THE PILGRIMAGE.

BESSIE CHANDLER.

Long years ago the heart of a king Was carried in state like a royal thing, To the Holy Land, where he longed to go. Did living desires round his dead heart cling; And could they be satisfied so?

How strange it seems that kings in their pride Have lived thwarted lives like ours, and have died With the thing that they longed to do undone, Till, unconquered, some from the grave have cried For their hearts to be carried on!

Yet never a king had such a stake As I, in the journey I long to make To a land, alas, where I may not go; But my heart must be carried there or break Whether living or dead, I know. Come, yellow-haired little boy of mine; Let me see your face, where your young hopes shine. You're loving, my darling, and strong and true; You'll journey, while I vainly long and pine, So my heart I will send with you. For I yearn to follow your life, my my sweet; 'Tis a long, hard way for your eager feet, And I can go only a little part; But, dear, till your pilgrimage is complete, Will you carry your mother's heart? —Harper's Bazar.

IN SEARCH OF A CRIME.

How the Peace of a Flat Family Was Disturbed.

"Here is the family!" calls mother. "Our new neighbors are moving in."

We all rushed to the window; a little figure draped in black emerged from the carriage, assisted by a military-looking man with gray beard and whiskers; then followed a young lady of about eighteen years, who ascended the steps and entered the door with a figure in mourning.

We were about to turn away with curiosity satisfied, when mother exclaims: "Here's some one else."

A general rush for our places at the window, a little scramble on our part, handing of bundles through the carriage door on the "some one's" part and with one spring a vision of loveliness alighted on the pavement, right in front of our flat window.

No one turned away now, for this little being of about sixteen years, with brown curls dancing recklessly all around her sunny face, was not a picture to be gazed at every day.

"That was the mother in black," said Florence, our speculator, "and that's the father who is talking."

"Go in, Macy, and don't stand staring," we heard them my say. A little peal of laughter followed this rebuke, and the brown curls flitted past the window, up the steps and faded from sight.

Our new neighbors, who had taken the flat above ours, had evidently traveled quite a distance. Mother declared she had seen "Kentucky" marked on their boxes.

"I am very glad they are such nice-looking persons," she remarked to father at dinner that evening.

We took a deep interest in their outgoings and incomings, but heard nothing definite concerning them. One February evening, as we were gathered together for a game of cards, we were startled by a scream. "What was that?" asked several voices. Numerous repetitions of the voice caused us to drop our cards and seek for the why and wherefore.

Archie opened the window. All was still.

"Strange," says father, as we proceeded with our game.

"Some child in the street," I replied, and we thought no more of it that evening.

The following night as I sat reading aloud to the family, mother interrupted with "Sh—!" I paused, glanced at mother, heard nothing and went on with my reading.

Again she stopped me, "Listen! don't you hear some one moaning?"

I raised my head and heard an "Oh!" "Oh!" as of some one in great agony; then followed a sobbing, which died away in the moaning sound of the night before.

"It's next door," said Archie, leaning against the wall and listening. As the sound recommenced we all joined Archie and maintained perfect silence.

"It's moving! It's moving!" he exclaimed, and we followed the sound around the room to the opposite corner.

"Maybe it's a spirit!" said superstitious Florence in an awe-struck whisper.

The next night the same sound commenced and when it ceased mother was in a tremor of nervousness and I declared that some person was either undergoing horrible torture or a slow death.

But who is the criminal and what is the crime? These are the questions.

"Charles," said mother, addressing father, "I believe I will call the landlord."

"Better wait awhile, my dear," replied father.

"The neighbors are all talking about it, father," I put in.

"Well, let them remedy it then," he retorted.

"What's to be done had better be done before it is too late," I suggested, thinking of the sunny face, which had made no light impression on my boyish fancy.

Mother adjusted everything, as she always did, by her suggestion in the evening that we should go up and call. After a family council, it was decided that I should be her escort; I heard this decision with an inward rejoicing, though a manner of outward calm. We started up the stair, watched from our hall door by the eye of the entire family, the colored girl's included. It was not without a tinge of fear that I heard the sound of the gong under my hand. What would be the outcome of all this? How would the mystery be solved? What explanations could they make?

A neat-looking Irish girl opened the door for us. "Are the ladies at home?" asked mother; her voice was not perfectly steady.

"They are, ma'am."

"Tell them their neighbors have called, please," said mother, trying to be informal.

We were ushered into a very pretty, I may say handsome parlor; evidences of taste wherever we turned our eyes. No apparent mystery here, surely.

A rustle of skirts along the hall, a little black robed figure in the doorway and as she comes forward I mentally comment, "An excessively young looking mother," but such she proves to be, for she says presently and in a very sweet voice, "My daughters will be in directly; they will be pleased to make your acquaintance, I am sure; it has been very lonely for them here, coming away from numerous friends and their old homes. Here is Bertha now," she continued, rising and introducing a very handsome girl with big black eyes and a wealth of black hair; "and this is Macy," gently disengaging from the curtain behind which she was hiding, our vision of a month before. In appearance a happy family, I thought, but we will soon know all, for mother had called with a firm determination of solving the mystery, and who ever knew a determined woman to fail?

The subjects of conversation changed a number of times; my interest was entirely wrapped in Macy, when mother made the fatal plunge from the other side of the room with this remark; "Mrs. Newton, have you heard sounds of moaning in this neighborhood of evenings?"

What on earth made Macy blush so furiously and stammer so awkwardly?

"We have been very much concerned about it," continued mother, "and we are very much in sympathy with the sufferer, whoever she may be."

At this Miss Macy began to laugh from apparently no cause whatever and Mrs. Newton's gentle face was completely wreathed in smiles.

"Perhaps Macy may be able to explain this mystery," she said, glancing at her daughter with a smile in her eye. By this time that young lady was convulsed with laughter. She soon conquered her feelings and began the explanation.

I pricked up my ears and hung on her words with breathless attention.

"Really, Mrs. Carlton," she said, "I am so sorry you should have been troubled by those sounds. They were my attempts at vocal culture and I am studying elocution."

It was my turn to be convulsed. Not even poor mother's face could restrain me.

Controlling myself presently, I asked:

"How did it happen, Miss Macy, we could never find by listening the place from which the sound originated?"

"Because I practiced in all the rooms of the flat, I suppose," she answered, "and perhaps because I have a habit of walking while practicing the sounds."

"I know they had a good laugh at us after we had gone.

When we entered our own parlor the family gathered around us with eager inquiries and many glances of curiosity.

I could not describe the deafening shouts of laughter which interrupted our explanations.

An eccentric clergyman in Cornwall had been much annoyed by the way the members of the congregation had got into the habit of looking round to take stock of late comers. After enduring it for some time he said, on entering the reading desk one day: "Brethren, I regret to see that your attention is called away from your religious duties by your very natural desire to see who comes in behind you. I propose, henceforth, to save you the trouble by naming each person who may enter, and I hope that the services will then be allowed to proceed without interruption." He then began: "Dearly beloved," but paused half way to interpolate, "Farmer Stubbins, with his wife and daughter." Farmer Stubbins looked rather surprised, but the minister, with perfect gravity, resumed his exhortation. Presently he again paused—Sam Curtis and William Diggle." The abashed congregation kept their eyes studiously bent on their books. The service proceeded in the most orderly manner, the parson interrupting himself every now and then to name some new comer. At last he said, still with the same perfect gravity: "Mrs. Symons, of the Red Lion, in a new bonnet." In a moment he felt his mistake, but it was too late. Every feminine head in the congregation had turned around.

A War Relic.

An interesting relic of the late war is on exhibition in the store of a shoe dealer in Church street, New York. It is a shoe weighing two pounds, one of a pair worn by a Confederate Colonel at the battle of John's Island, S. C. After his capture he exchanged shoes with a private of the 156th New York. The latter wore them for awhile and took them to Kingston, N. Y., in 1864. The shoe is of rude construction, having rawhide uppers with a hard-wood sole half an inch thick, covered at the edges with a strip of rivets fastening the sole and uppers together. The heel is of wood and covered with a heavy iron plate shaped like a horseshoe. This shoe was made in England for the use of the Confederate Army, and is similar to those worn by miners there.

Rabbies-foot Luck.

"Do I believe dat dis yere rabbit's fut brings me luck?" repeated the old ducky in shrill tones as he softly brushed his chin with it. "Why, sah, if it hadn't a bin fur dis fut dar's no tellin' what might a happened to me. Look at dat Julius Tompkins. He 'lowed dat a rabbit's fut was no good, an' whar is he now? Went up to Louisville to work in a pork house an' died wid small-pox."

"Yes."

"An' look at de time I was on dat coal barge at Mobile. Had dis yere fut hangin' to my neck by a blue string, an' some of dem niggers called me 'Hoodoo,' an' was gwine to take it away from me an' feed it to a dog. When dat barge struck a snag and went dat bottom who got saved? Dis yer pusion an' nobody else. Four of 'em went right down like rocks, jist like dey might hev expected."

"Lucky for you."

"Yes, sah, an' how was it de time de ghost of Peter Robbins cum scroonin' frew out naylorhood? Pete he was hung up at Greenville, you know. I was right dar' an' seed it all, an' when he swung off I kissed the rabbit's fut fo' times. Some of de folks laughed at me, an' called me a fool nigger. But how did it cum out? Peter's ghost cum up to Langville an' seart everybody outer his shoes—everybody but me. Nebber knocked on my doah one single time, an' neber left no smell of brimstone 'round my cabin. Couldn't do it, you know. Dis yere fut was pawin' him away all de time."

"Will any rabbit's foot bring a person luck?"

"No, sah! No, sah! Dat's de reason I wouldn't sell dis one fur a millyun dollars in gold! De sar-cumstances has got to be right. You has got to find your rabbit in de moon. De wind has got to be from de east. Dat rabbit has got to be huntin' fur jimweed to cure a cataract in his left eye. You has got to creep up an' kill him wid a stick dat a dead man has carried, an' when you ar' takin' off de fut you has got to h'ar a ghost cry out down in de cotton. Oh, no, sah. Doan you let none of dese yere common niggers round yere sell you no common rabbit's fut. Dey wouldn't keepde kyars on de track till you got over to Decatur."

The Farmer a Skilled Laborer.

Viewed from the lofty standpoint of the New York Hodcarriers' Union, considered from the hall of the Philadelphia Billposters' Protective Association, the prairie farmer is simply a clothopper. He is a mau who decides to have corn, wheat and potatoes, instead of wild grass, grow on a certain piece of land, and plants the seed that will produce them. In point of fact, more knowledge and skill are requisite for prosecuting his craft than that of any city artisan. It requires more skill to handle a plow than a trowel. It is more difficult to mangle a reaping machine than a machine that turns out brick. Greater knowledge is needed to sow grain than to moves switches in a freight yard. Much more information, experience, and skill are needed to raise tobacco plants, to cultivate them, and properly to cure the leaves, than to make them into cigars. Laying drain tile is a more difficult art than laying brick. Properly to remove a fleece from a sheep demands as great dexterity as to shave the beard from a face. The successful farmer is necessarily a skilled laborer. He is master, not of one trade, but of many, and a long time is required to learn each of them. He is also a merchant, and to be prosperous he must be a judge of the quality of many things, and know how to buy and sell them to the best advantage.

THE GREAT EXPOSITION OF THE THREE AMERICAS, IN HONOR OF THE 400th ANNIVERSARY OF THE DISCOVERY OF THE WESTERN WORLD.

"To be or not to be."
This is the important question which is at present, exercising the minds of the public spirited citizens and honorable Senators in whose hands our national reputation has been placed and on whom rests the responsibility of making us ridiculous in the estimation of the whole civilized world, if this demonstration ends in smoke. Such boasting and planning, such enthusiastic liberality in the way of promises, such disinterested competition for the honor of entertaining all creation at the grand jubilee to be held by the United States to testify the appreciation of our indebtedness to Christopher Columbus for giving us this wondrous western continent on which to build our glorious eagle's nest, such enthusiasm bubbling up from every state and territory to swell the current of patriotic endeavor, surely gave promise of a result worthy of the nation that inaugurated it, and worthy of the successful navigator in whose honor it was to be held on the four hundredth anniversary of his great discovery.

Thus far all was well, and if it could have been made as it ought to have been, a National affair under the auspices, and at the expense of the general government, keeping it entirely apart from all ideas of moneyed interests or commercial advantages, the celebration could have been successfully carried through, and the country saved the humiliation of seeing the whole affair made contemptible by the trickery and jealousy of politicians and the cupidity of rival cities who bid for the privilege of holding the show for the sole purpose of securing the benefits they might get from it, when it had been virtually knocked down to the highest bidder. And now, after the sale is over and the privilege of entertaining the whole world at this great celebration has been fairly bought and paid for, comes the disgraceful acknowledgement from the successful bidder that she can't get ready in time for the great party, if it is to come off, as proposed, in 1892, and begs the United States to put off celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America until 1894.

If this were not so disgraceful and humiliating it would be a ridiculously laughable farce, and that such a proposition could be seriously made, or seriously considered by the dignified senators on whose vote the decision of the question rests is almost impossible of belief.

But Chicago has given evidence of not only stupidity in asking to be allowed to celebrate an anniversary, two years after date, but of misrepresentation and trickery, in her statements with regard to the ability of The City by the Lake, to meet the expenses of the great Exhibition from her own resources, which resources now prove to be as windy as the locality in which they originated, and with consummate impudence, she asks Congress, not only to put off the Fair till it suits her convenience, but also to advance the money to pay for it.

A National Celebration should be a National affair, held at the Capital of the Nation at whose invitation guests are expected from every corner of the civilized world, whose entertainment should be provided for by the government in whose name the invitations have been issued, assisted by voluntary contributions from every member of the great sisterhood of States, joining as a united family in proving to the world that the boasted motto of our Republic is the inherited sentiment of every true American citizen.

THE HEART OF THE ALLEGANIES.

Writing of a recent trip across the mountains of West Virginia, a gifted journalist says:
"Twilight on the grade is grand. The mountain summits look like the bushy tops of trees. The sun has disappeared in a ball of fire at his 'jumping-off place,' but the vivid lighting of the western sky by the still upturned illumining face below the horizon is in marked contrast to the gathering shades behind the rushing train. From shelf to shelf, from crag to crag, from brink to brink, we almost fly. Like a flashing transformation, rendering almost past belief the fact that the scene is in the midst of the Alleghanies, comes a bit of landscape gardening with all the beauties of walks and hedges and bright hued flowers, a mountain brooklet tumbling through the centre—Buckhorn Wall, the most noted and most admired view that can be had from any known point in the Alleghany range. To enable the road to span the tremendous gorges, a massive wall of cut stone was erected for a distance of several hundred feet, and more than a hundred feet above the foundation rock. As the river makes an abrupt turn at right angles, a deep canyon is opened up for miles. Range after range of mountains disappear behind each other. The shadowy outlines of single peaks steal out through the haze."
This beautiful scene is on the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. near Grafton, W. Va. The entire line from the Potomac to the Ohio is a majestic panorama of the grandest views on the continent and all endowed with historic interest.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get Hood's "In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me to buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other."

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it. Mrs. ELIA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

In referring to a report that has been circulated to the effect that the editor of the Banner of Liberty was trying to get a position in the Custom House at Baltimore and the Treasury Department at Washington for members of his family, that paper in terms that cannot be misinterpreted or misunderstood, pronounces the originator of the report a liar.

The street lamps at Hanover will be allowed to burn until midnight hereafter. This is an hour longer than Emmitsburg asks for. We want better lights, and want them left burning until 11 P. M.

The efforts to arrange satisfactory dates for holding the Agricultural Fairs at Hagerstown and Frederick, so as not to conflict with each other have failed, and both fairs will be held the same week. This was the case last year.

The right thing in the right place is without doubt Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup, the best remedy for babies while teething. Only 25 cents a bottle. If your liver is torpid, if your appetite is poor, if you want your stomach thoroughly cleansed, if you cannot sleep, if you want a good digestion, use Laxador, the great regulator. Price 25 cents.

You may send your address ahead of time with a notice of when you will remove and we will make the change at the proper time. In all cases send present address as well as future.

Now, Give Attention To the purification of your blood, for at no season is the body so susceptible to the benefits to be derived from a good medicine, as in March and April. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the people's favorite spring medicine. It stands unequalled for purifying the blood, curing scrofula, salt rheum, etc., regulating the kidneys and liver, repairing nerve tissues, strengthening and invigorating the whole body, as well as checking the progress of acute and chronic disease and restoring the afflicted part to a natural, healthy condition. If you have never tried Hood's Sarsaparilla for your "spring medicine," do so this season.

From the Gettysburg Star & Sentinel. The Gettysburg Athenaeum, a young men's social organization, after an existence of twelve and a half years, has disbanded. Mr. D. P. Weikert and his sister Mrs. Jacob Schriver, of Greenmont, and Mr. J. E. Zimmerman of Liberty township, this county, were off to Ohio last week to attend the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Coebel, of Greenford. Mr. Coebel was a native of this county, and this golden wedding was the occasion for a pleasant assemblage of relatives and friends. Mr. Weikert made a flying trip returning Saturday evening, the rest of the party making a more prolonged stay. Miss Alice Seabrook, of the Carlisle Indian School, joined the Adams county party to the above wedding in Ohio, last week.

Why It Is So.

The question is frequently asked, "Why is it that you are always busy in your job printing office?" The answer naturally suggests itself. People both at home and abroad have learned that our neatness, promptness and low prices, the Chronicle Job Printing Office is way ahead. The reason of this is that we employ skilled mechanics, and have the very best machinery in the county for the prompt execution of the work. In addition to a lot of new desirable type faces, we have just added a brand new Paragon Lever Paper Cutter. This, with three presses, including a half-medium Gorden Jobber, and type running into the thousands of pounds enables us to do all kinds of work with dispatch, and we are not confined to running only one job at a time. Call to see us friends even if you don't want any work done. It is a pleasure for us to show you the machinery, which is always going.

From the Gettysburg Compiler.

The Theological Seminary at this place, by the will of Rev. C. Beard, of Waynesboro, Va., receives a bequest reported at from $7,000 to $10,000, and the College several thousand dollars by the will of Randall Wilson, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Caroline Donovan, a very wealthy lady of Baltimore, died at her residence, (Catonville, on Wednesday morning, in her 87th year. She owned the Gettysburg Springs Hotel and had a fourth interest in the Eagle. The latter she disposed of to her business manager, Mr. J. H. Harvey, some time before her death. The Springs Hotel will doubtless be sold. Mrs. Donovan recently gave to the Johns Hopkins University $100,000 to found a chair of English Literature, and in her will makes a number of other public bequests; the balance of the estate to be divided between her nine nephews and nieces. She leaves no children, nor brothers or sisters.

Waked Up Effectually.

A lethargic, dormant condition of the liver is hard to be overcome with drastic cathartics and nauseous cholagogues. A gentler, pleasanter and far more effective means exists of arousing the organ when so moribund. This is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, vouchered for by the medical fraternity, tested by the public for many years. A resumption by the billary organ of its secretory function, with the activity attendant upon health, a return to regularity of the bowels, and a renewal of digestion, are the no less happy and certain results of using the Bitters systematically. Its laxative effect is never painful and it is not followed by any of the pernicious results of the use of other purgatives. It is a pleasant and palatable remedy, and its use is recommended by the highest medical authorities. It is a valuable remedy for biliousness, indigestion, dyspepsia, nervousness, debility, kidney troubles and neuralgia in various forms.

An Odd Case.

Mr. John M. Bell showed us a cane sent him by Mr. E. S. Waddles recently. It was made by the Wallopsis Indians from the cactus which grows on the prairies of Arizona. The cane is of course hollow and has somewhat the appearance of wicker work at first sight. Mr. Bell prizes it very highly.

"Doctor, I can neither lay nor set. What shall I do?" "I think you had better root," was the reply. Now if the doctor had prescribed a bottle of Salvation Oil, for the poor fellow's rheumatism, it would have relieved his patient at once. 25 cents.

Straw hats and linen dusters will not be so very popular as heretofore; Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup however, will be as popular as ever at 25 cents.

Good to Another Field of Labor.

The many friends of Rev. Dr. J. N. Davis of the M. E. Church will regret to learn that he will not return to this circuit. At the annual meeting of Conference held at Cumberland, Dr. Davis was assigned to Patasco circuit, in Howard county. Dr. Davis was very popular here both in the pulpit and socially, and Patasco circuit is to be congratulated on securing his services. Rev. J. F. Gray was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by Dr. Davis' removal.

Its Excellent Qualities.

Commend to public approval the California liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs. It is pleasing to the eye, and to the taste and by gently acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, it cleanses the system effectually, thereby promoting the health and comfort of all who use it.

PERSONALS.

Miss Edith Motter is visiting in Baltimore.

Miss Helen Hoke was in Frederick this week.

Mr. John Miller and family have removed to Carroll county.

Misses Minnie Hoke and Alma Miller made a trip to York Road.

Miss McKnight of Gettysburg is the guest of her sister, Mrs. DeYoe.

Mr. H. E. Hann, of Foxville spent Sunday with his family in this place.

Mr. David C. Krise has moved on Mr. Jacob Krise's farm in Liberty twp., and Charles H. Wetzel to the property recently purchased by him in Friends Creek Valley.

The Standard.

"I regard Hood's Sarsaparilla as having passed above the grade of what are commonly called patent or proprietary medicines," said a well known physician recently. "It is fully entitled to be considered a standard medicine, and has won this position by its undoubted merit and by the many remarkable cures it has effected. For an alterative and tonic it has never been equaled."

A Constable Gets Left.

On Wednesday, John Lawrence of this place was arrested at D. Edwin Shriver's sale, near Two Taverns, in Adams county, Pa., for selling cigars without license. The constable who made the arrest took John and all his goods, except his horse and wagon, to his house and kept him over night, next morning taking him to Gettysburg for a trial. When the trial was called at Gettysburg there was no witness to appear against him, so the constable was ordered to bring the boy and all his goods to his home in this place. Lawrence's horse and wagon having been brought home the day he was arrested, by a man who was helping him. John was pretty badly scared when arrested, but is now rather happy over the termination of his little brush with Adams county officials.

HELMAN.

MT. ST. MARY'S COLLEGE NEWS.

MARCH 10, 1890.—The numerous friends of Prof. Charles A. Leloup of Mt. St. Mary's College faculty, will be delighted to learn that that estimable and scholarly gentleman who for some time past has been suffering from an acute attack of rheumatism, is now fast convalescing and hopes to be able soon again to resume the responsible duties of his classes.

Stimulated by the unprecedented success of the entertainment given on Washington's birthday, the students of Mt. St. Mary's College are making extensive preparations for the fitting celebration of the feast of Ireland's patron saint, which takes place on the 17th inst. One of the Senior Students will deliver an address on the life and labors of St. Patrick. The St. Cecilia Orchestra and the Mountain Glee Club will dispense some of the latest and best musical selections, while the Theatrical Association will produce the famous melo drama "Handy Andy." New costumes and stage accoutrements have been procured from Baltimore, which will lend additional eclat to the occasion.

FROM ST. JOSEPH, MO.

An Interesting Letter which Tells of the Boys and What They are Doing.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., Feb. 20th, 1890.
EDITOR OF THE CHRONICLE.—Thoughts of home and the welfare of Maryland's Sons in the west has again impelled me to invade your columns. There are so many here that people sometimes say "how large a place is Emmitsburg, if it were quite a city if the same proportion has gone to other portions of the country as have come to St. Joseph." One of the most successful of "our boys" humorously says "it is time to stop this pauper immigration." In my former letter I inadvertently omitted any mention of some of our most deserving comrades and friends. Clem Guthrie for instance is one of the best commercial travelers for the big wholesale drug house of Van Wert & Co., of which E. M. Sweeney is a partner and treasurer.

Mr. Matthias Martin has made some very successful investments in real estate. He owns several houses and this is but a small part of his property. Eugene Martin, long an engineer on the K. C. R. R., has gone to Lima, Ohio, where he occupies a similar position.

Will Martin is one of the most popular and reliable engineers who pull a three or four ton engine in the West.

Robert Martin is a clerk in a grocery store and doing well.

Joe Martin has for years been with Mr. John De Clue's Planing Mill. Joe always has a warm corner in his heart for the boys of this place, and many of them have shared his hospitality.

Clem Guthrie's family will remove to Montana in the spring, where his father-in-law Mr. Bailey is largely interested in a great mining enterprise near Helena.

Edward Smith is Vice-President of the C. D. Smith Drug Co., which was founded by the late C. D. Smith his father. Each of the Drug houses I have mentioned do a business up in the hundreds of thousands per annum, and the large volume of business would startle the people of Emmitsburg.

Harry Troxell now on a visit to his native heath, where as a boy he used to break rock on the streets for a quarter a day, and drive the cows to pasture for two or three cents a month, is one of the firm of Hackett & Traxell, brick contractors, who have erected some of the finest buildings in this city. They have a contract now I am informed to put up a costly wholesale house in Pueblo, Colorado. While a man in E. was discussing the plans for a bake oven this enterprising firm would build a whole brick block. Harry thinks six dollars a day is a wages now for his kind of labor. I agree with him.

Richie and Frank Stein both occupy good positions with one of the railroad companies here.

Two of your former townsmen are prominently mentioned for the Mayor of this city in the coming municipal election. I refer to Col. John L. Motter and Samuel I. Smith.

Few persons in the east have any adequate idea of the magnitude of the jobbing trade of this city, and the size of the houses which are being built in the great house of Tootle, Hoesa & Co., for instance. It comprises seven stories and a basement—110x140 feet, 12,000 square feet, over three acres of surface. They employ more than forty traveling salesmen, who carry the grip into all parts of every State and Territory west of the Missouri river. Besides the Knights of the road there are some seventy or eighty employed in the house. The old store is now utilized as a boot and shoe store, and carries over three hundred sewing machines used and three hundred and fifty females employed.

I could write you much more about our city and the good people of the Maryland colony, but must close for this time. I am, dear friend, as ever, your true friend, G. P. R.

MT. ST. MARY'S ITEMS.

Miss Sweeney has returned from York, Pa.

Miss Buzgine, who has been the guest of Mrs. William Shriver, has returned to Baltimore.

The members of the Mountain Benevolent Association held their annual election of officers on Sunday March 2nd, which resulted as follows: President, A. V. Keepers; Vice-President, Ephraim Eckert; Treasurer, William H. Dorsey; Secretary, George Seybold; Assistant Secretary, John H. Roensteel; Sergeant-at-arms, William Jordan; Finance Committee, William C. Taylor, Vincent Sebald, Joseph C. Rose and A. B. Peacock.

The election this year took place in the Hall erected by the Society during the past year. This Society is in a flourishing condition, having added twenty new names to its roll during the past two months, and is a productive of a good in our community, we trust its success may continue.

ITEMS FROM DELTA, PA.

MARCH 9.—Excavations on the new bank foundation continue with good speed.

A small portion of our main street has been plied.

A few sledge bells were heard in town on Thursday evening.

Quite a number of new buildings are in course of erection in South Delta.

Prizes have been heard in in the Delta Presbyterian chapel for the past two weeks.

The temperance drama, "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," is to be played in the Masonic Hall, in this town on March 20. Prizes have been heard in in the Harford County, near the Pa. line are becoming unsafe for the men to work in an account of frequent falls of rock.

Foxville Items.

Mr. Thomas Thomas has sold his house and 16 acre lot to Mr. Wm. Buhman, for $500.

Mr. Aquilla Fox, our butcher, who is serving on the jury at Frederick, will steam saw mill to Mr. Wm. Brown's timber lot, near here.

Mr. Geo. L. Fox has bought of Mr. Wm. Denison, 250 acres of timber land adjoining the West Virginia tract. The purchase of this property, which is the mammoth fish which Mr. Root recently caught in the Monocacy, may have lowered that stream considerably.

Mr. C. H. Grossnickle of Ellerton, has placed a new saw mill on the timber land of Mr. Dougherty of Frederick, which he recently purchased from Mr. Wm. Harman.

Last Thursday while Mr. James Fox was attending to a mule in Mr. H. C. Harbaugh's stable the animal kicked him in the breast. Dr. Buhman was called in and pronounced his injuries very severe, but under the Dr.'s skilful treatment he is improving slowly.

Carrying Coals to Newcastle.

This is considered folly, but it is an astounding fact that Speer's Wines raised at Passaic, N. J., have acquired such a reputation for purity and excellence abroad, that they are shipped by express to the city of New York, where they are being sold at a profit. It is enjoying an enviable reputation at home and is used by the leading physicians in America, as well as in Europe.

Mr. Wm. Shields has a brown Log-horn hen that layed an egg measuring 7 1/2 inches in circumference lengthwise.

JOHN SEPTER, Martin V. Eyer, Wm. Miller and Joseph Ebers were appointed road supervisors for this district on Tuesday.

Be sure to read the letter from St. Joseph, Mo., which will be found particularly interesting as it tells of a number of the Emmitsburg boys, what they are doing, etc.

FRICK Co. have put on an all-night force and the pay-roll shows upwards of five hundred hands—rapidly nearing the $4 mark. New hands are going on daily and are here in half past one enough for the necessities of the Company.—Waynesboro Gazette.

The new two-cent postage stamps which have only made their appearance here on incoming mail are, in our estimation, nothing for the department to be proud of. The stamp is small enough to look mean and anything but a bright carmine in color.

To Improve the Firemen's Quarters. On Tuesday evening the town Commissioners decided to put a new floor in the Fireman's Hall, the second story room of the old engine house. The room will also be wainscoted to the height of about three feet.

Mr. J. H. UHLER who is engaged as an overseer on the underground telephone work at Baltimore, sent us a piece of the cable. It consists of an innumerable lot of small copper wires wrapped with string and coated with wax, the whole being encased in a lead pipe about two inches in diameter.

An Interesting Debate.

Mr. ST. MARY'S COLLEGE, March 13th. The most spirited debate of the season took place here this evening in the hall of the Purcell Lyceum and was participated in by members of this sterling literary organization. The question to be resolved was: "That the pen is mightier than the sword." There were three disputants on each side, representing some of the best oratorical talent as well as some of the finest forensic astuteness of which the society can boast.

The hall was filled with the members of the Purcell and some specially invited guests, among whom was Prof. Thos. J. Donlon of the College Faculty, an ex-critic of the society.

After the transaction of regular business, the election of some new members and the usual declamations, the debate began. The affirmative was defended by Messrs. Joseph Cavanagh, Boston, Mass., William Correll, Mattawana, Pa., and John A. Terry, Brooklyn, N. Y., while Messrs. Charles F. Kessler, Lancaster, Ohio, Fernando G. Echeverria, Elizabeth City, N. J., and Theodore J. Mattingly, Zanesville, Ohio, supported the negative. Both sides gave evidence of hard work and painstaking endeavor to demonstrate the truth of its proposition. Frequent references were made to history both ancient and modern to confirm an argument, and statistics which had been carefully ascertained, were produced for further illustrating the matter. Great tact and skill were displayed in the affirmative and the negative in their method of conducting the debate. And in the discussion there was no lack of fiery energy or burning eloquence. After carefully weighing the arguments pro and con and congratulating all the disputants on the practical way in which they had acquitted themselves, the Critic decided that the affirmative had won the debate, viz: "That the pen is mightier than the sword."

In conclusion Prof. Donlon made a few remarks, congratulating the society on the very creditable exhibition, and on the great progress it had made in the past year, and urged them to continue the good and useful practice of frequently crossing swords with each other in the intellectual field. A practice which might be the stepping stone to their future entrance into the pulpit, the bar or the senate chamber. FLOSCULUS.

FREDERICK COUNTY ITEMS.

PURSUED BY A GRIZZLY.

We shivered round the miserable fire and listened to the blizzard's fierce howlings, which then and other times reminded me of Niagara's roar when under the sheet of water on the Canada side.

Vainly we hoped that it would at least abate that we could venture on. As there seemed no present prospect of this, it was decided we must have another story.

"Now, Sammo, it is your turn to tell us something about grizzlies," I said, as we turned to an Indian who had come down from the North Saskatchewan river country the previous summer and was now of our party.

Who he was and what was his history none of us knew. He was very reserved and non-communicative when any one tried to find out his past record. There was even an uncertainty as to the tribe to which he belonged, although he had let slip the fact that he had been much with the Blackfeet and had hunted grizzlies with them in the mountains. He talked Cree fluently and it was in that language we heard him on this occasion.

Like all Western Indians in whose hunting grounds the grizzlies are found, he considered a fair battle with a grizzly equal to a stand-up fight with an armed warrior of another tribe. And a necklace of grizzlies' claws thus worn is considered equal in value to the scalp of an enemy, and gives him a place of equal honor in the tribe.

"A queer animal is the grizzly," said Sammo, by way of introduction. "Although he can pull down the biggest buffalo or horse, if he can once get his paws upon him, he is ever looking after small food, like worms, and grubs and berries. To get the slugs of worms he will turn over rocks, and old trunks of trees, so large and heavy that you would think it would have required a double team of horses to have done it. He sometimes breaks off his claws among the rocks when at this work, and if he is getting old they do not always grow out again.

"Once," said he, "I was out shooting antelope. They were scarce and shy. I did not have very good success, so I went on farther and farther from the camp until I got in among the foothills of the Rockies.

"I had with me a red cloth which I would fix upon my ramrod or over some sagebrush, to attract the antelope near, while I hid myself as well as I could so as to shoot them if they came within range. These animals have a great deal of curiosity and are especially attracted by anything red. So, if the scent of the hunter is not caught by them, the shy creatures will often come up very near. After a while I saw a couple of them in the distance, and so, as soon as I had found out how the wind blew, to keep them from scenting me, I quietly set up my red cloth and hid myself near it. I had to crouch down in such a poor place that when they came in range and I fired I only succeeded in breaking the leg of one of them. He limped off with his comrade at a great rate and I after him. It surprised me how he got over the ground, and so he led me a long chase before I got another shot at him, which brought him down.

"As it was near night now and I was a long way from camp I very quietly skinned him, and, cutting out the best pieces of the meat, I made a pack and started back for the camp. I was among the hills and I saw it would be best to keep my eyes open, and ears, too, for this seemed to me to be a fine place for the wild animals like grizzlies or cinnamon bears.

"I gripped hard my gun and hurried on, and soon I was about half way through the hills when I heard a snort and a growl that made me feel almost as cold that hot day as it is here in this cold, miserable camp.

"With a jump I was off, for I well knew it was a grizzly, although I did not at first see him. Although I had a ball in my gun, I had not much fight in my heart just then, and," he added, with a little dry humor, "you know those at the camp wanted the meat I had on my back for supper.

"Well, I ran as fast as I could, but I was in a bad fix, Grizzlies can run faster than men, and there was no tree near that I could climb. If there had been I would have been all right, for these bears do not climb trees like the black bears do.

"Soon I could hear him behind me, I was afraid to turn and fire for fear I would only wound him, and that would make him worse. I hated to give up my meat, as that meant going without my supper. But I felt he was gaining on me, and something must be done. So with one hand I unloosed the pack, and dropped a piece of the meat. I was very much more frightened when I found he had passed it, and was still coming on. So I dropped another piece, and that did not suit him. I had to think very fast then, and it came to me that perhaps the red cloth would stop him. So I wrapped a piece of meat in it while I was running and dropped it with the antelope skin. There was, fortunately for me, still light enough for him to see the bright color, and it seemed to astonish him. Anyway it caused him to stop, and I reached the camp with one small piece, which I had fastened to my belt when the rest had to go. It made but a small supper for us.

"We got ready to fight the old fellow if he should come on. But whether it was the fire, or that he thought it best to be satisfied with what there was along the trail, we never knew, he did not show himself within range and we never saw him afterwards."

DRINK PURE WATER BY USING THE BUCKET PUMP AND WATER PURIFIER IN YOUR WELLS AND CISTERNS.

Warranted to Purify a Foul Well or Cistern in Ten Days Use or Money Refunded.

It will draw ten gallons of water per minute. Never has to be jacked, primed or thumped out. A ten-year old boy can draw water with ease from a 40 ft. well. No iron tubing or rods or pumps. No sunken or valves to wear out. It has no wooden tubing to wear out, decay or pollute the water. It will not rust or corrode, as the chain is made of galvanized iron. It is the simplest and most durable structure made for raising water. It can be set up in fifteen minutes, as there is nothing to fasten below the platform.

It will not freeze, having stood the test of a Dakota winter, 38 degrees below zero, as the buckets discharge themselves. Has no leather, rubber or wood in contact with the water to contaminate it. You do not have to pump out a pailful of water to get a fresh, cool drink, for every bucket goes down full of air to the bottom, and fills with cold water as the air escapes.
