J. C. ANNAN.

My feet are wearied and my hands are tired—
My soul oppressed;
And with desire have I long desired
Rest—only Rest.

'Tis hard to toil when toil is almost vain,
In barren ways;
'Tis hard to sow and never garner grain
In harvest days.

The burden of my days is hard to bear,
But God knows best;
And I have prayed—but vain has been my prayer

For Rest, sweet Rest.

'Tis hard to plant in Spring and never reap
The autumn yield;
'Tis hard to till, and when 'tis tilled to weep

O'er fruitless field.

And so I cry—a weak and human cry—
So heart oppressed;
And so I sigh—a weak and human sigh—
For Rest—for Rest.

My way has wound across the desert
years;
And cares infest
My path, and through the flowing of hot tears

I pine for Rest.

'Twas always so; when still a child I laid
On mother's breast
My weary little head—e'en then I prayed

As now, for Rest.

And I am restless still; 'twill soon be o'er,
For down the West Life's sun is setting; and I see the shore

Where I shall Rest.

The Catamount's Cry.

The Story of the Wanderings of Babe,
the Pride of Bonita Gulch.

From the Washington Star.

In 1880 I had some money to salt down and went to New Mexico to investigate the reported rich finds in the Magdalena and rounded up one day in Bonita Gulch, a small mining camp up above the foothills in the Magdalena range.

There was at that time great apprehension of raids from the Apaches. They were not confined to their reservation, but had been raiding the whole southern part of the Territory, leaving ruin and devastation in their wake. Few women were brave enough to face the dangers of such a life, and those who did accompany their husbands were like angels of light in those dreary mining camps.

There were perhaps a hundred men in Bonita, but only three women.

There had been four, but a month or two before my arrival Mrs.
Barnes, a delicate creature, unused to hardship, had quietly slipped away from it, and the surgeon from Fort Craig had pronounced it heart disease, aggravated by the altitude, but the boys said it was heart starvation. She left a worthless husband and a ten-year-old daughter, who was one of the brightest, most lovable children I ever knew. Jim Barnes had been a man once, I suppose, though everybody had forgotten when, but Babe idolized him, and when not too drunk he was good to her. The child had been christened Miriam back on earth, but being the only kid in camp she was very soon rechristened Babe. She was a pretty child, womanly in her ways, but as innocent of the depravity of the human heart as a baby. Every miner in the country knew and loved her.

Many of them had children in the 'States,' and Babe crept down into their hardened old hearts, finding unerringly the little spot that never closes to winsome childhood. The most debased among them would have shed his own blood to save Babe pain. Oaths were strangled at her approach and her abhor-rence of whiskey was so carefully regarded that I doubt if she ever saw one of them, excepting her father, drink a drop. Once a fool tenderfoot, two-thirds full, offered to kiss her, and it took him

a week to recover from the basting
the miners gave him when Babe tearfully told of the insult.

Babe had a voice like an oriole
and was a natural-born mimic.
The birds unerringly answered her call, and she could imitate the noises made by beasts of prey so as to mystify the wariest of us and would laugh gleefully at our discomfiture. As no one tried to restrain her she spent most of her time roaming about the mountain, on the side of which Bonita was perched.

July settled down over the Gulch, warming the great boulders to white heat. The shimmering waves of light grew garish and wearisome, and one day, overcome with the intense sultriness, all work was abandoned and half a dozen of us gathered under some trees late in the afternoon, waiting for old Sol to hide behind the tallest peaks.

Our talk naturally drifted to the Indian subject. Two days before San Jose, only a dozen miles away,
had been raided by the Apaches and not even the children had escaped horrible butchery. Suddenly, far up the trail, we heard the clear notes of a mocking bird.

I raised on my elbow to listen, and then smiled to think how even my quick ear had been deceived, for through the interstices of the trees
I saw Babe's red dress.

"This yere kid goes 'a tamperin'
round that bresh once too often,
an' then Bonita hangs crape on her door an' weeps a whole lot," remarked Broncho Bill as he rolled over to a cooler place.

"Now yer shoutin', my son. I speaks to Jim Barnes 'bout this yere myself an' he allows I gets away off my base, a-mixin' in his famly affairs, which I regards as some troo, an' bein' I ain't no in-ternashunal arbertratin' committee
I drows out of the game," and Kaintuck punched his remarks by trying to drown a young tarantula in tobacco juice.

"It's a dabbington outrage," asserted Shorty, angrily. Shorty was particularly devoted to Babe because he had a little kid down in Texas. "The other day she war up there singin' like a cherubim an' I couldn't stand it nohow, so I lays down my pick an' trails up after her. 'Babe,' I says, some stern, 'the 'Pachs'll take that yaller mane of yourn to braid lariat ropes bout yif yer ain't keeful

'bout pervadin' roun' 'up yer by yersef,' an' she jest shook them long braids an' luffed it t' kill.
'Why, Shorty,' she said, 'they wouldn't hurt a little girl like me.'

'Now, I asks this yere congrega-shun what's ter be did with a kid like thet? She ain't no more idee of harm techin' her than them birds she's imitatin'. She's thet chipper an' trustin' thet I kaint bear to tell her what a lot of ornery cusses there air—'

"What's that?"

Almost with one voice we broke in on Shorty's sermonette, jerking
our guns as we sprang to our feet.

Floating down the mountain had come a low, wailing sound, such as a baby makes when it cries out in its sleep. We listened breathlessly.

Again it came, weaker than before,
but full of suffering.

"'Pachs'!" muttered Modoc.

"Panthers, more likely," said Broncho Bill. "The cursed cata-mounts was prowlin' round this mornin' when I's up to the north drift."

"Maybe it was Babe foolin' us again," I suggested.

"God-a-mighty, I clean forgits
the kid," groaned Shorty hoarsely, paling under the dirt and tan. His love for the child was almost ferocious. "I'm a goin' after her!"

He had only taken a stride or two, with the rest of us at his heels, when Babe appeared at the edge of the cliff and gazed anxiously out.

We shouted to her and she turned into the trail, where we kept her in sight as we climbed to Barnes' cabin, where we met her.

"What were it babe?" 'Pachs' or panthers?" questioned Shorty, as she rushed into his arms.

"I—I thought it was a baby at first, but I couldn't find it," she replied, flushing and paling, while the tears came into her big blue eyes. "Do you think it was a baby boy?"

"Bivil a bit, Movourneen," Emerald replied, as he stroked her bright hair. "Bivil a bit of a babby war thot. Some dirty

baste of a redskin war joost playin' yer own game wid ye."

"Yer wings is sproutin', Babe, an'
a Injun arrer'll pint yer straight t' glory, 'thout no stopover, ef ye don't quit pervadin' roun' this yere moun'tin', same 'sef ye hed
a quit claim deed to the airth," put in Modoc.

"The 'Pachs' wouldn't want to hurt a little kid like me, would they, captain?" she asked, tearfully, as she slipped a brown hand in mine. "I ain't never done nothin'
to hurt them."

I sat down and talked to the child explaining the terrible ferocity of the Indians, and the Apaches particularly, and fairly terrified her into promising that she would not go outside of the Gulch till the Indian scare was off again. "But I'm most sure that was a baby, if I could have found it," she insisted, as she slid from my knee to see if her father was in sight down the trail.

We lingered till far into the night at Barnes' cabin, fearing to go and leave Babe, and she insisted on remaining.

"Dad might need me to help him," she said with gentle significance.

The sun dropped behind the mountains and weird purple shadows began to creep up the slopes.

The pines stood out like sable giants against the rocky cliffs and the garnet of the little snow rivulet came cooling and pleasant to the ear. The soft dew twilight was over us, but across the valley on the next range of mountains a long line of sunshine irradiated the grim peaks towering above timber lines into the clouds which forever enveloped them.

Down below the flocks of sheep and goats were being driven into the little adobe folds and we could hear the soft, musical voices of the Mexican shepherds as they crooned their evening songs over the campfires, which shone like glow worms through the dusk. Then the sun slipped clear down, leaving the eastern peaks outlined in cold gray, which changed to silver as the full moon touched with transforming wand their rough contour, and the stars came out one by one till the sky looked like a great azure-lined jewel casket.

For nearly two hours we lay around on the ground, saying but little, our thoughts intent upon the threatened danger. Suddenly on the still night air rose the long shrill notes of a reclamo, as the Mexicans call all night birds, and from a ridge not far distant sounded an immediate answer. We wouldn't have noticed the cry, which is common enough there, but a young Mexican, who had come up from the gulch a few moments before,
said excitedly:

"Que! Eso es muy estrano!
De de—how you call 'em—birds of de night—they no mak so soon answer; it ees las Apaches senors!"

"Wait, boys," cried Babe as we sprang up with guns in hand ready for action. "If it is birds they will call back to me," and three times
at intervals she sent out the shrill, clear cry, but got no answer back.

"It ain't birds," she said sadly,
"they always call to me. Maybe it is Indians, and oh, Shorty, dad ain't come yet?" And sobbing pitifully she threw herself in Shorty's arms.

It was plain that the Indians were skulking round and contemplating some devilry which we were powerless to avert. We compelled the wilful child to go down to the gulch with us, promising to hunt
Jim up and corral him in Bonita, and then took up our line of march down the rough trail to the camp, nearly a quarter of a mile below.

As we reached the Azul I stumbled over a dark heap lying partly in the little stream, and turned up to the moonlight the dead face of whisky

DEATH OF LORD TENNYSON.

In the death of Lord Tennyson, England's Poet Laureate, the world of poetry has lost one of its highest stars. Bright not only with the lustre of genius, but with the pure effulgence of a noble virtuous spirit, that permeates every line of the writings with which he enriched the literature of his native land.

Though his work cannot be classed among what is considered the highest order of poetic achievement, it possesses the power, which true poetry must ever claim, of reaching the heart, and exciting the imagination of the simplest reader whose mind is attuned to sympathy with truth, and loveliness.

Of him it may be said, that the English speaking world, at least, is better and richer for his having lived, while the truths he taught so beautifully, will be treasured as "household words" by generations yet to come. The "sweet singers" of the world are rapidly passing away, and it is sad to realize, that in the world of letters which is so full of active spirits, working for fame or power, there are none fitted to gather up the broken chords and tune afresh the harps which are dropping one after another from hands, which, their work being ended, are folded in the quiet peacefulness of death. On whom the Poet Laureate's mantle shall fall, is as yet conjecture, but it is safe to say that there are none near enough in spirit to him who has just passed out of sight, to catch the full inspiration of such a heritage.

The remains of Lord Tennyson were laid to rest in Westminster Abbey, on Wednesday, Oct. 12, with impressive ceremonies, but the Prince of Wales, who was to have represented the Queen at the funeral of England's "Poet Laureate," failed to be present on the solemn occasion, and his absence has been severely commented on, by the English press.

"HANDSOME IS THAT HANDSOME DOES," and if Hood's Sarsaparilla doesn't do handsomely then nothing does. Have you ever tried it?

NEW YORK'S FESTIVAL.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—It is probable that no city was ever so beautifully, so gaily, so artistically, and above all, so universally decorated as is New York today. The citizens have responded with remarkable unanimity to Mayor Grant's request to aid in the Columbus celebration by decorating their homes and their office buildings.

Next to the stars and stripes are most frequently seen the red and yellow colors of Spain and Italy's cross in the center of green, white and red. The three flags blend well, and are effectively used together in thousands of cases. The portrait of Columbus occupies a prominent place in all the more elaborate decorations.

By all odds the most interesting and beautiful dressing in the way of decoration is the arch spanning Fifth avenue at Fifty-eighth street. It is imitation marble. The design is chaste and tasteful. Two Parisian marble columns on each side inclose niches, in each of which is a graceful sculptural representation of peace. The pillars are entwined with greenery and garland hangs from the top. Surrounding the arch are five allegorical figures. The central one stands boldly on the prow of an advancing boat. On either side are two heralds with outstretched arms. On the top of the arch is the inscription, "The United States of America, in memorial glorification to Christopher Columbus."

THE GREAT PARADES.

Monster Crowds View Mammoth Pageants on Land and Water.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Yesterday's bracing weather had an invigorating effect upon the thousands of school children and college students who took part in the first secular demonstration of Columbus week. More than 25,000 school children and students took the long tramp—not nearly as long as the line of march for the military and civic parades, but it was long enough for such little feet to go.

Thousands upon thousands of pairs of eyes witnessed on the New York and Brooklyn bridge last night a protean exhibition of unexcelled splendor.

The whole ended in a golden shower of fire, and the bridge from tower to tower, covering the bridge from tower to tower, realistic and wonderful.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—New York commerce yesterday paid tribute to the memory of Columbus. The vast business of the second seaport of the world was practically suspended, and more than three hundred steamers and tugboats, the smallest of them larger than the 75-ton Santa Maria and the 30-ton Pinta, and the 40-ton Nina in which the great discoverer and his companions made their adventurous voyage, dropped their ordinary avocations, and formed in majestic holiday parade to do him honor. The naval parade was one of the most novel sights ever witnessed. The series of gigantic floats, upon which were shown many scenes illustrative of the remarkable advance in ship building since Columbus discovered America, was one of the best displays. The men-of-war that participated were the Philadelphia, Atlanta, Dolphin, Vesuvius, St. Mary's, the Italian cruiser Salsus, the Spanish cruiser Infanta Isabel, and the Cushing.

The 2,000 members of various Catholic societies in line last night in the parade of United Catholic societies. Most of these in line carried swinging colored lanterns, and the vast column presented a magnificent spectacle as it moved along the street.

Today's parade was the most military parade that ever passed up Broadway. The first and second brigades of the state militia took part, with 2,000 men from New Jersey, 2,400 from Pennsylvania, 2,000 from Connecticut and 1,000 from Rhode Island, and some regiments from Massachusetts. All of the regular United States army troops available in this vicinity were in line, including a regiment of cavalry, General Schofield and staff also participated. The city fire department and police department were well represented in the parade, and the Grand Army of the Republic had thousands of veterans in the column. The old fire ladders were there, and uniformed German, Italian, French and American organizations were there. There were fully 10,000 uniformed men in line.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The "historical and industrial night pageant," which closed the outdoor part of the Columbus celebration last night, was something of a disappointment. There were many difficulties to contend with.

of people were simply so vast as to be solid as a wall. They were good natured, they raised no disturbances, but there were simply too many of them. The line of the parade from the Battery to Fifty-ninth street was inclosed by a wall as solid as if it had been masonry, for all parade purposes, and it was therefore an hour and three-quarters after the appointed time when the pageant was put in motion.

The preliminary part of the parade, a parade of bicyclists, some of them dressed in fantastic costumes, i. e., in Indian, etc., was somewhat tame and tedious, but the crowd still waited.

The leading feature was the application of electricity to displays of this kind. So far as regards the illumination of the city this was a splendid success, without qualification.

The tableaux were very effective, and notwithstanding the trial of patience involved in their tardy appearance, were received with generous demonstrations of approval. The scenes presented were conveyed along the line of parade upon floats, drawn by horses.

The first was "Fame." Masquerading figures, following on foot, represented the early tribes of Indians, the cave dwellers and others supposed to have inhabited this district at the time of Columbus' discovery.

The car of the stone age contained groups of cave dwellers and the earlier forms of vegetation. An escort of sixty figures, supposed to represent the earliest civilization in Mexico, accompanied the float on foot.

"The Sun Worshipers" showed an Aztec high priest sacrificing a human victim to his sun at the foot of Toltec pyramids.

"Victory of Genius" was typical of the triumph of Columbus and was represented by an Italian society of "Union and Fraternity," who escorted it in the procession in a body.

Next came "The Statue of Columbus." Upon a tall pedestal Columbus stood as a conqueror. The allegorical figure of history held a laurel wreath above his head. America was seen with Spain and Italy on either hand.

Following was a representation of the court of Ferdinand and Isabella, including a court cavalcade on horseback, also a model of Columbus' vessel, drawn by horses.

The Capitol was one of the most effective of the pageants. It had a model twelve feet in height of the capitol at Washington. The familiar columns and dome were lighted inside and out by electricity. A number of young ladies, dressed in white, and wearing a shield on their chest, upon which the name of a paper was emblazoned. The rear was a printing press, with compositors at work.

Then came "Liberty," "Music," "Science," "Prehistoric America," "American Women," "The Ocean," and "The Ship of State."

And last was "Electra." In other words, electricity. It was the most successful of all. Electra was shown in a chariot, curbing an immense electric machine, from whose eyes and mouth flames of electricity darted, and whose whole form glistered with incandescent lamps. At the rear of the car were thirty girls, in metallic costumes with electric lights grouped all about them. Six women wore aloft a globe on which the latitude and longitude were indicated by electric lines. These rows of light revolved in opposite direction with striking effect.

THE COLUMBUS MONUMENT.

Fava's Speech at the Dedication of the Italian Citizens' Gift.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The circle at the southwest corner of Central park, where Broadway ends and the grand Boulevard begins, was filled with a dense mass of human beings yesterday afternoon when the Columbus monument, presented by the Italian citizens of America to the city of New York, was unveiled.

The ceremonies were begun by Italian American artists, Italian bands, which played at intervals until 3 o'clock, when the monument was unveiled by little Annie Barsotti, daughter of the president of the association, who made a brief address.

The monument has a square, massive base of Bureau granite, from a tall shaft of the same stone, twenty-seven feet in height, arises. At the top of this stands a majestic statue of Columbus, fourteen feet in height. It is of travertine, and is an excellent work of art. It is by Professor Gattuso Russo, a leading sculptor of Rome. It represents the great navigator gazing out into the vista which his prophetic mind has already filled with new worlds.

After the unveiling Archibald Corbin blessed the monument. "Chili," Barsotti, the president of the monument committee, then presented the monument to the city. The monument was accepted by James Graham Wilson, on behalf of the mayor and the city, when the monument was unveiled by little Annie Barsotti, daughter of the president of the association, who made a brief address.

MARYLAND MATTERS.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 7.—The delegates from the Maryland Funeral Directors' association arrived home yesterday from the national convention, held in Louisville last week. Detroit was selected for the next annual convention.

FREDERICK CITY, Md., Oct. 11.—The thirty-second annual exhibition of the Frederick County Agricultural society began today, and will continue four days. The stock exhibit is large, and the household, poultry and other departments are well filled.

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 8.—One of the largest and most enthusiastic Republican mass meetings ever held in western Maryland took place in the opera house here last night. The speakers for the occasion were Hon. C. W. Foster, secretary of the treasury, and Hon. J. W. Wellington and Hon. Benjamin Harrison.

SNOW HILL, Md., Oct. 7.—The oyster industry of Worcester county is a very important one to a large number of people, and consequently, it is very gratifying to know that the prospects for a profitable season are encouraging. The oyster planters report that the oysters are in the best of flavor and fattening to perfection.

ELKTON, Md., Oct. 10.—I. D. Carter, aged 66 years of Walden Valley, near Elkton, one of the oldest paper manufacturers of the county, died suddenly of heart disease. He was a son of the late Robert Carter, who came here from Pennsylvania in 1815, and built the Cecil paper mills. At the time of his death, in 1891, Mr. Carter succeeded his father, and has since operated the mills.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 13.—The jury in the city court handed down a sealed verdict giving Dr. Buck $18,000 damages, the largest verdict for libel ever given in a Maryland court. The plaintiff, Dr. Buck, sued six well known homeopathic physicians for $25,000, alleging libel or written slander, because he had been expelled from the Maryland Homeopathic society on charges of malpractice.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 13.—Columbian day exercises were held at the Samuel Rea city park for orphan girls, upon whose beautiful grounds stands the first monument erected to Columbus in the great country which he discovered. The exercises were interesting, but directed quite a crowd. The monument was prettily decorated and at night handsomely illuminated. The 44-foot shaft was erected 100 years ago.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 10.—A special from Weston says that four men were killed in an accident near Pikesville, Md. A car loaded with lumber broke away from the train hands at Pikesville, on the line of the West Virginia and Pittsburgh railroad, and in its course down a steep grade ran into a car containing Mr. Curran, of Baltimore, who was seated in the building of a bridge, and three other men who were going to work. All four were killed.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 7.—Mr. John Wiles, a well known farmer who lives near Hagerstown, made a narrow escape from death this morning. He was having phosphate with a two horse wagon, and was riding one of the horses. When crossing the Western Maryland railroad track, near the Antietam, a freight train came upon him, and he was obliged to jump from his horse to save himself. Both horses were killed. Mr. Wiles is quite dead and did not hear the train.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 13.—The Hagerstown fair began yesterday, and will continue till Friday. The exhibits are finer, larger and more varied than ever in the history of the fair. The poultry exhibits are the finest ever made in the state. The fruit, floral and vegetable displays represent the products of six of the finest counties in the middle states. The industrial exhibits will exemplify the products of the farm and skilled handicraft of the household, and the wonderful progress in the mechanical arts and sciences.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 12.—The adoption yesterday by the house of deputies of a report from a joint committee on reference appointed by the house of bishops and house of deputies of the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church, practically put an end to the liturgical revision legislation in which the church has been engaged for the past fifteen years. One or two minor matters remain to be adjusted, but the whole matter of liturgical revision is practically ended, and it is predicted that there will be no such legislation for the next hundred years.

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 8.—At the meeting of the Maryland Lutheran synod yesterday a resolution was passed to remove the theological seminary from Gettysburg to Washington as soon as $100,000 and an available site had been secured. A. R. Valentine stated at length that the college at Gettysburg is a Lutheran institution, and it is so considered by the board of trustees for no other reason from its being inaugurated by Lutherans and nurtured and sustained by the Lutheran money and Lutheran patronage, although by the charter the Lutheran doctrines, articles of faith or anything of a denominational character are not taught in the class rooms.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Oct. 8.—Cardinal Gibbons arrived in Cumberland yesterday at 4 o'clock p. m. and took a special car to Mt. Savage. This morning he celebrated low mass in the Mt. Savage church, and after high mass dedicated the new bell, which will be placed in the new church tower. Special trains from Cumberland and Piedmont conveyed throngs of visitors to witness the ceremony. Sixteen Catholic societies and two bands attended in their uniforms and marched in parade from the depot to the church. High mass was sung by Rev. P. M. Manning, of St. Andrew's church, Baltimore. The cardinal officiated at the blessing of the bell. The dedication sermon was preached by Rev. Thomas J. Brydick, of St. Martin's church, Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 10.—The county commissioners have published the annual statement of the expenses of Baltimore county for the fiscal year ended May last. The receipts for the year aggregated $499,849.48, and the disbursements were $711,392.79, leaving a balance on hand June 1, 1892, of $127,966.69. The receipts include the following: Balance on hand June 1, 1891, $95,740.77; taxes collected, $213,385.52; license fees, $19,876.88. The disbursements include the following: Circuit court, $23,639.24; fire department, $42,193.34; general road and bridge fund, $24,461.28; special road and bridge fund, $49,666.09; public schools, running expenses, $72,000; public buildings, $7,000; running expenses, $30,000; almshouse account, $8,805.77; bills payable, $20,000; insane paupers, $38,478.02; jail expenses, $6,287.86; lamp oil and gas account, 1891, $3,710.21; 1890, $1,734.11; police force, $17,844.75.

The Pope's Representative Arrives. NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Archbishop Sattoli, who arrived here yesterday on the steamer Majestic, comes on an important mission from the holy see. He is accompanied by Mgr. O'Connell, his secretary and interpreter. The general goal of the Catholic church will be considered in a broad way by the representative of the vatican. He will investigate the condition of the church in this country, its membership and recent growth. The Fairbank school system will be studied. A visit will be first made to Baltimore, and later the prelates will go to Chicago and attend the opening of the Columbian celebration. Archbishop Sattoli will represent the holy see at the exposition.

COUGH SYRUP—Yes I am tired of hearing and seeing the word; yet if you want a good, reliable, pleasant-to-take, Cough Syrup, and a large bottle for the money, ask your druggist for Dr. Fahrney's and take as other.

THE York Fair was the best in the Society's history, 50,000 people being in attendance. Gov. Pattison and many other distinguished Pennsylvanians were present.

It Opens the Eyes.

"My daughter is losing her sight," said an anxious mother, "and just on the eve of marriage, too! What shall I do?" "Let her get married, by all means," responded the doctor; "marriage is a regular eye-opener." A man's eyes open pretty widely, when he finds his wife's charms disappearing. Health is the best friend of beauty, and the innumerable ills to which women are peculiarly subject, its worst enemies. Experience proves that women who possess the best health, use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Six hundred and sixty-two tanning licenses have been issued this season in Kent county. Queen Anne's county has issued more than 900 licenses to tongs.

THE Harrison, Reid and Wellington Club, of this place, will be addressed by Robert E. Hockensmith and Theodore McAllister, "Old Ironsides," on tomorrow (Saturday) evening, Oct. 15.

NINE Times out of Ten Dr. Fahrney's Peerless Liniment will prevent Pneumonia and Croup, if used in time. So say hundreds who have used it. Sold by all druggists for twenty-five cents.

EXPOSTMASTER A. H. HYER, of Westminster has been appointed a special agent in the custom services, and assigned to duty at Sparrows Point, near Baltimore, with a salary of $2,000 per year.

COSTIVENESS is the cause of intolerable "bad breath" of multitudes. Dr. Henry Baxter's Mandrake Bitters remove the cause and prevent the evil, and cost only 25 cents. For sale by James A. Elder.

COL. HENRY T. DOUGLAS, chief engineer of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, tendered his resignation on Wednesday and it was accepted. Mr. W. T. Manning, assistant chief engineer, has been assigned to the duties of the position until otherwise ordered.

MR. E. L. MOTTER, of Kansas City, has our thanks for a copy of the Illustrated Official Programme of the Display Oct. 5th, at the opening of the Autumnal Festival in that city. Judging from the programme we surmise that the procession was gorgeous in the extreme.

Water For the Western Maryland. The refusal of the Hagerstown water company to furnish the Western Maryland railroad with water during the famine, has led the railroad company to place a pump in the yards south of town, in the run flowing through them from Heyser's spring.

LIST of Letters. The following letters remain in the Post Office, Emmitsburg, Md., Oct. 10, 1892. Persons calling will please say advertised, otherwise they may not receive them:

On last Sunday night two horses that strayed away from Mr. Samuel H. Wolford, of near St. James' College, were shot by some one so badly that they died and the other one is likely to die. Edward Whiten was arrested and given a hearing upon the charge of shooting the horses and held for court in the sum of $300.—Williamsport Transcript.

LAST Thursday on the Queen City Hotel pavement, in Cumberland, Mr. John E. Mathews, a traveling salesman, was attacked from behind by an unknown desperado, knocked down and robbed of nearly three hundred dollars. The blow, it is thought, was administered with sand-bags, as no blood was drawn. The robber escaped.—News.

Female Weakness Positive Cure TO THE EDITOR:—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the thousand and one ills which arise from deranged female organs. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any lady if they will send their Express and P. O. address. Yours respectfully, Dr. W. B. MARCHESE, 90 GENESSEE ST., UTICA, N. Y. sept 23-4ts

Fire. A slight fire in the building occupied by Dr. Walter H. O'Neal's office and Mr. W. K. Gallagher's late residence, Baltimore Hill, was discovered about 5 o'clock on Friday morning, which called out the Fire Department, but prompt and efficient work, aided by the ladders and the Babcock extinguishers, put it out without use of the engine.—Comptiley.

Found Dead. Mr. Adam Leatherman, a well known and respected citizen of Wolfville, died suddenly at his residence last Thursday evening. In the afternoon he complained of feeling bad, and lay down. At supper time his daughter went to call him and found him dead in bed. Mr. Leatherman was 66 years of age and leaves a widow and four grown children.

His Face Mashed. An Indian, and a member of Pawnee Bill's Wild West Show, was badly injured at the Frederick Fair Grounds on Tuesday evening. He was thrown from his horse during the act where the Indians attack the settler's cabin and were leaving with their captive. The Indian fell under his horse, which tramped on his face, mashing it badly. The injured Indian is Iron Shell, Chief Counsellor of the Sioux.

On the Way to Paradise. Let us hope that the people who habitually disregard their health will reach that desirable place, and avoid the locality which is less desirable as an eternal residence on account of the heat and surroundings generally. But while we tarry in this vale of tears, why should we voluntarily endure the tortures of dyspepsia when a systematic use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will rid us of the atrocious malady which—unless physicians are very much at fault—tends to shorten the term of our existence. Heartburn, flatulency, constipation, indigestion, nervousness, debility and all the symptoms of "la grippe" it has shown a singular mastery over this formidable complaint that has carried off so many of our brightest and best.

MANY have found immediate relief and permanent cure of aggravated cases of rheumatism by the persistent use of Salvation Oil. When applied according to directions it rarely ever fails to cure the most obstinate cases. As a pain-cure it has no equal in the market. 25 cts.

The Potomac Synod. The above synod of the Reformed Church met in annual sessions at Martinsburg, W. Va., on Tuesday evening, Oct. 11, and will remain in session for a week. The delegate from this place is Rev. U. H. Heilman, and in consequence of his absence, there will be no service in the Reformed church next Sunday.

SATURDAY evening week, Mr. Samuel Mummert, a young man of about 28 years, a school teacher, was in a room at his boarding house, in Mountpleasant township, dressing himself when a revolver lying on a table beside him was accidentally discharged by coming in contact with some article which he was handling. The bullet entered his left side, inflicting a serious wound.—Comptiley.

It is not unusual for colds contracted in the fall to hang on all winter. In such cases catarrh or chronic bronchitis is almost sure to result. A fifty cent bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will cure any cold. Can you afford to risk so much for so small an amount? This remedy is intended especially for colds and croup and can always be depended upon. For sale by C. D. Eichelberger Druggist.

Election Officers. At a meeting of the Board of Supervisors of Election for this county, held in Frederick last Friday, the following judges, tally and ballot clerks, and gate keepers were appointed for Emmitsburg District: Dr. J. W. Reigle, return judge; J. H. Stokes, D. S. Gillespie, judges; J. B. Elder, Samuel L. Rowe, tally clerks; E. H. Rowe, Wm. F. Miller, ballot clerks; J. V. Tyson, J. V. Davidson, gate keepers.

Electric Railway. Dr. W. H. Eggle and Mr. John C. Comfort, of Harrisburg, Mr. John Gardner, of Steelton, and Mr. Levi Loucks, of Bowman'sdale, Directors of the proposed Dillsburg, York Springs and Gettysburg Electric Railway were at the Eagle last Tuesday. They drove from here over the entire line and it is said will soon have contractors surveying the route.—Comptiley.

A REPORTED outbreak of cholera at Helmetta, N. J., created much excitement in that vicinity. Investigation showed that the disease was not cholera but a violent dysentery which is almost as severe and dangerous as cholera. Mr. Walter Willard, a prominent merchant of Jamesburg, two miles from Helmetta, says Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has given great satisfaction in the most severe cases of dysentery. It is certainly one of the best things ever made. For sale by C. D. Eichelberger Druggist.

Struck by a Horse. Mrs. George Porter, of Wellington, Kansas, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Ross White, near this place, for sometime, received a telegram last Sunday afternoon from that place, stating that her husband, Mr. George Porter, had been killed by a horse and badly hurt. Mrs. Porter, with her children, accompanied by her sister, Miss Hattie White, started for Wellington on Monday morning. No further particulars regarding the accident have yet been received in this place.

Mr. SPIES, from the vicinity of Tyrona, went to Taneytown on Monday in a buggy with his daughter. For some reason he removed the bridle from the horse. The animal at once made a plunge, threw Mr. Spies, ran over him and dashed through the streets out into the country and homeward. Allen Davis jumped upon his horse, and, minus hat, shoes or saddle, rode after the runaway, which he overtook at Trevanion, nearly four miles away, and by the help of the bystanders the fleeing animal was stopped in his mad career. Miss Spies had fainted in the buggy. Upon recovering her first inquiry was for her father, who was found to be only slightly hurt.—Advocate.

Married at the Court House. An unusual scene was enacted in the judges' chamber at the Court House Wednesday morning. Instead of unraveling a knotty point one was tied. Richard Oscar Daily, of Harper's Ferry, W. Va., and Cora May Caton, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., between 9 and 10 o'clock appeared before Clerk Jordan and made application for a marriage license, and also requested that Rev. A. J. Gill be sent for. After the license was procured Mr. Gill arrived and they were taken to the judges' chamber, where the marriage ceremony was performed in the presence of Judge Lynch and the employees of the different offices at the Court House.—News.

Poisoned by Scrofula. Is the sad story of many lives made miserable through no fault of their own. Scrofula is more especially than any other hereditary disease, and for this simple reason: Arising from impure and insufficient blood, the disease locates itself in the lymphatics, which are composed of white tissues; there is a period of foetal life when the whole body consists of white tissues, and therefore the unborn child is especially susceptible to this dreadful disease. But there is a remedy for scrofula, whether hereditary or acquired. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by its powerful effect on the blood, expels all trace of the disease and gives to the vital fluid the quality and color of health. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not accept any substitute.

FAIRFIELD ITEMS.

Mrs. Shue, of Taneytown, is a visitor at this place.
A freight train passed our station last Sunday loaded with cattle.

Mr. J. Jere, Plank, of Gettysburg, started his creamery last Friday.

Mr. Robert Sanders of Fairfield, started for Michigan on last Monday.

Mrs. Washington Baumgardner, of near Taneytown, is visiting at this place.

Miss Sarah Krug, of Hanover, is visiting her sister, Mrs. A. Grove, of this place.

Mr. Samuel Firor has opened a confectionery store in the room formerly occupied by Mr. Myers.

Mrs. Joseph Peters and Mrs. Rider, of Waynesboro, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Zac. Sanders of this place.

Mr. J. Harry Bennett, of this place, bought the Johnston farm, at Seven Star, containing 102 acres for $3,200.

Mr. Wm. Reed is having her barn painted, and Dr. A. O. Scott of this place, is having his new stable painted.

Diphtheria is prevailing in the Lower Tract, between Fairfield and Emmitsburg. Several families have the disease.

Mr. Wm. Heyser shipped a car load of apples from the station last week, for which he paid from 40 to 50 cents per bushel.

The Messrs. Millers, of Gettysburg, have erected some nice tombstones in the west Fairfield cemetery. Mr. Joseph Banty is having a fine monument erected on his lot.

Mr. Wm. Culp, of this place, has a large white rat, with red eyes, which he prizes very highly. But as whiskey is whiskey, any way you mix it, so is a rat a rat, any way you fix it.

A ten-year-old son of Mr. Samuel Firor, who had his arm broken about a year ago, has had a bone broken in his arm again. He was playing at school and one of the boys ran against his arm.

Mr. George Shryock, was helping Mr. A. Grove to haul clover seed, and in fastening the pile, it broke, throwing him to the ground. He fell on his head and was unconscious for quite awhile.

Messrs. Wm. Kitting and Harry Brown who have been ill with typhoid fever, are improving slowly, and at this writing a son of Mr. J. J. Rindell of Fairfield, who is lying very ill with the same disease, is not expected to live.

Mr. George Spaulding, of Baltimore, with his daughter, came to Fairfield to attend the funeral of his sister-in-law, Miss Molly Witrode, who died last Friday morning. Miss Molly was taken in the prime of life, and was liked by all who knew her. She had been sick for several years with consumption.

Her father, Mr. Henry Witrode, and one sister, Mrs. George Spaulding, are still living. She was 26 years, 4 months and 29 days old.

To Prevent the Grip. Or any other similar epidemic, the blood and the whole system should be kept in healthy condition. If you feel worn out or have "that tired feeling" in the morning, do not be guilty of neglect. Give immediate attention to yourself. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla to give strength, purify the blood and prevent disease.

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, jaundice, biliousness, sick headache, constipation.

When Nature Needs assistance it may be best to render it promptly, but one should remember to use even the most perfect remedies only when needed. The best and most simply and gentle remedy is the Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

Steam Flouring Mill Burned. Early on Tuesday morning, the steam flouring Mills of Mr. James H. Gambrell, located in Frederick city, were discovered to be on fire. The fire originated in one of the front rooms where a lot of flour sacks were stored, and when discovered had gained such headway that the millers were compelled to leave some of their clothing behind. The building, with its contents was destroyed. The mill contained about 12,000 bushels of wheat, 50 tons of bran, and about 150 barrels of flour. The loss is estimated at $30,000. The stock is covered by insurance, while the building and machinery is insured for about two-thirds of its value. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin. The mill will be rebuilt.

Have we that we may see and hear; brains that we may reason and understand; so there's little excuse for much of the suffering that is tolerated. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the only guaranteed blood-purifier and liver invigorator. Sold on trial! Money promptly returned, if it doesn't benefit or cure.

Columbus Day Exercises.

The four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus, will be celebrated with appropriate exercises by the pupils of the public schools of this place, on Friday afternoon, Oct. 21st, commencing at 2 o'clock. Arthur Post No. 41, G. A. R., Massasoit Tribe No. 411, O. R. M. and the pupils of the school will form in line at the Public School House, at 1:30 o'clock, P. M., and march to Eyster's Opera House, where the exercises will take place. The teachers and officers of the school, hope that the patrons and all patriotic citizens will co-operate with them in making the parade a success. In other towns the parade will be the chief event of the exercises, and why not let it be so in this place? It can easily be done, if parents will see that their children are at the school house at the appointed time. An invitation is extended to the citizens of Emmitsburg and vicinity to join the parade and take part in the exercises, and it is hoped that as many as possible will do so. In the singing of several of the songs, the audience is expected to join with the school, so it will be well for each person if possible to have a book containing "America," and "Red, White and Blue." The following programme will be carried out:

PROGRAMME: Reading—"President's Proclamation," E. R. Zimmerman; Prayer, Rev. U. H. Heilman; Song, "Home, Sweet Home," School; Recitation—"Columbus," Miss Mary McNair; Composition—"Life of Columbus," Miss Edith Nunemaker; Song, Choral Union; Exercise—"Columbus Acrostic," Eight Small Girls; Recitation—"Christopher Columbus," Miss Maggie Eyley; Song—"Over the Mountain Wave," School; Address, Rev. W. Simonton, D. D.; Recitation—"Discovery Day," Roy Whitmore; Song, Choral Union; Exercise—"The Claim of the Nations," Italy, Miss Edith Nunemaker, Spain, Miss Rose Colliflower, and America, Miss Mary McNair; Composition—"Value of Discovery to Science," Miss Helen Wood; Song, Choral Union; Tableau—"Isabella and Her Jewels," Miss Lizzie Morrison; Reading—"Columbus," Miss Florence Reigle; Song—"Red, White and Blue," School; Exercise—"The Story of our Country," Eight Girls; Chorus—"Columbus," Misses Lizzie Morrison, Florence Reigle and George Mentzer; Song—"America," School and Audience; Prayer, Rev. U. H. Heilman.

THERE is no use of any one suffering with the cholera when Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy can be procured. It will give relief in a few minutes and cure in a short time. I have tried it and know.—W. H. Clinton, Helmetta, N. J. The epidemic at Helmetta was at first believed to be cholera, but subsequent investigation proved it to be a violent form of dysentery, almost as dangerous as cholera. This Remedy was used there with great success. For sale by C. D. Eichelberger Druggist.

"Dropping From the Ranks." Communicated.

The surviving members of Co. 'C' Cole's Cavalry residing in this vicinity, were surprised, as well as pained to learn of the death of Charles A. Gilson, who died at his home in Frederick, Md., Sept. 28, 1892. He was a son of the late Richard Gilson of this District. One of Frederick county's most loyal men during the late war. Comrade Gilson was one of the original members of his company, enlisting on the 27th of August, 1861, leaving Emmitsburg when the company was recruited by the venerable Capt. John Horner. His brother, John Emory, enlisting at the same time, and his brother Newton enlisted in the same company about one year later. Emory was captured by the enemy at Rectortown, Va., on the first day of January, 1864 and fell a victim to the horrors of the prison-pen at Andersonville, Ga. Newton was wounded in front of Lynchburg in June, 1864, during Hunter's raid and died of his injuries. But Charles served through the entire war, and was honorably discharged at the expiration of his term. After his services in the army he married Miss Harriet Morrison, a daughter of the late Wm. B. Morrison near this place, by whom he raised a large family, all of whom survive him, and are respected citizens of Frederick. His late comrades remember him as one of the most gallant and faithful members of the company, always at his post of duty in the hour of danger. He was a member of Reynolds' Post No. 1, G. A. R., of Frederick, and since the war has always taken a deep interest in his comrades, attending regularly the re-unions of his old company and regiment, being present at the last re-union of Co. C, Cole's Cavalry, at this place in February last, and also present at the Memorial Services on the 30th of May last, at this place. Being the last time we had the pleasure of grasping his hand. Comrade Gilson was not only a brave soldier in the late war for the preservation of this glorious country, but we are glad to know he was a soldier of the cross, having joined the M. E. Church, Episcopal church at Tom's Creek, when a boy, under the ministry of Rev. J. H. C. Dash. While he has answered the last Roll Call. We sincerely hope he has joined the Grand Army above.

A COMRADE.

Eyes and Ears. Have we that we may see and hear; brains that we may reason and understand; so there's little excuse for much of the suffering that is tolerated. Those whom misfortune had doomed to want and suffering were the recipients of his big hearted generosity and Christian charity. Gentle, forbearing and manly, he made a host of friends, who loved him for his good deeds, respected him for his talents and honored him for his high character. He died a Christian's death with Jesus fathers at his bedside. Peace to their souls!

It saved his boy's life. Mr. D. A. Curry, Conductor C. & A. R. R., Slater, Mo., gives his convictions thus: "I highly praise Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for saving the life of my little boy, who is five years old. He had a severe case of the croup which the Syrup relieved immediately."

MT. ST. MARY'S COLLEGE NEWS.

The Societies. The Philomathian Literary Society held its regular meeting in the Reading Room, Sunday evening, Oct. 9th. Several alterations were made in the constitution relative to the programs carried out at weekly meetings. It was unanimously agreed by the members to carry out a suggestion made by the Reverend Critic, namely, the proper celebration of Columbus Day. One of the features of the celebration to be given at the Mount, therefore; will consist of a literary and musical entertainment, to be given under the auspices of the Philomathian Society and under the supervision of Rev. Wm. O'Hara, A. M. Father O'Hara will have for his assistants, Mr. Thos. J. Grasselli, '93, to look after printing, staging, etc., and Mr. Wm. H. Kerrigan, '94, to arrange the musical part of the program. The Glee Club will render several selections and those having the arrangements in hand will endeavor to have Prof. Fenatta perform. The literary portion of the program will be made up as follows. Orations by John J. Gordon, '93, and John J. McCloskey, '94; Poem by Wm. J. Cashman, '93; Recitation, by Wm. J. Rice, '95. The musical program has not as yet been announced. The committees are striving earnestly for the success of the entertainment.

The Carroll Literary Society held its first meeting in the Reading Room, Thursday evening, Oct. 6th, at which a re-organization was effected for the year '92-'93. The following officers were elected: President, Thos. J. McGhee, Jr., '93; Vice-President, Wm. J. Rice, '95; Secretary, A. Malone, '95; Treasurer, Leo Curley, '96; Censor, Ed. J. Donohue, '95. Indications point to a most successful year.

The Carroll Literary Society re-organized Thursday evening, Oct. 6th, by electing the following: President, Edw. Sweeney, '97; Vice-President, John Wade, '97; Secretary, Lawrence Gilroy, '97; Treasurer, Jas. McKenna, '97; Censor, John O'Donnel, '97, and Critic, Mr. Charles H. A. Watterson, A. B. Carroll Hall was the scene of some excellent debates last year and we hope this year's work will eclipse that of former years.

Notes. Rev. Bernard J. Bradley, A. M., who was ordained and left the "Mount" in June last, to take up missionary work in the Brooklyn Diocese, has returned to the college, where he will teach. Verily, the Faculty is waxing strong and efficient!

Rev. Father Manley and Prof. West spent Thu sday in Gettysburg, taking in the battle field. They returned well pleased with their trip.

Rev. Father O'Hara made a flying visit to Baltimore, Thursday.

Friday, Oct. 7th, was the sixth anniversary of Father Manley's ordination to the priesthood. May he enjoy many more!

About fourteen of our young friends have been wearing smiles since Tuesday the 4th. They were registered as voters on that day.

Wm. Casey, Harry Burkhardt and John Wade gave an impromptu entertainment in "the Alley" on a recent evening. Their efforts were appreciated and the "denizens" cordially invite a repetition.

Sports. The foot-ball team is progressing rapidly in its practice. In a recent game the first team defeated the second by a score of 60 to 0. The first game will be played with the Gettysburg team shortly.

In a series of games of hand-ball played recently, the Locust Gap Club (McDonald, Joyce and McMannus) defeated the Troy Club, (Cunneen, English and Brennan) three straight.

Barbecue Day will be held Wednesday, Oct. 12th. The games are expected to be very successful.

Obituary Notices. Charles Snigley, of Roundout, N. Y., formerly a student at the "Mountain," died at his home Wednesday, Sept. 29.

After a life of success and distinction, fraught with deeds of kindness and charity for his fellow men, Dr. Jacob Henry Wiendahl died recently at the age of 64 years. His death was not altogether unexpected, he having been confined to a bed of illness for three months with a painful malady. The news of his departure from life was, however, received with expressions of profound sorrow by a large circle of loving friends and admiring acquaintances.

Jacob Henry Wiendahl was born in Utica, Herkimer county, N. Y., on March 25, 1828. He was the son of Gustave Adolph Wiendahl, a native of Dusseldorf, Prussia, who was years ago engaged in planting in St. John the Baptist parish.

Young Wiendahl was sent to the best schools and colleges in the state, finally graduating from Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md. He then took several courses in the most noted medical universities of Pennsylvania and New York.

Upon the completion of his studies he returned to the state of his adoption and began the practice of his profession in St. John. He was most successful in his practice in the country, but sought a broader field for the display of his talents and energies. He went to New Orleans in 1867 and soon took a prominent place among the leading physicians of the city. His practice was large and lucrative.

Those whom misfortune had doomed to want and suffering were the recipients of his big hearted generosity and Christian charity. Gentle, forbearing and manly, he made a host of friends, who loved him for his good deeds, respected him for his talents and honored him for his high character. He died a Christian's death with Jesus fathers at his bedside. Peace to their souls!

Surprise Party.

A surprise party, that really surprised, gathered in the Parsonage of the Reformed church on Friday evening last, during the absence of the pastor, Rev. U. H. Heilman and wife, who had been invited to take tea with one of the families connected with the church, that they might be safely out of the way of those who were to take temporary possession of the Parsonage to arrange for the pleasant entertainment which followed. When all was ready and the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Heilman were assembled they were sent for to come home, and their surprise was complete at finding the house lighted up and filled with guests.

Bill, who was calmly sleeping off a drink.

"Yer gets mighty peevish all fer nothin'," said Bill, fretfully, as he slowly got up. "A female don't stand no chance alongside of you for narves these yer days. That's only a painter a yowlin'." Babe has located all the pay streaks in the New Jerusalem by now. All I asks is 't git my sights on the pizen cuses—"

A second cry cut Bill short.

"Pachs or painters, I invester-gates," said Shorty, savagely, and we all followed him.

Almost on the spot where Babe looked out at us the Apache panther cries startled us we found her lying a little heap, and beside her, crying pitifully, a little child, almost naked, and so dirty and tanned that we couldn't tell whether it was Indian or Anglo-Saxon, and near by, browsing on the grass, was an old she goat.

Babe's clothes were in tatters, and her arms and feet bare and bleeding. As I stooped over her she put up her poor lacerated hands and said piteously:

"Oh, captain, take me home; I'm so tired," and fainted.

I took her in my arms. Shorty gathered the baby, and with the goat following went whooping and yelling down the trail like hostiles on the warpath.

The whole camp was in arms and ambush when we appeared on the scene and came near greeting us with a volley, but when the reason for our hilarity became known they went as about ten better. The women cried and the boys shouted and sung and waked every echo in the Magdalenes with their six-shooters and Winchester in their exuberant joy.

The Malloy cabin being the closest and as all the comforts in the gulch had been placed there for the benefit of the poor heart-broken couple I took Babe in there and piled her on a cot, while everybody in Bonita crowded about the door and windows.

The baby was quietly taking in all the sights in Shorty's arms, and as we had about forgotten the kid's existence in the joy over Babe we were totally unprepared for the frantic screams of delight uttered by the half starved young one as Shorty stumbled into the cabin at my heels. It held out its dirty paws to Malloy and in a voice that would have made an enraged parrot shriek:—"Papa, papa!"

The painter does not live, the poet never existed who could have done justice to that scene, and I won't try, but you can just set your imagination to work on picturing the joy of those parents on the recovery of their child. As for the camp, it had another frenzy of powder burning and shouted itself black in the face.

While the women were rubbing Babe and trying to get some life in her little skeleton a fierce baying was heard, and with a clatter the old goat sprang into the crowd and heading through the crowd jumped with her forefeet on Babe's cot. That seemed to bring Babe back to life, and struggling to a sitting posture she stroked the goat's shaggy sides.

"Oh, but I'm so happy," she murmured with a wan smile as she sank back on her pillows. Then, as she saw the dirty little kid stuffing itself as it sat on the bed with its mother's arms around it, "And baby's found it's mamma, too. I'm so glad, but I'm dreading tired."

"Kin ye tell us erbout it now, Babe?" questioned Shorty. "How ever did ye git stole 'bout our hearin'?" Why didn't ye squeal sooner?"

"They—they didn't steal me from the cabin, Shorty; I—I just went," quavered Babe.

"Went?" shouted Bonita in unison. "Went where?"

"While you were all asleep I heard the cry again, just like a baby, real close to the cabin, and I thought I'd get out quiet like and see if it was. It kept going away from me, and I was sure the baby was running through the bushes, but—oh, Shorty, it was an Indian, just like you said, and he made the noise. I was right close to him when he made it the last time, and then it was when I screamed. The nasty, horrid thing just grabbed me and made motions that he would cut my throat if I called again."

Babe paused, utterly exhausted, and it was some time before she could relate the rest of her experience.

Broncho Bill finally started her again. "Did this yer red son of Belial treat yer 'cordin' to Hoyle on females, Babe?" he asked, as he twirled his forty-four airily in his fingers, ready to "shoot up a whole lot," anybody who had dared be ungentle to the pet of the gulch.

"There was two of 'em, Bill, and they wasn't so very ugly to me. I think they swore at me. Anyhow, they looked swear words, but I can't understand Apache. They had their ponies hid in the little canyon where the trail branches toward the north drift. One of them put me in front of him, and we rode till way after sunup. We went down the other side of the mountain to an awful big place in the rocks, like a cave, with no top to it, and there was the squaws and papooses. They ain't but one way down there, and the rocks raise right up to the sky most, I guess. The squaws give us something to eat, and then they tried to make me take off my red dress and pulled my braids and called me 'sunny hair.' When it was most night ever so many Indians came to the cave with lots of things that belonged to white folks.

"They had a big powwow that night and forgot me, I guess. Maybe they thought I was so little I'd be afraid to go away in the dark. I was, too, but I was 'fraider' to stay. While they were dancing I crept away up the path among the pines. It was awful scary. The wolves barked and I heard the panthers cryin', panthers and Indians can't fool me no more, and I thought I never could find the trail. Pretty soon the Indians came shouting and hunting for me with torches, but I skinned up a tree, and when they got tired and went back I slid down and ran off. When it come daylight I found something just awful!" and shuddering, she put up her hands to shut out the vision.

"Spose yer rests now, Babe," suggested Shorty. "We sabs the horrors too easy, an' haint no consoomin' desire to harper up yer feelin's relat' of 'em."

"Oh, but I'm just comin' to the baby," said Babe; "you want to hear about that. What I saw was a woman all cut to pieces, and tied to the bushes at her side with rawhide strings was the baby. The poor little thing was most too weak to cry, but it acted just as glad when I worked the strings loose. They was tied so tight they cut its little arms and legs. I walked a long time and carried baby, and we got so hungry. I saw a little Indian boy herding goats, but I was afraid to ask him for milk for fear he was bad like the others, so baby and I sat down to rest back under the trees where he couldn't see us, and we went to sleep. Baby screamed awful and waked me up, and there was a Nanny goat standin' right over us, but when she tried to butt us I caught her and then she wasn't a bit ugly. I was so glad, but baby was scared most to death. I tied Nanny with the rawhide strings and milked her in my hand and poured it down baby's throat, and got a little for me, too. My, but baby was just crazy for more, but Nanny didn't have very much.

"We both felt better after that, but it rained and I couldn't find the trail till this morning, and I thought maybe we'd die after all. It wasn't stealing to take Nanny, was it, boy's?" she asked wistfully.

"When I looked for the other goats the herder had driven them clear out of sight, so I just kept Nanny. We'd have starved if it hadn't been for her."

The assurances the child received that she had committed no crime were strong enough to satisfy anybody, and if Babe had been almost any other child on earth she would have been ruined by the adulation and devotion showered upon her, and she deserved it all.

The story of her wanderings sounds like fiction, but its the God's truth. For a straight week she packed that kid round over the mountain, drenched every day with rain, in danger of recapture any minute, and beasts of prey around them every night. After that episode I was a convert to the "Daniel-in-the-lion's-den" theory.

The Malloy's gratitude expressed itself substantially. They adopted Babe and made motions that he would cut my throat if I called again."

No. I don't like the yowl of a panther any better than Kit Carson did. He didn't like to drink, either, but I do, and I'm as dry as the Sahara. Come, boys, let's liquor up.

A Brave Youngster.

Daniel Bonnet was a weaver 200 years ago in the French village of Thorigne. He and his wife were Huguenots, and they talked incessantly to their three little children of the glory of holding by their faith and, if needs be, of dying for it.

The troops were sent into the village to convert the Huguenots at the sword's point, and Bonnet and his wife attempted to escape to the coast.

They loaded a donkey with vegetables as if for market, but hid the three little ones in the panniers, charging them, as they valued their religion, to keep silent, no matter what happened.

M. Bonnet, with a basket of turnips, trudged ahead; his wife drove the donkey. Just outside the village they met a trooper.

"Going to market?" he said suspiciously. "Then I can try if your carrots be tender." He plucked his sword into the pannier and waited, but not a sound was heard.

"Wherever you go, bon voyage, mes amis!" he shouted, and galloped away.

The wretched parents had to wait until he was out of sight before they could open the basket. Their boy, a child of five, had been stabbed through the thigh.

"But I did not speak, mother!" he cried, and fainted.

The Bonnets escaped to America, and the blood of the brave had still runs in the veins of good men and women.—Youth's Companion.

To Make Washing Blankets Easy.

If one has a suitable place for the purpose, the washing of blankets may become an easy matter. In an open space have a line tightly stretched out of doors. To this fasten the upper edge of the blanket. Have strips of cotton sewed to the blanket at intervals; tie these to pegs, which drive well into the ground. Now turn on the hose. Cold water, of course, and plenty of it. Drench the blankets well on both sides. If much soiled, rub spots with soap and drench again. The force of the stream will do more than wringing. After the article is quite clean, leave it to dry; never mind if it does rain; if the work has been thorough it will not streak, but be all the better for it. When the sun has completed the task, you will possess blankets as white, soft and unshrunk as new, and the nap will not be destroyed.—Ladies Home Journal.

ALLOW ME to add my tribute to the efficacy of Ely's Cream Balm. I was suffering from a severe attack of influenza and catarrh and was induced to try your remedy. The result was marvelous. I could hardly articulate, and in less than twenty-four hours the catarrhal symptoms and my hoarseness disappeared and I was able to sing a heavy role in Grand Opera with voice unimpaired. I strongly recommend it to all singers.—Wm. H. Hamilton, Leading Bass of the C. D. Hess Grand Opera Co.
