart's choice, and not the parti indicated by worldly prudence. If it be necessary to stir society in the face, Mrs. Gerry, I shall do it."

"If you could have seen him as he uttered it! His weak blue eyes tried to flash, but didn't succeed, and he fortified himself with the head of his cane.

"Go on, addle-pates!" said I, inwardly. "It's fun for me. Go on!"

"So it was, and for everybody else; though with everybody else they got the credit of being honest in love with my poor Polly. I had the real enjoyment all to my self.

"Polly didn't know how to take it. To have two fine young men of respectful attentions—looking at her and smiling at her, hurrying through their meals in order to get a chance to speak to her, bowing to her as they would have to any lady when she entered the dining-room—well, Polly was bewildered, that was obvious.

"The frizzled and red-berseyed waitresses didn't like it. They giggled among themselves, and went about with noses perked up.

"What Polly endured in the kitchen, I don't know, but the dining-room atmosphere was an indication of it.

"How shall I place the ensuing period realistically before you? Try to imagine it.

"Fosdick gave Polly fresh flowers every day, and Pierson sent to New York for a box of the best confectionery. Fosdick hung about sedulously when Polly was on the scene; Pierson I suspect of having sent notes to her by the bellboy.

"Finally, as a desperate move—you wouldn't have believed they'd have gone to such lengths on mere speculation—but Fosdick sent to the city for his trap, in bold readiness for the next step in the campaign, and Pierson walked a mile to a livery stable to see if there were any suitable buggies for hire.

"I have relatives, Mrs. Gerry," said Pierson, "who would be shocked to know of my honest admiration for a waitress. What do I care? I snap my fingers at them!"

"And he heroically snapped.

"I do not ask myself what the world would say, Mrs. Gerry," said Fosdick—Fosdick grew most confidential toward the last—"because I am not that kind of a man. I am my own master, that shall be seen!"

"I presume they fondly believed that I repeated their remarks to Polly, knowing me to be on good terms with her. I needn't say that I didn't."

"Of course it grew warm toward the climax. The hotel was agog with it, of course, and Pierson and Fosdick hardly on speaking terms, and Polly the observed of all the observers.

"Polly bore herself well. You see, the meekest woman has a spark of coquetry, and Polly, I am convinced, half enjoyed it, in spite of her amazement and the spleen of the red jerseys. I haven't any proof of it—but Polly looked demure.

"Colonel Marlow and his insects took themselves off before the end came.

"Well that he did! I couldn't have answered for the consequences if he hadn't."

"Well, it came with a crash, and I had the real pleasure of witnessing it. I was reading on the side porch one afternoon, just the day before I came home, and Fosdick put in a sudden, hurried appearance.

"Have you seen Miss Polly, Mrs. Gerry?" said he, "I'm looking for her."

"Isn't that she?" said I sweetly.

"Polly was coming round from the kitchen court. She had her hat on and Pierson was with her.

"Fosdick turned a little pale. Then presently the pent-up storm burst. I put my book over my lips and serenely listened.

"I have my trap waiting, Miss Polly," said Fosdick—actually he did, it seemed. "I wish the pleasure of your company for a drive. I mentioned the matter yesterday, you remember?"

"I didn't say I could go, Mr. Fosdick," said Polly.

"I could see the poor girl was frightened. Her voice fairly trembled.

"I'm going home to-day," said she.

"If Miss Polly does remember," said Pierson, superciliously, "she will not be able to accompany you. I have engaged her company for the afternoon."

"Mr. Pierson," said Polly, faintly, "I'm going home. I'm expecting somebody to get me."

"Not to-day, Miss Polly," said Fosdick. "Don't tell me that you are going to-day. You are going no further than the Peak to-day, with me."

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Fosdick," said Pierson, glaring.

"No more words, sir!" said Fosdick, savagely.

"Polly broke out crying from sheer fright, sliding up to me. I think Polly felt all through that affair that I was her friend.

"A big fellow in a flannel shirt and a straw hat came around the porch just then, with a whip in his hand, light-heartedly snapping it.

"A good-looking fellow, too, with light curls and sharp, dark eyes.

"He stared at Polly, standing there with her two adorers; but he recovered.

"Come on, Poll," said he; "hoss 's a-waiting."

"What do you mean?" said Pierson, turning on him.

He began to look scared, and Fosdick was getting white about the gills.

"I don't mean much," said Polly's young man; it had dawned upon me instantly that it was Polly's young man. "Only I'm going to take Polly home. Glad I got here when I did," said he, and he fingered his whip rather suggestively. "I guess she's 'en here long enough. Guess I've got the right to take her. I'm going to marry her."

"Woe! the bomb had burst. Of course they looked ghastly. I won't dwell on the way they did look.

"Only if Colonel Marlow had been there at the moment, I think his life would have been endangered. Making abject fools of two conceited and snobbish fellows at a time isn't safe, you see.

"There was an awful stillness— which poor Polly didn't fully understand. She thought merely that they had rather liked her, and were put out. She dried her eyes, and even smiled at them apologetically.

"I think that attitude of Polly's at that moment—her timid commiseration of them; hers, a penniless country lass—was, after all, the bitterest drop in the bucket. They fairly writhed under it!

"Well, they went home—or somewhere—on the evening train. They went together, but they didn't go as friends, and whether they have made it up I don't know. It wasn't exactly a David-and-Jonathana friendship, anyhow, so it doesn't much matter.

"I gave Polly fifty dollars to buy her wedding-gowns with. I thought I had had enough enjoyment, on the whole, to warrant it; and you know I always pay as I go.

"I should surely have attended the wedding if I hadn't come away before it transpired; I had the most pressing invitation possible. I did a last wicked act; I made her promise to send invitations to Fosdick and Pierson; I told her it was incumbent. I couldn't resist it.

"As for Miss Gardner, she's in Europe still, so the Lemoynes tell me. If ever I meet her, and if I mean to, I shall give her a good laugh with my little story.

"And old Colonel Marlow—I'm just waiting to see him once!"—
Saturday Night.

HONOR. The four-year-old son of Col. John R. Rozer met with a painful accident on Monday last. The little fellow was playing "circus" with the very gentle family horse in the stable, poking it in the legs with a corn stalk. He insists upon it that the animal kicked him, but it is probable the kick drove the sharp end of the corn stalk against his face making him believe that he was kicked. He received an ugly gash above the left eye that gives the corn stalk rather than the horse some credit for the wound. He was right sick during the evening but nothing serious will result.—Clarion.

Belford's Magazine for November has a varied assortment of reading matter and cannot fail to suit the taste of the general reader be he grave or gay. The initial article "A Constitutional Tariff" by Hon. Jefferson Davis, will prove both interesting and profitable to all who consider the Tariff question, one of the most important political problems of the day; there is a short, well written story by F. E. H. Raymond entitled "A Pictured Fate" Felix Oswald writes of the "Curiosities of Longevity"; "Music Hath Charms," a short story by Celia Logan; some account of the "Dogs I Have Known" by James W. Steele, a story of D. R. Curtis with the title of "No Americans for Us"; a discussion of "The Labor Problem" by Alfred F. Jury; "Revealed in a Vision," a story C. M. Skinner; a treatise on "The Failure of Democracy" by Clinton Furbish; together with "The Editorial Department" which includes several prominent and popular topics, several poems and reviews and a complete novel "In God's Country" by D. Higbee make up an amount of intelligent reading matter rarely met with in a single issue of a monthly magazine.

Many Persons are broken down from overwork or household cares. Brown's Iron Bitters retails the system, aids digestion, removes excess of bile, and cures malaria. Get the genuine.

ANOTHER freak in the corn line is reported from Mr. H. F. Maxwell's, who found 26 miniature ears in one husk.

If some enterprising fellow would now corner the market on Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup he could make his fortune. Beware of frauds.

"For I am declined into the vale of years," she said a little sadly, but indeed I don't mind it since I can get Salvation Oil for 25 cents.

The report of the business of the Blue Mountain House for the past season, as submitted to the stockholders, is satisfactory both in volume and profit. There were over 16,000 guests, the largest number for any season except 1884. The popularity of this mountain resort is increasing every year.

Horse and Wagon Stolen.
On Thursday morning Constable Ashbaugh received a telegram stating that a horse and dayton wagon and a set of harness had been stolen at Keysville, between twelve and one o'clock on Wednesday night. It is quite possible that the thief or thieves in this instance may be identified with the robbery of Mr. Hays' store in this place.

Epoch.
The transition from long, lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is gratefully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the Great Alternative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of Kidneys, Liver or Stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at all Drugstores.

A Fatal Accident.
A distressing accident happened at Catoctin Furnaces last Friday afternoon, which resulted in the death of a twelve-year-old son of Jonathan Fraley. The lad was riding on some empty ore cars, which were returning to the ore mine, and was in the company of his brother. The cars were drawn by mules, and by a sudden start of the mules the boy was thrown between the cars. Four of the cars, which were empty, passed over the lad, literally crushing him to pieces. He lived about five hours after the accident, and suffered intensely. His father, just a short while before the accident, had forbidden him riding on the cars, but he disobeyed the injunction. His funeral took place on Sunday.—Union.

Good Performances.
The Sterling Comedy Company has been filling a weeks engagement at the Opera House. They opened Monday evening with "Our Uncle from Catteraugus," Tuesday "Rip Van Winkle," Wednesday "Hazel Kirke," Thursday "Monte Christo." To-night they will produce the "Rag Picker's Daughter," to-morrow afternoon matinee, "Muldoo's Pie-Nic," and to-morrow night will close with "Davy Crockett." These entertainments have been fairly patronized and the performances are above the average given in this place, being free from coarseness and vulgarity, while the members of the company are all good actors. Such entertainments should be encouraged in the community, as they serve as a pleasing variety to our usually quiet modes of living.

President Garfield's Physician.
Dr. Bliss and other eminent medical men speak in the highest terms of Spear's Wines. Dr. Bliss prescribes these wines in his practice, whenever wines are necessary. The following is part of a letter received by Mr. Spear: "I have been greatly pleased with your N. J. Wines, and specially so with the Claret, Burgundy and Port. I wish you to send me two cases of your Claret and one of Burgundy. Also, two cases of Claret and one of Burgundy to my niece Miss—New York City, and send the bill of both orders to me."

Yours truly,
W. BLISS, M. D.
Washington, D. C.

A Warning.
A number of farmers in this neighborhood have posted notices on their premises prohibiting people from trespassing thereon. Several days ago a little son of John Brawner tore one of these notices down and destroyed it. The boy's father had to have another notice printed to replace the one destroyed, under the threat of prosecution. This should be a warning to boys and others who grow indignant at people for "advertising" their lands. It should also be remembered that a land owner has the power to prosecute trespassers whether he gives notice or not, and that the posting of notices is merely an act of courtesy intended to serve as a warning.

That Little Tickling
In your throat, which makes you cough once in a while and keeps you constantly clearing your throat, arises from catarrh, and as catarrh is a constitutional disease the ordinary cough medicines all fail to hit the spot. What you need is a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Many people who have taken this medicine for scrofula, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, and other troubles, have been surprised that it should cure this troublesome cough. But to know the actual cause of the cough is to solve the mystery. Many cases of consumption can be traced back to the neglect of some such slight affection as this. Consumption can be controlled in its early stages, and the effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla in purifying the blood, building up the general health, and expelling the scrofulous taint which is the cause of catarrh and consumption, has restored to perfect health many persons on whom this dreaded disease seemed to have a firm hold.

CLOSE OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Election Day and the Result in this District.

The campaign of 1889 was an unusually quiet one in this district until the latter part of last week, when it opened out with some vigor. Although both political parties had formed clubs with a good roll of membership, but little enthusiasm was demonstrated. On Friday evening a democratic mass meeting was held at the Opera House, which was fairly but not largely attended. The meeting was addressed by Hon. Frederick J. Nelson of Frederick.

On Saturday evening a delegation from the Republican Club, accompanied by the Emmitt Cornet Band, attended a mass meeting in Mechanicstown.

On Election Day the sky was rather cloudy in the morning but in the afternoon the sun came out, making a beautiful clear day, such as might be expected to bring out a large vote, which however was not the case, as only 681 votes were polled. Every body seemed to be in a good humor and no disturbances were reported. The result is as follows: Comptroller—Bagham, dem. 384; Wellington, rep. 291. Sheriff—Gaver, dem. 389; Leazer, rep. 288. County Commissioners—Derr, dem. 409; Englar, dem. 390; Fisher, dem. 383; Lamar, dem. 388; McDuell, dem. 381; Biser, rep. 285; Jones, rep. 288; Sheffer, rep. 293; Keller, rep. 277; Shaw, rep. 295.

House of Delegates—Lakin, dem. 388; Thomas, dem. 389; Boblitz, dem. 398; Minnick, dem. 388; Stottlemeyer, dem. 384; Kaufman, rep. 293; Morsell, rep. 287; Norwood, rep. 288; Riggs, rep. 280; Hoover, rep. 289. Surveyor—Hilleary, dem. 389; Ashbaugh, rep. 290. Six Prohibition tickets were voted.

Ringling Noises
In the ears, sometimes a roaring buzzing sound are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also result from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood. If you suffer from catarrh, try Hood's Sarsaparilla, the peculiar medicine.

Death of Miss Julia McDevitt.

Miss Julia J. McDevitt, whose extreme illness was mentioned in these columns last week, died on Saturday morning shortly after eleven o'clock. Her death leaves Mrs. Edward McDevitt of Frederick the only survivor of the McDevitt family, so well and favorably known in this community. Miss McDevitt was of a quiet and retiring disposition and highly esteemed by all who knew her. Her funeral took place on Monday morning at 9 o'clock from St. Joseph's Catholic Church, of which she was a consistent member, a solemn requiem mass being celebrated by the pastor, Rev. H. F. White, C. M.

From the Hanover Citizen.

There were perhaps 500 rabbits offered for sale in market last Saturday, and the supply was far in excess of the demand. Prices ranged from 6 to 10 cents.

I. N. Darborow, of Mountjoy township, Adams Co., was run over by a runaway team a few days ago and was considerably hurt about the head and body.

Col. Henry F. Thomas, a well-known citizen of York, and city editor of the Age since its start, died on Monday evening. He was in the 63d year of his age, a genial, clever gentleman, and will be missed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Wm. Houch, of Hogenstown, Adams Co., a well-known cattle dealer, was thrown from his buggy a few days ago and seriously injured. Both arms were broken and his body badly bruised. The accident was caused by the bit of the bridle breaking and the horse running away.

While a farmer named Myers, near York, was plowing one day last week his horses frightened and ran away. They became tangled with the plow in such a manner that the plow shear came in contact with the hind legs of both animals, cutting off both legs of the one horse and the right leg of the other just above the ankle. Both horses remained standing on the stumps that remained, the other portion lying some distance away. The leg of the one horse was nearly severed, it being held by a small strip of the skin. Both were killed to relieve their suffering.

Catholic Congress Excursions to Baltimore

The Catholic Congress to be held in Baltimore during the week of November 9th will offer many interesting features of attraction to visitors. The Western Maryland Railroad announces that excursion tickets to Baltimore will be sold at all ticket offices at one fare for the round trip, from November 7th to 12th, inclusive. Tickets will be good on regular trains and are valid to return until November 16th, 1889. The grand torchlight procession will take place on the night of Tuesday, November 12th. It is estimated that fully 25,000 men will be in line, and the great demonstration will be enlivened by the music of 50 bands. From all stations on the Western Maryland Railroad the route to Baltimore is direct. The frequent trains and ample facilities provided by the company will prove a great convenience to delegates and visitors to the great celebration in Baltimore.

The Chamber of Torture

Is the apartment to which the unhappy sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism is confined. If, ere the crisis of pain is reached, that fine preventive, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is used by persons of a rheumatic tendency, much unnecessary suffering is avoided. Nerves, anodynes and sedatives, while having none but a specific effect, are yet very desirable at times. Yet can they produce no lasting effect upon rheumatism, because they have no power to eliminate from the blood the rheumatic virus. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters does this and checks at the outset a disease which if allowed to gain headway, is next to impossible to relieve or to do more than relieve. Rheumatism, it should be remembered, is a disease with a fatal tendency to its progress to reach the heart. A resort to the Bitters should, therefore, be prompt. Dyspepsia, kidney complaint, malaria and nervousness are relieved by it.

A TREE 25 feet in circumference was recently felled on the farm of Dr. William Hollinger, near Abbotstown, Adams Co.

MR. SCOTT SMITH, of Bridgeport, this county, recently husked one hundred and two bushels of corn in five hours. The above has been going the rounds of our exchanges, but has not been reported in this place. As the amount given would be over twenty bushels an hour, we don't believe it is correct. There must be a mistake in the figures.—Ed.

Store Robbed.

Mr. Jos. K. Hays' store in this place was entered by thieves on Wednesday night, who carried off a large amount of booty. They effected an entrance by a second story window in the rear which was reached by means of a ladder. Among the articles stolen were a lot of razors, several pocket knives, a case of tobacco, a case of tea, a lot of canned goods, pickles, cologne and no doubt other articles that are not missed. They also broke into Mr. J. H. T. Webb's tailor shop which joins the store, but didn't take anything there although several suits of clothes were in the room. Mr. Hays says he could not place a value on the missing articles, as the amount is uncertain. The thieves had ransacked every drawer and box in the house, and turned things upside down generally. There is no clue to their identity.

SO

She Obeys Orders.

Harriet Beecher Stowe's son, Rev. Charles E. Stowe, of Hartford, Conn., met with an experience the other evening which completely nonplused him.

The admonition was listened to with awe, and at the table the little one scarcely dared look at Mr. Stowe, not wishing to commit a supposed sin.

She didn't mind holding her tongue, but to eat bread without butter—that would never do.

Rev. Mr. Stowe never received such a shock. He leaned over in his chair to pick up a napkin, which of course had not fallen.

Little Mabel, self-satisfied that she had done the proper caper, was the only one at the table who could positively prove that she was alive.

A Clam Kills a Bird.

"I have lived on these waters, so to speak, for fifty-four years," said Mr. Cook to a reporter, "but I never before saw anything like what I saw a few days ago.

When I reached the spot I saw that one of the bird's feet was clasped by a large freshwater clam, but before I could render aid the bird again with a great effort arose into the air and made a few wild circles, unfortunately over the lake, but the clam held on, and in a minute more both were in the water.

After a brief fluttering resistance the poor sand snipe succumbed to the weight of the clinging clam and was ignominiously drowned.

Excitement.

Rev. Dr. Annot, having been charged with "excitement" when speaking on total abstinence, replied:

"People need not tell me that I am excited on these questions. I know that I am, I should be ashamed before God and man if I were not. There is more in the public houses of Glasgow than in the spirit of a minister than all that Paul saw at Athens.

There are more people abusive to others than he open to abuse themselves, but humor goes around, and he that laughs at me to-day will have somebody to laugh at him to-morrow.

Use lemon juice and salt to remove iron rust. A solution of pearlash thrown upon a fire will extinguish it.

Acrons should study architecture; then they would always know how to draw good houses.

Unmannerly Children.

A committee of the Boston School Board now has under consideration the question how the standard of good manners in the public schools shall be raised.

Both in and out of school, is confessedly deficient in this important matter. We are too apt to take it for granted that boys are irreverent, thoughtless and uncouth by a sort of natural right, and we therefore excuse their faults of manner on the simple ground that they are boys.

They do not look for respectful obedience from their children, and, of course, therefore they do not get it. Nor does anybody else get it, either. Strange as it may appear, there are parents who are actually proud of the rudeness and pertness of their children; they look upon it as an evidence of "smartness."

In the report of the Bureau of Statistics of Labor of the State of Ohio, for the year 1888, the following list is given, showing the amount of farm mortgages in the States named:

Table with 2 columns: State and Amount. Ohio: $701,000,000; Indiana: $388,000,000; Illinois: $290,000,000; Wisconsin: $250,000,000; Michigan: $175,000,000; Nebraska: $140,000,000; Iowa: $131,000,000; Kansas: $203,000,000; Missouri: $237,000,000.

Total farm mortgages in these States, $3,425,000,000. By the census of 1880 the total value of all the farms in these ten States was reported as $5,107,040,003, and it is doubtful if the census of 1890 will show that these farms are worth as much now as in 1880; therefore the startling fact is before us that in ten of the most thriving agricultural States in the Union the farms are mortgaged for two-thirds of their value.

A NAUGHTY little boy one day eluded punishment by creeping under a table, where his mother could not reach him. Shortly after his father came in, and when told the state of affairs crawled on his hands and knees in search of his son and heir, when to his astonishment, he was greeted with this inquiry: "Is she after you, too, father?"

NEPHEW—"There, aunt, that is the residence of one of our richest citizens. Handsome place, isn't it?" Aunt—"Yes; but how vain are the efforts of the camel to pass through the needle's eye. The house is fine, 'tis true; but who knows but it is built upon sand?"

It is told of a pious, well-meaning man here that upon one occasion in Sunday-school he prayed: "And bless the superintendent of this school, who has led such a long, tedious Christian life." Even the superintendent could not suppress a smile.—Kingston Freeman.
