What is

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregorie, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea-the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children." Da. G. C. Osgoop, Lowell, Mass. " Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is 1 of far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful ngents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves.'

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,

The Centaur Company, 77 Murray Street, New York City.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ARCHER, M. D.

111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y. "Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

WISHES.

I asked a little child one day, A child intent on joyous play,
"My little one, pray tell to me
Your dearest wish; what may it be?" The little one thought for awhile, Then answered with a wistful smile, "The thing that I wish most of all Is to be big, like you, and tall.

I asked a maiden sweet and fair, Of dreamy eyes and wavy hair,
"What would you wish, pray tell me true,
That kindly fate should bring to you?" With timid mich and downcast eyes And blushes deep and gentle sighs, Her answer came, "All else above, I'd wish some faithful heart to love,"

I asked a mother, tried and blest, With babe asleep upon her breast, "O mother fond, so proud and fair, What is thy inmost secret prayer?" She raised her calm and peaceful eyes, Madonnalike, up to the skies.
'My dearest wish is this," said she "That God may spare my child to me."

Again, I asked a woman old, Again, I asked a woman old,
To whom the world seemed hard and cold,
"Pray tell me, O thou blest in years,
What are thy hopes, what are thy fears?"
With folded hands and head bent low She answer made, in accents slow, "For me remains but one request— It is that God may give me rest."

He was a freckled, patched, stupid looking young man. He looked at me with eyes and mouth open in amazement and was so bashful that I refrained from asking questions. I never hinted to Ben that I had come on to be his stepmother.

"On we drove, over stumps and roots and gullies-through mud and swamps. It seemed to be 20 miles. At last we drew up before a dingy, two roomed house with a shed at the back. A few scruggy peach trees and a neglected grapevine were the only green things in the yard beside the weeds. A woman was milking a scrawny cow in front of the gate. She had her back to us and a sunbonnet on. Two shock headed, barelegged children sat on the fence. They gave the alarm when they saw a stranger in the cart, and a man, who had been squatted in a fence corner holding off the calf got up and came toward us.

"That's pap,' said Ben.

HELD UP IN HIS CAR. A STORY OF THE KENDALLVILLE ROB-BERY FROM THE INSIDE.

An Express Messenger's Thrilling Tale. The Robbers Seemed to De Pretty Good Fellows at Heart-How They Got Into the "Burglar Proof" Safe. Express Messenger M. M. Weist, who was blown up by the train robbers near tinued movement at a speed of 90 or 100 Kendallville, Ind., had just returned from a miles an hour impossible, unless the weight trip over the Lake Shore road, and very readily told of his thrilling experience in the famous robbery. He has lived in Buf-

we were rolling along at a good lively rate. My assistant, B. B. Hamlin, and myelf were alone in the car. It was about 1:30 in the morning. The lights were turned low, and most of the passengers back in the coaches and sleepers were asleep. Just as we were approaching the switch at Kessler the emergency brakes were suddenly applied with great force, and the train came to a quick stop. I opened the door of the car and looked ahead. I saw at once that which caused the engineer to stop so suddenly. Before I had time to look a second time or shout to the engineer "crack." 'bang," sounded a pistol shot by the engine, and I knew what was the matter.

'They're after us," I said to Hamlin, and closed the door and fastened it as quickly as possible. Then I went to the local safe and took out a bag of currency and all the by Mr. Behr in a pamphlet advocating the valuables I could get hold of and threw them over among the boxes and packages in the freight end of the car. That was the last I knew for some time. When I recovered consciousness, I was lying on the floor of the car, and two of the robbers were inside at work.

Immediately after stopping the train they had placed a dynamite bomb on the outside sill of the car door, and the explosion, the great concussion, is what made me unconscious. When I came to, as I To speak accurately, this is not a single said, two of them were inside and had the rail, but a treble rail line, although the lamps lighted. them as I staggered up to a half standing position. It was the tall one-the leaderwho spoke. "I see you are," said I.

"Where is the money?" he asked. "In the large safe, most of it," I replied.

"What I have is in the local safe."
"Well, I want it," he said. I threw the door open and told him to help himself. "There is nothing in there to amount to anything but 'nigger' jewelry and valuable papers," I said as I opened the door.
"Well, I'll see, and d—d quick too," he replied, and began to pull the things out allowed.

I want to explain to you that there are two safes in an express car. One is the staionary safe, which has all the greatest valcables, and the local safe, in which we carry things of less value and small amounts of money. We always call all jewelry "nigger" jewelry. out two orthree packages, and after breaking them open and fliding no money in them seemed to fly into a most furious cage. The jewelry he didn't want and threw it on the floor. In some of the packiges there was some railroad money, but Le didn't know where to look for it and so didn't find it. Then he turned to me, and with the most frightful oath that I ever eard asked me, "Where is the money?" "In there," I said, turning to the station-

"Open it," he demanded.

"I can't," said I. "Then you open it," he said, turning to

"Well, I'll open it d-d quick," he crowled and ordered some one outside the ar to get him a pickax. At this point I asked him if I might pick up the freight bills that he had thrown about on the floor, and he gave me the privilege. I gathered them up, and we talked all the time. By that time he had got a sledge hammer and old his partner to order us to the rear of he car and allow us to make a barricade of the freight boxes. I did not know what his was for at first, but I soon saw, It was to protect us from the explosion when he lew open the safe. We made a little baricade, and the watcher got behind it with s, keeping us covered with a winchester rifle all the time.

He put four cartridges in the safe before he blew it open sufficiently to suit him. I know that he must have been an expert safe blower because I was told that the safe was burglar proof, but he opened it. While he was working at it I aid to him: 'You're making a pretty long ob of this. If you don't get away pretty soon, there'll be a posse down here from Kendallville.'

"Never mind," he replied; "when the posse comes we'll go," and he said it just as oolly as I do now. After the safe was opened he took out the ags of money, and turning to his comanion said, "Tom, come on." He got out of the car first, and then Tom backed out, eeping us covered with his winchester all the time. They were at work in the car ust 30 minutes, but we were delayed an

50 miles an hour, and that the same thing might be said of the United States. No doubt engineers have demonstrated on the English Great Northern railway and on our New York Central that a short section of straight track can be traversed much more rapidly, but it has come to be accepted as an axiom that under existing mechanical conditions the rate mentioned is the highest speed consistent with safety.

What are the conditions which have imposed this conclusion? It is the curves of the existing lines which render long con of engines and trains should be increased far beyond what the bridges and roadbed would bear. In the absence of such an increase of weight and strength, which is ecomessenger on the Lake Shore road for 13 nomically impracticable, a 100 mile express years. curve. The fact is familiar to every com petent engineer. He knows the mathematical relation of curves to speed. He knows, for instance, that the force tending at a given curve to throw off the rails a train moving at the rate of 150 miles an hour would be about 61/4 times greater than that which a train resists when running at 60 miles an hour. It follows that the existing lines must be both straightened and strengthened if the present average speed the red switch light was turned on us, of express trains is to be materially height> ened. Such straightening and strengthening is practically out of the question, owing to the tremendous outlay that would be in volved. Is there, then, any way of obtaining new rates of speed on the old routes? It appears from the London Spectator that ery field supports a whole villageful of this question is answered in the affirmative application to existing routes of the Lartigue single rail system. In this system, which, as we shall see, is no visionary scheme, but is actually in operation, the cars sit astride a single rail raised to a height of four feet from the ground or steel trestles, on either side of which, but

21/4 feet lower, is a small guide rail. The wheels on which the cars run move on the central rail, while the guide rails on each side are gripped by smaller wheels. hard work is done on the raised central rail. broken by the shock, and as the car was | But whatever name should be given to the curity of the cars, mounted on the central from unconsciousness and see those two rail saddle, with the guide rails serving as stirrups, are such that is almost impossible smoky light. When curves are encountered, the rail is canted transversely to a degree calculated to neu ing does not suffice the surplus of centrifu gal tendency is counteracted by the joint action of the central rail and inner guide rail.

As we have said, the Lartigue system is no untried proposal. It is now working for a short distance, 91/2 miles, from Listowel to Ballybunion in Ireland, and an application of the principle on a much larger scale has been made in the department of the Loire in France. The calculations relating to the stability and safety of cars run on this plan go to show that, even for a speed of 150 miles an hour, the demand made upon the Lartigue lines would not exceed, in the case of the most unfavorable curve, the normal limit of strain at present

If these claims can be sustained, it seems clear that the Lartigue system may render unprecedented rates of speed not only mechanically but financially possible, for the single rail can be laid side by side with the present lines on the existing routes. The inancial difficulty which would be presented, were new routes required, being elimi nated, the provision of an adequate motor power need not stop the way. Mr. Behr estimates that the cost of constructing on either side of the existing main line from London to Brighton a Lartigue line to be But to get back to the robber. It is the entire drama of nature on a small scale underground - remorseless, self centered, unfeeling as ever. Worms exist, and exist in thousands, because there are myriads and myriads of dead leaves for them to live upon. Almost every dead leaf that falls from tree or shrub or weed or herb except in autumn (when the supply all at once immensely outruns the demand) they carry underground and bury or devour with ceaseless industry. In doing so they create and keep up the layer of egetable mold on the surface of the earth, which alone makes plant life, and especial

I have never seen such hair raising, mania producing drinks used anywhere as I am obliged to hand over this bar every day. Nearly every man drinks mixed drinks, and most men have a mixture of their own. I've got to such a state now that if a man should come to me and say, Mix me a little tomato catchup and champagne,' I would mix it without lifting an eyebrow.

"Take queer drinks, do they?" asked the man who was dallying with a little sherry and Rhine wine mixed. "Well, I should say they did. The men of this town make me tired. They don't know how to drink-that is to say, a good lantern jawed young fellow came in and asked me for a little ginger ale and port wine. I looked over at him and listened. He said, 'I want a little ginger ale and port wine, and I want it mixed, and I want it quick. See?' I saw and handed it out. Then another fellow came in and asked me for some Tom gin and a dash of hard cider. His Thievings Cover a Wide Field, From

Canned Goods to a Tombstone. Kansas City has developed one of the most unique thieves that has yet been heard of in real life. Several months ago the police force learned that a sneak thief was making depredations upon cellars and pantries and even on outlying grocery stores, and carrying off canned goods and such eatables as were not perishable.

There were certain peculiarities about the robberies that led the police to believe that they were all done by the same person, but there was no clew that they could follow to catch the thief. After amassing a goodly quantity of food on which to start to housekeeping the thief began on fuel, and whole cartloads were carried away, each case showing the evidences of the food thief. When a full portion of them. First day I was here a supply of coal was taken, the thief turned his attention to furniture and carried off articles of all kinds, from light chairs to a heavy bedstead with mattresses. An entire bedroom set was taken from a house and no trace left. The family was absent for a night, and on their return they found their room despoiled. Having furnished his bedroom and parlors, the depredator set about getting his kitchen in order, and first an ice chest was taken from a house in Armourdale, and then a cooking stove and kitchen table from a house in Rosedale. By this time the police were fully alive to the fact that the stealing was going on right under their noses, and they be gan to talk about the queer thief. This attention seems to have flattered the thief, for he signalized his presence next by carrying off a large baseburner stove from a parlor in Kansas City, Kan., while the family were spending the even-

A Cherokee Strlp Romance. Yesterday Joseph K. Bracken of Memphis and Miss Lillie McGlashin of Stillwater, O. T., came to this city and were married by the probate judge. The young lady had secured a fine claim the judge told her that if she got married she would probably lose the claim. She laughingly replied that she would sooner have a man than a claim any day, ance of being exact. She came into the and the ceremony proceeded. It afterward came out that the couple first met on the day of the strip opening, when he stopped to help her drive a couple of sooners off the claim she had staked. He then went on, but because of the delay failed to get a claim, and finally returned to claim the girl he left behind him. After they had been married they returned to Perry, and the happy groom at once filed a contest on the claim taken by his bride, so if the department does decide that she cannot hold it he will It took her some time to gather up her get it, and it will still be in the family.
