SILENCE AND SOLITUDE.

BY ANNIE FIELDS.

Gods of the desert! Ye are they We shun from childhood's earliest breath;
Our passing joys are but your prey;
Yet wait the hours from birth to death.

Over soft lawns where blossoms sleep, Under warm trees where love was born,
I see your haughty shadows creep,
And wait to meet ye there, forlorn.

Afar on ancient sands ye rest, Carven in stone, where ancient thought
Wrapt ye in terrors—shapes unblest, Dreadful, by might of ages wrought.

But not alone on Egypt's shore Sleeps the great desert: everywhere
Where gladness lived and lives no more;
There is a desert of despair.

Strange messengers! Your brows of gloom
Haunt every creature born of earth;
Ye follow to the darkened room:
Ye watch the awful hour of birth.

Ye show the lovely wayside rose,
Whose antique grace is born anew,
To eyes of grief. Grief only knows How tender is the sunset's hue.

Gods of the desert! By your hand Through the sad water are we brought Into a high and peaceful land
To drink of fountains else unsought.

Worked By Telephone.

From the Boston Globe.

"It is a well-known fact that no other section of the population avail themselves more readily and speedily of the latest triumph of science than the criminal class," said the detective.

"The well-informed criminal," he continued, "skims the cream from every new invention, if he can make use of it. No iron safe has yet been constructed that keeps out the shrewd and determined burglar, and that's the way in everything.

But I don't recall a case in which this truth was more thoroughly demonstrated than the Maxwell case."

"What case was that?" I asked.
"It was at the time when the telephone had just been introduced into business and private use.

George Maxwell was at that time one of the most successful speculators on the board of trade at Chicago, and was currently reported to have tipped the scale which marked one million dollars. He was a young and handsome man and had just married a lady of remarkable beauty. It was a decided love match. A score or so of messages were dispatched every day during business hours. They contained such important queries as: "2:10 p. m. How are you now, darling?"
And replies like this: "2:35 p. m.
I sigh for you. How is my sweetest?" Well, to save outlay and to increase the facility of communication, Mr. Maxwell connected his office with his home in Ashland avenue, two miles off, by a private telephone wire. He was one of the first men in Chicago to do so.

About two out of six business hours were now spent by him at the instrument.

"One day, just before the close of business, there was a ring at the telephone. The devoted husband with a leap was there. 'What does my darling wish?' he murmured.

"I'm no darling. You mistake me, sir!" came the reply, in a masculine voice, a voice rough and rasping, but very distinct.

"Who are you then?" asked the astonished millionaire.

"I'm Thomas Jefferson Odell, the accomplished burglar, if you want to know!"

"Repeat, please," gasped the other.

"Odell, the burglar," came the answer. "But, now listen, I cannot waste time. I and two of my gang have gained access to your house.
The cook, the chambermaid and your wife are lying here bound and gagged. The black coachman has been disposed of. Some bundles of rags soaked in petroleum have been judiciously distributed about the house ready to be ignited."

"You scoundrel!" shouted the agonized husband, in an excess of emotion.

"Don't excite yourself. Now, sir, here is my proposal. If you disappear from the telephone without acceding to it I shall set fire to the house. It's no use applying to the police, for we'd be too quick for them. You will see, Mr. Maxwell, that you are utterly in my power. The only sensible thing you can do is to listen to my proposal and to agree to it."

"Oh, I wish I had my hand at your throat, you villain!" shouted the millionaire, shaking with rage.

"But you know you haven't, so what's the use of your talking that way! Let us talk business instead.
I need a lone of ten thousand dollars cash. I need it at once. If you are inclined to lend me that sum without guarantee I shall leave your house with my men in exactly the same condition in which I found it."

"You are ruining me," groaned Maxwell. "And I don't think I have that much money in cash in the office safe."

"You'll force me to commit an atrocious deed," came the remorseless reply.

"All right then—yes, I'll pay, but to whom?"

"It is now 5:15 exactly. At this very moment my confederate has entered your office to receive the money. You will pay him and he will tell you the watchword agreed to between us, which you will telephone to me at once."

"Mr. Maxwell turned around. A stranger of pleasant mien, dressed in the height of fashion, stood before him. Said the visitor:

"I have called to collect a little matter of ten thousand dol. for a friend of mine, Thomas Jefferson Odell."

"I understand," replied Mr.
Maxwell, who went to the safe, and took from it two packets containing ten thousand dollars, and handed the money to the stranger.

"The latter ascertained that the amount was correct, and placed it inside his breast pockets.

"And the watchword?" demanded Mr. Maxwell.

"Do right and interfere not!"
replied the burglar's confederate, with an assumption of dignity, and strode out of the office with all the grandeur of a Spanish hidalgo.

"Do right and interfere not!"
joyfully shouted Mr. Maxwell through the telephone. "And now you'll leave my premises, Mr.
Odell, won't you? And as for my wife—"

"Have no fear, Mr. Maxwell," replied the man at the other end, "you have to deal with a burglar and a gentleman."

"Mr. Maxwell locked his office, entered his carriage, and galloped to his residence. The more closely he approached, the keener his fear of a catastrophe became. But as he stopped at the gate he noticed nothing out of the way. He sprang up the stairs, and entered the pretly boudoir of his prettier wife. She was quietly reading.

"How you must have suffered, my angel!" he cried, and a sob shook his voice.

"The young wife looked up, astonished.

"Suffered? I?"

"That burglar, you know—it must have been awful. Oh, you poor darling!"

"Why George, dear, what is the matter? You speak in riddles."

"But didn't he gag you?" he asked.

"Now, my dearest George I wish you would talk sense. What do you mean?"

"After Mr. Maxwell had finished the recital of his adventure, he asked:
"Wasn't there somebody here using my telephone?"

"Why, yes, there was," replied Mrs. Maxwell. "A young and well-dressed man came in, introduced himself to me as Mr. Thomas Jefferson Odell, a speculator and business friend of yours, and requested permission to make use of your private telephone to send you a most important message on business.
Of course I gave him permission.
He used the telephone but a short time and then came back into the drawing-room, thanked me for the favor I had done him and went away, saying the telephone was a most useful and admirable invention—it facilitated business so much."

"And that was all?" queried Mr. Maxwell; "he didn't gag you and did not offer violence to you?"

"Not at all. He was most polite and gentlemanly—quite as much as you are at this moment, George."

"Great Scott!" exclaimed Maxwell, with a wild outburst, "how gigantically I've been sold. Excuse me, dear, but I can't help it. I'll drive over and interview the police."

"And that's what he did," concluded the detective, "and that's the way I came in possession of the facts. But after talking the matter over and consulting with the smartest detectives in my service, we arrived at the conclusion that there was little chance of recovering the money. The pair were too adroit. In spite of all our efforts since we've heard nothing more of the $10,000, nor of Mr. Thomas Jefferson Odell and his confederate."

JONAH.

BY RALPH W. TYLER.

"Say, Number Forty?"

"Forty!"

"Throw that cur of yours out of here, and if your gall allows you to bring him here again I'll report you and you'll get the G. B. See?"

Number Forty did as he had been directed and Jonah went out into the rainy night with his head hanging and his tail between his hind legs, as he had done many a time before.

Jonah was a dog—a mean looking cur at that, and was accustomed to the treatment he had just received. Jonah did not care, so why should Number Forty? Forty was a telegraph messenger with all of a boy's love for dogs, and especially for the homeless and abused sort.

Jonah was just of that sort, only a little more so, for he began his career by falling down a well, when nothing but a diminutive, inquisitive puppy. From this predicament he was barely rescued by his present owner, and from that day the seal of attachment had been set.

Jonah was a passably pretty puppy in those days, but after repeated scaldings, kickings and the like, he had been rudely chased from the home of Forty never to return, on penalty of death.

Then when Forty attained to the dignity of earning his own living, in the service of the telegraph company, Jonah was given a place in a box near the office, where he rapidly grew to be a favorite with all the folks in the office, save the high operator.

Jonah, in his inquisitive rambles about the office, during his stay there, had upset a battery jar full of muriatic acid, burning half the hair from his ugly hide, and rendering himself still more ugly.

He had also chewed up the boys' caps, when they were left within reach. But these and many other misdemeanors, while gaining for him the sobriquet he now enjoyed, had failed to attract the night operator's attention.

One evil night, however, Jonah dared to enter the sacred precincts behind the operator's desk and devour that worthy man's midnight lunch.

From that time forth they were at odds and Forty had a sorrowful time of it, between his love for the dog and a desire to retain his position.

One night the wind was howling like mad, and the rain was dashing madly down from the inky blackness above, when the door opened suddenly and a tall, well dressed man stepped quickly inside.

He went forward to the operator's table, wrote a note hurriedly and in a nervous manner, inquired if it could be forwarded at once by a trustworthy messenger to the address given on the envelope, as the answer would contain an important message.

Though Forty had called down the wrath of the night operator, on account of his love for that miserable cur, Jonah, he enjoyed his confidence, and was looked upon as one of the most prompt and trustworthy among the boys. To him the important message was intrusted, not, however, without additional words of caution.

Forty buttoned up his long rubber storm-coat, pulled on a pair of water-proof boots, and dashed out into the night and through the storm.

He knew where Jonah was, and, as he passed an old ash-box at the corner, he whistled softly, though he still trudged on foot.

Jonah trotted after him.

The address was soon reached, a great house dimly lighted on a more dimly lighted street. Forty saw the lady, to whom the message was addressed, tear it open, read it hurriedly, and then, scribbling a few lines, place the note in a large white envelope, along with several crisp bills.

They were standing directly under the hall light, in range of the half-closed parlor windows, during the whole operation.

As soon as the lady sealed the envelope and handed it to Forty, a shabbily-clad man, who stood on the sidewalk, near the windows, moved nearer the door.

As the door closed behind him, Forty dashed down the steps and off up the street on a dead run with Jonah at his heels, the mysterious figure a close third.

At the turn of the avenue, near a bad looking alleyway, the boy received a crushing blow from behind and rolled over with a groan into the gutter.

As he fell the book which contained the letter and the money dropped from his hand.

Jonah had been taught to "fetch and carry." True to his early lessons, he quickly caught the book in his mouth and, dashing off about a dozen rods, turned to wait his master's coming.

He did not come. He was lying senseless in the gutter.

But the ugly looking man who had dealt the blow moved rapidly toward the dog, cursing as he went.
Coaxing or cursing were alike useless where Jonah was concerned.

He kept well away from the stranger who, at last, in sheer desperation, drew a pistol and fired at the dog.

The bullet missed Jonah; but the report scared him into a gallop toward the office.

It also attracted the attention of a policeman, who rescued Forty from his muddy bed, and carried the limp form into a neighboring drug store.

At the office it was remarked that Forty was unusually behind his time. The night operator was

THE rivalry between Frederick and Hagerstown has recently brought a grave condition to light. With the opening of the public schools, the newspapers of each place published the number of children in attendance, and Hagerstown was found to be way ahead. Later a teacher at Frederick assigned the cause, that so many children are employed at the various factories in that city. A little later comes the following statement from Mr. Howard E. Young, President of the Y. P. C. A. of Frederick:

Between careless parents and the several factories the future of many Frederick children is gloomy indeed. On a recent visit to one of the factories I found a great number of children employed in the many departments, in the midst of debauchery, slang and the vilest of oaths. The consequences are that in a few weeks they become so inculcated with evil that the remainder of their lives is spent in the darkest dissipation.

With such a statement from such reliable and unquestionable authority, the future of these children is gloomy indeed. We are told that Frederick's factories are numerous, that the number of children employed in them is sufficient to materially affect the attendance at the public schools, and further that these factories are proving to be schools of vice and debauchery for them. The result of such a condition is too revolting to contemplate, and right minded persons will not be slow in concluding that Frederick would be better off without her many factories, if the children of the community are to be sacrificed in order to retain them. "For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul," should apply as well to the loss of the souls of many others.

HELP to build up your community is a stereotyped phrase which has for years been made use of by various journalists. Truly may it be said that the newspapers are at all times at work in this line and it is to be regretted that they are not assisted as they should be by those whose interests are one and the same. Whatever may be its shortcomings, the CHRONICLE can never be called a croaker or a faultfinder, although its grievances are no doubt equal to those of its brethren. The CHRONICLE has suffered at the hands of those who prefer to send the news of the community elsewhere, when it rightly belongs here, yet even on account of this we will not "kick," but simply repeat the request that our friends inform us of the happenings of their sections. We are here to stay, and the interests of the entire community are our interests, and every project which is intended for the benefit of the community will as heretofore receive our hearty support. When you know of any interesting items inform us in regard to them. If you have not the entire facts, let us know about it any how, as it is a part of our business to investigate such matters, and nothing is considered too much trouble, when the securing of fresh and interesting news is to be our reward. We repeat, help us in this matter, that we may be able to produce right here the best and most interesting paper in the State. There is to be no backward movement here. We are on the march to the front, and will never be satisfied with a second place.

The importance of the recent feat of transporting mails from Japan to England in twenty-one days by steamer across the Pacific, by railroad from Vancouver to New York and by steamer across the Atlantic may be appreciated says the Baltimore Sun from the fact that the time consumed on the old route by the Suez canal and Indian mail steamers is about forty days. In other words, the new route reduces the time consumed about one-half. In the opinion of the Paris edition of the New York Herald, the result will be to reverse the direction of the current of traffic which now traverses the Western Hemisphere instead of the Eastern, "thereby bringing to America a golden harvest of freight and commerce that formerly enriched the commission merchants and bankers of the Levant and India."

The story is going the rounds that Mr. Vannort the republican candidate for Governor proposes to challenge Mr. Frank Brown to a plowing match—both being farmer candidates. It would be more to the purpose to hold a constitution reading match—which can read and understand the constitution of the State most accurately. That would be more in the line of business as we have never heard that it is any part of the Governor's official routine to plow.—Hagerstown Mail.

The differences between Col. Vannort the republican candidate for Governor and Mr. Westcott, Chairman of the State Central Committee have been adjusted by Mr. Westcott declining to accept the chairmanship. The vacancy has been filled by the election of Mr. Harry M. Clabaugh of Westminster to the position.

The war clouds that have been gathering over Europe for some time, seem to be concentrating now with ominous celerity and the probability is, that 1891 will witness a struggle for supremacy in which every nation of Europe will be involved.

MR. JOHN H. B. LATROBE died at his residence in Baltimore last Friday. He was one of the most distinguished and prominent men of the State, an able lawyer, also soldier, artist, poet, writer, engineer, inventor and philanthropist. He was the father of ex-Mayor Ferdinand C. Latrobe of Baltimore. A writer in the Sun closes a beautiful tribute to his life and character with these words: "The world is better that he has lived."

THE Medical World for September contains an interesting article by Dr. Nevil B. Shade, formerly of Hagerstown, but now of Washington, describing his plan of treating tubercular diseases and the results of his treatment. For some years past Dr. Shade has been treating tubercular consumption with hydragrygic chloridium mite, giving from one to two grains every night for a week then omitting the medicine perhaps for a week. Meanwhile quassin is given with hot water before meals. Care on the part of the physician is required. The result has been a success in about all the cases treated. The theory, fortified by microscopic studies, is that the hydragrygic chloridium mite disorganizes the bacillus of tuberculosis.

What steam is to the engine, Hood's Sarsaparilla is to the body, producing bodily power and furnishing mental force.

FLOODS IN SPAIN.

MADRID, Sept. 18.—Fresh floods are reported in Almeria, Valencia and Badajoz. Four hundred houses have been destroyed in Almeria, and many families made homeless. Five hundred houses are in ruins at Consuegra, and the occupants are buried under the debris. Two hundred bodies have already been recovered. Many persons are dying of hunger. The queen has given $10,000 to start a relief fund.

The floods have been general in the south of Spain. The damage done is simply terrible in its extent. Several railroad tracks have been derailed, and railroad tracks and roads are everywhere washed away. The mayor of Consuegra estimates the number of people destroyed there at 3,000. In many places were found limbs separated from bodies. The officials have telegraphed for help to prevent disease. The scenes during the flood at Consuegra was awful. Piteous cries came from the drowning, for whom there was no assistance. Sixty corpses were found in a public hall, where the victims, in the midst of a wedding feast, had been overtaken by the flood.

In the province of Toledo the rush of water from the Consuegra river was sudden and unexpected that hundreds of people were drowned in their beds. The aspect of the town is positively frightful. Four hundred bodies have already been recovered, and at least a hundred corpses can be seen floating in the swollen rivers.

A national relief fund has been opened, and all the newspapers announce that they are ready to receive donations. The wine and grain crops naturally have been destroyed throughout the flooded sections of the country.

The towns of Urdia, thirty-two miles from Toledo, Villafranca, twenty miles from St. Sebastian, Yébenes, twenty-one miles from Toledo, and Vera have suffered heavily.

The troops and corps of citizens are doing their utmost to succor the sufferers. Thousands of families are homeless and starving. Relief trains are being dispatched to the scene of the disaster. A terrible storm began to rage near Valencia yesterday and the rice crop was utterly destroyed. The rivers Turia and Júcar are rising rapidly, and threaten further disaster. The Spanish government has devoted the equivalent of $20,000 to the relief of sufferers.

A Lineman's Fearful Death. CLEVELAND, Sept. 16.—John McCafferty, a lineman for the Western Union Telegraph company, met with a terrible death in the city of Cleveland. He was in the presence of 100 spectators. McCafferty was talking to some friends, and then began to climb a telegraph pole to adjust a wire. He had reached a point beyond the first cross bar, when with a shriek he fell backward. His spurs caught in the iron steps of the pole, and he hung head downward. A telephone wire had fallen across an electric light wire, and Mr. McCafferty received the terrible voltage in his body. His face and arms turned black, and he hung fully three minutes before a ladder could be secured and the unfortunate man brought to the ground. He died on the way to the hospital.

Cardinal Rotelli Dead. LONDON, Sept. 17.—Cardinal Rotelli, papal nuncio at Paris, is dead. The news is deeply affected over the death of the cardinal. The cause of Cardinal Rotelli's death was typhoid fever. Monsignor Rotelli was born in 1833. He was appointed nuncio in June, 1887, and was well received by President Grevy. In June last Monsignor Rotelli was created a cardinal. He received his hat from the hands of President Carnot in the Chapel of the Elysee, in the presence of several ministers of state, and this ceremony was followed by elaborate civilities in the great hall of the palace.

FOUR MEN DROWNED. Thrown into the Delaware by the Upsetting of a Small Skiff.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—Four men, employed by a junk dealer named Richard Con, were drowned in the Delaware river opposite the navy yard yesterday afternoon by the upsetting of their boat. They were engaged in removing some iron tanks which their employer had purchased from the government, and were making their way in a small skiff to a tug, when the frail craft upset. They were all unable to swim, and as the boat was found rather late not one of them rose to the surface. The names are: John Finck, married, aged 29 years; James Conley, single, aged 26 years; James McGarry, single, aged 34 years; John McAleen, married, aged 34 years. The bodies were all recovered.

Victory for Liquor Sellers. COVINGTON, La., Sept. 17.—This spring Paul S. Seabrook, for his client I. N. Turner, commenced injunction proceedings against seventy-six dealers in liquor. The cases were called at different times, but only one case was tried, and a temporary injunction obtained. It now appears that the object of the suits was not to see the law enforced, but to obtain blood money from the saloons. Seabrook finally disappeared and yesterday afternoon Judge Macy, in the district court, dismissed every injunction suit on the docket, nearly one hundred in all. Macy thought the liquor dealers were not being prosecuted in good faith by those who brought the suits.

A Stolen Boy Recovered. PITTSBURGH, Sept. 17.—Government Detective W. C. Negus left for Portland, Ore., last night to retrieve little Harry C. Whitbeck, aged 7, who was kidnapped from the residence of his father, George W. Whitbeck, a millionaire of Portland, six years ago. At the time of the kidnapping Harry was only 14 months old. No clue of the child was found till six months ago when the detective got a clew at Omaha, followed it up to Home-lead six minutes from this city and located the boy yesterday in the family of a mill worker. Negus recognized the child by a birthmark. The woman who brought the boy to the Long family died some time ago. Mr. Whitbeck has spent $20,000 looking for the boy. The detective will receive $5,000 reward.

Reports are being circulated that when the general returns to this country he will bring with him a wife in the person of a lady residing in England, but of American birth and high lineage. The general has been a widower for many years.

Probably Buried in the Ruins. NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—It is almost certain that the two Adelmans, father and son, who conducted an optician's establishment on the fourth floor of the old Commercial building, were killed and buried in the ruins of the building destroyed by fire Tuesday. The two have not returned home since they started out Tuesday morning to work. It is also said that a printer employed by Douglas Taylor, Charles Schenck, 150 Broadway, was killed. This report, however, cannot be verified.

Mr. Sutton emphatically denies both reports. Mr. Fitzgerald is daily gaining strength, and the convention will be held on the day appointed.

Mrs. Fair's Fortune. SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—John Mackay and Mr. Day, the late Mrs. Fair's men of business, estimate the value of her estate at $5,000,000. The will is not to be opened until after the funeral, but its provisions are believed to be liberal. Two sons, James G. Fair, Jr., and Charles Fair, she leaves but a comparatively small amount. It discloses the fact that the shortage in the funds is at least $84,000, and may reach $75,000, most of which has occurred since April. The books were found to be balanced to within a few days. An expert, who straightened out the books of this city, was telegraphed for to examine O'Brien's accounts. It is thought by those who know him that O'Brien is not the city waiting the result of the investigations now in progress.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 17.—Three men who held up a train on the Georgia Central road, which was robbed Saturday night near Savannah were captured yesterday at Madison, Fla. They made a desperate fight, and it is reported that Detectives Basch and Eitherton, of Savannah, were wounded. The robbers are J. De Laughter, J. A. Turner and J. M. Perkins. The first named was a brakeman on the Central, and the other two were flagmen. Although $30,000 was in the car $400 only was stolen. This was recovered. The men were betrayed by a woman.

It is understood that Senator Gorman does not intend to take an active part in the canvass, as the Democrats expect to win without putting Mr. Gorman to the weariness of a hard campaign.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 11.—The war among the Republicans in this state was settled at a conference of prominent Republicans at Kent, Md., yesterday. Mr. Kent, withdrew from the chairmanship of the state central committee. This satisfied Colonel Van Nort, and he will remain on the ticket for Governor H. M. Clabaugh, of Carroll county, was chosen in Mr. Westcott's place. Mr. Clabaugh is satisfactory to both to Colonel Van Nort and Mr. Westcott, and harmony prevails in the Republican camp.

CHESTER TOWN, Md., Sept. 15.—The harvesting of the greatest crop of wheat ever raised in Kent county is virtually finished, and a greater failure in prices never was known. The crop was far above the most sanguine expectations, fully 3,000,000 bushels having been raised in Kent this year. The low prices would not permit of packing, and shipping, and a fair crop has been left on the trees to rot. A farmer near this town, who has an orchard of 5,000 trees, expects to net up fully $9,000. Certainly there will be a diminution in peach growing in Kent county.

Carved Cane.

MR. E. S. TANEY has recently been spending some of his leisure time in carving the heads of canes. We saw one the other day, a piece of paw-paw wood, the head of which was embellished with a whole military outfit. Along one side appeared a musket, with all its belongings even to the oil receptacle in the butt, on the other side is a sword, elsewhere a cannon, and a blanket, rolled up in military style, while the end of the hand piece is whittled into a canteen, with a pair of field glasses standing out in bold relief on the front. All through it is a remarkable piece of handiwork.

Excellent Flour.

The Charlotte Milling Company having completed all the arrangements necessary for conducting an extensive and first class milling business, has not only commenced operations with every prospect of success but has given evidence of liberality as well as worldly wisdom by presenting the CHRONICLE with a specimen of the product of their labor in the form of a sack of fine wheat flour and also one of superior corn flour which by the new process is run through bolting cloth. The company has our thanks for the same which having been fully tested we can recommend to our readers as fully up to the standard of the best mills in the country.

A New Journal.

We greet with pleasure the first number of the Hagerstown Gazette, a new Daily and Weekly paper published in that prosperous city. A. Witmer. We congratulate the publishers, Messrs. P. A. Witmer and F. J. Zimmerman, Geo. T. Gelwick, H. F. Maxwell, N. C. Stansbury, Oscar D. Fralley, A. M. Patterson, Jno. F. Adelsberger, Wm. H. Motter, Alfred Brown, Albert Smith and R. E. Hockenshult. Horner has consented to be a candidate for the Clerkship, and believing and trusting in his honorable record as a soldier in the late war, and his unflinching and aggressive work for the "Cause of Republicanism" in this county, entitles him to the favorable consideration of all earnest and loyal Republicans, therefore be it

Resolved.

A Life-Like Portrait.

In one of the show windows on Washington St., the passer-by is attracted by the picture of a venerable gentleman, executed by Scott, the Hagerstown artist. The face is marked in every line by strength and determination, and is somewhat rugged but life-like features express well the character of the man. Mr. George Pearson, of Smithsburg, father of the esteemed principal of our Male High School, and now advanced in years is well known as a teacher in the Northwest section of the county, but his reputation as a teacher is not confined to either the County or the State. He was for many years the acknowledged leader in his profession, and to graduating classes of students his declining years be full of serene happiness, and may the lengthening shadows of his life linger long before they deepen into night's darkness.—Hagerstown Gazette.

Railroad Thefts at Brunswick Yard.

The arrest of William Fowler and Jerry Morgan, employees of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, charged with robbing into freight cars and stealing clothing, shoes and other articles, has led to the discovery of what is believed by B. and O. officials to be an organized gang of car thieves. It is said they have been operating in Brunswick yard for the past two months. The losses by the taking of goods aggregate thousands of dollars, and the officials of the road are gratified at the timely discovery. Fowler and Morgan were taken before Chief Detective at Brunswick, and B. and O. service. They made a full confession of the operations by which the goods were taken. They implicated freight conductors Morgan, Rice, and George Schultz, J. W. McKenna, who was yard clerk at Brunswick, and William Clark a freight brakeman. Rice and Schultz were arrested Tuesday and taken to Frederick to await the action of the grand jury. The accused were all employed by the railroad, and were considered good men. The confessions stated that when a car of ready-made clothing was run into the yard one of the accused would destroy the manifest card attached to it. Then one of the conductors would write a manifest reading thus: "No manifest card; designation unknown." There is a rule of the road that any car which has no manifest card shall be side-tracked until inquiry can be made about its destination. While in the yard as above was side-tracked, it was said, the gang would enter it and take what was wanted. When the destination of the robbed cars was ascertained they would be sent thither, and consignees would enter claims for lost goods. For the past two months these claims have been arriving at an alarming rate. Chief detective Gran-nan detailed Detectives Lloyd and Hutchins, who made the discovery that the work was done at Brunswick. They made the arrests and have sworn out warrants for persons in addition to those already arrested. Some of the clothing taken from the road was found in a second hand store on Greene street.—Sun.

A Mystery.

How the human system ever recovers from the bad effects of the noxious medicines often literally poured into it for the supposed relief of dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation, rheumatism and other ailments is a mystery. The mischief done by bad medicines is scarcely less than that caused by disease. If they who use weak, bilious, dyspeptic and watery stomachs, often are guided by the experience of invalids who have thoroughly tested Foster's Stomach Bitters, they would in every instance obtain the speediest and derivable from rational medication. This medicine is a searching and at the same time a thoroughly safe remedy, derived from vegetable sources, and it is a fact that it has cured more pure and simple properties as a medicinal stimulant not to be found in the fiery local bitters and stimulants often resorted to by the debilitated, dyspeptic and languid.

Thieving is still noticed around here. Last Sunday night some parties stole five or six bushels of pears from A. Hesson, and twelve chickens from O. T. Shoemaker some time last week.
