A LESSON.

BY ADA A. MOSHER.

They were drawing, at least they were trying,

Her face looked cut like a flower

Leaves the cheek of a violet.

The dimpled and darling tots-

She looked like a Lily preaching

To blue-eyed Forget-me-nots.

With a patience I shan't forget;

Was tensioned each wee little fist;

Each face, in absorbed concentration, A pucker with many a twist.

With a wonder that waxed profounder

They saw, as they clustered 'round her,

No holding of hands, they had drawn them

But she told them, unblushing, I heard her,

On the slates of these Busy Bees,

And proudly she pondered on them— So "fearfully wonderfully made!"

I'd have judged them alphabet murder

With a patience, divine in its sweetness,

And a tenderness touched with pride,

That had Cadmus's patience tried.

And, forgive her, I'm sure she hinted

Ye righteous, forbear condemnation,

Truth will honor Love's vindication;

She couldn't have said much less

If you guessed in some subtle way,

Mayhap not, but I bless you forever,

Little teacher, so sweet and grave,

The one you unconsciously gave,

As mercy Divine excels human,

So His tenderness will surpass

To her dear little baby class.

To Him we are children forever,

And if, after faithful erdeavor,

In life's earnest effort at tracing

Its imperfect, crude alphabet.

That winneth at last reward.

Because we have "tried so hard."

BALTIMORE, SEPT. 26, '93.

The copy the Master has set,

We shall have succeeded no more.

We will find Him with gentleness facing

And 'twill not be the work's meagre merit

Heaven's crown-ah, methinks we will wear it

AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

That of this gentlest woman

The oldest not over four.

For my lesson that hides with me ever,

Methinks when Life's task is completed,

Where his due unto each shall be meted,

When the day's prescribed labor is through.

And we stand as these little ones do,

What a beautiful lesson lay under

Your simple one of to day?

To the eager, expectant glances,

So conscious of earnestness.

O, dear little sister. I wonder

Let slumbering Justice snore.

And, under the circumstances,

They were good as the printed card.

Because they had tried so hard,

She praised them with praise unstinted.

In the first of the three degrees,

They were "beautiful A B C's."

Ignoring an incompleteness

The copy before them lying,

In desperate determination

Their marvelous A B C's.

All independent of aid;

The one that the teacher set.

From the snows of a big cornet,

Mid the little crowd she was teaching,

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children." DR. G. C. OSGOOD,

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves.

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y. "Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experi ence in their outside practice with Castoria and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it." Stories of absent-mindedness are invariably amusing, but one that is being told of Professor Burdon Sanderson, the President of the British Association, requires a rather large grain of salt. On one occasion, it is said, while at Oxford, he asked a few frends to a bachelor dinner, and to their intense surprise on their arrival proceeded to offer them their overcoats, shake hands with them, and express a hope that they had enjoyed hemselves. Then, seeing their astonishment, he remembered that they were arriving, and not departing guests, and a hearty laugh put matters to rights. * *

Advice to Peach Growers.

J. Mitchell Stover, of Edgemont, one of the largest peach growers in Washington county, advises all extensive growers of peaches to operate a cannery in connection with their peach orchards. The value of such combination has been proven to him most forcibly this year.
