THAT POET OF THE FUTURE.

I've been reading, Mr. Riley, in a recent magazine, Of your Poet of the Future with the truly rural mien, Of the careless, simple fashion in which he'll choose to come— With the beauty of his bugles overbalancing the drum: And by what his hands hold not, and by what he does not wear, I rather think I'd know him, if I met him anywhere: But really, Mr. Riley, I do not clearly see How you can at such a distance say that the Poet's "he."

For it may be that this singer who shall our souls confess And come to us with bugles—will wear them on her dress; That we shall find her shining with pearls upon her breast, Or radiant in some cottage as she lulls her babes to rest; In the choir of the cathedral we may hear her pure voice swell, Or murmuring some sweet measure as she serves us from the well; For her hands may not be sunburned—although her gloves be tan: And your poet, Mr. Riley, may not be at all a man!

Oh, the Poet of the Future shall find welcome and have room, Whether singing at the plowshare or sweeping with a broom; But this "honest arm of Labor" that you speak of in your song, Always to "him" pertaining, may it not to "her" belong? For some women's "palms" are sisters to the "honest toiler's" too— And they cannot always fold them when the plowman's toil is through, And it may be that this Poet, on whose coming we agree, When really come and with us will be spoken of as "she."
—CHARLES HENRY WEBB, in The Century Price-a-Brac.

Beat The Book Agent.

A NEGRO PARSON'S INVESTMENT AND HIS UNEXPECTED RESULT.

A Book For Colored People Who Can Not Read.—How an Idea Quickly Germinated Which Surprised the Canvasser.

Knock-kneed Williams, who some time ago took the premium for darkness of complexion at a fair held in a fun-loving neighborhood, was sitting in front of his cabin leaning back against the gourd vines, when a brisk walking man carrying a load of something strapped on his back, came up and putting down his load, said:

"This is Mr. Williams, I presume."
"You're er mighty fine guesser er somebody dun tole you," the piece of premium darkness answered.

"Well, Mr. Williams, I have called on business that I thing will result greatly to your advantage."
"You're de man dat I've been er waitin' fur er mighty long time. Er mighty heap o' men has come er long fust an' last, but none o' 'em ain't 'zulted in my 'vantage yit. Whut kin you do fur me, sah?"

"I have some books here," said the man, beginning to unbuckle a number of straps, "that you ought to have. A man of your influence and high standing in the community cannot get along without books. They tell me, Mr. Williams, that you bid fair to become a lawyer or doctor or preacher—in fact, anything you want to become. A little education, they declare, is all that you need."

"Wall, sah, I been sorter thinkin' er 'bout dat myse'f. I doan kere nothin' er 'bout bein' no doctor fur I tried dat once an' I sorter pizeden er man an' he sorter died, an' da come in one o' sendin' me ter de penitentiary, da did. W'y it cost me er heifer ca'f an' de fines' 'pospom dog in de country ter keep out. I doan kere nothin' 'bout bein' er lawyer, fur I tried dat once an' tuck er man's hat caze he couldn't pay de fee, an' he jumped on me, de scoundil did, and whupped me till I felt mighty scannuls. But I tells you whut I does want. I wants ter be er preacher. Old Darb Moore—lives right down yander by de bayou—larned how ter preach an' den suaded de Lawd ter call him an' now look at him. 'Stead o' eatin' co'n bread an' den greasin' his mouf wid er bacon rine, he eats biscuit an' fresh lam' an' drinks de blackberry cordial an' gits drunk, he do, an' has de young sisters of de flock ter keep de buffalo gnats offen his countenance."

"Then he began a search for the money. He pulled open a drawer and took fifty cents from the toe of an old sock; then he found a dollar under a brick in the hearth; then he found a few dimes tied up in a bandanna handkerchief, and at last raised the amount. The agent thankfully accepted the money and departed. Old Williams sat down, and resting his head on his hand, mused: "Brain, you better take er little nap now, fur I've gwine ter pour some mighty strong juice on you in er minit. I've gwine ter edycate you so you kin stan' flat-footed an' kick er June apple out de top o' er tree. Er, he, he, he," the old fellow softly laughed, "woan dezo niggers offen dar eyes when da sees young Marfy an' Sue an' Libby er standin' ober me wid mulberry bushes er shooin' de buffalo gnats an' de san' fly er way from dis yere countenance o' mine. Come yere, book, I'll take my fust lesson right now."

An hour after he sat there gazing at the book and occasionally rubbing his eyes. Night came and he lighted a lamp. Sometimes he would shake his head doubtfully, and then, mumbering as though he would force himself to read, he would gaze at the blurred letters. He went to bed late and arose early at morning, and seized the book. Later in the afternoon he came in from the cotton patch where he had been trying to work, but he could scarcely see the young plants. All he saw were lines of letters that seemed to kick and tumble over each other.

Several days afterward, the shrewd agent, while upon another neighborhood, came upon an old negro that sat on a log.

"How far is it to the ferry?" the agent asked.

"It's er good ways, sah. Whut you got dar on yo' back?"

"Books, and, by the way, I might do some business with you."

"I dunno, fur I kain't read."

"Oh, we can fix that. These books are self-teachers, and all you'd have to do would be to look at one of them, and it would teach you how to read."

"Wall, yere, I want's one dem books, sho."

The agent put down his books, some twenty in all, and, with a suddenness that was astonishing in so old a man, the negro snatched them up, and, leaping across the road, removed a handful of grizzly whiskers revealing the features of Knock-Kneed Williams.

"Hol, on. Doan you come 'cross dis road for ef you do I'll slice you inter shoe-strings. You see I larned how ter read so much outer dat book dat I want's some o'. Been er tryin' ter ketch up wid you fur some time."

"Look here, old man," said the agent, "that was all a joke, and if you will give me back my books, I will return the five dollars."

"Yes, sah, yas, sah, I reckon you will, but you see I hatter have intrust on my money. Gib me fifteen dollars an' you may hab de books. Doan gib me dat much an' you kain't git 'em. Try ter take 'em an' I slices you. Is you comin' ter time?"

"I must have the books. Look here, I am sorry that I treated you that way."

"Oh, doan let dat bodder you fur I ain't plainin'. I've mighty well suited."

"All right, I'll give you $15. Give me de books."

"Fling me de money."

The agent wadded up $15 and threw it him. The old man instead of giving up the books took to his heels and the agent has not seen him since.—OPTE P. READ, in Sunday News.

His Identification.
"Now, Sir," began the attorney for the defense, preparing to annihilate the witness whom he was to cross-examine, "you say your name is Williams. Can you prove that to be your real name? Is there anybody in the court room who can swear that you havn't assumed it for purposes of fraud and deceit?"

"I think you can identify me by yourself," answered the witness.

"Where did I ever see you before, my friend?"

"I put that sear over your right eye twenty-five years ago, when you were stealing peaches out of father's orchard, I'm the same Williams."

"Slop" shop has nothing to do with slops, as some amateur etymologists have asserted, but means clothing shops, the word coming from the Icelandic slopper, a coat.

A GRACEFUL behavior toward others is a constant source of pleasure; it pleases others because it indicates respect for their personality, and it gives tenfold more pleasure to ourselves.—Washington Post.

"No," was the reply. "The next of kin, can take the paper."

The March of a Generation of Boys and Girls.

A generation on the march from the cradle to the grave is an instructive spectacle, and we have it carefully presented to us in a report of Dr. Parr. Let us trace the physical fortune which any million of us may reasonably expect. The number, to begin with, is made up of 511,745 boys and 488,255 girls, a disproportion which, by and by, will be redressed by the undue mortality of the boys, and will be reversed before the close of this strange, eventful history. More than a quarter of these children will die before they are five years old—in exact numbers, 141,387 boys and 121,795 girls.

The two sexes are now nearly on a level. The next five years will be much less fatal. In the succeeding five years—from ten to fifteen—the mortality will be still further reduced. Indeed, for both sexes, this is the most healthy period of life; the death-rate, however, is lower for boys than girls. There will be some advance in the deaths in the next five years, and still more in the five that follow; but 634,045 will certainly enter on their twenty-sixth year.

Before the next ten years are at an end two-thirds of the women will have married. The deaths during that period will be 62,053, and of these no fewer than 27,124 will be caused by consumption. Between thirty-five and forty-five a still larger "death-toll" will be paid, and little more than half the original band—in exact numbers, 502,915—will enter on their forty-sixth year.

Each succeeding decade, up to seventy-five, will now become more fatal, and the numbers will shrink terribly. At seventy-five only 161,124 will remain to be struck down, and of these 123,569 will have perished by the eighty-fifth year of the march. The 32,555 that remain will soon lay down their burdens, but 2,153 of them will struggle on to ninety-five and 223 to be one hundred years old.

Finally, in the 108th year, the last life will flicker out. Such is the average lot of a million men and women.—London Wit and Wisdom.

Physiology and Hygiene.
The notion that amber possesses curative properties, and that strings of amber beads worn around the neck will prevent or cure certain diseases, is probably generally looked upon as a superstition of imaginative minds. But a recent statement of Dr. St. Clair, of Brooklyn, in The Medical Summary, gives quite an air of fact to the idea. He writes:

"That mild currents of electricity are good for the throat and its own peculiar diseases is clearly shown by the string of amber beads. It is a fact that in a string of beads there is a current of static or frictional electricity constantly passing that will be shown by the milliamperemeter. Amber was the elector of the Greeks, and is truly electric. My daughter, when a child, was constantly troubled with false croup. I tried every known method of relief and at last placed a string of large amber beads around her neck. From that day she had no trouble for at least three years, till, thinking she had outgrown the trouble, they were left off, and inside of two weeks she had the croup as bad as ever. The beads were again worn, and she has never had a return of the distressing disease since. I know of many cases in my own practice, and others in the hands of brother practitioners, that amber worn around the neck proved of great benefit. Dealers tell me they always make large quantities of amber beads to suit the pockets of all knowing that the doctors will order some one to buy them for throat troubles, and that they sell thousands of strings."

A MAN, desiring to have a pet dog licensed, facetiously asked the clerk if the dog had to make a personal application.

"No," was the reply. "The next of kin, can take the paper."

ANEMIC and quinine are dangerous drugs to accumulate in one's system, and it is to be hoped that these poisons, as a remedy for ague, have had their day. Ayer's Ague Cure is a sure antidote for the ague, is perfectly safe to take, and is warranted to cure.

One of the best counterfeits in existence is a $20 greenback and it is not known whether it was made by a man or a woman. It is not engraved but drawn entirely with a pen. Every line and dot with all the shades of green, black and red of the regular $20 bill are seen upon it, and the Treasury Department has been searching for years for its maker. It often goes through many hands before it is detected, and whether it is made by male or female, it is certainly a work of fine art.

Belford's Magazine for August opens with an article on "Literature in Louisiana" by Charles Gayarre, followed by a short story "On the Road to E." by Richard H. Potts; B. J. Sage furnishes a paper on "The Original Package Decision," Monereu D. Conway writes of "The Journal of Marie Bashkirtseff," among the books worthy of note; Alexander Wilder, M. D., writes of "Editors That I Have Known," "The Race-horse in America" is described by Col. Warburton; "Annie Laurie" a short story by Emma Howard Wright; "Canada Under Protection" is the subject of a short paper by Hon. J. W. Longley. Editorial articles on several subjects, and a complete novel entitled "Love Wins," by George Parsons Lathrop, with other reading matter, so that it may safely be said that a great variety of tastes can be suited in its perusal.

The September registration will begin on the third Monday in the month, which will be the 15th.

CITIZENS of Middletown complain that the streets of that place are dark and dangerous at night frequently, because the moon ought to shine and don't, and the street lamps, as here, are not lighted.

Another Severe Storm. During the storm of last Friday, Horace L. Bassford, aged 27 years, of Urbana, took shelter in a covered bridge, and while there was struck by lightning and instantly killed. Three horses belonging to Mr. Thomas Mollisworth, near Frederick, were killed by lightning. A large barn on Henry Wachter's farm near Charlesville was struck by lightning and burned, together with its entire contents, involving a loss of between $2,000 and $3,000. At Mechanicstown a saw mill, race, dam and bridge belonging to Mr. John Rouzer, were all washed away.

The Sewers of Paris are one of the modern wonders of the world. That marvelous network of underground streams, over which the tourist can travel by rail and in boats, constitutes the bowels of the gay capital. This labyrinth of streams is kept with scrupulous care; for any obstruction in the flow of the sewage would be attended with serious results to the health of the inhabitants of the city above. The sewers of the human system are the liver and bowels, and in order to keep disease out of the wonderful city of which they are a part, they must be kept always free and unobstructed. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are the best laxative and cathartic known for the purpose. Tiny, sugar-coated granules, in vials, always fresh.

LETTER FROM ST. JOSEPH, MO. Mr. Editor.—I know you will be glad to receive a letter from one of your old friends, who is now living in St. Joseph, Mo. I have had the pleasure of reading your paper ever since I have been West, and always enjoy it very much. I am sure all the boys from Emmitsburg like to read it too, as it gives so much news of the old town and its vicinity. Some of my friends were kind enough to subscribe for the paper and have it sent to me as present, and I intend to continue it as long as I remain in the West.

St. Joseph is quite a city. The census of 1880 only gives us a population of 55,000, but I think we are rated about 15,000 too low, for we have at least 70,000.

The western country is very nice, but I cannot lose sight of my old home in Maryland, for that is one of the grandest spots in the whole United States. My thoughts are continually running back to it, and the many friends I left there when I started for my new Western home.

The boys are all getting along nicely. I said "boys," but they are not boys any more, but men, and many of their locks are tinged with grey hairs. Tootle, Hosea & Co., the largest wholesale house in the city has a good representation of the Emmitsburg boys. Smith, Howard and Charlie Waddles, also Wm. N. Gilson, are all four of them working for this firm. Smith and Howard are commercial travelers, Charley is an order clerk and Will Gilson is a stock clerk, and I tell you these boys are just working for "The House." Tootle, Hosea & Co., do more business than any two of the other houses put together. By the way, I must not forget Peter McDevitt, who is with Brittain, Smith & Co., just across the street from T. H. & C. Pete is a fine lad, and he has only one fault, that is he likes the ladies, but I think all of us boys have the same fault. Mrs. Steine left St. Joseph this evening for Emmitsburg, which place is her native home. Mr. Guthrie and family are getting along finely, and like their western home very much.

Will close for this time. I may write another letter some day.

A SUBSCRIBER. St. Joseph, Mo., Aug. 19, 1890.

Scribner's Magazine for September. The frontispiece, "In the Morning Watch" is one of the illustrations, of Rufus F. Zogbaum's article "With Uncle Sam's Blue Jackets Afloat," "Jerry" is continued and is rapidly leaving the simplicity and pathos of the life of the homeless child, for the actual living problems which confront him as he leaves boyhood and ignorance behind, but the interest in the story is not weakened by being turned into a different channel, and is intensified by the mystery of its authorship. James S. Norton discusses "The Rights of the Citizen to His Own Property," Donald G. Mitchell writes of "The Country House" and his article is elaborately illustrated; "African River and Lake Systems" are described by Thomas Stevens; "The Clerk of the Weather" is a short story by T. B. Sullivan; "N. S. Shaler has an interesting paper on "Nature and Man in America;" C. Emma Cheney furnishes a fine description of Heligoland as "A Crown Jewel;" "Mill and Recent Criticism" by Walter Cranston Larned, and a dissertation on "The Point of View," together with several really fine poems make up the contents of this exceptionally interesting number.

It is very important in this age of vast material progress that a remedy be pleasing to the taste and to the eye, easily taken, acceptable to the stomach and healthy in its nature and effects. Possessing these qualities, Syrup of Figs is the one perfect laxative and most gentle diuretic known.

An Odd Pipe. Dr. Thos. J. Bond showed us an odd looking pipe, formerly owned by an Indian chief, which was sent him from Fort Spokane, Washington, by Capt. Henry Seton, 4 Infantry, U. S. A. In a letter which accompanied it Capt. Seton says the pipe was given him as a token of gratitude for his kind treatment, by "Long Jim," an Indian chief, whom he captured on the 16th of July, 1890.

The Great Benefit. Which people in run down state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength, but Hood's Sarsaparilla, builds up in a perfectly natural way all the weakened parts, purifies the blood, and assists to healthy action those important organs, the kidneys and liver.

The Democrats of Emmitsburg District held their primary meeting at the Western Maryland Hotel, on Saturday evening, August 23, at 7:30 o'clock. The meeting was organized by the election of W. B. Ogle, chairman and E. H. Rowe, secretary. The following were elected as delegates to attend the County Convention to be held at Frederick, August 30, to choose delegates to the Congressional Convention which meets at Hagerstown, September 17: Joseph Byers, Vincent Sebald, James A. Elder, W. P. Nunemaker, I. M. Fisher, E. H. Rowe, John Donoghue, Paul Motter and J. C. Rosensteel. The meeting was well attended and was harmonious and enthusiastic throughout.

Probably no institution of learning known to the history of the world has had a career of such remarkable and uniform success as Eastman Business College, Poughkeepsie, New York. During more than thirty years its doors have never been closed—and perhaps never will be. Between 35,000 and 40,000 students have availed themselves of its advantages, many of whom are among the most prominent merchants and financiers in the United States today.

Take Care! There is Danger in allowing inactivity of the kidneys to grow through neglect. The deadly shoals of Bright's disease and diabetes will wreck the goodly bark of health if it is allowed to drift unguarded upon them. The bladder, too, if inactive, and judicious medicine does not speedily direct the helm toward the port of safety, will be whelmed by the oncoming deluge. In selecting a diuretic, let your choice fall upon Hostetter's stomach Bitters, which stimulates the renal organs without irritating and exciting them. Two effects to be apprehended from the unmedicated stimulant directly resorted to. These have a tendency to react prejudicially. The Bitters invigorate the nervous and digestive organs, and so afford lasting aid. It also affords dual assistance in preventing and curing intermitting and remittent fever, Biliousness, constipation and rheumatism if also subjugates.

SAINT EUPHEMIA'S School for boys and girls will open Monday, September 1, 1890. The increased accommodations will enable the teachers to establish a regular system of grading in the different classes. The course of studies in the higher grades is similar to that taught in our State Normal Schools. Stenography will be added to the list of studies this year.

A Novel Plant. The News says: "Mr. C. E. Kemp, of the firm of Mullinix & Kemp, has growing in a tank in the yard at his residence, a beautiful 'Orchid Water Lily' which is one of the floral novelties of the season. The leaves of the plant are almost circular, of a bright glossy green, the leaf stalk is enlarged into a balloon-shaped sack, filled with air, each crown has a charming rosette of leaves, from the midst of which the flower stalks are borne, each with from five to nine flowers upon the stalk. The color is a delicate lilac, shaded with rose, with distinct spots of bright orange.

The Railroad Line. Capt. Beaton Smith returned to his home at York, Pa., last Saturday, having completed the survey for a railroad between this place and Gettysburg. In a few days a carefully prepared estimate of the cost, etc., will be presented, and persons interested will have it in their power to decide whether or not the road shall be constructed. By the route selected the distance is a little over eleven miles, and the line entirely free from heavy work, which will show that the same can be built very cheaply. The deepest cut on the line is but six feet and the highest fill six feet, and there is only one of each of these, while five miles of the line are fully five miles that will not need either cut or fill of over one foot. The finding of this line is certainly surprising to persons who heretofore thought the condition of the intervening country such that to build a railroad over it would be impracticable, or at least too expensive to be considered.
