MONEY AND ESTATES AWAITING DISTRIBUTION AMONG ABSENT HEIRS.

IT IS an undoubted, interesting, and important fact, that, during recent years, the number of properties and sums of money awaiting distribution among missing heirs and legatees are rapidly on the increase. Recognizing this fact I have for some years past engaged to a limited extent in the investigation of such matters, in which I have had great success. I therefore offer my services to those who believe that they are entitled to participate in the distribution of money or estates.

THE TWO MYSTERIES.

BY MARY MAPES DODGE.

We know not what it is, dear, this sleep so deep and still;
The folded hands, the awful calm, the cheek so pale and chill, The lids that will not lift again, though we may call and call.
The strange white solitude of peace that settles over all.

We know not what it means, dear, this desolate heart pain, The dread to take our daily way, and walk in it again, We know not to what sphere the loved one leave us so, Nor why we're left to wonder still, nor why we do not know.

But this we know: our loved and lost, if they should come this day, Should come and ask us, What is life?
not one of us could say.
Life is a mystery as deep as death can ever be;
Yet oh, how sweet it is to us, this life we live and see!

Then might they say, those vanished ones, and blessed is the thought, So death is sweet to us, beloved, though we may tell you naught.
We may not tell it to the quick, this mystery of death;
Ye may not tell it if ye would, the mystery of breath.

The child that enters life comes not with knowledge or intent; So those who enter death must go as little children sent.
Nothing is known, but I believe that God is overhead;
And as life is to the living, so death is to the dead.

A "PSALM" OF BUSINESS.

"Tell me not in mournful numbers" Advertising doesn't pay, For the man's non compos mentis Who would such absurd things say.

"Life is real! Life is earnest!"
And the man who hopes to rise To eminence in any calling Must expect to advertise.

"In the world's broad field of battle, In the conflict of real life," Advertising is the magnet Of achievements in the strife.

Lives of rich men all remind us,
"We can make our own sublime," And by liberal advertising To the highest summit climb.

"Let us, then, be up and doing," In this sheet your "ads" insert; "Still achieving, still pursuing,"
Business then will be alert.

WAS HE RIGHT OR NOT?

The Cashier and the Burglars who Cracked the Safe.

A NEW PROBLEM IN ETHICS

From the New York Herald.

Jerry and Pete were two industrious mechanics. They lived in a Fourth ward tenement and each had a couple of children to support, besides their wives, who, albeit, were not unacquainted with a noble art frequently practiced by charwomen.

Jerry and Pete were hard workers; they worked far into the night, and occasionally the thin mists of dawn began to break on the narrow city pavements before their labors would cease. Nobody would say that theirs was not a hard-earned pillow. Sometimes it depended largely upon the police.

It was a chilly night in November that this horny-handed pair planned the burglary of a certain safe in the establishment of a furniture concern on the West Side.
On the evening in question the book-keeper had a wrangle with his accounts.

"I can't make head or tail of this," he said to the senior member of the firm, "but I know everything is all right. An error of several hundred dollars has been carried over from each daily footing, but where the error begins or ends I haven't found out."

The fact was, the monthly sales had been extraordinarily large, and a page of the balance had been mis-laid. The head book-keeper spent an hour in again casting up both the entries of himself and his subordinates after the establishment closed its doors for the day.

Then he went home to his supper, determined to locate the deficit if he didn't get a wink of sleep that night.

Book-keepers, it must be remembered, have singularly sensitive organisms, susceptible to the slightest atom of anything which reflects upon their probity or skill.

At half-past 8 he returned and commenced anew his critical calculations. He worked precisely two hours, at the end of which time he suddenly slapped his forehead and exclaimed:

"Great Scott! Why haven't I looked through the safe for a missing sheet? Ten to one Weeks forgot to number them!"

He turned over the pages of the balance in his hand and sure enough the usual numerical mark of designation in the upper left hand corner was wanting. In all likelihood one page, or perhaps two, had slipped into some remote corner of the safe.

The safe was a large one, partially receding into the wall and containing all the papers, documents and several days' receipts in cash and drafts of the firm.

The book-keeper, in his effort to unearth the lost page of the cash balance, was obliged to intrude his entire body into the safe. Fearful lest the candle he held should attract attention from the street, showing out as it did in glaring relief against the black recesses of the safe, before entering he drew the door slightly ajar.

As he stepped in the tail of his coat probably caught on an angle of the huge riveted hinges of the lock. The massive gate swung to as if it had weighed no more than a single pound and the book-keeper was a prisoner.

He heard a resonant click, that was all, and his candle went out.

There is nothing especially remarkable about the incident—tragic as it certainly must have been to the unfortunate wretch inside.
Many men have been imprisoned in safes before. But this reflection would hardly soothe the agony of that horrible moment.

The book-keeper at the outset lost his presence of mind. He fought like a caged demon, after first exerting almost superhuman strength against the four sides of the iron tomb. Then his body gave out, and without for an instant losing consciousness he found himself sitting in a partially upright posture unable to stir hand or foot.

At that instant, when hours seemed to have elapsed, the drum of his ear, now abnormally sensitive, was almost split into fragments. A frightful, monotonous clangor rent the interior of the safe.

The book-keeper used to say afterward that a second's deviation of characteristic thought and he would have gone mad.

Stronger minds in a parallel situation would have collapsed. But a weaker personality clings more strongly to hope. Only weak in-dividualities while in the act of drowning catch at straws. As the book-keeper felt himself gradually growing faint from want of air his revivified hope led him to deliberately crash his fist into the woodwork with which the interior of the safe was fitted, in secretaire fashion, one drawer being built above another.

As may have been conjectured, the noise which smote the bookkeeper's ear was that of a drill.
Although keenly distinguished from the inside, the sound was practically smothered on the outside of the vault.

At one end of the drill was a cavity rapidly growing larger in one of the steel panels. At its other end was a heavy, warty fist, part of the anatomy of Pete, the industrious mechanic.

Pete held the drill while his friend Jerry pounded it in.

Pretty soon the two burglars became aware that a terrible commotion was going on within the safe.
It nearly drove them into fits.
They were certainly very much startled.

Jerry was for throwing up the job, but his companion rejected the proposal with scorn as savoring of the superstitious. Pete had a large family to support, he argued. He spoke frankly to his friend and co-laborer. The burden of his remarks were in these words:

"You make me tired with yer ghosts and things, and I don't want any more darn fooling—see? De blamed job is most t'rough, anyway."

Pete and Jerry went back to work. At the first crack of the drill Jerry said:

"Pete, there's a man or something in that safe?"

Both men grew as pale as ghosts at the mere suggestion. Pete intrepidly applied his ear, first to the lock and then to the drill hole.

"Hey, in there!" he shouted, not so loud, however, as to be heard out on the sidewalk. There came the faint responsive; very faint indeed:

"For God's sake, give me air!
I am locked in here. Try and burst open the safe."

The two burglars did not stop to talk, but went at once to work as if their own lives depended on the result of their labors instead of the unfortunate book-keeper's. In less than three minutes they had a hole somewhat smaller than the business end of a collar button knocked into that safe.

Then they stopped to rest, and the man inside, who had come so near to death, breathed.

It was now that the two burglars became aware of their predicament.
In all probability this was a member of the firm or an employee. This fact knocked the success of the night's adventure sky high, unless, when they let the man out, they gagged and bound him into silence.

But this course would have an ugly look. It might mean murder in the end, whereas if they did not let him out the chances were he would fall back exhausted before morning, and they would still be murderers and responsible for his taking off.

These were highly comforting reflections, but there was one still more powerful. What it was remains to be seen.

"Hey, in there!" cried Pete,
"what's the combination of yer safe?"

"3-15-73," came back in an almost sepulchral tone.

It was evidently hard work to draw breath through that hole. In exactly fifteen seconds the lock of the safe gave forth the same resonant click it had given a half hour previously. Thanks to the advent of the burglars, it opened as lightly and airily as it had closed just thirty minutes before on the unhappy accountant.

The latter gasped once or twice and without any assistance stepped out into the free air.

Now comes the interesting part.

He was very pale and his dress was much torn and disordered when he stepped to the floor, but the pal-lor gave place to a red flush at perceiving the two burglars.

They stood stock still, as if they had seen a ghost.

Without any kind of speech or warning or any attempt at bravado the book-keeper walked straight to his desk and rang a call for police.

Almost simultaneously, so quick and quiet was the action, he opened a drawer, took out a pistol and covered the two burglars with a fatal precision. As he did so he uttered these words:

"Gentlemen, I would be the basest of men if I did not feel profoundly grateful for what you have just done. I shall always regard you as any man should regard those who have saved his life with peril to themselves. Anything you wish of me I shall make an effort to perform. I have accumulated a little money, and with it I shall see that the best counsel are engaged for your defence. If you are convicted, why—"

Here the officers entered, having broken in the door with a crash.

UNDER THE BED.

The Woman Who Looks For a Burglar Rewarding at Last.

"You've heard of that burglar under the bed," said Mrs. Westside. "Well, I've just had the greatest scare of my life. I've been looking for that burglar under the bed ever since I was a school girl, and my grown children long ago joined in the hunt."

"And you found him at last?"

"Wait—I'll tell you. The other day I went to visit some friends in Washington. I stopped at the home of a couple of old maids—the nicest people in the world, you know—who had been recently bereft of a loved relative. He had died in the house. During the evening the conversation naturally turned upon the character and last illness of the man. It was only a casual conversation. Nothing was remarkable about it and the subject was quickly lost in the flood of other talk. We sat up late, and when we arose to retire one of the girls laughingly inquired whether I was afraid to sleep alone.

"Because," said she, 'we have no man about the house now. If you're the least bit timid you can sleep here, though the best room is ready for you.'

"Dear me!" said I, 'I'm not a child,' and I was shown up to a handsome bedroom.

"You know, I'm not a bit afraid of a man. I'm more afraid without one. I'm not

MODERN HEROISM.

We are very much inclined now-a-days, to regard the age in which we live as too much given up to luxury, frivolity and selfishness, for the production of genuine heroes; and the mind instinctively turns to "the days of old romance," or at any rate to the brilliant pageantry of war when we would depict a hero. Every-day life, with its familiar scenes and plodding rounds of duty or of pleasure, seems far too tame to furnish the materials of which heroes are made, and the majority of us are apt to sigh over the deterioration of the human race, as regards courage, endurance and self-sacrifice. But notwithstanding our reverence for the good old days, when, as viewed through the mist of years, all men were brave and all women pure and gentle; we must, in the broad light of the nineteenth century, acknowledge that the world is better and human nature in its entirety nearer the standard required by its great Exemplar, now, than ever before.

The fact is the world is so full of heroes now, and deeds of heroism are so common that they are rather looked upon as a matter-of-course than as an achievement demanding notice or admiration. In every rank of life from the millionaire to the boot-black, even among the army of homeless, lawless tramps, heroes are found, when an occasion for self-sacrificing courage suddenly confronts them.

In the sudden and fearful calamities to which our age is so liable, the courage, the self-abnegation with which our modern heroes rush to the rescue of their fellow men is a grander exhibition of heroism than the ancient world ever dreamed of, and yet it is so common that we scarcely hear, and make no effort to perpetuate the names of those who do these deeds of daring. Not that we are indifferent, but simply because such things are so much matters of course, that we expect them, and would be utterly dumb-founded if they did not occur.

The general sympathy, the cordial co-operation for relief and assistance in every case of disaster or calamity, the broad charity which recognizes neither party, creed nor race prejudices, but springs forward with such help as man can give to his brother man is a true indication that the world's moral status to-day is higher, nobler, purer than in any period of its history.

MINERS RESCUED.

Four of the miners overwhelmed by water in the Jeannette Mines on Feb. 4th, were rescued on the night of the 23d, having been seventeen days absolutely buried alive.

All hopes had long been given up, of any of them being still living, but work was continued night and day, to force a passage to the part of the mine in which the victims had been working at the time, the calamity occurred, for the purpose of finding, if possible, their dead bodies. The rescuing party had been working in relief squads, for nearly sixteen days, part of the time up to their waists in water, when they heard a faint knocking from the chamber where the men, were imprisoned, which gave intimation that some were yet living and the work was continued with redoubled energy and amidst appalling difficulties till the men were reached and carried to a place of safety. The excitement around the outside of the mine from the moment the news was brought to the surface that some of the victims were still alive, was tremendous and continued to increase till the rescue was accomplished.

SENATOR WILSON DEAD.

Hon. Ephraim King Wilson, United States Senator from Maryland, died at his apartments in the Hamilton House, Washington, Tuesday night. He was taken with a severe attack of indigestion Saturday night, which greatly prostrated him, but on Monday felt much better and rested comfortably. Tuesday morning he suddenly became worse, and heart failure threatened. Mr. Martin, the Senator's private secretary, telegraphed to Snow Hill to his son, Mr. W. Sidney Wilson, and his daughter, Mrs. Hargis, to come to Washington without delay, and his younger children, who were at boarding school, were also sent for. Early in the day he became unconscious, his mind wandered, and he talked at random of his committee work, his private affairs and also of matters before the Senate.

The cause of death was organic heart disease, from which Senator Wilson had been a long and patient sufferer. Senator Wilson, although looking fresh and hearty, has been in delicate health for some years, and has frequently complained of the trouble with his heart. The knowledge of his condition made him low-spirited at times, but he never suffered it to interfere with his public duties. He has always been one of the most painstaking and faithful members of the Senate, and no one in the whole body was more esteemed and respected by his colleagues than he.

Senator Wilson was one of the purest men in Congress, and he was loved and esteemed by all who knew him. Among his senatorial associates he was regarded as one of the ablest lawyers in the body, and his reports on various questions of legislation were models of elegant diction and comprehensiveness. His investigations and research were always thorough and his speeches on all public questions challenged the admiration of his associates and all who heard or read them. He was a man of profound knowledge, strong convictions and never afraid to pronounce them under any and all circumstances.

Hon. Ephraim King Wilson was elected for the first time to the United States Senate February 18, 1884, as successor of Hon. James Black Groome, and for a second term January 15, 1890, to succeed himself. He was born in Snow Hill, Worcester county, Md., December 23, 1821. The father, whose full name he bore, was one of the most accomplished gentlemen and lawyers of his day. Senator Wilson was like his father in both respects. When Judge Wilson was but a lad his father died. He attended school at the Academy of Snow Hill until he was fifteen years old, when he entered a store in Philadelphia as clerk. He remained there one year, when Judge Asa Spence, one of the circuit judges, who had married his sister, saw that the boy gave promise of a useful career and generously assumed the expense of his education, inducing him to return to school. Young Wilson then went to Washington Academy in Somerset county, and thence to Jefferson College, Cannonsburg, Pa., where he graduated in 1840. He taught school for six years afterward, first in Washington Academy and then in the Snow Hill Academy, studying law in the meantime. In 1847 he was elected a member of the House of Delegates from Worcester county. In the spring of 1848 he opened a law office in Snow Hill, and for twenty years practiced successfully. The courts and trial tables affected his health, and in the summer of 1867 he withdrew from the practice of law and retired to his farm, leaving his large business with his partner, Mr. John H. Handy.

In 1872 he was elected to Congress, and in the hall of the House of Representatives earned a reputation which few men gain in a single term. His speech on civil rights, and especially on the mixed school proposition, was one of the best made on the subject in either house of Congress. He declined nomination, and again retired to private life. When Judge Franklin died, in 1878, Governor Carroll appointed him to the vacancy in the first circuit. He was elected to the same position November 4, 1879, without opposition. W. Sidney Wilson, State's attorney of Somerset county, is a son of Senator Wilson.

Attorney-General William Pinkney Whyte, when informed of Senator Wilson's death, said Governor Jackson would appoint his successor, who would serve until the Legislature elected his successor. This will make two United States Senators to be elected by the next Legislature. The Governor may appoint as soon as he becomes aware of the vacancy. No official notification is sent him from any source. The opinion was freely expressed that President Robert F. Brattan, of the State Senate, would probably be appointed to succeed Senator Wilson.

KEEP IT OUT OF POLITICS.

Frederick county was not represented at the State Immigration Convention held in Baltimore Wednesday. But the News hopes this will not be taken as an indication of any spirit upon the part of Frederick adverse to the sentiment that has prompted this movement. It is a splendid plan and if properly carried out will redound, indirectly, to the benefit of every citizen in the State. The only danger that presents itself is that the society may drift toward the condition of a political machine, in which even its usefulness would be destroyed. Let those who have its interests at heart keep it out of politics.—Frederick News.

The above is only too true as regards the political feature, and it should be the direct aim of all interested to break up any tendency in that direction at the start.

If Maryland is to grow, she must have better roads. The talk of assistance from the national treasury is all moonshine. It will never be granted. The State and the counties must build their own roads. Other States have done it. Maryland can do the same. In a few sections of the State the roads are good; in most of them, they are execrable, and in none are they what they ought to be. Nobody should rest under the delusion that the national government is going to make up for our own shortcomings. If we want fine roads, we have got to build them, and the sooner we begin it the better will it be for the interests of the individual and of the State.—American.

If the present year continues as it has begun, it will exceed all records in the list of its distinguished dead. Only a month and a-half have gone by, and the mortality record includes the following: Bancroft, Kinglake, Emma Abbott, Bradlaugh, Secretary Windom, King Kalakaua, Meissonier, Baron Haussman, ex-Secretary A. H. H. Stuart, Admiral Porter, General Sherman and Senator Wilson.—American.

Mrs. KATE SMITH who went from New York to Washington to seek a position in the Pension Office, has been gradually promoted from an office paying sixty dollars a month to that of a chief of division in the Census Bureau at a salary of $1,200 a year, but the male incumbents of the office, doing precisely the same work receive from $1,800 to $2,000.

The strong-minded women in Boston seem to be rapidly advancing to a position of equality with the sterner sex, a female burglar having been arrested the other day in that city, with a large quantity of the jewelry secured by her midnight enterprise, hidden about her person.

Shall Women Be Allowed to Vote?

The question of female suffrage has agitated the tongues and pens of reformers for many years, and good arguments have been adduced for and against it. Many of the softer sex could vote intelligently, and many would vote as their husbands did, and give no thought to the merits of a political issue. They would all vote for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for they know it is a boon to their sex. It is unequalled for the cure of leucorrhoea, abnormal discharges, morning sickness, and the countless ills to which women are subject. It is the only remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee on wrapper around bottle.

THE Indians have lost all faith in their strange belief, because the Messiah did not render them assistance in their hour of need. Weak Lungs

MAY be made to do good service through a long life by a judicious use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. The signs of weakness are "shortness of breath," pains in the chest and back, a persistent cough, feverishness, and rising of blood. All or either of these symptoms may indicate weak lungs, and should have immediate attention.

I have been a life-long sufferer from weak lungs, and till I used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, was scarcely ever free from a cough. This medicine always relieves my cough and strengthens my lungs, and no other medicine ever did. I have induced many of my acquaintances to use the Pectoral in throat and lung troubles. It has always proved beneficial, particularly so in the case of my son-in-law, Mr. Z. A. Snow, of this place, who was cured by it of a severe cough.—Mrs. L. I. Cloud, Benton, Ark.

"I have had lung trouble for about one year and have tried many different remedies, but nothing does me so much good as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I heartily recommend this medicine."—Cynthia Horr, Harmony, Me.

Proposed Amendment to the Constitution.

THE last General Assembly passed six proposed amendments to the constitution, which will be submitted to the legal voters for their adoption or rejection at the November election. Briefly, they are as follows: Veto power—In order to enable the governor to disapprove any item or items in appropriation bills and to approve the remainder the General Assembly saw fit, inasmuch as the present constitution is silent on the subject, to pass a proposed amendment in affirmative language, subject to the people's approval, giving the Governor the right to do as stated, for often the executive may want to disapprove objectionable items in appropriation bills, but as the law now stands he cannot do so without disapproving the whole bill. Corporations—On this subject an amendment is proposed to prevent all except municipal or bank corporations from being created in any other mode or manner than under the general laws. Any corporation now existing in the event of this amendment being adopted, will not be able to change or amend its charter except by surrendering all claim to exemption from taxation or from the repeal or modification of its charter. Taxes—This amendment proposes to give the General Assembly the right to exempt by general law from taxation all public property used for public purposes, all churches or buildings used for public worship, church furniture, parsonages, burying grounds not used for private or corporate profit, charitable and literary institutions, and also by general law to provide for a tax on incomes, and to impose fines, duties, licenses or taxes with a political view for good government and the benefit of the community. County Commissioners—This amendment proposes that the County Commissioners of each county shall be elected on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, commencing in 1891, and for such periods not exceeding six years as may be prescribed by law. Their number, compensation, powers and duties, such as are now or shall hereafter be prescribed by law. Board of Public Works—This amendment proposes to give the Board of Public Works authority, subject to such regulations and conditions as may be prescribed by the General Assembly, to sell the State's interest in all works of internal improvement and also in any banking corporation, receiving in payment bonds and registered debt now owing by the State, equal in amount to the price obtained for the State's interest. Taxation of Personal Property—This amendment proposes to tax personal property of the residents of this State, in the county or city, where they have a legal residence, for the greater part of the year, for which the tax is levied, and not elsewhere, except goods and chattels permanently located, which are to be taxed in the county or city where they are so located. It is also provided in the same amendment that the General Assembly may provide for the taxation of intangibles and real property in the State and the delinquent thereon in the county or city where the property is situated.—Exchange.

THE following transfers of real estate have taken place in this county, as recorded in the Clerk's office, during the past week:

When you make up your mind to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, do not be induced to buy some other preparation instead. Clerks may claim that "ours is as good as Hood's" and all that, but the peculiar merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla cannot be equalled. Therefore have nothing to do with substitutes and insist upon having Hood's Sarsaparilla, the best blood purifier and building-up medicine.

Crooked But Not Criminal.

On Sunday morning last two young men arrived in town and stopped at the Miller House. They were travelling in a road cart and stated that they had been on the road since ten o'clock the night previous. They offered to sell the team and asked $125, then offered it for very much less; they then offered to trade asking $60 "to boot" and agreed to take $20. Mr. Miller declined to buy or trade on Sunday, but began to question them and learning their names and whence they came, he concluded to straighten matters out for them, so he told them that if they would remain over until Monday he would accept their offer. During the early part of the afternoon he told them that he was compelled to leave home and would not probably be back until late and that when night came they should retire when they felt like it as he had arranged those matters for them and they did so.

Mr. Miller drove twenty-six miles to the home of the father of the boy who claimed to own the team and explained matters to him; the father returned with Mr. Miller, arriving about midnight and retired; he was up early on Monday morning and when the boys came into the office he was there waiting for them. The one boy "skipped" and has not been heard of since, the other returning home with his father. The father said that he had given the horse to the boy to use, but not to sell and the road cart belonged to him (the father). The boys said they were going to Illinois, but privately the "other boy" said that he was to get half of the money and that as soon as he got it, he intended to dodge his partner and go back home with the money. Mr. Miller is to be commended for his course in the matter.—Clarion.

The indifference with which so many people regard a cough or cold is truly unpardonable. These affections often lead to consumption, and should be checked in time by use of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Price 25 cents a bottle.
No misrepresentations are needed to sell Salvation Oil. It is an honest article. Only 25 cts.

Mrs. Jarley's Wax Works To-night.
Don't forget the exhibition of Mrs.
Jarley's Wax Works at Gelwick's Hall this evening. As this is the first opportunity the people of Emmitsburg have had of witnessing this artistic and extraordinary collection, we hope no one will neglect taking advantage of it, and we are sure that none will regret making the acquaintance of the genial old lady whose exhibitions have been so justly celebrated, both in this country and in England.

It Depends on the Liver.

"Is life worth living?" somebody asked, and the facetious reply was, "That depends on the liver." Health and happiness are twined together. If a man's liver is out of order, his whole system is deranged. He suffers from top to toe. This is the time to take Dr.
Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. These efficacious little globules are as much in advance of the old-fashioned, griping, drastic pills as electric lights are ahead of a wick stuck in whale oil.

great cheer from the students.

The flag, a handsome one, is fifteen feet long and six feet wide. Above it there is a pretty streamer bearing the College colors, blue and white. The pole is on the upper terrace at the head of the steps leading to the middle terrace and can be seen from a good distance along the country.

PLAY.

Wednesday evening, the 25th inst., Byron's Comedy "Our Boys," was presented by the Mountain Dramatic Society in the Music Hall of the College, before a crowded and enthusiastic audience. The play is in three acts and the scenes are laid in London. It is devoid of much plot, but has some pathos and many opportunities of fun-making; which latter, it is needless to say, were fully developed by the gentlemen interested. Sir Geoffrey Champneys, a country magnate and Perkin Middlewick, a retired butlerman, live in the country. Their two sons are of totally opposite characters, Charles Mid-dlewick being strong, manly, self-reliant and Talbot Champneys, weak, effeminate and with a propensity for billiards, as "Tm too near-sighted, doncher know, for cricket, ah?"

Sir Geoffrey arranges a match between his son and Violet Melrose an heiress, and expects Charles Middlewick will marry her poor cousin Mary Melrose.
But with the usual perverseness of lovers, the young people proceed to upset all the old gentleman's plans by falling in love in a directly opposite manner to the one intended. They are out off with a shilling and the two college companions go to the city where they take on a scanty subsistence by doing literary work. Here they are visited by their betrothed ones and also by their stern parents. A curious complication of incidents arise which appear to make the young men villains of the deepest dye. However, explanations ensue, every body is happy and the young people get married and "live happily forever afterward."

Mr. Wm. D. Madden as Perkin Mid-dlewick, made a distinct hit. His comical make-up was at once the signal for hearty and prolonged applause. He gave a careful and very pleasing interpretation to the blunt, hearty, good natured retired butlerman. Mr. Charles H. A. Watterson, as the frangible, stormy, yet withal, kindly old baronet gave a vigorous and natural portrayal of a country gentleman. Mr. L. J. Mc-Bride, in the character of a flippant, brainless, adulated pop did the character full justice. It was a very life-like production and caused many a smile. Mr. McBride's efforts being so delightfully realistic, Mr. F. H. Lee, in the dual role of manager-actor, covered himself with glory; which is not very unusual for Mr. Lee to do. He impersonated the noisy, boisterous Charles in a manner which can leave no doubt of Mr. Lee's histrionic abilities. Thos. J. McTigue, as Kempster, presented a good appearance. He was natural in his acting. Mr. Ed. Mullen, as Sir Geoffrey's sister, Clarissa, scored an instantaneous hit. His graceful carriage and thorough interest in his work made his impersonation one of the most pleasing during the evening. Mr.
W. F. Casey made a laudable and beautiful Violet Melrose. Mr. Casey's fine work stamped him an admirable interpreter of female roles. Mr. W. F. Cullen played the poor cousin, Mary Melrose, and thoroughly imbued spirit into the part. His keen perception of the character made it a favorite one and merely scores another success in Mr.
Cullen's already long line. Mr. Jos. A.
Malone's studious rendition of Belinda, a lodging-house slave, deserves the warmest commendation. It was one of the most natural productions ever seen on the boards of the Music Hall. Very pert and saucy, Mr. Malone was indeed happy in his conception of the character.

The costumes were costly and elegant and those worn by the young men in the lodging-house scene if they were once seen never could be forgotten.

The interludes during the evening were an exquisitely sung baritone solo by Mr. Wm. Cullen, "Don't Sail Tonight," and a vocal quartette, Messrs.
Conrad O'Shaughnessy, Will Odell, Wm. Kerrigan, Jos. Ingoldsbys, in "Morning Invitation," which was also sung excellently well.

The St. Cecilia Orchestra performed the following selections throughout the evening: Overture, Pirates of Penzance, Sullivan; Waltzes, Beggar Student, Bosman; Overture, Little Duke, Le-coq; March, Consecration, Robinson.
Among the audience could be seen Rev. Dr. Allen, President of the College; Dr. Tierney, Vice-President; Dr. McSwaney, Professor of Moral Theology; Rev. Father O'Hara, Proc-urator; Rev. Father Quinn, Rev. Father Ward, all the Seminarians, Dr.
Bravner, visitors from Gettysburg, and many of the prominent society people of Emmitsburg and vicinity.

Mr. Fitz Hugh Lee's name as director graced the programme and through his able management not a detail was lacking which in any way could make the presentation a more complete success.
The cast:

Sir Geoffrey Champneys, C. H. A.
Watterson; Talbot, his son, L. A. Mc-Bride; Perkin Middlewick, W. D.
Madden; Charles, his son, F. H. Lee; Kempster, servant, T. J. McTigue; Violet Melrose, heiress, W. F. Casey; Mary Melrose, poor cousin, W. F. Cullen; Clarissa Champneys, E. Mullen; Belinda, a lodging-house slave, J. A.
Malone. Act I., at the butlerman's house. Act II., drawing-room of Sir Geoffrey. Act III., third floor of a London lodging-house. At the end of Act III. the curtain descends, on the company dancing and singing a selection from Ernani.

BANQUET.

A meeting of the New York members of the Banquet Committee, together with A. V. D. Watterson, Esq., of Pittsburgh, who was on for the purpose, took place in T. J. McTigue's office, 32 William St., New York, on Saturday, February 21, when it was definitely decided to have the Alumni Banquet on Wednesday, April 23, at the Metropolitan Hotel, New York City. Everything points to the success of the committee's efforts.

A Lucky Colored Man.

Simon Evans is a well known colored man residing in Knoxville, this county.
Some few years ago he decided to build himself a new dwelling house adjoining the little but comfortable one story log house which he now occupies, to pass the days of his old age in. The building was accordingly started and was got well under way when the funds gave out and the source from whence the balance of the money was to come was cut off by sickness and other misfortunes. For the past year or more he has endeavored to raise the necessary funds to complete the building without success. A few days ago the old man received a letter stating that a long absent brother had died and in his will bequeathed to him, $2,300. The house will now be completed and the old man will spend his declining years in com-fortment through the thoughtfulness of his deceased brother.—Frederick News.

Disorders which Affect the Kidneys

Are among the most formidable kinds of diseases. Bright's Disease, gravel and other complaints of the urinary organs are not ordinarily cured in severe cases, but they may be averted by timely medication. A useful stimulant of the urinary glands has been found in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a medicine which not only affords the requisite stimulus when they become inactive, but increases their flow and secretory power. By increasing the activity of the kidneys and bladder, this medicine has the additional effect of expelling from the blood impurities which it is the peculiar office of these organs to eliminate and pass off. This Bitters is also a powerful strngthening of the bowels, an invigorant of the stomach, and a powerful remedy for biliousness and fever and ague. It counteracts a tendency to premature decay, and sustains and comforts the aged and infirm.
