

Baltimore Centennial Exposition.

Our readers have no doubt seen mentioned in the papers something about the Great Exposition which is to be held in Baltimore during 1897.

It would be well for them to note that it is a State affair, in which all the counties are expected to take part, and be largely represented by their various industries, and to show off their different advantages. And this huge undertaking, although inaugurated by our city friends, to be a perfect success, must have the whole-hearted support of all the people of the State; so we must be up and doing, that we may show off the State's many attractions in the most thorough way; also that many of the millions of people who will visit this great exposition will come to believe as every true Marylander always maintains. That is, our State is not only a good place to be born in, or to die in, but the very best place to live in.

This Great Big Exposition in plain words is to be a great advertisement for our State; and the rivalry among the different States in the Union for supremacy is so great, these expositions or advertisements are a necessity.

In the past we have been too modest. The Great West was built up by showing its advantages to the people of other sections and foreign countries. Owing to the fact of hard climates, low prices for agricultural products, and long distances from foreign or consuming markets, the tide of immigration is changing, and the South is putting forth many schemes that are attractive to get new people to its sections.

Why should not Maryland have its share of new people also? It can, if we only let other people know what we have to offer. The coming Baltimore Centennial is our opportunity; let's embrace it. We are glad to know with each day its scope broadens, and already many foreign manufacturers are enquiring about space for their exhibits, and even foreign governments, through their ambassadors and ministers in Washington, are looking the matter up, so their respective countries can be properly represented.

It is confidently asserted if the people of the State put their shoulders to the wheel, work with unity, and help the project along, that in 1897 our visitors, who will come from every country in the world, will see an exposition only second to the World's Fair, held last year in Chicago. The people coming will have to be fed; they will consume a great deal. We in the country districts must supply the food. Baltimore is our natural market, therefore the direct results in cash from the Baltimore Centennial can be counted in millions.

The Death of a Hero.

On last Sunday the death of John Jackson was reported at the House of Correction, at Annapolis. Jackson was famous for having performed one of the most heroic actions of the civil war. The progress of the Union fleet up the Savannah River was impeded by a torpedo placed in a very narrow channel, and communicating with the shore by a wire. Jackson swam to the torpedo and took off the cap, rendering it harmless. He was given a medal for this gallant conduct, and was always treated with much consideration by the government authorities. Drink was his ruin, and after spending much of his time in jail, he finally drifted into the House of correction.

Two Children Kidnapped.

The domestic discord in the family of Dr. A. H. Glennan, of Washington, D. C., had a violent sequel early Tuesday morning when Arthur and Kenneth, the two eldest children, were forcibly taken from their sleeping apartments in the home of their mother by a party of unknown men, instigated, Mrs. Glennan asserts, by her husband. Dr. and Mrs. Glennan have not lived together for about three years. The doctor attempted to secure possession of the children through the courts, but failed. He is a surgeon in the Marine Hospital Service, and his wife was formerly Miss Susie Rayner, daughter of Joseph K. Rayner, at one time a congressman from North Carolina. Mrs. Glennan and her two sons have been occupying rooms on the third floor of a boarding house, and early Tuesday morning the mother was awakened by the breaking in of the doors leading to her sons' rooms. She screamed but before occupants of the house were aroused the children were seized and taken to carriages in waiting. Four men were in the party, and Mrs. Glennan alleges that one of the men was her husband. The police have been notified, and are searching for the children and their abductors.

Further developments give the affair another aspect. It is alleged in a bill of divorce filed Tuesday that Dr. Glennan Monday night found his wife in a compromising position with a commercial traveler, and that it was upon this discovery that he took the children from her custody.—American.

A friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm and after using it six weeks I believe myself cured of catarrh. It is a most valuable remedy.—Joseph Stewart, 624 Grand Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

My son was afflicted with catarrh, I induced him to try Ely's Cream Balm and the disagreeable catarrh all left him. He appears as well as any one.—J. C. Olmstead, Arrola, Ill.

Price of Cream Balm is fifty cents.

Two Men Killed.

Shortly after mid-night Thursday J. H. Jones, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., and a brakeman on the Western Maryland Railroad, met with almost instant death in the company's yard at Hagerstown. His train having entered the yard, the engine was detached and started down the track to the water tank. Jones walked down the track to open the switch in front of the moving engine, when in some manner he was struck by the pilot and thrown under the wheels, which passed over his body, cutting him almost in two. He lived only a few moments. The deceased was 22 years of age.

Henry Ott, a married man of Shippensburg, attended the Carlisle fair Tuesday. At Newville he left the train on the Cumberland Valley Railroad to get a drink in a nearby saloon. Returning he found the train in motion. He attempted to board it and fell under the wheels and an arm and leg cut off, from the effects of which he has since died. He was aged 42 years, a blacksmith by occupation and a man of family.

W. M. Railroad Earnings.

President Hood, of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, has sent to Mayor Latrobe a statement of the earnings gross and net, and the expenses of the system for August as compared with the same month of last year. A highly gratifying increase in the net receipts is shown.

The report is as follows:

Approximate statement of earnings and expenses of the Western Maryland Railroad for August 1894, with comparison for the same month of previous year:

Gross earnings, 1894, $146,901.09; 1893, $130,473.30; decrease, $16,427.79; expenses, 1894, $61,862.23; 1893, $71,801.09; decrease, $2,938.76; net earnings, 1894, $75,038.76; 1893, $58,672.21; increase, $16,366.55.

For the 11 months ended August 31, compared with same months of previous fiscal year (August approximated): Gross earnings, 1893-94, $1,070,278.04; 1892-93, $1,085,590.53; decrease, $15,312.49; expenses, 1893-94, $706,342.84; 1892-93, $745,677.22; decrease, $37,335.38; net earnings, 1893-94, $361,935.20; 1892-93, $339,913.31; increase, $22,021.89.

Little Willie Carback Found.

There is joy in the Carback household, at Bengies, Md. Little Willie, who mysteriously disappeared on Saturday has been found. He was discovered near Wheeler's Creek, two miles from home, at half-past eleven o'clock Monday. Beyond a ravenous appetite and a slightly swollen foot, he is none the worse for his stay of two days and nights in the woods. It is not thought his exposure will result seriously, though he was wet to the skin when found. From appearances, it would seem that the babe had wandered down the country road about a mile and a half and then strayed into a blind road, from which he wandered to the place where he was found by Edward Brinkman, a boy thirteen years old. The footprints leading to this point indicate that the little fellow had covered considerable ground in his efforts to get back home. All hope of recovering the child alive had been abandoned, and the greatest astonishment is expressed by everyone over the child's remarkable powers of endurance.

Young Men Take Warning.

Alas, how prevalent are those distressing diseases and weaknesses which make young men prematurely old, pale, listless, low spirited, languid, easily tired, forgetful and incapable; fill mad-houses and swell the lists of suicides; separate husbands and wives; bring untold suffering to millions, even unto the third and fourth generations. The afflicted will recognize only too plainly to what class of maladies we refer. A complete and scientific treatise (sent only in plain sealed envelope) on receipt of ten cents, (the cost of postage), if inclosed with this notice to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

THE monuments of the Connecticut regiments for Antietam Battlefield are being put in position on the foundations built for them. Those for the Eight and Fourteenth Regiments are to be placed in Bloody Lane, that for the Sixteenth Regiment on Jacob Stine's farm, in a ten acre park, and that for the Eleventh Regiment in the same neighborhood. The unveiling or dedication ceremonies will be held on the 11th of next month.

JAMES BARRET, of near Bowmandale, has brought suit for slander against Mrs. Margaret Moser, widow of the late Associate Judge Moser and claims damages in the sum of $5,000. He charges that she said he had stolen her eggs and chickens and broken into her house during her absence at the World's Fair. James Barrett lived in York Springs for many years.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adopting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectively cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

End of a peculiar Life.

Capt. William A. Sinclair, of St. Peter's district, Somerset county, Md., died at the residence of B. P. Miles last week. In many respects Captain Sinclair led a peculiar life. For the past twenty years he made his home in a catboat, catching oysters and terrapins for subsistence. He would work in the Manokin river and Tangier sound during the day and would anchor in St. Peter's creek at night. There he was found about ten days ago in a very weak condition, and after much persuasion was induced to go to the residence of B. P. Miles, but firmly refused to have a physician visit him.

Veterans Murdered.

Friday was pension day at the Soldiers' Home, Dayton, Ohio. A few of them visited the dives in the vicinity of the institution and were robbed.

At 1 o'clock Saturday morning two old soldiers were found robbed and murdered and their bodies lying in the public road. Their names are Adolphus Corgan, Company P, Cuanel's Legion of Maryland, and John Barret, of the navy. The city police and detectives have fifty suspects looked up.

A number of veterans are missing from the home, but are expected to turn up all right.—Phila. Times.

The Human Body.

About one-twelfth of the entire weight of the human body is the blood, and this is the life fountain that nourishes and invigorates and cleanses all the rest of the anatomy. It penetrates through every tiny capillary, carrying health and vigor, and removing the waste tissues if the blood itself be pure and rich with red corpuscles. Otherwise the fountain is poisoned at its source. To increase the red corpuscles and carry new vitality to the very well-spring of life nothing equals

To cure this state of things, the above said wife and mother has only to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The cause will disappear promptly. The "Prescription" is a nerve and restorative tonic of wonderful efficacy and made for the alleviation of diseases peculiar to women. For nursing mothers and debilitated "run-down" women generally, it is the best restorative tonic and soothing nerve known. For those about to become mothers it is indeed, a priceless boon. It lessens the pains and perils of childbirth, shortens parturition, promotes the secretion of an abundance of nourishment for the child and shortens the period of confinement.

Tall Corn. Mr. John P. Bollinger, tenant on the Annan farm, about 24 miles south of town, exhibited at the Chronicle office, last Saturday three large stalks of corn, which measured respectively 12 feet 9 inches, 12 feet 7 inches and 12 feet 2 inches. Each stalk contains one ear of corn. The ears are 10, 9 and 10 inches in length.

Distribution of School Funds.

On Monday the comptroller of the treasury made the quarterly distribution of the public school tax to Baltimore city and the several counties of Maryland. The amounts are payable on and after the 10th inst. Frederick county will receive for white schools, $4,818.38; for colored schools $756.74.

WILLIAM BARR, a newsboy, was knocked from a train on Baltimore and Ohio avenue at Frederick last Thursday night, and was found several hours later lying along the track with his skull fractured, and his clothes covered with blood from a big gash in his scalp. He was removed to his home, where it was discovered that he had received other serious injuries.

That Joyful Feeling

With the exhilarating sense of renewed health and strength and internal cleanliness, which follows the use of Syrup of Figs, is unknown to the few who have not progressed beyond the old time medicines and the cheap substitutes sometimes offered but never accepted by the well informed.

Sale of a Montgomery Gold Field.

L. Walter Weed, of Montgomery county, has sold to the Bethesda Mining Company of Baltimore, the tract of land known as the "Huddleston Farm," near Bethesda, for $100,000, of which $5,500 is to be paid in cash, the balance within a year. Many fine specimens of gold have been found on this place recently, and it is the intention of the company to begin mining on an extensive scale.

Answered.

The advertisement which appeared in these columns a few weeks ago, offering a reward for the return to the Chronicle office, of a pocket book containing ten dollars, which was lost west of town, has been answered, and the purse and money delivered to the owner. The finder was Mr. Mahlon Reynolds, who received the reward.

Moral—If you lose anything, or have something to sell, or desire to make a purchase, advertise your wants in the CHRONICLE.

Death of Mr. Thomas Taggart.

Mr. Thomas Taggart, one of the most venerable and best known citizens of Hagerstown, died Monday night of brain trouble, aged about seventy-eight years. He was a native of Ireland, but nearly all his life resided in Hagerstown. He was a bachelor. Mr. Taggart was until recently a magistrate, and has been twice deputy sheriff. He was once a school teacher, and leaves a sister, Mrs. Ella Taggart, who now follows that vocation.

A Drunken Man's Mishap.

Samuel Dignam, who resides along the pike west of Hancock, while going home from the latter place in an intoxicated condition, Thursday night, fell over the wing at the bridge in the west end of Hancock and sustained serious injuries. His spine is affected and it is feared he is internally hurt. He was hauled home about midnight. Dignam is the man who shot Job Mann, a plasterer with whom he had a quarrel while Mann was plastering his house. Dignam used a shot gun and shattered Mann's jaw bone.—Torch Light.

October Registration.

During the October sitting of the register of voters for Emmitsburg District, which ended last evening, the registrar, Mr. E. S. Taney, registered 45 persons, and issued 14 transfers. On the "suspect list" are 42 persons, nearly all of whom will be taken from the list of qualified voters to-day. During the September and October sittings, 82 persons were registered, and 17 transfers issued, and if all the names on the "suspect list," are taken off, the number of disqualified will be 69, of which number ten are dead, making a total gain in the present registration of 13 voters.

Among the principle articles in the October number of the Electric Magazine we note the following: "Religion and Reform," by the Reverend Walter Walsh; "The Labor War in the United States," by J. S. Jeans; "Is our Race Degenerating?" by Dr. Hugh Percy Dunn, F. R. C. S.; "Records of an All-Around Man," by Mrs. Andrew Cross; "The Art of the Novelist," by Miss Amelia B. Edwards; and "The Work of Mr. Pater," by Lionel Johnson the well-known English critic. An interesting account of "Bookbinding, its Processes and Ideal," is from Mr. T. J. Cobden-Sanderson in the Fortnightly Review, and the lighter matter of the number is bright and entertaining.

A Young Lady Killed by Chloroform.

Miss Eva Duhamel, daughter of Samuel Duhamel, of near Earlville, Md., was found dead in bed last Friday morning from the effects of chloroform. Miss Duhamel the night before suffered with a severe headache, and to relieve it bathed her head with chloroform, and placed the bottle under her pillow. In some way during the night it became uncorked, and the liquid escaping, saturated the bed clothing around her head and killed her.

Another Room to be Added to the School Building.

Four members of the Committee, Maj. O. A. Horner, Messrs. Francis Maxwell, C. T. Zacharias and D. S. Gillelan, appointed by Mr. Chas. F. Rowe, chairman of the meeting of the patrons of the public school, held on Sept. 22 last to appear before the Board of County Commissioners, and urge upon them the necessity of enlarging the public school building now being erected here, went to Frederick on Tuesday and laid their claims before that body. The Commissioners after considering the claims of the committee for the addition of another room to the school house, decided to grant the same. They then made an appropriation of $612 to be used in erecting the third room, which together with a former appropriation of $1,088, makes the amount to be expended on the new school house $2,300. Mr. Calvin Walters who has the contract for erecting the two roomed building, has also received the contract to erect the additional room, and the work on the same has been begun. The building when completed will be a three-roomed one story house.

Hood's Pills cure constipation by restoring peristaltic action of the alimentary canal.

Young Deener Went West.

Albert Deener, son of Joseph Deener, of Brownsville, Washington county, whose disappearance from home with a horse and buggy last Monday has been causing considerable anxiety upon the part of his parents, was in Middle-town on Tuesday, and, after selling his horse and buggy, left for Frederick, where he took the train for the West. He stated that he wanted to go West, and had no further use for the team.

Must Pay Yearly Licenses.

An ordinance has been issued by the mayor and board of aldermen of Frederick compelling all owners of vehicles used for conveying passengers for a compensation to take out yearly licenses, ranging in cost from five to fifteen dollars each. This is done to protect the local liverymen, who meet with competition during the county fair and on other public occasions from hackmen who drive from points in Pennsylvania with their teams, and do a flourishing business.—American.

Westminster Electric Lighting.

The first blast of the steam whistle in the new plant of the Electric Light and Power Company of Westminster was heard last Wednesday morning. Steam was gotten up during the night in order to test the engine and boiler, and everything worked satisfactorily. The wiring of the town is going on rapidly and the company expect to be in full operation by the middle of October or perhaps, sooner. Then Westminster will have an electric-light plant equal to any of the smaller towns in the country.—Sun.

Attacked by a Mastiff.

The Rev. E. T. Helfenstein, rector of St. Mark's P. E. Church at Petersburg, while visiting in one of the neighboring towns in Washington county a few days ago, was the victim of an attack by a dog that came near resulting seriously. At a house at which he called a large mastiff had been fastened in the parlor to protect it from the flies, and the person who answered the door to admit Mr. Helfenstein, not thinking about the dog in the parlor, opened the door of that room. When the preacher stepped in, the dog sprang at him, jumping first at his neck and then seizing him by the hand and holding on so persistently that members of the family had to run their hands in his mouth to force him to open his jaws. The incident was a very thrilling one. Rev. Helfenstein's escape a very narrow one, as the dog is a large and powerful animal.—News.

Sudden Death.

Richard A. Virts, an employee in the blacksmith shop on the Baltimore and Ohio yard at Brunswick, this county, and a candidate for the town council from the first ward at the last municipal election, met an untimely death Tuesday afternoon. He had been at work in the morning and went home at the dinner hour when he was stung by an insect of some kind. The sting caused him much pain and Dr. C. S. Rether was called in to see him. The doctor gave him an hypodermic injection of morphine and he died a few moments later. His agony became so great shortly afterward that he took all the powders in a short while, and, in addition, some landanum. His death was the result as he was unconscious before the physician could return to him. Mr. Virts was twenty-nine years old and leaves a young wife and an infant child. He was a member of several benevolent organizations.

The Cause or Fevers.

Few people fully appreciate the effects of malaria on the human system. Residents of low-lying districts are liable storing away in their bodies the inhaled germs of disease which permeate the air, and even where the location is elevated, too often sanitation is imperfect and emanations from decaying vegetable matter render the air poisonous. The result is a train of bilious disorders, agues, intermittent and bilious fevers. A good plan is to take a few doses of a mild but thorough, and searching cathartic whenever an attack is threatened. For this purpose Dr. Pierce's Pleasant pellets are unequalled. They depurate the liver, cure constipation, improve digestion and often ward off dangerous fevers. Satisfaction guaranteed, or money returned.

FAIRFIELD ITEMS.

FAIRFIELD, Pa., Oct. 2.—Mr. and Mrs. John Rife, of near Hanover, are visiting among their friends in this place.

There was a large gathering at the ox roast Round Top, near Gettysburg, on last Saturday. Everybody seemed to enjoy the roast. Your correspondent being on the committee, helped to serve the beef and bread. There was also a camp-fire. Several of the candidates of both parties made addresses. The citizens had a general good time.

There was two funerals on last Sunday. Mrs. R. C. Swope, of Fairfield, interment at the Union Cemetery. Joseph Rife was buried at Flohr's Church.

Mr. J. W. Moore, of Fairfield, is leveling a piece of ground on his lot, which will be used as a race track. He is endeavoring to organize a stock company to carry out his plans. The stock is placed at $5 per share, which is within the reach of everybody, and all those who have speeded horses or contemplated raising trotters, should avail themselves of the opportunity now presented to further their interests. Fairfield is making much progress.

Farmers in this section will finish their seeding this week. The potato bugs and phosphate agents have all disappeared. Their season is over.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Swope, of Petersburg, and Mr. and Mrs. Granville Swope, of Baltimore, came home to this place to attend the funeral of their mother, Mrs. R. C. Swope, which took place on last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bennett, of Dayton, Ohio, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. Shulley, of this place.

There will be communion services in the Lutheran Church on next Sunday morning.

Farmers of this neighborhood will commence husking corn next week.

SABILLASVILLE ITEMS.

Miss Annie Ruths, of Orange, N. J. is visiting friends at this place.

Mrs. Elizabeth Harbaugh, with her little daughter, Bina, who has been spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Harbaugh, has returned to her home in Waynesboro.

Mrs. Elizabeth Eyer, of near Emmitsburg, spent Tuesday with her sister, Mrs. Sanford Harbaugh, near this place.

Mrs. C. L. Wachter was in Hagerstown on last Monday.

Ruth, daughter of Mr. James Brown, is critically ill at her home near this place.

Mrs. Sanford Harbaugh, who has been on the sick list for several days, is now convalescent.

Mr. David Willard, a highly esteemed citizen of near Blue Ridge Summit, died on last Tuesday evening. He was 72 years old. His funeral took place at St. Jacob's Reformed Church, near Fountaindale.

THE SONGS THAT RILEY SINGS.

What music could be sweeter than the rhythm
Of the heart, the heart of the katydid's
Or the humming of the pollen laden bumblebee
That wings
Through the sunny summer haze of the songs
That Riley sings!

Oh, I linger as I loiter through a little rhyme,
Land street
Till I know the very pattern of the shadows at my feet,
And my happy heart beats faster with the stimulant of joy
As I hear the laughing laughter of a ragged little boy.

Oh, little boy of Riley's, with your trousers worn and old,
With your freckled face and tattered hat
and sunny heart of gold,
I never knew how blue the sky, nor clover fields low sweet,
Till I followed in the pathway of your dusty little feet.

Oh, 'Hail, little 'Hail! I am mourning with the rest,
For love each blade of timothy your little feet have pressed.
Oh, the sadness and the gladness and the breath of many springs
In the rhyming, chiming, melodies the Hoosier poet sings!

GOGOL'S PLAY.

A Satire That Failed to Make an Impression on Czar Nicholas.

Gogol's well known play, "The Inspector," he completed and produced on the stage in the same year (1836). It is one of his writings which is best known in this country, for it has been translated into French by Prosper Merimee and twice quite recently into English. The plot is extremely simple. A provincial town, in which the officials are steeped in corruption, is thrown into consternation by a report that an inspector (revizor) is on his way from St. Petersburg to make a searching investigation into their conduct. Then it is rumored that he is actually come and is stopping at the hotel. At once the mayor hurries off to pay court to him.

The supposed inspector, however, is a young government clerk, who is traveling in the province, and, having lost all his money at cards, is waiting for fresh supplies from his father, and meanwhile being unable to pay his hotel bill is treated by the landlord with contempt. Under these circumstances the mayor's visit alarms him considerably, but when he finds that his explanations are misunderstood and that even his frank avowal that he has not a sou only produces the offer of a loan, he accepts the situation and plays the part of inspector malgre lui with infinite zest. He borrows money from everybody, flirts with the mayor's wife and proposes for the hand of his daughter, while he exhibits astonishing feats in that art of gratuitous lying in which Russians are such adepts. The play ends with his hurried departure and the arrival of the real revizor.

The simplicity of the plot has provoked a smile from more than one countryman of Scribe and Sardou, but the plot is a mere peg on which to hang a scathing satire on the corruption of Russian official life. A rollicking farce on the surface, at the bottom it is bitter, serious truth. The Czar Nicholas is said to have sent for the author after the first performance to the royal box. "I have never laughed so much as I have done this evening," said the czar. "I confess, sir," replied Gogol, "that I had a different object in view." The play is still often given on the Russian stage, and the public still laughs, and the Augean stables of Russian official life remain uncleaned.—National Review.

Clergy and Congregation.

One thing I have against the clergy, both of the country and in the town. I think they are not severe enough on their congregations. They do not sufficiently lay upon the souls and consciences of their hearers their moral obligations and probe their hearts and bring up their whole lives and action to the bar of conscience. The class of sermons which I think are most needed are of the class which offend Lord Melbourne long ago. Lord Melbourne was seen one day coming home from church in the country in a mighty fume. Finding a friend, he exclaimed: "It is too bad! I have always been a supporter of the church, and I have always upheld the clergy. But it is really too bad to have to listen to a sermon like that we have had this morning. Why, the preacher actually insisted upon applying religion to a man's private life. But that is the kind of preaching I like best; the kind of preaching which men need most. But it is also the kind of which they get the least."—W. E. Gladstone.

Do You Save?

Do you save anything? Even if it be ever so little, do you lay it by? Of course you do not! You have not the saving faculty, you say. Well, all right. Then you might as well make up your mind that you will always be a wage worker, that your usefulness will diminish as the years go by, and with it your money earning power. Very few men who made money in large lumps died rich. It is the persistent saver on whose side luck is. Somehow the chances come his way. Maybe you have noticed that yourself.—New York Dispatch.

A Wrong Diagnosis.

Strawberry-Doctor, I haven't been able to keep anything on my stomach for a week.

Dr. Probe—System all run down, eh? What you need is a sea voyage.

Strawberry (turning still paler)—A sea voyage? Great heavens! I only arrived from Europe this morning.—New York Sun.

A judge once remarked when a prisoner had received a good character, "Gentlemen of the jury, this is a case of a very honest gentleman who has stolen a horse."

A GIRL'S SUBTERFUGE.

It Failed to Work, and She Was Very Sorry She Tried It.

How pleasant it is to an honest person to see some of the little modern shams of society punctured! A young woman who flashes and shines in a certain elite coterie of the west end deserves sympathy because she has been caught in the fashionable act of playing the hypocrite.

I heard this story from a reliable person. The young society belle's picture recently appeared in the society columns of a local paper. Her numerous associates complimented her in the most approved style, but to their surprise she professed to be quite angry over the horrid fact of seeing her picture in the public print. She detested such vulgar display—so she said.

"Why, some mean photographer has given my photo to that paper without my permission," exclaimed the young woman. "Oh, my! Oh, my! I could stand it myself, but what will mamma say when she hears of this?"

And the young woman pretended to go into paroxysms of fashionable hysterics.

"Well, if I were you, I should go down to that photographer's studio and find out by whose authority your picture was given to the paper," suggested a young woman, who was one of the party of friends.

This sentiment was generally applauded by a half dozen lady friends, and finally the young society belle was almost coerced by the force of her friends' opinions to visit the photographer's studio. However, she professed to be quite anxious to make it visit herself too. The upshot of it was that the young society belle and a half dozen of her lady friends came down town and called at the studio. The photographer was out, and a young woman was in charge of the office. The young society woman carried out her bluff, however, by unloading a tirade of abuse upon the head of the office girl.

"Well, no photos are given to the newspapers by us unless we have authority to do so," coolly replied the girl.

"You never received any authority from me to give my photo to any newspaper," replied the society belle, her eyes snapping fire.

The office girl, in the most cruel and deliberate manner possible, pulled a note from a pigeonhole in her desk and handed it to the society girl for perusal. It was a note from her mother, ordering the artist to furnish the photo to be used by the newspaper.

The mortification of the young society belle was pitiable to behold, when one of her companions said in a stage whisper:

"Oh, my! What will mamma say when she hears of this?"—St. Louis Republic.

Tea Drinking in China.

The etiquette pertaining to tea drinking in China is curious. If a lady asks you to drink tea with her, and especially if the tea be sweetened, you can count yourself as well received and much liked. If she does not like you, the tea is bitter, and report sayeth in cases of this sort drainings are often used. Of course it is needless to say that after one sip of such tea the unlikely visitor makes a prompt exit.

When paying a call, if the servant should bring in a cup of tea, there is no necessity of taking any particular notice of it; allow the servant to place it where he likes near you and continue your conversation as though nothing had happened. If your business is pleasant and agreeable to the mistress or the master of the house, he or she will pass the beverage to you; if not, you are expected to leave it untouched; otherwise you are likely to have a quarrel on hand, and a Chinese quarrel either with a man or woman is unpleasant.—New York Home Journal.

He Was Rattled.

She had already been in the bookstore a full hour, asking the clerk innumerable questions concerning books he knew nothing about.

She declared that "Dodo" and "A Yellow Aster" were too extreme, but finally compromised on "The Heavenly Twins" and was on the point of leaving when she happened to think that she needed some writing paper. Turning to the clerk, she said:

"Have you any nice white linen?"

The clerk blushed a little, pushed a pair of very dirty cuffs up into his sleeves and stammered out:

"Yes, certainly, but I—I didn't have time to change 'em this morning."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Painting in Ivory.

Tracing on ivory for miniature painting is always a difficulty. The color of the transfer paper is apt to mix with the delicate water color tints and soil them. The best way is to draw the forms in with the brush and some pale color—say, rose madder. It is so easy to correct mistakes that with a little practice the process will not prove so formidable as it appears.—Philadelphia Times.

Caribon Horns.

Not one out of every ten female caribon has horns. When they do have them, they are much smaller than those of the bull. The horns of the female have, however, in general many more branches than those of the bull, and they are much more regularly and finely formed. The cows carry their horns much longer than the bulls. They have been seen with their horns in the month of April. The old bulls shed theirs from the tenth to the last of November. They hardly ever carry them after the month of November. The young bulls shed theirs from the first of December until the middle of February. The younger the animal the longer he retains his horns.—Forest and Stream.

PRESERVER OF LITERARY DERELICTS.

Scrapbooks, Their Value and the Changes in Taste Which They Show.

Whose keepeth a scrapbook keepeth a good thing, and the manner in which it is kept is an indication of the presence or absence of certain qualities in the "keeper," as order, perseverance, continuity of purpose and fixedness of memory. A scrapbook is, moreover, an index of literary taste and feeling, and a scrapbook or a series of scrapbooks kept for a number of years shows how that taste may change, broaden and arise with reading and the reception of new ideas and impressions. Could we have all the scrapbooks of one lifetime extending from youth to age, we should have a literary history of that life.

Those scrapbooks are most interesting and valuable which may be classified as personal—kept by some one individual for personal use and behoof, which record the workings of one brain and, in a way, the emotions of one heart. These, preserved, become in time histories and autobiographies. Next in interest to these private scrapbooks are those which are kept for a purpose—to collect and preserve facts in regard to some event in history; some historical character, as Washington or Napoleon, or, better yet, some contemporary personage.

From these the biographer of the future may collect his choicest material, for he it is known that newspapers from which scrapbooks are generally made are no longer the "abstract and brief chronicles" of the time, but are extended and even diffuse chronicles, telling all there is to tell. Any one who has had occasion to write a post mortem sketch of any modern statesman has found his facts stated at length not in books, but in newspapers. And yet newspapers are evanescent and perishable. Out of the 100,000 copies a newspaper issued on a certain day it is quite possible that every copy may have disappeared in a few days except the half dozen preserved on files. It is well, then, that the scrapbooks keep the cream, the gem, the one poem or sketch or speech or story that made a certain copy of the newspaper sought after and valuable for clipping purposes.

It is a fact that every reading person must have noticed that there is not in the world a perfect book of quotations. Complete as the work on hand may be, it frequently does not contain the line, the verse, the "eloquent extract" one is looking for. Scrapbooks—old scrapbooks—are the repositories of these things, these poems by unknown authors, by the poets who wrote but one poem each and never got credit for that. These are very often resurrected from antique scrapbooks and sent on their anonymous round through the newspapers to be again secured in the scrapbooks and again for a time forgotten.

The scrapbook, or rather the keeping of it, is an aid to memory. One does not entirely forget that which he takes time to cut out of a book or newspaper and fasten to the receptive page, and perhaps (as he should) record in an index. He retains a portion of it, a scrap of the scrap, as it were, in his mind, so that in any event he knows where to find it. The practice of keeping scrapbooks, considered by many persons old fashioned, is not the less an excellent fashion; preserving for us in our age the fancies of our youth; keeping for another time what one day made us smile or weep; a biography, a history, a journal written by a thousand other hands, and yet our own.—Kansas City Star.

A Story of Hetty Green.

A New York man tells a characteristic story of Mrs. Hetty Green. He was in the Chemical bank, in New York, one day in conversation with the cashier when Mrs. Green passed through into an inner office. The cashier called out and said:

"Oh, by the way, Mrs. Green, your son bought that railroad yesterday."

"Did he?" said the lady, stopping short. "What did he pay for it?"

"Two million five hundred thousand dollars."

"The extravagant boy!" said the fond mother indignantly. "If I had been there, I could have bought it for $50,000 less."

That was the only comment she made on the transaction, which most people would consider of supreme magnitude. The chances are that she was right.

Are We Mars' Long Lost Brother?

There is the best scientific evidence to prove that Mars is a native of Mars and lived there millions of years before he was transplanted to the earth, leaving the greater part of the human family behind. The Marsians regard us as their lost brethren and have been searching for us for thousands of years. They have been especially hopeful since they saw the electric lights in our cities. We will be able to converse with them by signals before another century passes.—Professor E. Stone Wiggins.

Making Game of Her.

"Oh, darling, you sing like a lark!"

"Now, don't flatter, please."

"You are as graceful as a gazelle, as plump as a partridge, as—"

"Come, come. I know you're not flattering me now. You're only making game of me."—Cincinnati Tribune.

A Damascus Sword.

A Damascus sword is made of alternate layers of iron and steel, tempered so nicely that the point can be bent back to the hilt, the edge so keen that it will penetrate a coat of mail and so fine a polish that the Moslem can use it as a looking glass to arrange his turban.

BABY HAD THREE TEETH.

But In Proving This Its Father Nearly Caused a Domestic Sensation.

He is very prominent in business circles and a very busy man, but he finds time occasionally to get acquainted with his clerks, and even chats with them some time. One of his bright young men, finding himself favored with a few words from the boss the other day, sought to make the most of the opportunity by introducing domestic affairs. Now, the most important factor in the bright young man's domestic affairs just now is a new baby, and this baby was lugged into the chat with the boss, and the important information imparted by the fond father was that the little one had three teeth.

"How old did you say it was?" asked the employer, assuming great interest in the case.

"Five months, sir," was the reply.

"Oh, come, now, Ed. That won't do. Five-months-old babies don't have teeth. You must be mistaken about the age."

"No, I'm not, sir. I guess I ought to know."

Then followed an animated conversation in which the employer endeavored to impress upon the employee that it was an utter impossibility for a five-months-old child to have three teeth, while the fond young father insisted that it was his child and he ought to know. The controversy concluded by the employer dismissing the subject with the remark, "You may be right about the child's age, but you must be wrong about the teeth."

Having thus indulged in a little sociability the employer thought no more of the matter. Not so the fond father. He didn't feel good over what had passed, especially as a number of his fellow employees had heard the debate. On going home at the close of his day's work he told his wife of the discussion, and she, like the fretful porcupine, had all quills set instantly. "I'll prove it to him," she muttered that night just before going to sleep. Next day the big business man's wife called on him with a lady friend, and the two ladies were sitting in the private office chatting with the big business man when the office boy announced:

"A lady with a baby to see you, sir."

Before anything could be said she walked right in, and without noticing the ladies she said:

"Here's my baby, Mr. Blank. I'm its mother, and I know it is just 5 months and 3 days old."

Then she grabbed the astonished man's hand, and thrusting one finger into the infant's mouth she continued: "Feel the teeth? There are three of 'em. So, there, now!"

He felt, and then it dawned upon him who she was and why she had brought her baby to his private office. But it was different with his aristocratic wife and her female friend. The former just gave a little scream and then started to faint. The latter said in a cold, hard voice:

"Be calm, Jane. Control your self."

Then began an explanation, it being necessary to call in the baby's father to prove himself and testify to the controversy of the previous day. When the tangle was all untangled, the baby was made much of, but the big business man shivered all the rest of the day over his narrow escape from being the central figure in a great sensation.—St. Louis Republic.

General Grant and an Interviewer.

Appropos of denying interviews a Chicago correspondent had an experience with the late Mayor Harrison several years ago. The mayor had given the information requested, and then getting confidential gave a great deal more of a much greater interest. But he put the seal of secrecy on the newspaper man's lips regarding the unasked for information and added:

"If you give me away, I shall do what General Grant once threatened to do. Grant was on his way around the world. He was in the carriage with me riding in the parade in Chicago. During the ride we talked on politics, and he said some pretty sharp things about some Republican policy."

"General," I said, "suppose I should tell the newspapers what you have said to me. What would you do to square yourself with your Republican friends?"

"The general took his cigar from his mouth and in the most matter of fact way replied:

"I'd tell 'em I never said it."—New York Mail and Express.

A Turkish Illusion.

Since the veil has fallen into partial dense the charm of the Turkish woman has also departed. Marion Crawford tells us: "The yashmak is not what it was 10 years ago and has almost ceased to hide the face at all. Strict as the sultan's ordinance is, there is not the slightest pretense of obeying it, and, in the great majority of cases, a thin white veil barely covers the forehead and is but loosely drawn under the chin."

"It must be admitted that with the disease of that old fashioned veil a great illusion has disappeared from the streets of Constantinople. There was something very mysterious about it. Black eyes never looked so black and deep and liquid as when seen by themselves, as it were, between two broad bands of opaque white. In those days every yashmak veiled an ideal beauty, very different from the ugliness of the pale and flaccid features which its absence now generally discloses. One is inclined to doubt whether the mirror is in common use in the harem of today."

Richard Hennig concludes that a great flood was contemporaneous with the ice age, converting countries in milder latitudes into swamp and sea and leaving only isolated lands—Egypt, for instance—free from inundation.

THE PEACOCK POET.

I scorn the peacock bard who sings
With verbal affectation
To overdo the offerings
Of his imagination.
I love the modest rhymist who
Avoids all verbal masses
And puts the beautiful and true
In clear and simple phrases.

His thoughts no pompous garment wear,
Whose thoughts are worth preserving.
Who loves the fanciful and fair
With ardor never swerving.
Hates empty forms and vain conceits
And makes his pleasant ditty
To fill a world with fancied sweets
And draw the veil from beauty.

Who'd have his fellows laud the more
His skill at ornamenting,
Than what of loveliness or lore
His verse may be presenting,
Is not the bard who, like a star,
Lights up the darkness, showing
How full of beauty all things are
And life how well worth knowing.
—Robert N. Stephens in New York Sun.

Marks That Warn.

"I have often wondered," said a man to Underwood Armstrong, the well known builder, "why the windows of a new building are daubed with soap or paint as soon as they are put in. I have taken notice of new buildings for years and never knew it to fail, whether on business streets or away out in the suburbs. It can't be done to prevent people from looking in, because the marks usually consist of a rough circle or cross in the center of each window pane. I wish you would explain the mystery."

"That's easy enough," replied Mr. Armstrong. "It is done to save the windows."

"To save the windows?"

"Yes. You see, the men at work in a new building are often careless and get into the habit of throwing things out of the windows or poking around with long boards and things that stick out through the window sash. Now, unless they know a window has been put in they perhaps wouldn't see it, especially plate glass windows. Or they may be told and forget. During all the time the building has been in course of erection there has been no glass in the windows, and the glass is liable to get smashed, either from the inside or outside, unless people know it is there. So they daub soap or paint on the windows. It's the same thing as saying, 'Look out or you'll break the glass.'"—Detroit News.

Rainfall at Jerusalem.

The rainfall of Jerusalem is pretty heavy, considering that the summer months show none, and it all has to be packed in the winter season. There has been a marked augmentation within the last 16 years, attributed by some to the Suez canal. The joining of the two seas has steadily and increasingly modified the climate of lower Egypt, which has exhibited a greater rainfall and is perhaps a little cooler. But it is not clear how it could bring more rain to the hills of Judea. The rising of the Nile brings clouds, and the great white, fleecy masses that roll northward are called at Beirut "the Nile" by people who probably do not know any other signification of the term and certainly know nothing of the mighty river. The increase of rainfall at Jerusalem, noticed by Mr. Glaisher and others, may be assigned with great probability to the more regular and accurate observations of recent years. There is now a well equipped meteorological station at Jerusalem under the direction of the Christian Brothers.—Country Gentleman.

An Effective Muzzle.

The level headed horse, turned out to graze, seldom less than five minutes pass before he discovers that the choice young shoots of the carefully trimmed hedge or the foliage of the valuable fruit trees is a lot more palatable than grass. This doesn't apply to horses only. Therefore a native of New South Wales thinks fit to call attention to his automatic muzzle, which offers no inconvenience to the animal so long as it eats its legitimate food, but which closes and remains closed when the head is raised to nibble anything above the level of the shoulders.

Queen Victoria is in possession of a curious needle. It was made at the celebrated needle manufactory at Redditch and represents the Trajan column in miniature. Scenes from the queen's life are depicted on the needle so finely cut that they are only discernible through a microscope.

The capitol at Washington has cost more than $30,000,000. It covers 34 acres, the dome is 307 feet high and 135 feet in diameter and is exceeded in size only by St. Peter's in Rome. St. Paul's in London, the Invalides in Paris and St. Isaac's in St. Petersburg.

It is claimed that the "dark lady" to whom 28 of Shakespeare's sonnets were dedicated was the notorious Miss Mary Fitton, maid of honor to Queen Elizabeth.

Lawn Mowers.

The proper care of a lawn mower is a matter of importance, as even the best makes are liable to get out of order with ill usage. The bolts should always be kept tight and the knives at a uniform distance from the steel. The knives should always be kept sharp, which can be done with the saw file. If they get very dull, they should be taken off and ground. The lawn should be free from stones and sticks. A small stone in the lawn will be apt to cause much injury to the knives. Good oil should be used, as cheap oil gums too readily. For this purpose sewing machine oil is perhaps the best. The machine should not be allowed to rust, and to prevent this it should be properly housed on a dry wooden floor.—Hardware.

Time at the North Pole.

If ever the north pole is reached the adventurous spirits who get there will find that they have actually outstripped Father Time altogether. In fact, he will have given up the race entirely, for at the northern and southern extremities of the earth's axis there is no fixed time at all. At any moment it can be noon or midnight, breakfast time or supper time, worktime or playtime, whichever one likes. Clocks will be a fraud and delusion, for at the pole all degrees of longitude converge into one, and therefore all times.

The possibilities of such a position are endless. Not only, too, will the clocks be out, but the calendar as well. It can be, at will, either yesterday or today or tomorrow. We have heard a lot of foolish people ask what the use and pleasure can be of getting to the north pole, but little reflection will show us advantages can be gained there which cannot be found in any other part of the globe. There, at any rate, instead of being like the poor inhabitants of lower latitudes, the slaves of Time, we can turn the tables and be its masters.—London Globe.

A Miner's Scheme.

An Australian mining journal is responsible for the following story: A miner in that country, who was obtaining fine gold by sluicing, was asked how he saved it. He replied that he employed the common amalgamation process, but used a novel and ingenious retort for the purpose. After amalgamating with quicksilver, "I get a potato," said the miner, "cut off one end and scoop out a cavity in it large enough to take my ball of amalgam. I next take a spade or piece of flat iron and place that over the fire, and then upon that I place the potato with the cut side down. As the amalgam gets hot the 'silver' evaporates and goes all through the potato, but it can't get through the skin. When it is cool I have my gold button on the spade and my 'silver' all in fine globules in the potato. I break that potato up under water, and I have all my 'silver.'"

Height of Virginia Mountains.

The height of the peaks of Otter, as determined by Professor Guyot by careful barometric measurements some years ago, is 3,888 feet for the southwest or the northeast, or "Flat Top" peak. The same authority made the Balsam mountain, in the Blue Ridge in Grayson county, 5,700 feet high, and White Top mountain, in the Grayson-Washington line, 5,500 feet high. The 1891 topographical maps of the United States geographical survey make White Top 5,678 feet high, and a point in the Grayson-Smyth line, three miles eastward of White Top, which the maps call "Mount Rogers," 5,719 feet high, making the latter the highest point that has yet been in any way determined in Virginia.—Richmond Dispatch.

Sweet Oil For Patent Leathers.

Sweet oil is the best for patent leather, and it should be applied sparingly. All of the surplus should be carefully and thoroughly wiped off, and the shoe is then to be polished with a piece of chamois. After the glaze of patent leather begins to crack and will no longer take the fine polish without which patent leather is a burden to the eye, there is no resource so effective as varnish, but when once the application of varnish has begun it must be continued to the end. Varnish must be applied to patent leather with the tips of the fingers—nothing else will answer so well. Be sure that the shoe is perfectly free from dust or dirt of any kind.—Exchange.

Lincoln and the Bull.

Crossing a field one day, President Lincoln, it is said, was pursued by an angry bull. He made for the fence, but soon discovered that the bull was overtaking him. He then began to run around a haystack in the field, and the bull pursued him, but making the short circles around the stack Lincoln was the faster, and instead of the bull catching him he caught the bull and grabbed him by the tail. It was a firm grip and a controlling one. He began to kick the bull, and the bull belched with agony and dashed across the field, Lincoln hanging to his tail and kicking him at every jump, and as they flew along Lincoln yelled at the bull, "Damn you, who began this fight?"—Life's Calendar.

At Both Ends.

Coming up town on the Broadway cable, a big Irishman arose from his seat and gave the bell strap a sharp pull. The conductor angrily exclaimed:

"Here, don't do that. You are ringing the bell at both ends of the car."

"That's all right, sor," was the reply, "an I want both inds of the car to shopt."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.
