TWO THOUGHTS.

U. W. X. OF '90.

Sitting at my open window, Watching the constant flow Of the many who were mourning Only a year ago,
I feel my thoughts go rushing With the swiftness of the flood To the day of death and ruin, The waters tinged with blood.

My mind still recalling, how, Many in tears wrote and sung Epitaphs for dead and dying,
And the country with them rung; Wrote of man, his selfishness And the awful trap he set, The cruelty of Justice, that the Worst escaped the net.

How Pittsburgh's loyal people Responded by word and deed—God's helping hand of plenty To the faithful in their need—As well of other cities with Their kind and helping hands Joined in bonds of charity with Those in foreign lands.

To the bard's men and women And those of sturdier line, Whose voice or pen entreating Wrought out tears in every clime, To these and other Christians to whom Our thanks are due;
May God's blessings be upon you,
And troubles slight and few.

Another thought comes o'er me While watching that constant flow Of the many, who are passing, which With the goats will go, When another Flood Commission Has seen the debtor side, And proved by the other column If facts or figures lied.

May the sweeping hand of vengeance Withhold its awful stroke, Uncover, first, the just from the Commission's darkened cloak.
"Judge not," saith the Lord; by This let us now with hope abide,
But if my goats are the Shepherds, I'm on the other side.

MR. HEAPHEY'S GHOST.

Near the end of a long summer day, toward the close of a London season, Mr. Heaphey was alone in his studio in London. It was a large apartment with alcoves, in one of which a number of portraits and pictures were hung upon the walls, with the usual bric-a-brac of an artist's reception room. This room was entered directly from a landing place at the head of a broad flight of stairs leading down into the street and past a small porter's room, for the studio was in a public building occupied by a number of persons.

Coming into his reception room from a small cabinet, in which he was putting away some papers, Mr.
Heaphey was startled to see a lady quite unknown to him, young, of good figure and carriage, dressed quietly, in perfect taste and in the fashion, who was walking around the room and inspecting the pictures.

Mr. Heaphey approached and saluted her, observing as he did so that, while she was unquestionably fine looking, her countenance was unusually pale, and that her eyes, which she fixed upon him as he spoke to her, had a singular, and, as he afterward described it, almost "uncanny" expression.

She made no explanation whatever of her presence, but at once asked him whether he could paint immediately a portrait of her for a dear friend to whom she wished to send it as soon as possible.

Mr. Heaphey replied that he would be happy to do so if it were in his power, but that he was on the point of leaving London for a round of visits in the country; that he had many professional engagements which would probably occupy him during the remainder of the year, and that he could not at all see his way clear to do what she was so good as to ask him to do.

The lady treated these objections with polite indifference and persisted, saying that it would not be necessary for Mr. Heaphey that she should sit to him. "You will not forget my face," she said, with a singular intonation, "and if I am not misinformed as to your talents, you can make a sketch of me now, from which you could paint such a portrait as I wish."

Mr. Heaphey thanked her for her good opinion, but again excused himself.

Nothing would do, however, and the lady finally carried her point so far that Mr. Heaphey—he could hardly say why, and certainly against his own will and judgment —consented to undertake the commission.

"It will be necessary for me," he said, "to find some time during the autumn when I can give you your sittings, and if you will oblige me with your name and address I will see what I can do and will let you know."

"That is hardly necessary," said the lady. "I will be here at any time you may appoint."

Mr. Heaphey looked at her with astonishment.

"But I don't see how you can be here unless I let you know when that time will be."

"I shall have no difficulty about that," said the lady almost petulantly. "In the meantime I will see that you have an engraving of a face which I am told strongly resembles my own—so strongly that it has sometimes been mistaken for a portrait of me. This will serve to keep me in your mind," she said smiling. "And, by the way, I wish you would try to make a sketch of me now!"

Puzzled by the lady's manner as much as by her words he quickly said:

"Oh, excuse me. I must get my address book, and we will arrange matters." And with this he turned his back for a moment to the lady, and going to a desk opened it to take out the book of which he spoke. When he turned again with the book in his hand to his profound astonishment the lady had vanished!

The door of the studio was shut, as it had been during the whole interview. It was a heavy door, and closed with a strong spring lock. It seemed to Mr. Heaphey hardly possible that it could have been opened and shut unheard by him; but he instantly ran to it, opened it and looked down the broad flight of stairs to the street, and this so rapidly that it seemed scarcely imaginable a lady could have gotten out of the house before he was upon the stairway.

No trace of her, however, could be seen.

He ran hastily down and questioned the porter, who happened to be standing near his window, which commanded a complete view of the stairway and of the entrance to the building. His amazement was heightened when he found that the porter not only protested that he had not seen any lady go out, but declared that, so far as he knew, no lady had entered the building for more than an hour before.

The man looked at Mr. Heaphey as he told him this with a curious expression, which satisfied Mr.
Heaphey that he would not improve his reputation as a sane and sober person by pressing his questions any further on the porter. He went up stairs again and set about the occupation in which he had been interrupted by his extraordinary visitor. It was impossible, however, for him to shake off an unusual and uncomfortable feeling for which he could not account, but which finally became so strong that he closed his desk and left the building for the night.

His arrangements to leave town being completed, the next morning he went back to the studio to see that everything was put in proper order for the vacation, and to give some final directions. On his desk lay, with a number of letters from the mail, a small roll of paper addressed to him by name, but bearing no postmark or any sign of having passed through the mails.

He took this roll of paper up carelessly, opened it, and, to his unspeakable astonishment, found himself confronted with an engraved portrait of a lady bearing a most marvelous resemblance in the form of the head, manner of wearing the hair and the features to his mysterious visitor of the previous evening.

This engraving, on examination, he found had been taken out of one of the handsome annuals which had been in vogue many years before—I think from one of Heath's "Books of Beauty." It was a portrait of a young lady of rank, celebrated for her beauty, the daughter of an English earl, who many years before the time of which I am now speaking had been married to a Hungarian nobleman of great wealth and of a historic name. It was quite impossible to suppose any connection between the original of this portrait and Mr. Heaphey's strange visitor, beyond the fortuitous resemblance which impressed him so strongly. Calling up the porter, Mr. Heaphey asked him by whom this roll of paper had been left. The porter replied:

"I have no idea. I never saw it before."

"Did you not bring it with the last mail?"

"No, sir, it didn't come with the last mail."

Now, there was no letter slit in the door of the studio. The studio itself had been locked and the key in the porter's possession during the whole time.

The man protested solemnly that he had only come into the room to bring up the mail, that the roll of paper was not carried up by him, and that to the best of his recollection, though upon this point he could not be positive, no such roll of paper had been on the desk when he left the letters there.

Mr. Heaphey finally took the paper and put it into his dispatch box, marveling not a little in his mind as to the meaning of these inexplicable performances.

Gradually, however, the whole matter passed out of mind, until some weeks afterward, while staying with a friend in one of the midland counties, he took the engraving up and—he could not exactly say why—felt suddenly moved to make a sketch from memory of the lady whose face it recalled to him so vividly. He prepared his materials, went to work, found the picture growing rapidly and satisfactorily under his hand, and grew so interested in the occupation that before he laid his brushes down he had made what seemed to himself a very good and striking sketch, which might well serve as a basis for a finished portrait. He put this sketch, with the engraving, back into his dispatch book, and again the subject passed out of his mind.

Two or three weeks passed by.
Visiting another friend—in Yorkshire, near the Derbyshire line—Mr. Heaphey found himself seated at dinner next to a gentleman of an old family and of a good estate in Derbyshire, who had entered into correspondence with him some years before with an eye to inducing him to come down into Derbyshire and paint a portrait there of an invalid child of his to whom he was very much attached, and who could not conveniently be carried up to London.

Finding Mr. Heaphey near his residence this gentleman entreated him to come over at the end of his Yorkshire visit, pass two or three days with him and paint this portrait. It was not very convenient for Mr. Heaphey to do this, but such was the urgency of the Derbyshire man that he finally gave way.

"I shall be going home myself in a day or two," said the Derbyshire man, who was visiting a neighbor of Mr. Heaphey's host in Yorkshire, "and I will have everything ready for you. You will take the train at such a station" (naming it), "change carriages at such a junction and in twenty minutes after that you will find yourself at a little way station, where my carriage will be in waiting for you and bring you to my house."

It was a gray, rainy morning when Mr. Heaphey took the train to make his trip into Derbyshire.
A ready guard found an empty first-class carriage for him, put his shawls and bags into it and closed the door. Putting on his traveling cap and taking out a novel Mr.
Heaphey settled himself back into a corner of the carriage for a comfortable quiet hour in the train.

Long before the mishaps of Col.
Valentine Baker startled and scandalized the world the unprotected female had made herself a terror to sedate and solitary male travelers on the English railways. Great therefore was the disgust of Mr.

Heaphey when, just before the train was to start, another guard came up, opened the carriage door and handed in a lady, with the usual paraphernalia of umbrellas, bags and shawls.

The train moved off, and Mr.
Heaphey after a while, glancing around from his corner, became aware that this lady was looking at him fixedly through a brown veil which obscured and blurred the outlines of her countenance. It is unpleasant to be fixed in this way from behind a veil, and Mr. Heap-hey felt unusually and uncomfortably restless under the infliction.

His uneasiness was soon relieved, however, for the lady, throwing her veil aside, revealed to him the face of his mysterious visitor of the summer. She seemed not in the least surprised at finding him in the carriage, but very quietly asked him whether he was going to such a place (naming the residence of the gentleman whom he was about to visit), and expressed her satisfaction at meeting him as composedly as if they were ordinary acquaintances who had parted in ordinary circumstances a week or so before.

This cool demeanor aided Mr.
Heaphey in regaining his composure, and he met her in the same spirit.

"You have made the sketch of me, have you not, Mr. Heaphey?" she said suddenly.

"Good heavens, yes! but how did you know that?"

"Degrading no reply, she went on:
"Why did you not finish it?"

You had nothing to do the next day at such a place," naming the country seat at which he had readily made the sketch.

Mr. Heaphey stammered out some excuse, which was cut short by her asking him whether the engraving had not helped him as she had told him it would.

"Very much," he said; "but—but I never quite knew how you sent that to me."

"No, I suppose not," she said, and changing the subject began to speak of some book which she held in her hand.

The conversation went on until the train reached the point at which Mr. Heaphey was to leave it. The lady apparently intended to continue her journey in the direct of London, for she made no offer to get out, bade Mr. Heaphey good morning very composedly and as he got out of the carriage said to him:

"Now you will go on with the sketch and I will try and let you see me again. It should be done."

Without quite owing it to himself Mr. Heaphey was greatly pleased to find himself in a different carriage going in a different direction, for it was impossible to resist a singular and uncomfortable impression that he was dealing with a profoundly mysterious if not with an unearthly personage, and yet in the face of the very carriage and demeanor of the lady and of all the external circumstances of the affair it appeared to Mr. Heaphey quite absurd to indulge these impressions. He found his host's carriage waiting for him, and was driven to the house and ushered to his room in time to dress for dinner.

The house was a large, ancient, handsome country gentleman's home, in no wise baronial, but dating back two or three centuries, with broad passages and stairways; family pictures, tapestry hangings and all the details that go to make up one of the thousand and one stately homes of England throughout that pleasant land. Mr. Heap-hey found himself alone when he entered the great drawing room.
He walked about, looking at the pictures upon the walls, and so passed into a second smaller drawing room, whither he was attracted by the sound of the crackling of a wood fire. There a staggering blow awaited him. Standing before a tall, ancient mantel, with one foot set upon the heavy brass fender, in

THE Germans in Africa are going to allow anybody to carry on the slave trade in the interior, but will refuse to allow any to be sent away. Is it any worse to deal in slaves in Africa than in Germany? There is probably, more money in it, which goes to explain the matter. —American.

ABOUT 10 o'clock Saturday night fire broke out in the Palace of the Alhambra, in Granada, Spain, and raged for several hours before getting under control. It is stated that the fire was the work of thieves, who set fire to the historic building in order to screen the theft of works of art in the building.

A SERIOUS obstacle has been presented to the projectors of a telegraph line along the new Baltimore and Eastern Shore Railroad. At Bay Ridge on this line, passengers and freight are conveyed across the Chesapeake by boat. The distance is too great for telegraph wires to span, and the constant dredging of the bottom by oystermen, makes a cable impracticable. The difficulty is one never met before in cable laying and its solution presents material for the inventive genius of the age to work upon.

THE cost of putting the Australian Ballot law in force is always alleged by its opponents against its adoption. It is too shallow, of course, to be of any weight. It is always expensive to put out of power men who have obtained what they are not entitled to. The best people prefer to pay to get rid of these men, and have the consciousness that their rights will not be usurped by others nor their ballots stolen after they are put in the box. A pure ballot law may come high at the start, but it will in a little time be worth the price paid. —American.

Why will some people apply the term "saleslady" to a woman employed in a store? It is both vulgar and ignorant. No one would think of speaking of a sales-gentleman, and yet this term is no more absurd than the other. When a woman must be called lady to make her position respectable, she has no claim to the title at all, and no woman of refinement would allow herself to be so called in connection with her occupation. Man or woman are terms fitted for the highest as well as the lowest positions, and no honest, high-minded representative of either sex would put forward a claim to any other title with the idea that it would enhance their dignity or importance, and no one who is not innately vulgar can either use or accept the term saleslady, any more than that of sales-gentleman.

A GREAT ENGINEERING FEAT.

The completion of boring for the great tunnel under the St. Clair river, connecting the Michigan and Canada shores, is justly regarded as one of the marvels of modern engineering. The tunnel is intended to provide a passage for the Grand Trunk Railway to its terminus at Port Huron, Mich. It is one and one-third miles in length, and the boring has been done by driving a great iron cylinder or hollow auger sixteen feet at a time, and permitting twenty-two men to work inside the cylinder and remove its excavations before it is again thrust forward by great hydraulic power. Work has been in progress from both ends, and the men have met under the bed of the river. The tunnel will obviate the necessity of ferriage over the St. Clair river, which involved several hours' delay, and in winter much obstruction from ice. The iron plates forming the cylindrical tunnel are six inches in thickness, and it is believed the tube is strong enough to insure perfect safety.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special to the Emmitsburg Chronicle.

I was brought into business contact a day or two ago with a man who had made himself famous even before the war had opened in earnest. This man is Captain Frank E. Brownell, now a special examiner of the Pension Bureau. Perhaps he will be better remembered by your readers as the avenger of Ellsworth; the man who shot the hotel keeper in Alexandria, Jackson by name, who had just killed the idol of the New York fire zouaves for hauling down the rebel flag then flying over his hotel. The old Marshall House in Alexandria, which will be remembered by all army boys as the scene of this initial tragedy in war, is still standing, at least what the relic hunters left of it, but it has been somewhat modernized and turned into a store or auction place. After Ellsworth was killed the government seized it and used it for office purposes until long after the war.

Brownell, though, I commenced to write about. Well, for his courage and promptness in killing Jackson before he could fire the other load of his double barreled shot gun, President Lincoln made him a lieutenant in the Regular Army. He then rose to a captaincy, and as such was put on the retired list for disabilities incurred in the line of duty. He says that it was against the protest of his associates that Ellsworth went to the top of the Marshall House to pull down the rebel flag, for it was well known that Jackson was not only a desperate character but he had sworn to kill the man who touched the flag. They begged Ellsworth, therefore, to send one to do this hazardous duty, but he declared that no man should be ordered to do what he would not do himself. Hence the fatal visit to Jackson's hotel. Brownell says Jackson stepped out of a dark passage way and fired before he was discovered or known to be armed by either Ellsworth or himself.

Government agents are now looking around for a site upon which to be built, in this city, the finest and most complete printing office in the world. It is to occupy a whole square of ground and will be as perfect as man can make it. None too soon, will this improvement be made, as every printer who has ever visited the present government printing establishment can testify. Two thousand men and women are now crowded into the old and in fact, dangerous buildings now called the printing office, some of which were constructed "befo de wab", and none of them with any correctness of design as publishing houses. In these old buildings employees of both sexes work from eight in the morning until midnight, not counting the Congressional Record hands who work all night, as the enormous amount of government printing compels everybody to do extra time. It is in truth the busiest hive in this city, and God forbid, should fire overtake it, the most dangerous. A new building is to be provided, though, and, as stated, parties are now looking for the site.

BUTLER.

Catarrh Can't Be Cured with LOCAL APPLICATION, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you have to take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucus surface. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. DIPHTHERIA is epidemic in Berlin, and there are numerous cases of typhoid fever. The hospitals are crowded with patients. This condition of affairs is largely attributed to the high price of meat, driving the poorer part of the population to eat garbage and diseased food. As similar conditions exist in other populous places of Germany it is believed that the government will be speedily forced to rescind the prohibition on American pork and other meat imports.

SEPTEMBER TERM 1891.

Vernon Bassford and Jennie Bassford, his wife, vs. Calvin Bassford. — Bassford, his wife, Louisa Bassford, Edward Gerard and Louis Gerard his wife, Lilly Bassford, James Peters and Rose Peters his wife.

The object of the Bill filed in the above entitled cause is to secure a decree for the sale of the real estate of which John T. Bassford, deceased, was seized, possessed, and for a division of the proceeds of said sale among his heirs at law after paying an indebtedness due to the said Jennie Bassford. The Bill states as follows:

1st. That on the 20th day of August in the year 1890, one John T. Bassford, of Frederick County, Maryland, departed this life intestate, seized and possessed of real estate situated in Frederick County, Maryland, fully described in a certified copy of the deed conveying the same to him as recorded among the Land Records of Frederick County, filed with said Bill as Exhibit No. 1.

2nd. That the said John T. Bassford, left surviving him as his heirs at law, the following named children, to-wit: 1. A son, named Calvin Bassford, whose wife's given name is unknown. 2. A daughter, Laura, who is not known, whether she is married or not, and if married to whom. 3. A daughter, Louisa, a German, whose husband's name is Edward Gerard. 4. A daughter, Lilly, who is not known whether she is married or not, and if married to whom. 5. A daughter, Rose, who is married to James Peters. 6. A son, Vernon Bassford, whose wife's name is Jennie Bassford and who are the Plaintiffs in the Bill.

3rd. That all of said children and parties are adults and all reside beyond the limits of the State of Maryland living in the State of Pennsylvania, with the exception of the Plaintiffs, who reside in Frederick County, Maryland, and the said James Peters and Rose Peters his wife, who reside in Montgomery County, Maryland.

4th. That on the death of the said John T. Bassford said real estate described in Exhibit No. 1, descended to and vested in said heirs at law as tenants in common.

5th. That at the time of his death the said John T. Bassford was seized and possessed of the said real estate to the sum of One hundred and fifty dollars, which is yet due and unpaid, an account of which is filed with said Bill; that the personal estate of the said John T. Bassford is insolvent and the real estate is liable for said indebtedness, and that there is no administrator of the said John T. Bassford.

6th. That said real estate is incapable of division among said heirs at law without great loss and damage and that the same should be sold and the proceeds divided among said heirs at law, first paying said indebtedness to the said Jennie Bassford.

And the plaintiffs pray for the following relief:

1st. That a decree may be passed for the sale of said real estate described in Exhibit No. 1, and a division of the proceeds among said heirs at law, first paying said indebtedness to the said Jennie Bassford.

2nd. For process against the Resident Defendants to come in and answer the Bill and abide by and perform such decree as may be passed in the premises.

3rd. For an order of Publication notifying the non-resident defendants of the object and substance of said Bill and warning them and each of them to come in on or before some certain day to answer said Bill and abide by and perform such decree as may be passed in the premises.

4th. And for general relief.

It is thereupon on this 15th day of September, 1890, ordered and adjudged by the Circuit Court for Frederick County, sitting as a Court of Equity and by the authority thereof that the plaintiffs by causing a copy of this order of publication to be inserted in some Newspaper published in Frederick County, once a week for four successive weeks prior to the 18th day of October, 1890, give notice to the said Calvin Bassford and wife, Louisa Bassford, Edward Gerard and Louisa Gerard his wife and Lilly Bassford, the non-resident defendants of the object and substance of the Bill filed in this cause, and warn them and each of them to be and appear in this Court on or before the 31st day of November 1890, to answer the said Bill and abide by and perform such decree as may be passed in the premises.

The Ladies Delighted.

The pleasant effect and the perfect safety with which ladies may use the liquid fruit laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions make it their favorite remedy. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste, gentle, yet effectual in acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels.

THE board of directors of the Merchants and Miners Transportation Company has contracted with the Harlan and Hollingsworth Company, of Wilmington for the construction of a new iron steamship, to be the finest and fastest in their fleet. The new vessel was designed by Mr. George A. Dean a native of this county, and it is likely that it will be named Frederick, in honor of that fact.

Frederick's Popular Fair.

The annual fair at Frederick will be held on October 14, 15, 16 and 17, next, and the management confidently hope to surpass all former fairs in the variety of exhibits and entertainments. The Frederick Fair this year is embraced in the Middle States Circuit, and there will be good racing, for some of the best horses in the country are entered. There will be many new and novel attractions each day during the fair, embracing balloon ascensions, bicycle races, a wedding, hurdle racing and high-jumping contest, and other interesting features. Excursions at reduced rates of fare will be run on all railroads, and everybody who wants a day of pleasure should go to the Frederick Fair this year. The managers have our thanks for a complimentary ticket to the exhibition.

EDITOR CHRONICLE.—I see stated in your paper of Sept. 12th, that Mr. Frederick McDevitt, of Fountain Dale, Pa., has in his possession a clock that belonged to the late Judge McDevitt. It is said to be a very antique clock, and was made in Creysfelt, Germany. You say that some of the oldest inhabitants remember seeing the clock 60 years ago in Judge McDevitt's house. Now, I can say that I saw that same clock, at the house of the Judge some 40 years ago. I spent a many pleasant hour with the Judge during the years past and gone. I have also a cane as much of a curiosity, that the Judge presented to me, cut on his land, and the head of a man and eagle carved on top of the cane, by a former Presbyterian Clergyman of Emmitsburg. It is a beautiful cane so neatly gotten up. I prize it highly and keep it in remembrance of the Judge, my old and valued friend. My next visit to Emmitsburg I will bring it with me. Jos. S. Girtt, New Oxford, Pa.

Women Who Make the Best Wives.

Members of a Boston debating society have almost come to blows over the question, "What women make the best wives?" Culture was claimed by many to be the first essential, love and fidelity the second, and knowledge of household duties and ability to properly perform them, the third. None of the debaters, however, thought to add that very necessary qualification—health—without which a wife is far from perfection. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will renew the hue of youth in pale and sallow cheeks, correct irritating uterine diseases, arrest and cure ulceration and inflammation, and infuse new vitality into a wasting body. "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturer, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Congressional Nomination.

The Democratic Nominating Convention held at Hagerstown yesterday resulted in the unanimous choice of Gen. Wm. McKaig, Mayor of Cumberland, as the democratic candidate for Congress in the Sixth Congressional District of Maryland. The Democrats are highly pleased with the result, and expect to at least give Congressman McComas a hard fight in the effort to succeed himself. Gen. McKaig was the choice of the party from the start, but declined to accept the nomination, and his final consent is greeted with favor.

Why It Is Popular.

Because it has proven its absolute merit over and over again, because it has an unequalled record of cures, because its business is conducted in a thoroughly honest manner, and because it combines economy and strength, being the only medicine of which "100 Doses One Dollar" is true—these strong points have made Hood's Sarsaparilla the most successful medicine of the day.

Arm Broken.

On Wednesday of last week Mrs. Snook, of Utica, accompanied by her two sons, Messrs. D. J. and Charles A. Snook, and Dr. Miller, of Lewistown, drove to this place, and here got a team from Geo. P. Beam & Son, with which they continued their journey to the Gettysburg Battlefield, where the day was spent. When preparing to leave Round Top, Mrs. Snook fell from a large rock on which she was standing and broke her arm. The party returned to their homes via. this place in the evening.

Real Estate Sales.

Oliver Morrison bought the Rochdale Factory property last week, for $1,400.

J. M. Fisher, mortgagee, sold the property of Jos. A. Baker, at the East End of Main St., this place, last Saturday, at public sale. Vincent Sebold, Esq., was the purchaser at $1,580.

Mr. Rufus Woods of the firm of Fink Brothers & Co. Baltimore, sold the Thomas Arnold farm, situated in Liberty township near this place, containing 60 acres of land to Mr. George G. Byers, for $2,300.

Church Improvement.

The work of refrescoing the Lutheran Church having been completed, as announced last week, and the new pipe organ placed in position, it was announced that an organ recital would be given on Thursday evening, but owing to some disagreement between the choir and the council it was declared off. The organ is a very fine one, having 600 pipes and 18 stops. As before stated it was secured at a bargain from a church in Philadelphia, where a Memorial organ was placed in its stead. The work of placing and tuning the organ was done by Mr. Wm. Bach, a well known organ builder of Philadelphia, who is also a fine musician. Mr. Bach presided at the organ at both morning and evening services in the Church last Sunday, and the congregation is much pleased with the new instrument, which is of very sweet tone and also powerful.

A Veteran Engineer.

The Hanover Herald of Saturday says: "On Tuesday, our venerable friend, Jos. J. Gitt, Esq., of New Oxford, passed the 75th milestone of his existence. During his long and active life he has enjoyed very good health. In his youth a farmer's boy, he then taught school and afterward conducted various newspaper enterprises. Becoming a surveyor, at 35 years of age he turned his attention to civil engineering, having been before a rodamon on the old Tapeworm, 52 years ago. He located and superintended the construction of many railroads in Pennsylvania, Maryland, and as far East as Maine. All his days he has been interested in the press, and has corresponded for a long list of newspapers. He has now retired from engineering, although only a few years ago he made long journeys a-foot. May his years yet be many, his health remain unimpaired, and his last days be peaceful."

MT. ST. MARY'S COLLEGE NEWS.

SEPTEMBER 18.—Before the close of the last scholastic year the College authorities decided to have a number of improvements made during the vacation, about the grounds and as far as possible in the buildings also. In accordance with the plans agreed upon, the old fences in front of the College, which had been standing many years were thrown down and new ones of a graceful yet substantial make were put in their places. This adds much to the beauty of the grounds. The porches on the front and back terraces were repaired and painted light brown, thereby taking away that gloomy appearance which the old red paint gave to the place.

Great labor was expended on the Rectory. The old rectory was torn down, the beginning a fine room but the color with which it was formerly painted gave it a rather sombre appearance, and to make matters worse, of late the paint had been chipping off. The workmen were directed to scrape off the old paint and wherever necessary renew the plaster. Fifteen new centre pieces were put in and the entire room was frescoed and painted. A new floor and new gas fixtures were also put in. In the niches over the doors several magnificent busts were placed. Over the door leading from the Junior Department there is a fine bust of Cardinal Gibbons, the gift of Dr. J. B. Bawner, on the opposite side, one of Bishop Brute, and in the niches along the side, are found the busts of Shakespeare, and George Washington. Over the door where the students enter is a beautiful statue of Our Lady of Lourdes. The room presents a brilliant appearance and is without doubt the finest rectory possessed by any College in the country.

The "Junior Parlor" and Treasurers office through the generosity of a friend of the College, are being decorated in the same style as the Rectory.

On the 2nd inst. the Seminarians began their annual retreat which ended on the 10th inst. The Retreat was conducted by Rev. Thos. J. Grannon, S. J. On the day of the closing of the Retreat, classes were called, and the work of the 1st session mapped out. Since the 10th the students have been coming in rapidly, and at the present time there are 125 in the College and 28 in the Seminary. As there are a number yet to return it is expected that the attendance will be greater even than it was last year.

Rev. W. L. O'Hara returned to the College last week, after having spent the summer vacation at Brooklyn, N. Y.

Rev. Jno. J. Tierney, Vice-President of the College, who spent the summer in Europe, has returned.

We grieve to announce the death of James J. Fox, Esq., of the class of 1880, who died upon June 27th, 1890, at his home in New York, of typhoid fever, after a sickness of only a few days. Mr. Fox was a member of the New York bar, had acquired a good practice and deservedly stood high in the estimation of all who knew him.

For a mild cathartic and efficient tonic, use Baxter's Mandrake Bitters. Every bottle warranted. For sale by James A. Elder, Emmitsburg, and A. C. Musselman, Fairfield, Pa.

BLUE RIDGE SUMMIT ITEMS.

BLUE RIDGE SUMMIT, Sept. 17.—Monte, which for the past ten days has been gradually thinning out, closes its doors on the 18th inst. Quite an exodus has also taken place at the Clermont; but about fifty guests still remain, and the prospect is that, as usual, many will tarry to enjoy the mountains when they are at their very best—during the season known as Indian Summer.

Last week the community sustained a great loss in the death of Mrs. E. Charles Duto, daughter of the late Hon. John Lee Chapman, formerly Mayor of Baltimore City. Mrs. Duto's death was sudden and untimely, and her bereaved family have the sincere sympathy of the entire neighborhood, as well as that of friends at a distance who came in large numbers to pay their last tribute of respect and reverence to the dead. Though the weather was intensely inclement the funeral was largely attended, and she now rests in peace in the cemetery at Sabillasville, Md.

Miss Mary Neal Burman, daughter of Charles H. Burman—merchant and prominent politician of Rouzersville—was married last week to Mr. Fisher, a popular and enterprising young gentleman of that place. Rumor also says that "Charlie" has "been and gone and done" the same thing himself! but deponent saith not.

The case of Mrs. Adam Bloom vs. William F. Benchoff has been continued to the December term of court, owing to the theft from the prothonotary's office of her attorney's papers in the case. This is the first case on record where papers of a similar character have ever been stolen from the office of the prothonotary, and in view of the fact that Benchoff and his advisers have publicly stated that there is nothing in the case, the disappearance of the documents may (to some) seem quite mysterious. However, the would be "Smart Alec" is quite welcome to his haul. He has succeeded in postponing the trial to a time which will be more opportune for the plaintiff and her witnesses, and this too at the expense of the county! He is to be congratulated on his adroitness as a thief, and sympathized with for his utter deficiency respecting ordinary common sense.

The Alumni of Franklin and Marshall College assemble at the Clermont House on the 25th inst. A banquet will take place in the evening and an enjoyable time is anticipated.

THOUSANDS walk the earth today who would be sleeping in its bosom but for the timely use of Down's Elixir. For sale by James A. Elder, Emmitsburg, and A. C. Musselman, Fairfield, Pa.

RAILROAD TO GETTYSBURG.

EDITOR CHRONICLE.—The importance of a connection with a railroad at Gettysburg is attracting the attention of the business men in and around Gettysburg and a large portion of them in Adams county. It is evident that the great advantage of a connection with Gettysburg would open up to the farmers, and the business community. By the route proposed, which would only require about eleven miles of road to be built, it would obtain a direct railroad communication with the north and east. The utility and advantages of such a road to all classes of the community no one doubts, and that its construction would be the making of Emmitsburg, independent of the manifold benefits the farming interests would derive from it, is too apparent and well understood to require any arguments at my hands in its favor. As a friend of your railroad enterprise, I would urge you to stand by the Emmitsburg extension. Don't suffer yourselves, for one moment, to be drawn aside. Let your enemies resort to this or that stratagem to defeat your efforts, but maintain your position firmly upon this point. To divide public sentiment in reference to this matter is what they are now seeking to accomplish. Nothing could be more gratifying to their jealous hearts, to disappoint such expectations, you must go forward determined to do your whole duty. Be up then and doing—work and work manfully, for depend upon it, all now rests upon the action you are going to perform. New Oxford, Pa. J. S. Girtt.

September Registration.

The September sitting of the Registrars of voters closed on Wednesday evening at eight o'clock. The result in Emmitsburg District was as follows: Registered, 30; transfers, 3; dead, 13; requiring notice, 77. The total number entitled to vote last year was 773, hence allowing all the "suspects" as being disqualified, the total number this year will be reduced to 708. Some lively discussions and a good bit of fun was had here, over the requirements of the new law, and 'tis said that the names of a number of persons who were away for a few weeks during the summer were handed in as "suspects."

Items From Fairryay.

Mrs. H. H. Wenschhof is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. S. Staubb at Lancaster, Pa.

Several weeks ago a box of honey was stolen from Mr. David Rhodes, and last Friday night a box was stolen from Mr. Wm. H. Rely. Next morning Mr. Rely found a scap of bees partly tied up in a guano sack, and supposes that the thief had intended taking it along, but was scared off. The same night a scap of bees belonging to Mr. John J. Rhodes was carried about 100 yards from its place. People who have bees had better "tie their dogs loose."

Their buggy was badly broken and both of the occupants were considerable bruised, but when one considers that the cut at the point where the accident occurred is about five feet deep, the wonder is that their injuries were not more serious.

From Delta, Pa.

A Salvation Army is holding services in a grove at the upper part of this town.

So the time passed on. Once or twice, taking the sketch up, Mr. Heaphey had worked upon it until it was well advanced to completion. He never took it up excepting under a stress of feeling which he

"That I can't tell you," said the young woman, "but I suppose it is because he had heard from you."

"Heard from me!" said Mr. Heapley. "My dear young lady, I have had no communication with your father for years. I am sorry to say I didn't even remember he was living here in Lichfield."
