THE ETERNAL MARCH.

What are they seeking, what eternal quest
Is theirs, that, like the ever wandering Jew,
They flee the calmer haunts of peaceful rest?
What are they seeking, something strange and new?

They may not find it, yet they ceaseless go,
Wearing the stones away beneath their feet.
Think they, as thus they hurry to and fro,
That Happiness will come their steps
to meet?

If each his favorite phantom has in view,
If Fortune beckons some, and some Hope cheers,
A ghostly army must be marching through—
A silent, dark brigade of hopes and fears!

Pale, saddened faces greet the eye and go—
Faces you might have seen in troubled dreams:
On others rests a fair and cheerful glow;
Of all their moods you catch but passing gleams.

A mystic captain leads; you hear no voice;
No musket butt rings on the trampled pave;
The endless army seems to have no choice

Between unbroken marching and the grave.

The Pulpy Girl

Turning Function Into Fantasy in Current Fiction.

It is noticeable that the affran-chised girls with more freedom on their hands than they know what to do with take to literature to expend their emotions. As a rule, they are not cultivated girls or disciplined girls. They are simply restless girls, who are oppressed with the fear that in an epoch of intense intellectual activity they will be unobserved.

How to attract attention and at the same time expend some of the mysterious energy which distracts them is their problem.

Having given some attention to the puerile angel and had her soul floralizings piled up on my table to be reviewed, I propose to subject her here to a psychic examination.

And I shall probably astonish you at the start by saying that, after much patient investigation of the charming subject, I have come to the conclusion that, far from being animated by a divine flame, she is simply convulsed by a very earthy erosthenia. Her case is not one of abnormal mentality, but of vital exuberance, mistaking the confusion of awakening functions for the spiritual aspirations.

It is allowable and very convenient here to let a group of affran-chised girls in one field illuminate with their antics the affranched gang in another field. The moment literature is merely a means of personal exhibition the theatre will explain the bookstand.

Let us then lift the curtain on the distracted but delightful multitude who are kept awake nights and are torn all day with the unappeased desire to do something for art. If you are in any way a privileged observer of the great arena of personal exhibition—the playhouse—you have met with the adorable type of anxiety and ambition which I desire to reproduce for you.

She is young and attractive. She is voluble, earnest and importunate.
Her eyes sparkle when she speaks of the possibilities of the stage, and her rosebud mouth shows a white glitter of determination when she tells you that she is prepared to suffer and to achieve with the noblest of all purposes, and has succeeded in getting her friends to advance the money which is always a prerequisite in any female scheme of suffering.

Her vivacity charms you and her inflexibility of soul ennobles you.
If by any possibility you should take her to Delmonico's to breakfast you will have the new and serene satisfaction of knowing that for once all the gross tributes of the cuisine which you lay upon this altar are turned by a miracle of sanctified purpose into high desires and heavenly aspirations. It is a privilege to pour Chateau Yquem into such a vase, when you know it is turned into ethereal longings.

You feel that quails on toast are for once being converted into a higher ministry of beauty and an entree becomes an invocation. Nothing can vulgarize such purity and persistence of purpose and it is the duty of man, with a belief in the ideal, to pour in the Falerian and the mushrooms and let heaven take care of the rest.

It is my duty as a veteran observer to say that in nine cases out of ten this scrupulous creature does not know any more about art than a monkey knows about mathematics, and doesn't want a manager any more than a fish wants an umbrella.
It is quite possible to be full to bursting of desires and longings and imaginings, and at the same time to utterly mistake their source and misconceive their meaning, and nobody mistakes and misunder-
stands so easily and so deliciously as the affranched girl, who is wandering around in her inflamed liberty and doesn't know what to do with herself. She is very apt to misinterpret the first awakening impulse of puberty and call it a voice from heaven. Somewhere in her soft career she wants to be loved. She is very apt to insist that it is genius. With further development nature will begin to insist that she shall have a husband.

The moment this normal fever agitates her blood she will understand it to be a call to play Camille or to write a book. The awakening energies must be expended somewhere. If they do not flow along the lines of duty and womanly function they will waste themselves along the nerves of sensation or evaporate in the clouds of imagination.

I have myself seen two cases of adolescent mania set in to abolish marriage and reorganize society with a feverish show of supernatural determination that reminded you of Joan d'Arc.

In both cases a sudden obstacle intervened. It was a prosaic, practical husband, and all at once Minerva stepped down from her cloudy pedestal and began to take an interest in infant schools and paragoric.

The suddenness with which she gathers up the skirts of her heaven-born purposes in such cases and puts them away forever in camphor is a constant wonder and delight to utilitarianism.

But the abiding conviction remains in the mind of the philosophic observer that it will never do to accept these angels at their own estimate. They gallop through their father's hallway in short dresses and permit you to lift them up by the arms and kiss them with parental discretion while they murmur in your ear that life is a failure and they are born with a mission. You stroke their curly locks and whisper as you gaze into the wandering depths of their blue eyes, "God bless you, my child!"

But the next day when you come there has been a transformation.
She is in long dresses. Her hair is no longer down her back. She made up her mind in the night to be a woman, and she stands ten paces off and says: "I beg your pardon, sir, did you wish to see pa?"

This dainty and capricious mobility of character is like the roses in her cheeks. It is the evanescence that bewilders and transfixes you.

She confuses everything with a divine authority. The masculine intellect can never quite make up its mind if she is a genius or a jade till she gets through.

It is in her bursting period that she flies to literature. Nowhere else can she make a confidant of her own capriciousness and betray herself so unreservedly. She cannot pour out her tumultuous desires to Richard Johnston in her mother's back parlor. What would Richard Johnston think? Everything that is conservative and proper in the careful young man of our day would take alarm at such ruthless unbecoming.

But Regina de Conde Sampa-delles can do it safely to the Court!

It is an unfathomable joy to the nymph who has reached the edge of the flowery mead of womanhood with her soul full of extraordinary fancies and her body full of unemployed functions, to keep a dummy in her mind who can do all the things that she dare not.

Nobody appears to have discovered in the disordered Bashkirself the very common type of mania which besets the cerebral girl of our day. Her book is the elaboration of a million diaries, that, heaven be praised, are burnt as soon as the young woman gives over her fantasies and employs her functions.

The first impulse of the affranched girl is to celebrate her own personality. She has no conception of her relativity. The universe swims round her focal ego. She projects her desires, her disappointments, her ideals into the remotest ego.
The rest of the race exists only as dependent observers of her vagaries.

The very plasticity of such a pulp soul takes upon itself all impressions. It will be a martyr if it should look at a stained-glass window in a cathedral. It will gird itself for the stage if Mary Anderson comes this way. It will paint pictures in the morning like Rosa Bonheur, and give its life to the lepers, like Father Damien, in the afternoon.

These waves of hallucination sweep over the community continually. At one time every girl who had kept a diary suddenly believed herself to be Amelie Rives Chanler.

I have myself seen a bevy of fairly intelligent girls who seriously believed that they were turning into Mojiskas. A collection of contemporaneous girl diaries will show in their diction and deception as you turn the pages the influence of Ibsen and Tolstoi and the recurrent paralysis of Howells.

Keep in mind this quality of sympathetic imitation in the contemporaneous girl, who is steeped in an atmosphere of intensely stim-ulative quality, and then remember that the social or conventional repression goes on apace with the new liberty of expression. You will thus get an idea of the anomalous conditions. The first thing the new freedom offers to a girl is the privilege of imitating her brother and sowing some wild oats. Of course, being a woman, she cannot sow them in society. So she will sow them in the air. This will in itself explain the crop of the news-stands.

Nature will not permit her to be a rose. But she can be a romancer.
Social or conventional repression has something to do with the bet-trayal of girls in fiction. I have no doubt that nearly all of this sublimated emotion would expend itself along natural channels of action if our girls were allowed to swing on the front gate when the moon shines, as our mothers did, and could have it taken out of them at a husking party or a straw ride.

Society plays the stoic with them, but the minxes remain epicurean at heart, and if they cannot pour it out at a picnic they will pour it out on paper.

There are not escapes enough for the overflow of the normal girl.
We appear to be intent on conducting her natural impulses in cast-iron pipes underground, like our city water. It is just possible that nature intended her to bawl across the early stretches of her career with limpid freedom and some soil, and not be dammed up to break away and go tumbling down some devious gully with foam and fury.

In her early wantoning she is very apt to regard literature as a substitute for a skipping rope, and to show her ankles in the mistake.

By and by, when the osseous condition sets in, she will wonder how she ever dared to attempt the measurement of the universe with her ivory tablets. NYM CRINKLE.

TRAMP—Will you kindly assist an old man who has seen better days?

Lady—Would you like a little work?

Tramp—No, miss; the memory of better days prevents me from doing any manual labor.

She is Devoted to Shakespeare.

John Kernell, the Irish comedian and one of the principal fun makers with "The Hustler," was sitting on a window sill in the corridor of a hotel one morning last winter taking a lungful of fresh air, when a colored chambermaid, with a heap of merriment in the white of her eye, approached him with a cheery
"Good mo'nin', sah."

"Say, Tildy," John called after her, "Wouldn't you like to go to the theater to-night?"

"What kind o' theatah yo' all got down dah?" asked Tildy, applying her duster vigorously.

"Oh, any kind you want. Do you like a minstrel show?"

"Minstrel show! Whah dem white men come out wif blach stuff on da' faces and makes out da's cullud. No, anced! Dem's frauds.
I don't like frauds."

"Well, er—a burlesque show?"

"A what?"

"A burlesque—a variety show."

"What? Whah dem ordacious things shew da'selves in tight's?
Well, I guess not! I was brung up diff'ent."

"Well, what kind of theater do you like?"

"Now, I tell you, man," said Tildy, dropping her duster and walking towards the comedian, with her arms akimbo, "I tell you when Mistah Shakspeah be brings plays to town mah' parents got to chain me to de flo'."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Toothless Animals.

Those animals which subsist wholly on liquids or on minute particles of matter, need, of course, no teeth to tear, chew or crush their food with. Such are the butterflies and some humming-birds, bivalve mollusks and the adult whalebone whale; but the snails and cuttlefish and devil-fish have teeth, and even the little rotifers pound their food, the lower jaw serving as an anvil on which the food is crushed by the two hammers of the upper jaw. Certain spiders, centipedes, beetles, ants, grasshoppers and the common fly have teeth. Cows have teeth in their lower jaws only, and frogs have teeth only in their upper jaws. Toms, tortoises, turtles and some lizards have none. Lobsters and crabs chew with their horny jaws, but they have complete sets of teeth in their gizzard-like stomachs, and when the shell is cast the teeth are also shed along with the stomach lining. Some birds of ancient times had true teeth placed in sockets in their jaws. The "tusks" of the elephant and other animals are teeth.—The Ledger.

RAILROAD TO BE BUILT.

Arrangements are being made now which point to definite action in regard to the proposed railroad extension between here and Gettysburg. A preliminary meeting will be held this evening, at which a plan of action will be outlined, thereby enabling the projectors to state their plans plainly and facilitate the action of a public meeting, to be held at the Western Maryland Hotel on Saturday evening, Nov. 8, and to which all persons interested in the project and the public generally are invited. With the full understanding of the advantages to be secured from this road and the present outlook we may expect more definite conclusions to be reached at this meeting than ordinarily result from such, and it is hoped that it will be well attended.

IS NATURAL GAS FIOKLE?

One of the largest natural gas companies of Pittsburgh having served notice upon its manufacturing customers that it will cut off their supply, it is inferred that the company apprehends the exhaustion of their source of supply. The reason alleged by the company is that the wholesale consumers largely waste the gas, and that it will be more profitable to supply domestic consumers. If this were the real reason it would have been brought forward probably long ago. It is likely that the company foresees a cessation of the flow of gas in the near future. Such a thing is naturally to be expected. Should it occur in the next five years, what a shock it would give to many Pittsburgh enterprises! No wonder that it is proposed to try to produce an artificial gas to take the place of the natural.—Baltimore Sun.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special to the Emmitsburg Chronicle.

Should a stranger walk into the halls of Congress, although, so recently the theatre of dramatic episodes reaching almost to tragedy, he would imagine himself in a second hand furniture store. Everything is torn up, desks piled in huge irregular masses, and more chairs upside down than on their legs. It is in fact cleaning day. Every married woman knows what that is and even the young have dim visions of the misery in store. But where Reed thundered now can only be heard the scrub of the scrubbing brush, and in spots made historic by political events women now sit and sew carpets. All this is to make the hall ready for legislative occupancy in December. Carpets are to be laid, furniture varnished, upholstered, and put in place, but the veteran John Hunt who regulates all these things and thereby makes a handsome profit says it will be done in time.

The speculation in connection with the vacancy on the Supreme Court bench, made by the death of Justice Miller, is that Senator Edmunds of Vermont, would now accept such an appointment. At one time nothing less than the Chief Justiceship equaled the senators' ideas of his just deserts, and even this was beyond him because his magnificent services could not be spared from the Senate. Now, however, younger blood and of the first quality has been let into the senatorial body and the necessity for the retention of such men as Edmunds is not so absolute. No one here though, knows that the Vermont senator would accept a Supreme Court Judgeship. Everybody does know, however, that the position and not the man would be the gainer in the transaction. Judge Edmunds is the lawyer of the Senate and would be the Judge of the Supreme Court.

Washington has been treated to another sensation in the suicide of Architect Mullett, the man who as former architect of the Treasury designed many of the prominent public buildings throughout the country, such as Chicago, New York, St. Louis, Cincinnati, and Boston post offices, not to include the State and War and Navy buildings of this city. Mullett was an eccentric character, about knee high to a grasshopper, and had all the excitability and nervous energy of the average small sized man. He was a good architect, but a most extravagant one, and this extravagance brought imputations upon his personal honesty. It was all wrong, however, as after handling millions upon millions he went out of the department as poor as he came in which was pretty poor. Idleness was the rule of his life for the few months, while he brooded over his wrongs, and then necessity forced him to labor in his profession, a fortunate thing for this city as is attested by many magnificent business structures among which is the Baltimore Sun marble building, the tallest in the city. Why attempt to explain the suicide when no explanation can be given. When a man takes his own life the secret is locked up in his own breast, and for want of better theory we usually assign love, drink, or money as the cause. These are however, but manifestations of the real disease which in charity to man, had better be called madness. It is doubtful though, that any sane man lives who has never contemplated death with something akin to pleasure, certainly without pain, and in this thought is found the suicide's end.

Washington is now more exercised over the question to drink or not to drink than any other. The new license year is at hand and the commissioners have again decided to cut the liquor trade in half by issuing four hundred licenses less this year than last. This virtuous spasm begins with the license year, and ends with it, for gin mills are regularly increasing in number. Why we have methodist deacons who sign applications for whiskey saloons and then go to church and call upon the Lord to damn all those engaged in the traffic.

Even under the dome of the capitol the Congressional temperance society has been scandalized by the open sale of liquor, but Tom Reed, among his other iniquities, and as czar of the House, issued a tyrannical order that so long as he is Speaker, even Democrats must put up with lemonade without a stick in it, at least when about the capitol building. The order almost bankrupted the House restaurant people as the custom was transferred across the street where King Alcohol and not Tom Reed reigned supreme. But, as said in the beginning the liquor men are now fighting for licenses while the commissioners have once more put their official foot down upon more than four hundred saloons, and, as in the past, the liquor men will again come out on top.

The Parliament of Holland has declared that the King of that country, owing to the condition of his health, is incapable of governing and the council of State has been temporarily invested with regal powers.

An unprecedented October freshet occurred in the Susquehanna river basin this week. The lowlands between Wilkesbarre and Kingston, Pa., were submerged, the water being seventeen feet above the summer level.

BLUE RIDGE SUMMIT ITEMS.

BLUE RIDGE SUMMIT.—H. S. Bowers, Esq., Secretary of the Equitable Mutual Live-Stock Insurance Company, of Harrisburg, Pa., spent a few days at the Clermont House last week. Mr. Bowers was formerly treasurer of the Headlight Copper Company.

The Monterey Land Company held their annual meeting at the Clermont on Thursday last.

Mr. Addison Graham is contemplating starting a saloon and pool room near to what is known as Monterey Station. Such an establishment might pay well during the summer months; but at this season of the year it appears like a somewhat doubtful venture. Especially as a bar room and billiard hall will be opened early in the spring on the old Gilbert property.

Last week a handsome dinner was given to Mr. and Mrs. James Masters by "Shockey" McClain, Esq., the father of the bride. A few days later the proprietor of the Park House, who is the father of the groom, followed the example set by Mr. McClain and spread a royal board for the young couple and their many friends.

W. P. Nunemaker, of Emmitsburg, and Mrs. Martin Hawley, of Baltimore, registered at the Clermont last week.

St. Paul's Lutheran church at Greencastle, Washington county, was dedicated last Sunday. It is a very pretty brick structure, and cost $3,000.

A new iron safe which was recently placed in the office of Steffy & Findlay at Hagerstown was blown open by burglars the same night and robbed of $110.

Wm. Ward, colored, was killed near Elliott City on Tuesday by the explosion of the boiler of a traction engine. He was the engineer and his body was terribly mangled.

Mr. John Grason, counsel to the Baltimore county commissioners, has given an opinion that the registers of voters are to be paid a per diem and room rent in addition to the $75 allowed by the Legislature.

The Harford Historical Society will visit the farm of Col. B. F. Taylor, near Bradshaw, Baltimore County, November 8, to search for traces of the court-house supposed to have been erected there between the years 1686 and 1712.

Mr. Jacob Powles, chief judge of the Washington County Orphans' Court, died at his home, in Hagerstown, on Saturday evening, at the age of sixty-three. He has been in bad health for a year or more, and had not been on the bench for some time.

Tuesday morning the large stone barn on the farm of Mr. C. E. Ways, near the old Forge, about three miles north-east of Hagerstown, together with the contents, consisting of about eight hundred bushels of wheat, thirty tons of hay and a lot of corn and some farming implements, was burned. The fire was caused by a lantern which upset. The loss is about $4,000, partly insured.

The corner-stone of St. Mary's Reformed Church, at Silver Run, Carroll county, was laid last Sunday. The church when completed, will be one of the handsomest in the county. It will be of Gothic architecture, designed by J. W. B. Fry, of Philadelphia, and will cost about $15,000. It will be of brick, with Gettysburg granite trimmings, and will seat 800 people.

The $100,000 endowment fund for the higher medical education of women was placed in the hands of the trustees of the Johns Hopkins University at Baltimore on Tuesday, by whom it was accepted and conditions named. The money was raised in less than six months, the first committee having been formed in Baltimore last May with Mrs. Henry Winter Davis, chairman, and Miss Mary Garrett, secretary.

A syndicate has been organized to form a company for the promotion of manufacturing industries in Baltimore. The company will do business as the Manufacturers Aid Association and will start, it is said, with a capital of $2,000,000, which is to be increased to $5,000,000 should the demands of trade warrant it. The scheme is to advance money to companies from other cities who are willing to build and equip plants in the vicinity of Baltimore and to local enterprises that wish to enlarge their plants.

Our Population.

According to the official count of the census of Maryland as announced by the Baltimore papers, Frederick county's population is 48,974, a decrease in ten years of 1508. Says the American: Frederick (48,974) has always shown an increase since 1860, until the present year, when a falling off is noticed. In 1860, the county had 46,401 inhabitants, and in the next census 47,572 were shown, and in 1880 the figure was 50,483. In the present census, however, a decrease of 1,508 is shown, which is of great interest, in view of the fact that Frederick was supposed to be experiencing a decided boom.

For Women

Who suffer from nervous and physical debility great help is found in taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It produces the rapid effect of a stimulant, without the injurious reaction that follows the use of stimulants. The result of taking this medicine is a permanent increase of strength and vigor, both of mind and body.

"I find Ayer's Sarsaparilla just what I have needed for a long time. I have tried different medicines or tonics, but never found a cure until I used this. My trouble has been a low state of the blood, causing faint turns."—Lena O'Connor, 121 Vernon st., Boston, Mass. "I have been a victim of a chronic skin disease of several years' standing, with turns of fainting. Have tried various remedies, but with little relief till I used Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Some six months since I began to use this remedy, and am greatly benefited."—Miss K. E. White, Somerville, Mass.

"This is to certify that I have been using Ayer's Sarsaparilla for some time, and it has done me a world of good. It has cured my headache, cleared my blood, and helped me in every way, and I am determined to use it so long as I need such a medicine."—Mrs. Tait, 112 First street, Lowell, Mass.

The expense has been light, the membership fee being one dollar, entitling one to the privileges of the room for one year. We find upon going into the homes of the members such admirable literature as The North American Review, The Century, Scribner's, etc., and already there is ample supply to the members and as the months go by it increases. Mr. Barb is to be commended for his interest and congratulated upon his success.—Clarion.

Scribner's Magazine for November has a very effective nautical picture for a frontispiece "Signalling to Moorings," and the reading matter opens with "The Tale of a Tusk of Ivory" by Herbert Ward, which at this time of lively interest in Africa, proves especially attractive, followed by a rather misty psychological story of the pen of F. J. Stimson; Frank French writes very pleasantly of "A Day with a Country Doctor." The wonderfully powerful and realistic story of "Jerry" progresses in its development of the hero's character as the force of circumstances and surroundings urge him forward in a course altogether different from what he had contemplated, whilst the interest is intensified by the dramatic description of scenes and character; Robert B. Stanton furnishes a graphic description of a journey "Through the Grand Canon of the Colorado;" Mrs. Frederick Rhineland Jones in "The Training of a Nurse" gives the reader some idea of the work of the institution in which women are instructed in the duty of taking care of the sick; "With Yankee Cruisers in French Harbors," is the title of an entertaining article by Rufus E. Zoglaun; The third and concluding paper of N. S. Shaler on "Nature and Man in America," and "The Point of View" which treats of "The Memory of the War" as a Mechanical and of Criticism as a Spartan Virtue. All of which with several poems go to make a very interesting collection of reading matter.

Church Repairs.

The Reformed congregation in this place intend to put a new roof on their church and make a number of other repairs to the building before the cold weather sets in.

Too Much Chop.

One day last week three cows belonging to Mr. Samuel Ott got at a lot of chop and ate so much of it that they all died. They were all fine cows and Mr. Ott's loss is consequently heavy.

MR. CHAS. WANTZ raised a pumpkin this year which weighed 104 pounds. Nine other large pumpkins grew on the same vine, but this one, which is on exhibition at J. Thos. Gelwick's store, was the largest.

Contract Awarded.

The county commissioners of Carroll and Frederick counties have awarded the contract for rebuilding the iron bridge over the Monocacy at Sell's ford to Gilbert & Smith, of Pennsylvania, for $2,800.

AN infallible sign of physical decay is sleeplessness; if this is dangerous in an adult, it is deadly in early childhood. Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup will always assist in comforting the baby.

It has proved undoubted usefulness, we refer to Old Saul's Catarrh Cure. Price 25 cents.

Choral Union.

At a regular meeting of the Choral Union held on Tuesday evening it was decided to give a concert this winter, the time for which will be announced later. It will occur about the holidays. The meetings of the Choral will begin hereafter at 7.30 p. m. instead of 8 o'clock.

To Dispel Colds.

Headaches and Fevers, to cleanse the system effectually, yet gently, when costive or bilious, or when the blood is impure or sluggish, to permanently cure habitual constipation, to awaken the kidneys and liver to a healthy activity, without irritating or weakening them, use Syrup of Figs.

Railroad Meeting.

All persons feeling an interest in the projected railroad between this place and Gettysburg, and the public generally are invited to attend a public meeting at the Western Maryland Hotel on Saturday evening, Nov. 8. This will be a genuine business meeting and a good attendance is requested.

By ORDER COMMITTEE.

Registration Cases.

Among the registration cases heard before Judge Lynch last Friday were the petitions of Albert S. Rowe and Wm. A. Fraley of this place, and both their names were ordered to be placed on the registration books. These gentlemen are old residents of Emmitsburg, but at this time hold positions in the Navy Yard at Washington.

Personal Liberty.

Physical Slavery.

We are all free American citizens, enjoying our personal liberty; but most of us are in physical slavery, suffering from scrofula, salt rheum or some other form of impure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the great blood purifier which dissolves the bonds of disease, gives health and perfect physical liberty.

Fine Stock.

Messrs. Wm. H. Biggs & Bro., of Rocky Ridge had a number of their fine Holstein-Friesian cattle on exhibition at the York, Pa., Hagerstown and Frederick Fairs, this year, and took a number of premiums. At York they received the Herd Premium for best nine head, bull and eight cows; first premium on two-year-old and first premium on one-year-old heifers; second premium on heifers under one year old, and first premium on bull calves under one year old. At Hagerstown they received the first premium on two yearling heifers; second premium on one yearling heifers and second premium on bull calves under one year. At Frederick they also received three premiums on young stock. This week they took a number of their cattle to the Alabama State Fair.

"Standing with reluctant feet"

Where the brook and river meet," is a period of "maidenhood" which is perilous in the extreme to a vigorous, healthy womanhood. Reckless exposure, at certain times, which induce irregularities, has wrecked many a fair young life. To all afflicted with derangements of a uterine nature Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is of inestimable value. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturer, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

THE leading article in the November Electric, by J. Stephen Jeans, discusses in a very interesting way the relations of "American Railways and British Farmers." Mr. W. R. Lawson gives a clear exposition of the late imbroglio in the Argentine Republic. Mr. Goldwin Smith attacks the new tariff from the Free Trade side, and presents the argument with remarkable force. The article on "The American Tariff" is eminently worth reading, even by the protectionists. "Possibilities of Naval Warfare," by H. Arthur Kennedy, and "Hypnotism in Relation to Crime and the Medical Faculty," are papers which all thinking persons will find it desirable to read. The lighter articles are ready and fresh. "An Episode in the Land League Movement" is a tragic story of Irish politics, and "A Woman" is the first part of a charming story by Vernon Lee, to be completed in the next number.

MR. J. H. STOKES has placed a new hitching rack in front of his saddle shop.

A NUMBER of democrats from this place and vicinity will attend a mass meeting at Mechanicstown this evening.

SALVATION Oil quickly finds its way to the seat of the disease, allays the inflammation, and, by removing the cause, effects a permanent cure. 25 cts.

MR. RUSKIN thinks there is a great future for American art—but he hardly realizes the enormous demand over here for Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

THE democrats of this district will hold a meeting at Eyster's Opera House to-morrow evening. A good attendance is requested, and as the method of voting under the new law will be illustrated, it is important that the request be complied with.

COSTIVENESS is the cause of the intolerable "bad breath" of multitudes. Dr. Henry Baxter's Mandrake Bitters remove the cause and prevent the evil, and cost only 25 cents. For sale by James A. Elder, Emmitsburg and A. C. Musselman, Fairfield, Pa.

MR. DEWALT WILLARD, one of the oldest and most highly esteemed residents of Middletown district, dropped dead from heart disease, last Friday afternoon, at his home near Broad Run. Mr. Willard was 82 years of age, and had all his life been a farmer.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla acts directly and promptly, purifying and enriching the blood, improving the appetite, strengthening the nerves, and invigorating the system. It is therefore, in the truest sense, an alterative medicine. Every invalid should give it a trial.

We learn that Mr. John C. Boyer, a farmer residing near Broad Run, this valley, lost $30 in Frederick a few days ago in some unaccountable manner. He had sold a load of wheat, for which he received the cash, but on his return home he was minus $30 of the amount.—Register.

Suit Yourself.

but there is no other remedy for sick headache, dizziness, constipation, biliousness, or to restore a regular, healthy action to the liver, stomach and bowels, equal to those reliable little "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" prepared by Dr. Pierce. Of druggists.

Serenaded the Editor.

The Mechanicstown Cornet Band tendered us a pleasant serenade last evening, for which we return thanks. This band was recently reorganized and has secured the services of Prof. Fleishman as teacher. The Professors instruction has already improved the band very materially, and ere long it will be like the drilling of Guardian Hose Company of that place, the best in this section.

Musical Entertainment.

The Lansing Family and Guy Hoppe, the child cornetist, will give a concert at the Opera House, on Thursday evening, Nov. 6. The entertainment will conclude with the Comedietta, "Popping the Question." Admission 25 cents. Reserved seats are now on sale at Mr. Lansing's, price 35 cents. The well known talent and popularity of this family needs no comment in recommending the entertainment to our readers as first class in all respects.

The Railroad.

The prospects accompanying the map of Brunswick, the new railroad town in the lower part of this valley, just issued by the Mutual Land and Improvement Company of Baltimore, refers to the contemplated railroad traversing the Middletown Valley, with a terminus at Brunswick, and says there is little doubt that within a short time there will be at least three railroads at that point.—Register.

Barn Burned.

A new barn on Mr. Charles Krise's farm near Rocky Ridge was totally destroyed by fire on Wednesday. Mr. Krise was at his father's when the fire was discovered and got on a horse to go home. His mother had started ahead of him and when Mr. Krise caught up with her, his horse ran against her, knocking her down and breaking her nose. We have not been able to ascertain the amount of Mr. Krise's loss.

He is a Native of Emmitsburg.

Among the portraits and sketches in the "Jubilee" edition of the Brooklyn Citizen, noticed under the heading of "Mt. St. Mary's College News," is a likeness of Dr. Geo. W. Welty, a native of this place. The Citizen says: Dr. Welty is one of the numerous physicians whose shingles decorate Clinton street. None is more popular than he. Notwithstanding his large practice he finds a spare hour to interest himself in Catholic matters. He is a member of St. Patrick's Society and the Columbian Club. He has for years been the popular medical examiner for the Catholic Knights in South Brooklyn. He worships with St. Mary's Star of the Sea congregation.

Dr. Welty is the oldest son of the late Andrew Welty and a brother of Mrs. R. Grimmer of this place. His daughter, Miss Mamie Welty, is now attending school at St. Joseph's Academy.

Shaken out of Gear.

By malarial disease, the human machinery cannot half perform its office. Digestion, secretion, evacuation are disordered, the blood becomes watery, the nerves feeble, the countenance ghastly, sleep disturbed and appetite capricious. Terrible is this disease, full its consequences. There is, however, a known antidote against the malarial poison, and a certain safeguard against it. In malarial regions of our South and West, in South America, Guatemala and on the isthmus of Panama, as well as in transitory countries where the malarial poison exists, this reliable preventive and remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, has during the last thirty years, been constantly widening the area of its usefulness, and demonstrating its sovereign value. Liver complaint, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney trouble, rheumatism and debility are all remedied by it.

Hallow E'en.

This evening being the last of October will be Hallow e'en, and no doubt some of the young folks will indulge in the usual frolics pertaining to the season, though as nuts are scarce and apples and cider still scarce the refreshments we are in the habit of associating with its proper celebration, will most likely be conspicuous by their absence, which we might as well attribute to the effect of the obnoxious McKinly bill that is already beginning to work so disastrously in cutting off our supply of the necessities of life.

Hunting Season.

According to the Acts of Assembly of 1890, it is lawful to kill Partridges, Rabbits and Pheasants within the limits of Frederick County between Nov. 1 and Jan. 1. Thus the season opens to-morrow, but with the restrictions our farmers have added by advertising against trespassers, the outlook for local sportsmen is rather gloomy. Better look out for boys where you go to shoot, or you may get into trouble. From the reports we have heard, of the treatment received at the hands of gunners, we consider the farmers justifiable in the stand they have taken.

Why it is Opposed.

There seems to be a misunderstanding upon the part of some of the county papers regarding the alleged opposition of Frederick business men to the building of a railroad in the Middletown Valley. Such is not the case. Frederick would be glad to see such a road built and would aid such a project, but it thinks it would be bad policy to build such a road to connect with the B. & O. at Brunswick, thus diverting from the county seat traffic which should by all means pass this way. Such a route as the Mechanicstown Clarion has suggested—by way of Yellow Springs and the Monocacy Valley and Frederick road—would be a feasible and acceptable plan and is well worthy of consideration. The News believes that in fostering the interests of Frederick, even if such a policy does appear in a selfish light, the Development company believes that it takes care of the interests of the entire county, which removes from this matter its aspect of selfishness.—News.

PERSONALS.

Miss Edith Motter is visiting in Baltimore. Mrs. S. R. Grindler is visiting in Baltimore. Mr. Thos. F. Rider has returned to Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. Catherine Hyder has returned home from Baltimore. Miss Lizzie Kefauver, of Middletown, is the guest of Mrs. J. H. Stokes. Mrs. Catharine Zeigler and Miss Sarah Fisher, of York, are guests of Mr. J. L. Hoke.

Mrs. John Kimmel and children, of Baltimore, are visiting at Mrs. Lamb's. Mr. Harry Kefauver, of Harmony Grove, spent Sunday at Mr. J. H. Stokes'.

Mrs. Geo. Rider and Miss Addie Nussler, have returned home from Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Mr. Jno. H. Rosensteel has sufficient recovered from his recent illness to be at his post of duty again in the railroad office.

Motter's Station Items.

Miss Kate Hobbs is improving rapidly. Mrs. Dorsey has nearly recovered from her recent illness. Miss Blanche Hobbs spent several days with her aunt in Emmitsburg.

Mr. I. M. Fisher is building a new house on his farm near the Station. I. M. Fisher & Co. are building a fine bakery wagon for M. C. Dotterer the Emmitsburg baker.

Mr. R. S. Knobe has just completed a set of fine single strap harness with rubber mountings for Vincent Sebald, Esq.

MT. ST. MARY'S ITEMS.

Mr. F. Walter and wife made a trip to Hagerstown last week. Mr. Eugene Warthen has moved to San Marino for the winter. Miss Sallie Baker who has been visiting in Baltimore returned home. Mrs. P. Hemler accompanied by her daughter made a trip to Frederick.

Misses Julia Wadsworth and Mary Elder spent Sunday at "Forest Hill." Misses Josie Cretin and Nina Quinn spent a few days at New Windsor last week.

Mr. Frank Elder who has been in Toledo, Ohio, for some time, returned home. Master Roger Elder who had been sick for some time is able to be out again.

Mrs. L. Colsie of New York, who has been visiting friends in this vicinity returned home. Miss Mamie Sweeney who has been spending some time with friends in Frederick, returned home.

Mr. John A. Peddicord left last Monday for Baltimore county, where he expects to remain for some time.

From Delta, Pa.

A new coal yard has been started in South Delta. A number of our residents have had their houses repainted. Another series of races was held on the Mt. Ararat tracks on the 18th inst. Our pipe is at last completed, and the next subject for discussion is, are we to have electric lights.

The first series of the Delta Building and Loan Association has matured. The shares were worth about $100.01. A faith cure, accompanied by a cornet band was in town last week. They had very few applicants and there cures were not very pronounced.

Miss Laura J. Stewart, your correspondent at this place, has been confined to the house under the doctors care since the 21st inst. Her school was closed for three days. This letter was written for last week, but sickness prevented its being sent.

The history of Down's Elixir is identified with the history of New England for just at this year, 1791, it was first sold in New England. For sale by James A. Elder, Emmitsburg, and A. C. Musselman, Fairfield, Pa.

Journalistic Notes.

That live journal the Frederick Daily News, recently began its XIV volume. The News is an enterprising paper, and in our estimation ranks second to none in this section outside of Baltimore City.

The Maryland Farmer appeared in new form and in a new dress of type on the 17th inst. It is a good weekly agricultural journal and is published at Baltimore, by Bartlett & Catlin.

The Baltimore Evening Globe has been discontinued and is succeeded by the World.

Republican Meeting.

A mass meeting and torchlight procession under the auspices of the McComas Club of this place, was held last evening. A number of houses in town were illuminated and the procession was formed at the east end of town, headed by the Emmitt Cornet Band. Delegates from Mechanicstown, Taneytown and Harney, each headed by a brass band, participated in the parade, along the line of which a number of fire works were set off. Congressman McComas was the orator of the occasion, and he entertained the crowd with a lengthy speech.

Removals.

Mrs. Mary Kimmel has gone to live with her son-in-law, Mr. Edward J. Topper, and Mr. Michael Lingg has moved into her house on Gettysburg street.

Mr. A. J. Bowers has removed from the Western Maryland Hotel to the Donoghue property on the Square, where he will still conduct the hotel business. He calls the new hotel the Bowers House.

Mr. A. Eyster has taken possession of the Western Maryland Hotel again. Mr. Orndorff, of Adams county, has moved into the Central Hotel, vacated by Mr. A. Eyster.

Gettysburg in War and in Peace.

We are indebted to Mr. Thomas E. Jenkins, the gentlemanly advertising agent of the Western Maryland Railroad, for a copy of the instructive pamphlet compiled by him in the interest of the road he represents, and which, together with a concise history of the road and the most important points on its different routes presents an entertaining picture of "Gettysburg in War and in Peace." The work is beautifully gotten up with maps and artistic views of the incidents and localities of which it treats, and will no doubt prove a reliable guide to those travelling through the historic scenes which the Western Maryland traverses.

Gallagher-Broderick.

Miss Gertrude E. Broderick was married to Dr. H. P. Gallagher Wednesday morning at the Immaculate Conception Church, Baltimore. The nuptial mass was celebrated by the Rev. P. McHale, the pastor, with the Rev. M. A. Penne, of Westminster, as deacon, and the Rev. D. C. DeWolf, of Hyattsville, as sub-deacon. Rev. Wm. McCormick was master of ceremonies. The altar was brilliantly illuminated and prettily decorated with flowers. The bride wore a dress of white India silk, trimmed with lace. Her long veil was fastened with orange blossoms, and in her hand she carried white rose buds. The ushers were Frank Caughy, Edward Manning, Horace Brown and John W. Shauer. The church was thronged with the friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

Our Population.

The official count of the census of Maryland has been announced and from it we learn that Frederick County has lost 1,508 in population during the past ten years. In the first place we do not believe that such is the fact; such a proposition is simply absurd. In the second place if it be true, the loss in the southern section of the county must be a remarkable one, for the North-end has added materially to her population; this we know through the reports made immediately after the enumerators had finished their labors. While figures to establish the fact that we have lost 1,508 during the past ten years will be given in the Census Report, no one will pay it sufficient honor to believe it. The census is generally discredited and can bear its Frederick County share and be harmed very little.—Clarion.

SAW THE NORTH POLE.

Peter Smith Tells the Ananias Club, What It Is Like.

One of the greatest explorers and most fearless navigators on the globe is a member of the Ananias club. He is writing an interesting narrative of his wanderings, to be printed in book form. At the club meeting Patrolman Peter Smith entertained his friends with an account of his trials and hardships in 1822, when he discovered the North Pole.

"I sailed from Indianapolis in May of 1822, on the sidewheeler Dictator. She had been fitted up especially for an arctic voyage, and was the fastest boat on any waters. She had double engines, and her hull was pierced with axes, to which could be attached wheels, so that she could run over land in case of low water. From Indianapolis we went to Toledo over the strip of country now traversed by the I., H. and D. and other railroads, and I must say the Dictator attracted a great deal of attention from the natives as she rolled along through the meadows and over the hills. They had never witnessed such a sight before. We launched the Dictator at Toledo and sailed down the lake to Detroit, crossed to Windsor, and then overland again to New York via Montreal. We took the roundabout way in order to gather up our crew, it being much cheaper to go after them than for them to come to us.

THE START FOR THE POLE.

"When the Dictator passed down Long Island sound she carried 500 men, provisions for a ten years' cruise, a battery of fifty guns and 20,000 rifles, pistols, swords and shotguns, seventy tons of powder, and the boat was ballasted with cannon balls and bomb shells.

"In three weeks we had reached Iceland, and a month later crossed the arctic circle. While crossing the arctic line we were almost shipwrecked. A heavy wind had brought the line near the surface of the water, and it caught one of the Dictator's wheels. Luckily we were not running over twenty knots an hour, and the engineer was able to stop before the line had been pulled tight enough to tear off the wheel. We sailed eastward to the Viglen islands, which are on the west coast of Norway, and laid by for a week. Then we ventured out again and crossed the circle in safety. In August we reached Spitzbergen, and five months later were in the polar regions proper. I saw there the first roly howlys."

"Arora Borealis you mean, don't you?" asked Patrolman Slate.

"Were you there, Mr. Slate?" asked Smith sternly. "If you were perhaps you will tell this story."

"Well, no, but then I've read"

"I don't care what you have read. I wish you would not interrupt me talking of things you know nothing about. It's a very strange phenomenon. A belt seemed to rise across the sky from northeast to northwest, and in the belt appeared golden whirlpools, silver eddies, and diamond sparks seemed to be flying by millions.

APPEARANCE OF THE POLE.

"In the center of the arch appeared the American flag, and beneath its folds, on a snow white background, were the portraits of Indianapolis' mayor and city officials. They looked as if they had been painted there with a pencil of fire. Thunder rolled and the wind howled all the time the roly was in sight, which was, if I remember right, about eight weeks. With a Yankee ship and a Yankee crew there is no such word as fail, and one pleasant July day, when the mercury was 120 degs. below freezing, we pushed forward for the North Pole! For months we made our way across seas filled with floating icebergs, some of them two miles thick and reaching into the clouds out of sight. Three years later we came to an open sea, and in this we cruised for seven months. The water became muddy, and birds flying about told us that we were near land, and in a week's time we steamed into a harbor.

"We had found the North Pole. Many people who have never seen it imagine that the North Pole is made of wood. This is a mistaken idea. It is a solid iron column about a mile high, and reaches entirely through the earth—the other end of it being called the South Pole. I should judge it to be about seventy-five miles in diameter, and of course of great strength, in order to hold up the immense weight of the earth. It glistened like silver, and I thought it was some precious metal until I tested it with acids, and found it to be just as I stated—plain, every day iron. You can imagine the kind of a jubilee we had on board the old Dictator. Our cannons were fired and our band played.

CLIMBING THE POLE.

"We rested in the shadow of the pole for a week, and then determined to reach the summit. This was no easy thing to do, for, as I stated, the column is of iron and as smooth as glass. I ordered the steam drills on shore and we commenced drilling. The iron was unusually hard, and a number of drills were broken before holes could be made, but we succeeded at last. In each hole was placed a wooden bar that projected about fifteen feet, and thus a ladder was made. In two months' time we had the ladder completed, and it resembled a large telegraph pole driven full of spikes. To ascend then was mere child's play, and myself with 200 of the men were soon at the top. I think it took us about three hours to climb up.

"The apex of the North Pole is a broad, level plateau. Of course nothing grows there, and the rotary motion made us slightly dizzy until we got used to it. The pole does not whirl as fast as the earth does. If it had we would have fallen off. I released three carrier pigeons for Indianapolis, with messages to the city officers, but as they never reached their destination they were probably killed by the Esquimaux. We were at the top for four days. The view was magnificent, and there is no scenery in this part of the country like it. The city of Indianapolis looked like a lot of pin heads in a cork, and the steamboats plying White river resembled clips floating on a tiny brook. New Orleans was simply a white patch, and a small one at that.

"With glad, free hearts, proud that we had accomplished what no other living man had done, we sailed away for our southern homes. It was five years before we got back, and were given a reception that I have never forgotten. The whole town went wild."—Indianapolis Journal.

A Ghost Photographed.

A dispatch from Los Angeles, Cal., states that society circles are excited over the strange case of spirit photography that occurred a few days ago in a leading gallery. The lady who was the chief actor will not consent to the use of her name, but there is no question of the reality of the event, and it is made all the stronger by the fact that both she and the photographer are skeptics of spiritualism. She took her position in the gallery and the photographer threw his cloth over his head to arrange the focus, when, with an exclamation of fright, his head bobbed suddenly out from beneath its covering and he stared at the lady.

"Did any one pass behind you just then?"

"Why, certainly not," she answered.

He then took the picture and went into the dark room with it. He came bounding out in a few minutes, and with a white face and strange manner said she must sit again. She complied, and again, when he proceeded to adjust the lenses, he could not restrain his terror. His face became beaded with cold perspiration, his hands trembled so that he could hardly proceed with the work. Five times did he take the lady's picture, refusing to give her any explanation of his strange behavior.

At last he told her she would have to go to some other place—he could not take her picture satisfactorily. Then she insisted on an explanation. He refused for a long time, but at last he brought her five plates from the dark. In each of them by her side, dressed in grave clothes, with outstretched arm and beckoning finger, stood the figure of a person who had been very dear to her, but who had recently died. The lady nearly fainted and denounced the thing as a trick, but was soon convinced if there was fraud the photographer did not know of it. The photographer developed the plates, and the portraits of the living and the dead were exact and startling. The lady is not superstitious, but the inexplicable affair has worn on her nerves so as to render her seriously ill.

APROPOS of the visit of the National Prison Congress, last week, to the Ohio Penitentiary at Columbus, comes the statement that the law-abiding people are tiring of overmuch humanity and kindness in the conduct of a penal institution; that many desire the abolition of a pardon-board, and the adoption of more severe methods with criminals. The complaining dwellers in the Buckeye State hold that the epidemic of crime which exists in their commonwealth is largely due to the ease with which criminals escape due punishment, the facility with which they secure pardon and escape hanging, and the absolute comfort which they enjoy in such prisons as the one in Columbus, which is noted for its 'humane methods.' Here is a condition of affairs that is not confined to the State of Ohio. The fear of prison life is of necessity reduced to a minimum when humane methods prevail. The hardened criminal has little repugnance to imprisonment on the score of its humiliation and disgrace. He is caloused to that by a life of evil-doing and of frequent stays in the county jail or workhouse. But he does dread the enforced labor and the harshness which he dare not resent. As for the rest, he rather prefers a winter in prison, or a longer period, with its immunity from hunger, bodily danger and exposure to cold. In him the punishment rarely fits the crime, and a sentence to prison and a term there carries with it none of the corrective effects which lead to the prisoner's conversion, and rarely to his betterment at all. Meanwhile, the honest and law-abiding are taxed to keep up these costly piles of stone with their complex appointments, and to pay the salaries of the small army of attendants. There are times when most of us feel as do the good people of Ohio; when we long for the establishment of chain-gangs that shall build our roads, clean our streets and perform other work now done by low-browed foreigners. And we long for the coming of a time when the wages of sin shall be in keeping with the sin, and when imprisonment and its accompaniment of hard labor shall be things so hard to endure that the sinner will refrain from sin, not because of the law or the gospel, but because in his own person he will suffer so keenly that the prospect of a term in prison will have more than the bitterness of death.

"Pittsburgh Bulletin.

He was too eloquent.

"In the campaign of 1884 I won my spurs as a political speaker," said the boss to a select company of hearers as they gathered around the lunch counter in 'der candidate's saloon."

"Won yer what?" asked Jimmy McGowan.

"Got my eye teeth out, young man," said the boss, "and you can learn something by listening to me. I am several years younger than I am now, in '84; and I was stuck on my oratorical powers, so I got a job from the County Committee to go on the stump.

"The first place I struck was McKeesport, and I spoke to a crowd of mill men there one Saturday night. I let 'em have tariff hot and heavy; it was protection from the word go. Seemed to tickle them, I thought, and I was mighty proud of the way I rattled off schedules and all valorem an' tonnage an' free trade an' British gold an' all that. James G. Blaine couldn't have worked the protection racket better, I flattered myself.

"On the following Monday I was sitting up in headquarters when a couple of men came in and asked for the Chairman. He wasn't in, an' I asked them if I could do anything for 'em.

"Well," says one of them, 'we've come up from McKeesport to get somebody to speechify at the meeting to-night.'"

"Is there to be a meeting again to-night?" says I. "I thought you had the final rally on Saturday."

"So we did," the man replied, "but they sent a blamed fool out to speak who's mixed our men all up with his tariff figures, an' if somebody don't set 'em straight they'll vote the Democratic ticket sure."

"My speechmaking career stopped right there."

An Excuse at Last.

Mrs. Brown—Why does a man always want a seat in the front row when he gets bald?

Brown—because if he sat under the gallery everybody would be dropping things on his head.—Epoch.

OVER 6,000,000 letters are sent to the dead-letter office annually.

A RECENT Philadelphia invention is a machine for making paper shoe strings.—Cincinnati Times.

But who wants paper shoes?"

"UNCLE ABE, what is your idea for having the camp meeting held in another place this year?"

"Wal, sah, de chicken cholera been ragin' pow'ful in de ole neighborhood."—New York Herald.

First Small boy—Been to the circus?

Second Small Boy—Yes.

"Did you get in under the canvas?"

"Course I did. Did yer 'spose the show was in the open air?"—Yankee Blade.

AUNT ELLA—I hope you remember the text, Johnnie, and the dreadful things that came of Adam and Eve's disobedience.

Johnnie—Yep. But there wouldn't 'a been any trouble if the Garden of Eden had been started this summer.

Aunt Ella—Gracious! Why? Johnnie—Cause there wouldn't 'a been any apple.

A SHEPHERD dog fell into a dry well in Oglethorpe county, Ga. A young man went to the canine's rescue, and as soon as the animal heard his voice, went into raptures of delight. The man procured a rope long enough to reach the bottom of the well, and lowering it was surprised to see the dog grasp the end firm in his mouth and hold on until he was drawn to the top. The dog had received no serious injuries, and being given a hearty meal was as frisky as ever.

An Oriental Anesthetic.

A curious anesthetic used by the Chinese has recently been made known by Dr. U. Lambeth in his third annual report of the Szechow Hospital. It is obtained by placing a frog in a jar of flour and irritating it by prodding it. Under these circumstances it exudes a liquid which forms a paste with the flour. This paste dissolved in water has well-marked anesthetic properties. After the finger has been immersed in the liquid for a few minutes it can be cut to the bone without any pain being felt.

Watchful Providence. Preacher. "Not one sparrow falls to the ground without heavenly cognizance. I believe there is a beneficent Providence continually watching over dumb animals."

Deacon Jackwood. "Me, too. You know that that ole oss of mine that's got three spavins on one leg an' a ringbone on another, an' ain't half with his keep? Wal, I've be'n turnin' him into the railroad right-of-way for about a month now, hopin' he'd git killed by the cars, so's I could collect about $250 off the company, an' dad-switched if he'll git in forty feet of the track within half a hour or train time!"

Ramie for Silkworms.

According to the American Drug-gist, a discovery has been made by a lady at Columbus, S. O., that may have a marked effect upon two great industries. For a number of seasons this lady has amused herself by feeding silkworms and sending a few pounds of cocoons to the Women's Society for the Encouragement of the Silk Industry in Philadelphia. The extraordinary warmth of last winter caused the eggs to hatch far in advance of the season, and as the young leaves of the mulberry and the Osage orange had not put forth, our amateur was at a loss what to do. Seeing that the foliage of the ramie in a neighboring field was putting out, she gathered some and put the worms upon it. They fed ravenously, and she kept up the supply until the Osage orange leaves appeared. Then she divided her worms equally, feeding one set with ramie, the other with 'Osage orange. She kept the cocoons separate and sent them to Philadelphia. The experts there were astonished at the size of those spun by the ramie eaters, and wrote to the lady to know what she had done to secure them. They were not only larger, but the silk was finer. If further experiments should prove that ramie leaves can be depended on for silkworm food, then a great impetus will be given to the production of this valuable article in the South, while it will add to the profits of those who raise that plant for its fiber.
