Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children." Du. G. C. Osgood

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria in stead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Starr'd heavenly life!
-New York Ledger.

A couple of years ago my husband and I chanced to be spending a winter in Vicksburg. The house we rented was near a nice old fashioned market, where I went as much for an occasional chat with the proprietor as for the very good things she sold me. She was a stout, brisk old French woman, a widow, Mme. Auguste Dieulouard by name, rather German in appearance, but very French in her manners as she talked from behind her bars or bustled about her shop, directing and sometimes scolding her underlings. She was delighted, the first day I went to market, to have me speak French to her, and soon we were quite intimate. Before the winter was over and I had returned to New York she had told me, bit by bit, a great deal of the story of her life. Translated from her queer half German patois and pieced together, it ran somewhat as follows: "I was born in 1830, in Lure, near er my mother died I lived with my grandmother. When my grandmother died, I could not go back to my father, for he had married again, had a large family and was very poor. Some of our neighbors were coming to America, and I came with them. We took a sailing vessel to New Orleans, and the voyage lasted 44 days. Two years after for there, talking to Mrs. Paxton, was reaching New Orleans I married a young Frenchman who had a nice little the same as when he left me eight years sum of money. Then my troubles began, for he would not have a settled home, as I wished, but wanted to travel all the time. I kept him in New Where have you been for eight years? At the end of the siege Yankee doctors and nurses took charge of the hospitals, and I had no work and no money. Some of my neighbors were without money and food and came in to see me and said: 'Madaine, what shall we do? We are starving.' I said, 'Go home and I will think what to do.' Then I was offered rations. 'Rations for what?' I asked. he wanted to see her, and asked how to 'I am no Yankee soldier. Why should I take rations of you?' Then I said to the neighbors: 'We will make beer. Get me two barrels of water, some it was really his Mrs. 'Guste, and if I yeast, hops, molasses and corn. When would be glad to see him. the Yankee's whisky is gone, he will be glad to drink my beer and will have to pay for it.' Sometimes he did not pay, but mostly he did, and we lived a year by making beer. "There was military law in Vicksfeeling against him. I think he was the meanest man that ever lived. I knew everybody hated him. One day l permit to open a store.' Every one said, 'He is too mean to give you one.' 1 said, 'I will try.' I went to him and said very politely, 'General D., I want a permit to open a store.' He asked 'Why should I give you a permit?' I said, 'Because I must make some money to live.' He said, 'Are you Irish?' 'No.' 'Are you Dutch?' 'No.' 'Are you German?' 'No.' 'Are you French?' Yes.' 'Then go to Napoleon for a permit.

"After awhile General D. left Vicksburg, and General S. was in command. One morning I went to see him. He in Vicksburg I will support you and will was lying on a couch. I asked him for a permit. He said: 'My good woman, morning. I get up at 4 and will not you shall have one if you will get me have my business meddled with. And I pen and paper from the next room. 1 have been at a ball all night and could not get up for the president.' General S. was not so bad for a Yankee. But General Grant was the nicest Yankee I that the Dutch guilds, the most ancient ever saw. His headquarters were on of workingmen's organizations, had the river, but we often saw him in their origin in drinking guilds which, Vicksburg, and he used to walk about although they did not, as in the case of and talk to the people. He was very | the Greeks and Romans, exalt drink to kind, and every one liked him. One the rank of a deity, made it a kind of day he came into my store with a civic dignitary. 'That pie is named aft- held that men who worked together er the great Washington whose memory all good Americans adore,' I replied. 'That is good,' said he; 'how much is a slice of Washington pie?' I said, 'Some slices are 10 cents, but some l cut are 5 cents.' He said to the officer: 'I am so hungry I believe I could eat a conclusion of his dictionary to Millar, 10 cent slice, could not you? "The war was over, and I had never heard from my husband and thought he must be dead. I was doing well in my store. I bought all my things in great quantities and sold them well. I had many friends and was much respected. I remember very well that one day a nigger came into my store and said, 'Have you got any cheap cigars?' I gave him one and said, 'This is 5 cents.' He bit it and then threw it into my face, crying, 'Have you nothing better for me than that?' 'Yes, I have something better for you, 'I said, and I hit him over the mouth and nose with a poker, and he rushed howling and bleeding into the street. In half an hour a corporal and two soldiers came in and arrested me. I laughed and said: 'You must allow me time to put on my bonnet and lock up my store. Then I will go with you with pleasure.' When we got to the provost, he said, 'Why, Mrs. 'Guste, I am surprised to see you What possible complaint can there be against you?' When he had heard my story as well as the nigger's, he told me to go back to my store and said very severely to the nigger: 'Is this the use you make of your liberty? Go home and behave like a white man if you can. "Four years more went by, and I was sure my husband was dead. I was well off, had a large market where I employed six men and was fast growing rich. I had many offers to change my name, but I always gave the same answer to all, 'Thank you, sir, for the compliment, but I prefer to support only myself and do not care for the luxury of a husband.' 'One day a Mr. Paxton, whose wife I knew, came in and said, 'Come up to our house.' 'I have no time,' I said. What is the matter? Is your wife sick?' He said, 'No, she is not sick, Alsace, in the old Franche Comte. Aftbut there is a man there who wants to see you.' I said, 'Well, then, let him come and see me.' Mr. Paxton begged so hard and I got so curious that I put on my bonnet-my old bonnet, for 1 would not dress up for any man who would not take the trouble to come and see me-and went home with him to his house. I grew cold and felt faint, Auguste-my husband-looking just before. My heart beat like a hammer, but I just said: 'Well, so you are alive and have turned up at last, have you? Have you had a good time and been this morning? It is half past 7, and"traveling all over the world?' 'Oh, Jo-

Peter Carter pushed his chair back from the table and surveyed the faded little face on the opposite side of the tea

Faded enough now, though she was barely 27. You would hardly have believed how fresh and pretty Carry Carver had been on her wedding day. Her husband saw the change, but somehow he supposed all women faded just so. "There is so much to do, Peter, and the children demand so much of time," pleaded the meek wife.

"If I were manager in this household. things would happen very differently." "I have no doubt of it," said Carry quietly. "There is no earthly reason," went on Mr. Carver, ignoring the sarcastic meaning of her tone, "why the work shouldn't be done and you dressed and enjoying yourself, cultivating your mind or something, at 11 o'clock every morning that you live. Washing up a few dishes, sweeping a room or two-what does it all amount to? Why, my dear, don't you see the folly of asking for a servant to help you do nothing at all?"

The morning sunshine crept down the pale green wall paper, sprinkling drops of gold on the few little geranium plants that Peter called a "waste of time" and lay in noon splendors on the carpet, and still Carry Carver stood there, thinkingthinking.

"Carry! Aren't you going to get up "I cannot, Peter," groaned Carry, turning her face away from the light. "I am suffering such dreadful pains in that foot mopping his wet forehead with the stove "It won't go. I'll have a blaze of kindling and try the breakfast on that." He seized the ham and carved several thick slices, which he transferred deftly to a gridiron, and then, elated with his success, broke several eggs over the ham. "Bless me, how they run!" he ejaculated, rather puzzled. "But I know I'm right. I wonder why this coffee doesn't boil. Ill stick in a few more kindlings -that's the idea. There are the children crying-hungry, I suppose. I do believe they do nothing but eat and cry." Mr. Carver rushed to attend the peremptory summons of the milkman. And then he sat down, tired and spiritless, to a repast of half cooked meat and liquid mud, by courtesy termed cof-

the door. "Up stairs and down stairs" went Pe ter Carver, laying hands on whatever he considered proper prey for the washtub, rummaging in bureau drawers, upheaving the contents of trunks and turning wardrobes inside out for a mortal hour before he had completed the requisite search. The kitchen was empty when he returned. "Where are the children?" was his first alarmed thought, expressing itself unconsciously in words. "I saw 'em go out of the door, please, sir," said the washerwoman's little girl. The July sun was beginning to glow intensely in the heavens. The pavements reflected the ardent shine with tenfold heat, and poor Peter Carver was nearly melted ere he espied his hopeful son and heir, with Pet following. Neither of them would walk-in fact, the little wanderers were far too weary -so Mr. Carver mounted one on each arm and carried them, limp and unresisting, through the streets. "I'll have a nurse for you, my young friends, before the world is a day older.' he said, grinding his teeth with impotent wrath as he deposited Pet and Tommy on the floor and went wearily to his household duties. "How are you now, Carry?" he said about an hour afterward, throwing him self into a chair by her bedside and fanning himself with the newspaper he had laid there that morning. "About the same, dear. How does the housekeeping get along?"

"It don't get along at all." "Is dinner ready?" "Dinner?" echoed Peter in a sort of dismayed tone. "Why. I haven't got through with breakfast yet!" "But it is 12 o'clock." "I don't care if it's 25 o'clock-a man can't do 40 things at once.'

"Where are the children?" asked his wife "In bed. They were too much for me, so I undressed 'em and put 'em to bed to get them out of the way. "Poor things," said Carry. "Poor me, I should think," said Carver irately. I had quite enough to do without 'em. I've broken the plates, and melted off the nose of the teapot, and lost my diamond ring in the ash barrel, and cut my fingers with the carving knife.' "Have you looked after the pickles and baked fresh pies?" "No! "Nor blackened the range, nor cleaned don't mean to say that you do all these things every day?" "I do, most certainly-and long before 12 o'clock. And yet you wonder that I am not dressed and cultivating my mind before 11 o'clock."

"My dear Carry," said Peter penitent-"I have been a brute. I'll have a cook and a nurse and a chambermaid here just as soon as I can possibly obtain them. You shall be a drudge no longer." A few minutes afterward the unskilled cook was scorching his whiskers over a gridiron covered with hissing mutton chops, which would alarm him by suddealy blazing up into his face without you can help it. I have such a racking the least premonitory symptom, when a light step crossed the kitchen floor and a little hand took the handle of the gridiron from his grasp. "Carry!"

> "I release you from duty," smiled the wife. "My ankle is better now." "I say, Carry!" "Well?"

Bird Slaughter. An American dealer sold last year 2,000,000 birdskins. All were used for ornamenting woman's attire. Women ought to cry down this vanity that feeds and pampers the destruction of the feathered tribes. The birds sacrificed are of course those of richest plumage, and of course also those that will be least easily replaced. In fact, if this thing continues, American bird life of the gentler order will pretty soon become extinct. Is not the warfare the American Humane society has opened upon the birdskin traffic wholly justifiable? We think so. The destruction referred to contributes not one whit to human need or human comfort. It adds nothing to the intellectual, nothing to the mental. It is simply wantonness practiced at the beck of fashion, and as silly and meaningless a fashion, too, as ever was spawned from the brain of a man milliner. There are birds in plenty that shed their plumage to supply the vain demand for flaming headgear. Why should the fashion monarchs be inexorable and also demand the bodies of our feathered songsters? - Sacramento

The Female Allantus.

Mr. C. F. Saunders of Philadelphia justly calls attention to the great beauty of this tree. The male ailantus first disgusts by its disagreeable odor, and then the flowers fall, leaving nothing more behind them. But the female flowers have a rather pleasant fragrance and are followed by the fruit, which soon takes on a beautiful golden color. Most will agree with him that there are few things more beautiful than the female ailantus with its young fruit during the months of August and September. By the way, the name is ailantus and not ailanthus, as frequently writ. ten, the tree being named from the Chinese "ailanto." -- Meehan's Monthly.

GOOD FOR EVIL.

"Jessie," said Anton Mosby, the forester, to his daughter, "why do you persist in your friendship for our boarder, Hayes, when you know I don't like him? I've warned you often enough. When a man is ashamed to tell his business, it doesn't take much discernment to see that something is wrong. He has been in our house now about five weeks and during the whole time has not hinted a word as to the meaning of his trips into the woods. Yesterday I saw him prowling about the old quarry, but when I asked him what he was after he said he was looking for game. A fikely place indeed to find anything to

"Father," said the daughter, "Mr. Hayes has always treated me like a gentleman, and as there is no other company here I don't see what harm can come from talking with him."

"I know that it is lonesome here, Jessie, with no one but me for company, and when we can afford it we shall go where you can have better advantages, but that fellow Haves is not the right kind, and I don't want you to have anything at all to do with him. I've left word with Dick to have his horse ready when he gets back, for he has got to leave this place today. Of course I've got no proof that he is a bad one, but it is easy enough to see. Look at his brace of pistols. I tell you a rifle is good enough here against anything but the sheriff's posse. But I must go; remember what I say and don't look for me back before night," and Mosby turned away.

Anton Mosby's occupation was to protect a large section of pine timber owned by an eastern company from encroachments by rival firms and necessitated long tramps along the boundaries of the great forest estate. His home was located in a small clearing not large enough to escape the shadows of the trees for more than half of the day. The nearest village was a lumbering town about 15 miles distant. From this village ran a narrow, scraggy road out into the forest, past Mosby's house, and then at the distance of a mile or so divided, one branch turning south and leading somewhere in the direction of rivilization, the other running several suiles northward and ending in an old quarry which was dug in the side of a rocky ledge.

After Mosby's departure Jessie went on with her work indoors with a heavy heart. Her father's suspicion that the man Haves, who had been sojourning with them, was only a refugee from een very obliging about the house, had looks in his saddlebags and sometimes read aloud to her, which was a matter of real entertainment, and while she did not care for him she felt extremely sorry for the treatment he received at her father's hands. She had to confess, sas a queer place for a man to come whose only occupation was pleasure.

Her father had an idea that some day an officer of the law would ride into their little clearing and demand a pris- at home and Jessie by his side. It was a suspicion of emquestioned as to his business that first 1.d Mosby to observe his actions, and his preference for the old quarry road, which was rough and swampy and led through a tangled growth of under- and I do not blame you. These suspicions made Mosby, natarally a hospitable man, cold and sa- ner in a firm which expects to establish tirical, and many an arrow of sarcasm a mine in this vicinity and came here Haves usually seemed perfectly oblivtous of their meaning, a fact which only further determined Mosby in the belief that he was a bad one.

The season had been exceedingly dry. for nearly a month not a drop of rain had fallen. The sand lay in drifts in the middle of the road and blew away from the roots of the trees. During the previous weeks a great fire had been raging to the northward, several towns | ship. being razed to the ground and a wide stretch of timber ruined. The ledge of asked Hayes. rocks referred to ran in a crescent and the country over which Mosby presided

This great northern section, however, where the fires had been so destructive, | it in front of the old man. was inhabited by wolves, which now, goaded by fire and hunger, sought safety to the southward. Mosby saw them | mean?' frequently, and their baying could be heard at night while prowling through the woods in search of food.

When Mosby went on the tramp, he invariably took his rifle with him, hoping to obtain enough pelts during the season for a robe.

"Wolves," he used to say to Hayes, "are about all the game you will find about these quarters, but if you want to kill any you'd better throw away your six shooters and get a rifle, for all the things are good for is to kill men, and I reckon the people around here are peaceable lot. Of course, it might be a good thing if one wanted to escape from a constable, but we are presuming that you want to kill animals." But I is arguments as to the relative merits and uses of the two weapons had little effect on Hayes, who still continued to carry the pistols and make excursions not into the woods-where, Mosby venfored, "there might be a stray deer if ane happened to see it'-but toward the gnarry and the hills. Whether Mosby wanted to keep watch of his strange boarder's actions that day or whether his business led in that direction we cannot say, but he spent the afternoon exploring the timber abouting the highlands. His observations were quite minute, and the sun 3 as beginning to redden the clouds in he west when he started for home, and by the time he reached the road it had i come unite dark. He had about aj ht miles to cover, but the way was so rough that he made slow progress. Here and there a moonbeam glistened on a sandy opening, but for the greater part of the time the foliage of the trees entirely obstructed the light, so he slumped wearily along, musing upon the events of the previous weeks and wondering where Hayes had gone to spend the night.

A warm breeze swayed the tops of the huge pines; this and the sticks which crackled under his feet were all that broke the silence of the night-all until from the distance came suddenly to his ears the hoarse baying of a wolf. From time to time it was repeated, until from another direction arose an answering howl, prolonged and mournful.

Mosby plodded along, giving little heed except wishing that he could get a sight on one of the varmints in a bright spot of moonlight. The howling of the wolves gradually became more frequent and began to sound nearer and nearer. Mosby came to a halt and examined the condition of his gun, and then, although feeling that the rifle insured his safety, began to hasten his steps. By the time he had covered another half mile he knew that there was danger behind, for the weird sounds had increased into a din and an uproar. They were evidently on his trail and rapidly approaching, dozens of them perhaps, courageous at last from strength of number. He realized that there would be scant time for reloading a gun after once firing and looked about for a tree which he could climb and pick them off one at a time, but where there were trees the darkness was so deep that the project had to be abandoned as impracticable, and he could not endure the thought of remaining a prisoner all night in the uncomfortable branches of a pine tree on account of a few wolves. This decision was scarcely reached when he would gladly have changed it, for a moment later the wolves reached the road behind him and were coming along at long leaps, filling the air with their mournful screams.

Mosby, still cool and confident, raised his rifle to his shoulder. A gray form flashed in the light a little distance away, and he fired. The howling of the pack suddenly ceased as one of their number rolled in the sand, and Mosby, after reloading, started on a trot toward a small opening. Before he reached it they were in pursuit again.

Mosby fired again, but missed his aim. For a moment they hesitated. their eyes shining in the darkness, and then gnashing their fangs rushed forward into the light. Mosby's heavy rifle whirled around his head and descended on the skull of the foremost wolf, but the beasts, crazed with hunger, had lost all fear, and Mosby saw that he had met his fate. A wave of sorrow for poor Jessie, left all alone in such a country, welled up in his heart, and then, gritting his teeth in anger, he justice, pained her. He had always grasped his gun stock tighter and struck again. This blow was his last, for the next instant he was borne to the ground. Bang! bang! suddenly rang through the forest. A wolf with his fangs buried in Mosby's arm released his hold; another tearing furiously at his breast fell dead. The air resounded Lowever, on thinking it over, that it with quick reports, and Mosby, weak and almost dying, saw the suspicious boarder rush into the fray, a repeater in each hand.

The "Growing Hand" For Plants. "It seems incredible," said George Marsh to the corridor man at the Laclede, "that there should be such a thing as 'a growing hand' in the planting of flowers and other plants, but it is recognized even by florists, and it has grown to have a regular name. Some people will read directions for preparing the soil and planting the seed or slips and follow them faithfully, and yet nothing will grow, or if it grows at all it will be stunted and almost worthless, while another, without half the care and trouble, will have everything live and thrive.

"I saw a little girl bring back what appeared to be worthless sticks of some plants which she had found in the woods. Cold Bridle Bits. During the bitter cold weather in winter much suffering is thoughtlessly inflicted on horses by putting cold bridle bits into their mouths. If the person who does this will apply his tongue to a piece of iron on a frosty morning, he will understand at once what the suffering to the poor brutes is. To slightly warm the bits before putting them into the horse's mouth would require only a small expenditure of labor. This can be done by rubbing them with a blanket or other cloth a moment or two if other means of warming is not at hand. The beneficial results in the gentleness of the animal will amply compensate it.—Detroit Free

Counterfeit Coins.

Within the last few years numbers of forgeries of extremely rare coins in the British museum and in private collections have been sold by auction in London. So good is their execution that it seems probable that means have been devised for casting steel dies on plaster casts or of hardening electrotype dies. The manufacture of rare "siege pieces," carried on in one of our midland towns, shows a far lower amount of skill.

When genuine but defaced coins are restruck with new impressions, it is very difficult to discover the fraud. Some genuine ancient coins are surfrappees in this manner—as, for instance, a whole class of Jewish coins which are struck on Roman silver denarii. With this warclub he hits | Leave Braceville for Frederick, at 8.05 and 10.52 his opponent as hard a blow as his strength will permit. The injured man then picks up the club and hits back, and the blows alternate until one brave or the other has had enough and declines to pick up the club again. The punishment inflicted by these clubs is frightful, every blow bring ing blood and causing deep cuts and bruis -Cincinnati Enquirer.

The shah of Persia has five sons and 1 daughters. His three married sons have 21 children. The Persian official year book mentions in the royal family three brothers and two sisters of the shab, while the uncles greatuncles and the cousins number 140.

The inhabitants of Thibet are the dirtiest Allays Pain and people on the earth. Not only do they never wash, but when once full growth has been attained they never take their clothes off. When the garments they wear become old, others are put over them.

Caged lions and tigers, pumas and jaguar take no notice of the men and women pass ing in front of them, but let a dog be brough anywhere near the cage and they show their savage nature at once and spring up, glar ing out savagely.

look, just brimming over with good humor. In a corner of the car a young woman was sitting with a baby on her lap. The baby looked just as happy as the fat man and laughed and cooed in a way that brought admiring glances from every one else in the car.

Fatty meant well. His good nature prompted him to help the baby along and make it still happier. So he smiled at it, chucked it under the chin, clapped his hands, made faces and in fact did everything that the average man thinks will make an infant laugh.

Baby took it all in good part for awhile and really seemed to enjoy its playmate's antics. Then it branched out. It grabbed his watch chain. Mamma said, "No, baby mustn't." But baby must and would. Fatty said all right, and the little one played with the chain for awhile. Then it wanted the watch, and failing to get this it made a grab for Fatty's whiskers. This was more than he bargained for.

He changed his seat and looked over at baby and smilingly said "Boo!" Baby looked sour. Fatty made a face at it and said "Boo!" once more, at which baby set up a howl, and thereafter pandemonium reigned in that car. The mother looked at top of the car.
